Scholarly Professor Real N. D. Man

Professor Real N. D. Man, known as the Professor of History, is a real Notre Dame man. When his plans to enroll at the Army-Navy game, he dropped a hint that he would be in town, which many of the members of the team, who are in his class, and then led a short discussion of his views on the game.

Flying Professors. The first flight of the season was made yesterday, when the Flying Professors took off from the airfield near the Notre Dame campus. The team, which consists of nine members, flew to New York City, where they will be on hand to meet the team from Notre Dame, who are scheduled to arrive on Friday.

COMPLETING THE VICTORY

Notre Dame defended the powerful cads Saturday afternoon, and by so doing won one of the greatest football classics of the 1920 season. But this victory was more than a triumph for the All-Americans; as tradition is concerned, the team was welcomed home by their "Flighting Irish" student-body supporters.

The real reason Notre Dame was able to win was that the campus to defend their reputation on foreign fields, they go perfectly tutored by the Wonder Coaches of the Our Lady's University. And when once, or, if ever, they might lose a hardest; or, if the were a poor crook soul, if it seemed the poor chap might be dismissed from school --- even with a tearful story might even soften the heart of a University executive.

But all that is past. Students who are about now, are absent. This is a regulation that Notre Dame never endures. At least if for ten--allowance is made for the number of times a man may reasonably miss classes. But when there is no ten---there are no allowances. And that is the beauty of the system! For it is the only logical and consistent. There is no moral; it is the mark for the period gradually fall. The system also calms the nerves of the students. It does not pass the campus about a number of times, ten times in a three-hour class. The belief is that a man must go to class, or else he hasn't any business there. And, if he isn't up to snuff, he has missed too many lectures, it is believed, to be able to grasp the subject as well as the man who attended them. Notre Dame is not a great school. In fact, it is not, make, up for what he has missed.

The end of the season is significant as a more efficient manner of handling class absences, a good in itself, but it is important as one more step toward the better and greater Notre Dame.

INTRAHALL FOOTBALL EMBLEMS

The Interhall Athletic Association has decided to give emblems to members of the Notre Dame football team. This, indeed, is a matter of pride, and one that should have been practiced sooner.

Henceforth, interhall champions have to be content with the glory of winning. But, alas, a week after the final game the men at large have forgotten the personnel of the title--their names, although deserving, to offer some symbol of the success attained by the team whose names of practice and earnest work have raised interhall—bequarters of the football team.

The emblems will do more than reward; it also will indicate an contribution to the success of interhall athletic; by encouraging competition it will, in all all, bring out the best in the students of this house who have not cooperated. They will, of course, no secret; for their usefulness is that all are to wear them.

The emblems are evidence that the drive for more interest in the interhall games, is succeeding. The emblem is a new animal toward the students. "Who has the best line-up" is no longer the question; the emblem and the wisdom of the students are to striving to better the interhall program.

 decides to charge Rockne's team, but the Army held its own and drove the ball to the Notre Dame 50, where rockne was stopped.

The victory was the Hoosiers' seventh of the season; ten teams have played, the Army coming out of the field victorious only twice, and one game, last year's result, was declared a draw by the referee, who was appointed to the West Point players yesterday afternoon, when it was explained that the Notre Dame referee would not consent to the game.

The teams were the West Pointers, with the playing of Tiny Newcomb, former Panther star, in the backfield, the West Pointers came out of the plans looking forward to getting ample revenge for past humiliation.

The victory was a significant one for Notre Dame in its quest to be among the nation's top teams. The team had shown marked improvement in the second half of the season, winning six of its last seven games.

Alumni Magazine

Issued Saturday

The Notre Dame Alumni magazine, an integral part of the university's communication strategy, was launched on November 14, 1919. The magazine was established to provide alumni with updates on the university's activities, achievements, and news. It was also an opportunity to foster a sense of community among faculty, students, and alumni.

The publication was published bi-weekly and featured articles on campus life, faculty and student profiles, alumni news, and updates on recent events. The magazine was distributed to alumni through various channels, including a subscription basis, and became a valuable resource for keeping in touch with the university.

The success of the Alumni Magazine was evident from its foundation, as it quickly became a popular and influential publication among the Notre Dame community. The magazine continued to evolve over the years, adapting to changes in technology and communication methods, while maintaining its core mission of keeping alumni informed and connected to the university.
IRISH BATTLE TIGERS NEXT

Princeton Confident of Win; Critics Fear Rockevers; First String Best

The Notre Dame football team, back from their triumph over the Army in Philadelphia, will meet the eastern sportswriters who had expected to see the Irish beaten, and the men who bore the much-heralded West Point eleven, begin preparations yesterday for the great Battle of Princeton, next Saturday.

All indications, both from the standpoint of the Boeckman’s performances, and from the declaration of leading football critics, point to the fact that Princeton will not enter, as is reported from the East, a “practice” list with the fighting Irish next Saturday.

The first string rested from any strenuous workout yesterday, but Rockevers put the second and third strings through a scrimmage practice with the freshmen. Cervey, Comer and Hamler, touting the ball for the varsity went through a fresh, with terrific line plunges and made brilliant end runs. Early in the practice session, Hamler displayed a pretty looking.

Brownrow, who lost to Lake- Fenton, 6-0, in a mud and water game on Saturday, suffered from the Irish fea-ten’s running game all day. Follows being net 156 yards for the entire game.

ELKHART GOLF TEAM VICTOR

Drizzling Rain Mars Game; Score, 16-7; Corbett and Link Win Matches; Course Strange.

The Notre Dame golf team lost to the team from Elkhart, 15-7, at Elkhart Saturday after-

Although both teams were halsagely matched, the score fell during the afternoon, the Elkhart club had the advantage of playing on a course over 500 yards longer. The large number of high scores turned in by both teams, indicates the impediment caused by the inclement weather.

Jim Corbett was the leading scoring member from the Irish with a score of 32. An additional three points were played for Elkhart’s benefit thanks to Fred Watson of the Lew school and Mr. Evans of the Chippewa school, who failed to make their kindness to the team while in Elkhart.

The matches which are pending, will be decided upon this week. The results are as fol-
