Curtis Army Plane Forced to Land Near University

With but two gallons of gasoline left in the tank, Pilot Edlin Simms and his assistant, Milton Storer, were forced to land their plane yesterday afternoon on the Notre Dame Campus, two miles from the Sacred Heart Seminary. The aviators were en route to Detroit from Chicago in a Curtiss eight cylinder army plane and were just crossing Overton Hall when they became aware of the gas shortage. They are the same flier who conducted a passenger service at Notre Dame two years ago and being familiar with the surroundings was able to pick a safe landing place.

NOTRE DAME DAILY through the Looking Glass

If it raised soup this gay would be my serving man. MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 21 — Edward Becker sat in a social card table in the hotel and, folding up his hand he fell over backwards, frac­ tur ing his shoulder. A straight flush, queen high, fell to the floor beside him.

And if it jarred rocks this gay would be my serving man.

Queen high — no wonder he fell over.

Wonder if Edward said his prayer.

Edwardly, but it wasn’t. Worth high.

Moms? teach your children to play cards lying down.

I hope that Ed’s better-five-eights nights. He’s only passing on today. He’s going to have the devil’s own trying to make her believe that she’s alive.

If the bush was framing Edward he surely fell for it.

"Didn’t he though?"

"And hasn’t there a queen high flush?"

My arms are my beckoning hoy. Oh blus my shirts, my shoulders. My chest is his joying in.

At that he was lucky he didn’t have five queens when he fell.

He’s in a hospital now. Ask any card player.

It’s a little late to mention it, but you ought to know that Hood’s week is over and the Bulletin is out for the Senior Ball. She just got here. You see the stages are a little slow yet in that part of the country: the train is a little slow, and Mita is a little slow. Anyway you are too late. The Alumni committee will re­ main over for the Senior Ball.

At that rate she ought to be feeling a little better by this time. Mita is a nice looking girl, and she brought her own old photos to the party. She sounds funny doesn’t it? But then I guess I should know, since I’m just bachelit.

I was framing Edward the last night that she would do all she could to make the elm boughs every year next. She said, “I would love to meet the next president,” and the vice president, Miss Hayes, and I think she knew her better than Hood missed her and she closed up.

Earlier in the day she was met at the train by her father. The train was all excited as she alighted. Miss Hayes beamed and said, “Well maa­ ma and the cow!”

Miss Thoti says that she had a present running up, making it all in one and a feat except that she ran her car into a stroller to load on the back seat. The next thing we hear was that the car had worse than in you to see a tree, the next thing was when she’s a street car.

She’s a great girl.

GREGIAN PLAY AT ST. MARY'S

Open-Air Theater; Girls' Tour Library; Other Notes of

The Classical Department of St. Mary's College presented the "Alcestis," the tragedy of Euripides, last evening in the capsy, in the Open-Air Theater, which was modeled after the stage of the Greek Theater at the University of California.

The intellectual appeal of the dramatic restraint of the Greeks and the beauty of Helenic grace characterized the play. Exuding the virtues of friendship and heroism, the tragedy is laid in Pharsis, the kingdom of Attica, and is concerned with the deliverance of the great, Alcestis, from the bond of an heroic death. The distinctive flavor of Greek chorus unified and gave religious coloring to the drama.

Miss Dorothy Doss, as Atirrhene, portrayed with the resignation of the king from selfishness to noble disinterestedness. Miss Genevieve Lang, as Alcestis, was equally in the grip of passion severe. Beautiful in its pathos was her farewell address to her friends, rendered by Alice Rose Carroll and her chorus.

Miss Catherine Boyle, as Lord of the Haemiclean ability. Her compelling voice and ease in manner were especially strong in the ending scene. The soprano, Miss Muriel Schleiff, as Pitys, was in the role of the life-giving Thetis.

The other characters, Miss Maybell Caine, as handmaid, Miss Gertrude Christenson, as the earth-bound Apollo, and the guards, attended to their duties without completed the cast.

The chorus, a little between actors and actresses, were very noble in action of mission. The part of the chorus leader was taken by Miss Mildred Caine, and was as other members: Misses M. K. Bohn, H. For- der, A. S. Zeman, D. Fischer, M. Higgins, M. Nesh, M. Rennesh, M. Gaye, M. Gispen, E. Eglin, F. Sturges, E. Tenney, and R. Vanden. The costumes and lighting effects were, in a great measure, accountable for the beauty of the chorus. The Mime Valka, Sissu, Serina, Misses B. M. Colman, B. Ryan, P. Portola, C. E. Ross, and M. Zillmer played the postelle and furnished adornments throughout the episodes.

What is more interesting than a well-conducted library? The members of the class in Magazine Writing and in High School Methods have visited the South Bend Public Library Wednesday, are unanimous in the opinion that for pure interest few things surpass such institutions.

Miss Fliss Tutu, head librarian, conducted the girls and the visitors, by whom they were accoun- tioned, through the various departments, and explained in detail the workings of the library system. The South Bend Library is rendering efficient service to the community, and is extended by large circulation and by the number of persons who visit the reading rooms.

The students who enjoyed the trip were: Misses M. Kennedy, B. Hayes, M. Kavanagh, H. Church, E. Handlan, E. Coombes, M. LaPine, B. Grogan, G. Smuith, C. Craig, E. McElirney, A. McNelly.

While the juniors and seniors explored South Bend, Wednesday afternoon, the membership of the society, the South Bend Indianans, and the sophomores were busy drawing engravings of the picturesque city. The students who visited the city drew some excellent work.
