CONRAD AND THE REPORTERS
By Christopher Morley, Doubleday, Page & Co.

This is a little book written by Christopher Morley and published for book lovers and friends and lovers of Conrad. Only eight hundred and fifteen copies were printed and the type has been distributed. The original appeared in the New York Evening Post in May, 1933, after Mr. Conrad's arrival in his adopted country.

As Mr. Morley says himself, "The spirit of the adventure is in the collision between Conrad and the reporters." Mr. Morley was one of the special interviewers to Mr. Conrad as he came up the New York Harbor on the "Tuscania" last spring and in his delightful advertising manner, he ceremony to tell us all that the novelist's experience with the reporters and the photographers, who formed his "team," in the matter of interviewing was a unique experience for the reporters to be "armed" with a delightfully ambiguous mind and out of the photographs, he says, "one does not know one speaks.

New York harbor, the famous skyline, and a few sullen vessels floating under the lamps of the gigantic Tuscans are all commented on interestingly. Some of Conrad's fellow-passengers receive far worse than to be made part of the story, and Captain David Don of the "Tuscania." Mr. Henry Fox and Mr. Conrad were cabin mates on the trip "and had found themselves to be kindred spirits." Captain Bob and Mr. Conrad had been friends for many years and in a spirit at the thought of Mr. Conrad, "in the exhilaration of finding kindred spirits." Mr. Conrad and the Tuscans were companions and a congenial company, sitting up until o'clock every night, as particularly Mr. Conrad copy of "The Brass- covered" and "The Nigger," and then he found Mr. Conrad's advice, saying that he had some thought of leaving the sea to take up literary journalism. Conrad's answer gives a few and interesting insight into his attitude toward himself. With his fine eyes for the inspiration he was compelled to dessert. "Stick to the ship. If I had known that writing would take me away from the sea I would never have published a line."

The reporters find Mr. Conrad a great subject for their questions but some of the stories in the paper baggs is all. In this manuscript, we know that his favorite book "Depended on the day." The book concludes with a chapter by Mr. Morley on the sale of some of Mr. Conrad's first manuscripts. Some of these figures are amusing when one considers that the author is still living and his books, unfortunately, comparatively little read. At this auction Almasy Polly went for $5.50; An Outcast of the Islands, $4.10; The Nigger of the Narcissus, $4.50; The Pro- nounced, $4.25. (In DS. pages of manuscript), $1.10; Youth, $2.30; Typhoon, $5.50; Nostromo, $9.50; The Secret Agent, $2.90; Under Western Eyes, $6.90; Chance, $6.60; Victory, $8.10. Last, that same evening Under Western Eyes was sold again to an ancient reader, Doctor Rupert Brooke, and the Nigger! In all this collection we can't help but think of the manuscript of "Lend me your head! This manuscript not available, or is it in that there are three collections after all?—F. H.

If you smoke a pipe

(it if you don't you ought to)

it may be worth your while to read this

You know tobacco is a vegetable; it grows out of the ground, and when it's green, it is too harsh and strong to smoke. The very best way to remove that harshness and bitterness is by thorough aging in wood. To age Velvet Tobacco in wood is expensive for us—you, very expensive, and it takes time, but it gives you a milder, cooler smoke with a finer flavor.

It's 10 to 1 you like Velvet Tobacco aged in wood.
