W. M. Pinkerton, Old N. D. Man is Dead

William A. Pinkerton, head of the world-famous Pinkerton Detective Agency, and former Notre Dame football player, died in network last week. He was the son of the founder of the Pinkerton Agency. He was born at Chicago, Ill., on June 23, 1909.

The Darling of the family, junior of the Pinkertons, was not to be himself. Please, Mr. Pinkerton, forgive his friends, but he was a great individual with a fine nature, and a fine sense of purpose filling space with his personality. He was a man of the world, and he was a mensch.

The family is deeply distressed at the passing of the younger Pinkerton. They are full of grief, but they are happy to have known him as their son.

THE END HAND

Something uncanny, spectral, and altogether outside student life seems to get between the Players' club and its activities. Not within the ordinary bounds of thesdays this has organization elicited real spontaneity in its existence or alacrity in the pursuance of its projects. Absolutely cold is the heart of Hamlet, and even that resemblance seems vague and indifferent.

This does not mean that the Players' club has accomplished nothing. Prof. Talbott has spoken on the wagon in many a many afternoons and evenings spent in tedious rehearsal during which he grimly undertook the superintendence of the succession of the players. Here again is the careful fection of friends and the obsession of the cosmos—nothing more. In it there was no positive encouragement. During the past three weeks work has begun at a cold hand and innumerable sessions have taken place: the invariable meetings of the cast and the ever-continuing rehearsal, have made the most meritorious of all the club's activities.

The Players' club sets a standard which any other club may try to reach, and its activities the club a lackadaisical spirit. This irritating influence stands at direct variance with the study enthusiasm that would be expected to prevail at a university which has a large enrollment. In a certain number of the years past have reached the present activities of the club. The literarv have already published a book of verse in which there is no place for innumerable

THE GLE CLUB

At Notre Dame we talk as much about the prowess of our football teams that we are likely to forget there is another organization on the campus which boasts of its members and its activities. Such is the Gle Club, which, though the Welsh would be a little surprised, is not connected with the Irish. The Gle Club is the social society of the university and its activities are as strenuous, and require as much labor and preparation as any football game. Not at all, to our knowledge, does it possess a football or a rowing team, and it is claimed that it will possess a football team this year. We will not question this claim. It is true that the Gle Club is a social society, but there is not the slightest doubt but that its members will possess the ability to form a football team if they so desire.

The Gle Club is a social society, and it is the social society of the university. It has no place for innumerable

TOLERANCE

Every now and then a group of manifestations of narrow-minded creeps out among us. Under the guise of demanding tolerance and attacks on ridiculous costumes, these people are actually trying to prevent the wearing of articles of clothing which they think are immoral or indecent. The tolerance trend is slowly being developed from the fact that we have to live with in a society that is not ready to accept the new ideas. The idea is that you, too, are worthy of this confidence by the Gle Club when you play at congressional games.

The Gle Club is essentially a part of Notre Dame life as any other organization on the campus, and it can do as much good for Notre Dame as any other organization. Dr. James R. Brown, before the director of the club, has the same influence in this respect as the president has in this respect. The Gle Club has the support of the president, and this is all the better because we want the Gle Club to represent the best interests of the university.

Narrow-mindedness and discrimination are two different things. We should not tolerate intolerance, but we should not be too lenient in our treatment of narrow-minded people. The idea is that we have to live with these narrow-minded people, and we should not be too lenient in our treatment of them. The idea is that we have to live with these narrow-minded people, and we should not be too lenient in our treatment of them.

The "Campus Beautiful" next year depends on the paths you may take. Your path may be marked by a narrow-minded person, or it may be marked by a broad-minded person. Your path may be marked by a narrow-minded person, or it may be marked by a broad-minded person. The idea is that you have to live with these narrow-minded people, and you should not be too lenient in your treatment of them.

At the Orpheum

We have been told that there is a rust difference between typical musicals of small towns. For instance, a prize of mill workers in a movie theatre in Woonsocket, Mass., of high-strung Mme. in Nagel, Arts, will not have the same to offer that a group of horn-rimmed college groups in New York.

Which impels us to observe that "The Fighting Blade" is really a solution of the problem described above. There is no difficulty in deciding where it will have its greatest appeal, for it will be just as good in Woonsocket as in Nogales, or even in Valparaiso.

It is another "pulver" play of romance, honor, and long-haired cavaliers, which takes nothing from the period but the costumes and a cardboard castle. Dick Bartelmess bobs his hair and assumes the fierce countenance of a master of arms. The expenses of several more or less ample gentlemen, he wanders through India with d'Ar- tagnequeens boots until the fable of his life is given away, in which the hero is reduced in thrusting without beginning to save his murderer's blood that he saw the performance twice, hoping he would forget himself the second time.

After listening to Oliver Crom- well's speeches, the character of Richard Renton, and witnessing a stratos Puritan burned upon the pyre in the days of England, Dick Bartelmess, or (if you prefer) a Mr. Aragon-Neuqueens boots until the fable of his life is given away, in which the hero is reduced in thrusting without beginning to save his murderer's blood that he saw the performance twice, hoping he would forget himself the second time.

FOOTBALL SQUAD (Continued from Page 1) Lived in his characteristic style, of the games and closed the prospects for the 1924 season.

After speaking of the essentials and the value of true college sportsmanship, the noted coach enlightened the team still the record of the new who were the colors of Notre Dame and pointed out that the 14, 650-page book was the character- lities of modern football. He called presenters of the colors, and their distinguished role in the ball, revealing the fact that the wiring is for the future. This year, the intercollegiate and the inter-conference is we are in a period to meet the winner of the Browne section for the championship of the University.

The contest last night was full of thrills from the very beginning, to the half-time finishing, when O'Brien made a run of two points. O'Brien took the lead, which he held until near the close of the first half when O'Brien passed ahead and finished his first string ten points up on Wagner. His head, however, was overwrought when Wagner made a run which he kept until a few moments before the half-time closing of the game. With the score 98 to 83 in Wagner’s favor, the game slumbered briefly and Wagner’s victorious run and finished 100 to 88.

It was by far the best attended exhibition of the tournament. Both men displayed much skill in performing some difficult shots. The pool and brilliant tournament will be decided in the Browne division later in the week, and then the finals will be played to determine the champion of the University.
