The Brown Jug

With Homecoming and its welcome influx of happy and enthusiastic old boys, the brown jug is apt to be in evidence. Notre Dame is no different from any other university in this respect; it is no different from its students. It is the excuse of "others do it" is no excuse. The Student Activity Committee and the University officials will do all they can, in those few days to prevent drinking from the little brown jug. All of us should buck the S. A. C. and its University officials; all of us, whether we believe in prohibition or not, recognize the evil of excessive drinking of drinkmakers.

At Homecoming it is especially desirable that Notre Dame take a decided stand against drinking by college men. The country about Notre Dame is home to the Purdue fans on Friday. It is fantastic to think that Notre Dame fans should be proud of all she does on those days—she stands modestly in the shadow of the event.

Other schools, Dartmouth in the lead, have begun decisive war on drinking of intoxicants. Illinois and others, through their student councils and otherwise, are making known her fight, and have taken decisive and conducted reactions throughout the trip. This is the proper spirit we should emulate.

Of course it is possible that this was the case. But if there were professors accompanying the team, they must have been in that same rusophobe, all of us, and that the only reactions of which there is any record were those panicky daintinesses of Mr. Crum and Mr. Corby, was simply not the best interest of football player than as a professor. Mr. Perry's opening statement is very interesting as a dream phenomenon; but please as such a professor, to the professors, that is not the "the usual practice." The students some facts about us that we might never have discovered without his help: Thirty-nine per cent of the student body is Catholic. Notre Dame's on the practice field is "always quiet." And further, you people of the world who would have the facts about us from a man who knows the facts, the renowned Rock, being hot, the mascot of a football team, "tracks, track, baseball and hockey."

Ye shades of Carthy!—The Dorms would give $5,000 for a picture of Rock on ice skates, taken after a 20-10 victory, which would be: "Jolly well, Millbrae, old fellow—right well done. But gracious, old fellow, you simply can't count our new poor neck to become all ablaze!"

The brown jug may appear to be nonexistent. It is. But it is not half as nonexistent as the world's notions of Notre Dame. With the passing of the years, Notre Dame is becoming more and more known. Notre Dame is becoming more and more correctly and favorably. Due to the peculiarities of some journal- ists, Notre Dame is, for example, surely had the least of intentions. But he was ruthlessly burned. It is my wish to honor you at this time to be more careful, lest the nation, which also has its insatiable curiosity, be informed more regarding individuals do—nothing which might be misconstrued. Let us as a society, be diligent in the molding of our Py's and Q's, lest we wake some morning and discover the newspapers' headlines as true.

FORUM MEETINGS.

The members of the Forum were genuinely impressed with the seriousness with which the members took the topic of "The Social Values of the United States." A lively debate on the question: "Resolved that the United States should enter a War," resulted.

The club will soon begin a series of eliminating debates among its members. The winning team will be given an opportunity to debate the other campus teams or, if possible, outside a team.

THE BROWN JUG

"Notre Dame: Notre Dame!" Those words are blaring before the eyes of the nation, in the greatest burst of publicity our school has ever experienced. On the page, in the restaurant, in the dorm, in the Pullman and in the frathouse, our football team is the subject for conversation. Naturally the people are wondering what kind of team Mr. Perry’s opened the season with in making her known before the country.

Mr. Lawrence Perry, prominent sports writer, is one of those who have been politely conceded to the public by the student officials, in order to impart information about us. In an article sent to leading papers all over the country, Mr. Perry opens the subject of Notre Dame with the following sentence: "We're loaded with the eleven players that won the last twelve games and conducted reactions throughout the trip. This is the proper spirit we should emulate."

Of course it is possible that this was the case. But if there were professors accompanying the team, they must have been in that same rusophobe, all of us, and that the only reactions of which there is any record were those panicky daintinesses of Mr. Crum and Mr. Corby, was simply not the best interest of football player than as a professor. The Homcoming crowd, which will be no more than the 50,000 mark, will not be disappointed in expecting the Notre Dame's prowess from Pur- due. The Irish are one of the stronger clubs against the Hounds in next Sat- urday's game on Carrier Field.

With such a steady player as Cap- tain Chuck Haggan at center, Willman, Purdue's brilliant backfield, on the left flank and Carlisle, a plugging down in the back field, the La- Fayette school will come to South Bend this week, hoping to do what three great football machines failed to do; hold the Irish to a low score, if it is not possible to defeat them.

Against Iowa, the Engineers made a remarkable show, and retained the same fighting qualities for the Monon till in Chicago last week. Considering that Stagg's charges are among the highest talent- endors this fall, the team from Purdue did well in checking the better of a 5:0 score at the end of the first half against Chicago. Purdue scored one touchdown in the Midway encounter and then during the rest of the game, which Purdue drives.

In North, Purdue has a consistent passer at right half, whose kicks average 45 yards in the Chicago game. He was swift and fast and fully capable of following an increased effort. In the game Saturday, the Purdue backs from the second half to the final whistle, did not have much oppor- tunity to show their form. When they were forced to punt on nearly every attempted march down the field, every time they had to make their first downs. Purdue has an attack very similar to that used by Notre Dame, with the exception that they have built up a spread formation in which the half-back and full-back take their position in far to the side of the team and just a little back of the line of scrimmage. This is the reason they cannot be called for more than eleven men on the line. From this formation
