Rossie And Committee Meet Board To Discuss Student Self-Government

BY TIM O'MEILLIA

The Student Government panel which will meet past Tuesday, the Committee of the Board of Trustees, has been announced by Student Body President Rich Rosie. Rosie also announced that former Notre Dame professors will speak to the committee in behalf of the student causes at Sun's meetings.

The Student Government panel includes Rosie, Vice President Chuck Nau, Student Union President Rich Rembusch, Student Life Coordinator Larry Landry, Mike McCauley, Executive Coordinator, Observ­er editor Bill Luking and Judicial Coordina­tor Bob Rigney. Rosie said his choices for the panel were prefaced by his desire to represent a cross-section of student life. He said Landry would handle student life, McCauley hall life and the other members would offer observations from their positions of responsibility.

The five-man Ad Hoc Committee in­cludes Board of Trustees Chairman Edmund A. Stumpf, Chicago attorney, and promi­nent Boston attorney Paul F. Hellin­schm, who is Secretary of the Board. Other members are Dr. Thomas P. Carey, Senior Vice President for Research at Searle and Co.; Dr. George N. Shuster, Assistant to the President University, Director of the Center for Continuing Edu­ca­tion at this University, the Student Government panel has been granted a three hour audience. None of the other panels has been allowed more than 45 minutes. The meeting is set for 1:30 p.m Sunday in the Center for Continuing Education with the Student Government panel.

The atmosphere of the meeting will be informal, according to Rosie. The meeting will consist of questions and answers from both sides. Rosie said, "They want all the facts and problems of student life. They may pose questions which we have not included in our packet." The packets were distributed to the Trustees committee ear­lier.

The packet contains several reports on student self-government, the judicial system and the final response was that Father Riehle's willingness to compromise, one change in wording was "if a demonstration interferes with an approved University activity, disciplinary bodies would have the right to control that in­terference." Father Riehle pointed out that this would not in­clude buildings, in which he feels that demonstrations would have too disruptive an effect to be permitted.

Various senators repeated the question concerning Father Riehle's willingness to compromise, and the final response was that Father Riehle did not think it was right to change a bill at this time. The Rosie's suggestion that Father Riehle should move to a conference Scherber, Richard Storatz, Pete Dowd, Steve Ahren, John Morre, Storino, and Mike Kelly. The meeting has been tentatively scheduled for 10:00 this morning.

Father Riehle explains directive will meet with committee today

Father James Riehle, CSC Dean of Students, today explained for over one hour by the Student Senate Wed. evening concerning his recent directive to intervene in student demonstrations.

Student Body President Rich­ard Rosie introduced Father Riehle and at that time mentioned his own objections to the directive. These were the way it was given, without consulting the students in any way, the lack of need for such a directive, and its unenforceability.

Riehle first outlined the his­tory behind his move, referring to two incidents of this year. He then demonstrated against Dow Chemical Company at the Administration Building and the Center for Continuing Education. In each of these he attempted to intervene in some way, and the students pointed out that there was no Uni­versity concern demonstrating.

Riehle said that both cases were personally embarrassing, and he came to feel the need for some sort of policy in regard to demonstrations. He then went through regular­ities, receiving approval from Uni­versity President Rev. Theodore Heirich, CSC. Sorin Senator Richard Stor­atz commented that the direc­tive gave the impression that Fr. Riehle's request for 24 hour ad­dress notice seemed to give him the final say on whether a demo­nstration would be held. Father Riehle replied that the only reason for this structure was in the interests of order.

When asked about the point that under this directive the de­monstration for Martin Luther King could not have been held. He clarified his position by say­ing that the 24 hour address notice was required of those who knew of the demonstration at the time. If a demonstration was un­planned until fifteen minutes be­fore, the notification would then be acceptable.

Mike Kelly of Brenn-Phillips asked why the Dean of Students had not called any students. Fat­her said that he had honestly thought of that but decided against it, because there was "no real reason for it." In the future, he promised to ensure that there was some sort of communica­tion with the students.

Jon Sherry of Lyons raised what was to be the main issue of the meeting, Father Riehle was questioned about some ambigui­ty in the directive. Theoret­i­cally, the definition of some words in the directive is not precise. He asked Father Riehle could designate the whole campus as off-limits, effectively for­bidding in designated restricted areas. This was to include circumstances such as would arise during the May 7 Presidential Review. He felt the necessity for the student's rights to be free of interference. Father Riehle pointed out that this would not in­clude buildings, in which he feels that demonstrations would have too disruptive an effect to be permitted.

Democratic Presidential hopeful Senator Eugene McCarthy will address a conference on civil disorders in the Center for Con­tinuing Education at 7:30 to­night. The workshop sponsored by WNDU television is on "Re­porting the Urban Crisis." Only 240 seats are available for use by the general public. The topic of McCarthy's address has not yet been disclosed.

McCarthy's speech will be the climax of a brief stop over in South Bend which will begin at 5:00 pm when he lands at St. Joseph County airport. He will then return to the station offices to tape an interview. After his visit to the conference McCarthy will fly on to Gary, Indiana. A spokesperson for the Univer­sity said that McCarthy will probably return to campus to address the student body before the Indiana presidential pri­mary.
Rembusch Announces Future Plans May Call Outside Help On Robbery

BY TIM O'MEILIA

Student Union President Rick Rembusch told the Student Sen­ate he was considering calling in an outside force to con­tinue the investigation of the Student Union robbery of $3,000. In a Student Union report to the Senate, Rembusch said that he had spoken to Security Director Arthur N. Peers yesterday con­cerning the progress in the case.

Rembusch said he was satisfied with most of Peers' explana­tions but that he was not happy with some parts of the investi­gation. According to Rembusch, Peers said the two sets of fingerprints taken from the safe are not of good quality and have not been compared with those of the eight to ten higher echelon members of the Union. Peers said a comparison would be made when a prime suspect emerges.

The polygraph tests have not been administered because of skilled personnel necessary to give the tests. South Bend police will administer the tests and none of the law enforce­ment agencies in the surrounding area would agree to administer them.

The case was left to the sec­urity division of the university's Little Hall, the campus police at the request of the union members.

Rembusch announced several of the social events for next year are now in the process of being planned. There will be­en concerts during the football season, one for each of the home games and one probably on Sept. 20. The Union is pre­sently negotiating with Lou Rawles, Harpo with the Four Tops, Simon and Garfun­kel, the Chad Mitchell Trio and Glen Yarbrough among others.

Next year's Student Union trip will be to Michigan State on Oct. 25. Rembusch said the Union hopes to have only one Homecoming dance next year, which is Oct. 19, the day of the Illini-Michigan game.

The Union is planning a Tip­off celebration on Dec. 7, for the UCLA game. Plans are not yet completed however. A Grand Prix du Lac is also being consid­ered, modeled after Indiana Uni­versity's Little '500' weekend. The weekend would include a race around campus in ball-spon­sored go-carts, with pit stops, radio coverage from the tops of buildings and other embellish­ments. A concert is also pending for the May weekend.

The Academic Commission is preparing a Constitutional Con­tention, more Senatorial debates, forums of student power, Black Power speakers such as Stokley Carmichael, a major free film movie series, athletic speakers such as A.J. Foyt, Jimmy Brown, and Casey Stengel and other pro­grams.

Rembusch said the Student Service Commission will have next year's student directory out earlier and with more copies. "Faithe," a booklet for incoming freshmen, will be reconstituted. A new, larger shuttle bus will almost certainly be purchased. The bus transportation to O'Hare International Airport will be con­tinued at every vacation. Meas­ures have also been taken to col­lect debts owed to the Student Press.

Vice President Bill Wade is investi­gating the possibility of purchasing a press, especially if the Observer decides to contract a wire service and begin pub­lishing daily. Former Observer editor Pat Collins said the cost of the press, $21,600, would save money in the long run since the present cost of the Observer is $10,000 annually. The press could be used for other purposes also, such as the student direc­tory and the Student Course and Teacher Evaluation.

Miller Wants Competition For Nixon
Predicts 1968 Republican Victory

BY TOM EHRBAR

Touching upon such topics as the American Two­party system, the morality of the Nur­enburg Trials, the Rockefeller draft movement, and the Repub­lican chances in 1968, former Vice Presidential candidate Wil­liam E. Miller addressed the ND Union last evening. His comments, given in the context of the two-party system, were merely following his con­victions. "It is America's key to greatness. It must be preserved." Miller fur­condemned current third-party or independent movements, and suggested the possibility of the U.S. president being dete­rmined by the House of the Representatives because of the strength of these peripheral par­ties.

A prosecutor at the Nurem­burg Trials, Miller spoke of a de­licate moral problem which emerged from the racket of the Trials. The defense of "superior order", employed by the German officers, was abolished by the international court on the gro­unds that every individual is obligated to follow his own con­science. "Yet today", Miller said, "we have young people burning draft cards, claiming that they are merely following their con­science. Who has the answer?"

After his brief talk, a lengthy q­uestion and answer session brought out Miller's appraisal of the current Republican scene.

He saw the long figure of Richard Nixon, now virtually unchal­lenged, as a definite party weak­ness. "Nixon must have compe­tition, if not, he can overlook all the issues; and the Democrats will have all the front pages to themselves." Only through de­bate and discourse will the Repub­lican position be defined.

Miller himself, favors Gov­ernor Rockefeller as the GOP nom­i­nee in 1968. However, he in­sta, "Nixon, within the next three weeks, has got to make an announcement whether he is a candidate or not. I don't be­lieve in drafts or deadlock con­ventions."

Gov. Rockefeller, according to Miller, is a well-known and proven administrator. He has been elected governor three times in a strong Democratic state. He is a vigorous participant within the Republican ranks, he will be able to avoid salient issues and remain a vague possibility.

One particular issue, stressed by Goldwater and Nixon in 1964, and still held by Miller today, is to balance the budget and strength­en the American dollar. "Other­wise," he said, "the current pol­icy of deficit spending will even­tually result in the economic collapse of the country."

Asked to comment on Gov­ernor of Michigan, Miller said, "he didn't catch on fire." As for the three-way struggle within the Democratic ranks, Miller closed his talk saying, "This year we can beat any of them".
Student Government Now Financially Autonomous

Student Body President Richard Rossie made several announcements to the Student Senate meeting Wednesday night. The first was that the old Student Center policy had been reactivated, giving control over the Center to the House Committee of the Student Senate.

The student government is now "financially autonomous" according to Rossie and Father O'Callaghan who will no longer sign their checks.

Elections for the N.D. representative to the Aug. 16-20 convention of the National Student Association will take place on May 1. There will be five delegates and five alternates, and anyone is free to enter by self-nomination.

At the same time there will be a referendum on increasing the student activities fee from ten to twenty dollars. Rossie said that most of the added revenue would be used for expanding subsidies to four things: the Literary Arts Festival, the Contemporary Arts Festival, the student speaker series, and a conference series. Some of the reasons needed for an increase in these subsidies were the growth in importance of the Literary Arts Festival, the difficulty of the Contemporary Arts Festival in obtaining support because of the Literary Arts Festival, and the increasing cost of speakers.

Another possibility is a hall improvement fund. Rossie said that on this matter he was working with the Hall President's Council, and would have a specific proposal ready shortly.

Rossie announced that the Student Teacher and Course Evaluation pamphlet would be ready either Mon. or Tues. and due to publishing costs of about $1400 would be sold for $1 or $1.50.

The Free University may be expanded next year, and the desired budget would be between $1000 and $1500.

Rousse said that NSA President Schwartz had written to him, requesting that he ask Father Hesburgh to make it University policy not to penalize anyone who refused on grounds of conscience to serve in the military. This would affect a first year graduate student who might possibly refuse and in the future seek to finish his work here.

The meeting with the ad hoc committee of the Board of Trustees is set for Sunday and the student government report is ready. That report contains General Assembly legislation, reports on student and hall life, and "constructive proposals". The group of students with Rossie will talk to the committee for three hours, with some faculty members present.

After the Rouge announcements the Senate heard a talk by Father Rehbie on his directive concerning the student demonstrations, and a report from Student Union Pres. Rick Rembusch.

A call for a quorum after Rembusch's report failed to bring the required number of senators, and the meeting was adjourned after Rossie gave the first reading for a constitutional amendment which will be taken up at the next meeting on Sunday.

Before The Board

All the campaign oratory, all the student demagoguery, all the planning, and the General Assembly of Students are very minor points of history. Although student life probably will not be radically altered after Student Body President Rossie's committee's meeting with the Board of Trustee's ad hoc committee Sunday afternoon, it is Sunday's meeting which will determine the future of this year's issues of concern.

It is student life that the Rossie committee will discuss with the Board. It will be General Assembly resolutions on student self-government, the judicial system, hall life, and parietal hours that the two committees will consider. If these ideas are to become realities, the process must start with Sunday's meeting.

The material to be presented to us seems quite logical and we can find no reason to oppose immediate implementation of the concept of student self-government as provided for by the General Assembly of Students. We also have faith in Mr. Rossie and his committee and hold that they will represent the student voice. If we ask the Board members to fully consider the material and the ideas to be presented Sunday.

It is unfortunate that this meeting has been so long in coming. It is indeed time for students to present their plans for student self-government to the men who must ultimately act or fail to act upon or must inact or reject the proposals Mr. Rossie will make Sunday.

We have faith that the Board's committee will be favorably impressed with much of what Mr. Rossie will present and most probably the ad hoc committee will recommend and the entire Board will approve certain changes in University policy governing student life.

But the problem that remains is one of degree. Will the Board listen long enough? Will its members react unfavorably to the vague threat of student power, or will they wait and listen and learn and realize what student life is like and how it can be bettered to the advantage of the students and the University?

Let us hope they sit and listen long enough.

A Stand Taken

We commend and applaud Father Hesburgh's stand endorsing the Poor People's March on Washington. We too ask "What are you willing to do?" And we note that it will take concern and effort on the part of many segments and people to effect any changes in the economic disfranchaise of a sizable part of our population. We hope that the March may be a start, a call to conscience.

Besides serving as a statement of support for the Poor People's campaign, Father Hesburgh's statement is encouraging for it is the voice of the University speaking on a question of moral and social significance.

Student criticism has been leveled in the past and will be raised again at the failure of elders, teachers, and the Administration of this University to take stands on the problems of war and poverty facing the nation.

Father Hesburgh has spoken out on this issue. Let us listen to him, and let us hope that he will use his position, as his conscience might direct, in the future to take stands on the problems that face us.

Notes On Recent History

Most people who consider themselves to be privets of privilege, don't know they are a distinct group apart from the rest of the university community, because they have not been touched by the bombastic of the intellectuals waging war against the unchanging ideals of the intellect. It has been, especially within the last decade, a growth toward a complete integration of the whole university community. Administration and its mother figure the Board of Trustees has no right governing the lives of the students here so categorically; the implicit half of their contention is that the student community is unprepared and capable of governing themselves. The assumption that underlies this is that perhaps there was once a time when the Administration actually felt the need for stepping in and regulating the behavior of student. The exaggeration of the change from that time to this is frequently unnoticed; if it is simply that there has been, especially within the last decade, a growth toward a complete integration of the whole university community.

To be sure there are some segments of the university it has not touched. There are certain intellectual developments that are entirely separate plane, as does Moorean Seminary to a lesser extent. What is the right, Ralph? Right, Ralph? The reason is the move away from isolation. Even in the late 50s the seminary functioned almost entirely as a fortress, almost completely isolated from the campus. This had a telling effect on the young Holy Cross priests who will control the Administration in the next five years and will continue to do so for the next decade. Several expressed deep regrets that while they were students, they were not involved in what is now the move away. This aspect of institutionalism is steadily decreasing thanks especially to the efforts of Father Pius, the new director of the seminary.

An even more significant aspect of the bureaucratic suffered by any administration is the loss of autonomy. It is most unfortunate that the Senate was told that there was no need for consideration of any student or other interest in the Senate or by the University. But it is at least relevant. We should be glad to see the caretakers of the institution concern themselves with demonstrations instead of where or where their charges might venture in the wicked city of South Bend or with turning out the lights at midnight. But it's still a directive, a rule; the delegation is a rule, the ten commandments in stone like the Ten Commandments and hanging on your rector's bulletin board.

Although the content of this particular edict is most questionable, the manner in which the directive came into being and came to be issued demonstrate that this University or at least the aspects which concern us are governed by whim.

There are indeed certain objections to how this document was written. It is a case of appealing for the Administration to keep back the barad admission of peaceful protest to Don's talk after permission had been requested. We can do this here, the Administration has no right to bar the admission of peaceful protest to Don's talk after permission had been requested. We can do this here, the Administration has no right to bar the admission of peaceful protest to Don's talk after permission had been requested. We can do this here, the Administration has no right to bar the admission of peaceful protest to Don's talk after permission had been requested.

The fact that the Administration is concerned with directives on student de- monstrations in itself is encouraging. May be someday the Administration will ask what students are demonstrating about.
Hesburgh Endorses Poor March On Washington

[Editor's Note: The following is a statement released yesterday by University President Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C. supporting the Poor People's March on Washington.]

One of the great and persisting scandals of our day is the sad fact that in the most affluent nation of the world there are millions of people, Negroes, Spanish-speaking Americans, whites, and others - such as American Indians - who are perennially, almost institutionally, condemned to a life of poverty. Directly or indirectly, intentionally or subconsciously, the condemnation of the minority is inflicted by the white majority of this nation. We have gradually been evolving into two nations, side by side, separate and unequal, developed and underdeveloped. At the heart of this poverty is a triple inequality of opportunity - in education, in employment, and in housing. Each side of the diametral triangle supports the other two sides: poor schools mean lack of preparation for meaningful employment. Lack of employment or minimal, low-wage jobs mean inability to achieve better housing, even if it were open and available. Concentration of the poor in shabby neighborhoods gives access only to poor ghetto schools for their children, and so it goes, year after year, poverty creating more poverty.

The march on Washington is meant to be a non-violent, multi-racial attempt to manifest this face of poverty to the nation, to attract the attention of everyone to a condition that should plague our individual and collective conscience as Americans. It may be the last great march, our last chance to be convinced to do something constructively in each local community to find realistic solutions to make the promise of America come true for Americans.

It has been asked, "Why don't the poor pull themselves up by their own bootstraps?" The whole point is that they don't presently have any pulsible boot straps. Poor schools are not a boot strap, and over ninety per cent of all Negro youngsters are in poor schools. Four hundred thousand under-educated Negro youngsters are graduated into American society each year to face frustration. Unemployment is not a boot strap, and Negro unemployment is twice as high among Negroes as among whites, with the figure for young Negroes much higher. A dilapidated house in a rundown neighborhood is not a boot strap - but that is where most Negroes live.

A nation that can afford to spend thirty billion dollars a year in an area the size of the State of Indiana, with half the population of America's poor, can afford to spend half that amount yearly realistic means of eliminating it. We cannot all march, but each of us can do something even more meaningful - create equality of opportunity in education, employment, and housing in our community. This is what the march is all about. Deny this and you deny America. Deny America and one of the few shining lights will be extinguished in a world that is largely darkened by universal poverty, frustration, and hopelessness. America is what America does. What are you willing to do?

Dustin Hoffman Mobbed By Library Crowd

Dustin Hoffman, star of The Graduate and McCarthy campaigner, was mobbed by crowds of enthusiastic students in visits to Notre Dame and St. Mary's Wednesday. Speaking impromptu to an audience of more than 500 in the Library Auditorium, Hoffman spoke of his work for the Minnesota Senator, saying "If I have ever felt I was doing something constructive in my life, it is now."

Hoffman appeared at Notre Dame about 3:30 in the afternoon, and was greeted by a crowd of more than 100 at the Circle. From there he walked to the Library with a stop at the Huddle. At the Library, the actor was greeted by a crowd of 600 which pressed around him and then crowded into the Library Auditorium.

In his Library speech, Hoffman explained his support of McCarthy, saying "The reason I'm involved in this is perhaps very simple. I've always been apolitical. I was told not to back Senator McCarthy, that it would hurt me at the box office. When I made the decision, though, I didn't have to reflect or worry. I live in very acute times. There's a holocaust taking place in many of our cities. When I think of raising children in this environment, the thought of whether something will hurt me at the box office is suddenly very insignificant."

"Everyone has very individual feelings about the Vietnam war. I myself was very concerned about the war when McCarthy came out against it. I saw him risk his political career against this war. He was saying what he believed... He put his cards on the table.

For the Vietnam war, Hoffman told of visiting Bethesda Naval hospital near Washington, expecting to see enthusiastic responses about the war from wounded Marines just back from Vietnam. Terming the visit "terrifying experience," Hoffman said "They could not care less about Vietnam. Their total concern was the part of their body which was gone."

Turning to the ghetto, Hoffman spoke of a feeling of personal responsibility for the "second class" plight of our black citizens. He stated "Because I do not devote myself to eliminating this deprivation I feel myself personally responsible for it." Speaking of the riots in ghettos, Hoffman commented "I do not condone it but somehow I understand it."

Hoffman concluded his speech by telling his youthful audience "I want to thank you for opening up my own mind to politics. It is time we put some leaves on this scarred tree we call America." He was greeted with a 30 second standing ovation.
The Winners Who Shouldn't Win

By BILL SISKA

Now that Hollywood's annual tolling of its own funeral bell, the Academy Awards, is past, and the next one thankfully a whole year away, a post mortem might be apropos. This year's affair was more a dirge than usual. When you add up five mediocre movie bests for picture of the year, picking the best of a bad lot is the minimum one can expect. When the revered Academy did not even do this, one would ask them to begin questioning their own relevance, not insofar as Hollywood as the leader of the film industry is dead (if adequately ever was alive other than financially), but whether it has anything to do with the film as art at all.

In the Heat of the Night was named best picture. Bonnie and Clyde should have won. How could it lose with competition like The Graduate, Dr. Doo little, and Guess Who's Coming to Dinner?—not that would have happened. In this story American newspaper. Perhaps I have not been reading too closely, but this treatment seems to have been rather one sided. I do not for a moment believe that the Observer would intentionally slant your news (we know that this has never been done by our honorable Observer); however, some other logical explanation must be present. For example, something like this: The Johnson-Humphrey Administration has been, at least, worthless, unproductive, and unimaginative. Some of your writers, in a bit of flaming printed prose, have suggested that our distinguished official might do this work of art, and he is strictly for laughs. Bonnie and Clyde have no more brought violence into the open than Rap Brown's statement on Americanism and cherry pie. The Graduate didn't carry a draft card or go to demonstration, but Steiger hammered it up like a drill sergeant in a toothpaste commercial, and so he had to win. He is a good actor, no doubt about it.

Somehow Hollywood is always trying to convince everyone, maybe us, that it is aware of social issues and unafraid to force them down the public's throat. But when Bob Hope tells you that current films deal with contemporary problems in courageous and other-day settings, you don't believe a word of it, it is strictly for laughs. Bonnie and Clyde are no more brought violence into the open than Rap Brown's statement on Americanism and cherry pie. The Graduate didn't carry a draft card or go to demonstra-

And what I see of my classy mate, I like, I like! Ruggedly built, but with a cool, suave look . . . just like his permanently pressed Van Heusen "417" VANOPRESS shirt, that is.

The treatment of Senator Kennedy by the press has really been quite surprising. Billed as the Boy wonder of American Politics, this recent one-haired very Junior Senator, after first pledging support to the President, and then to Senator McCarthy, now tours the country telling people that we must return to the days when his late and beloved brother was President.

The second solution seems to be a definite lack of intellectualism on the part of many of the staff. Again, Mr. Connolly steps to the forefront. They have let emotions and prejudices take over their writing capacity and now are looked upon with contempt, humor or pity. I would like to suggest that a segment of this poor public again to report the truth, not the Bogle or the Mitchell, the Naur truth, nor even the Hunter truth. It may be hard, but Bobby and Eugene would want it that way in the end.

Richard Hunter
By TERRY O'NEIL

I remember the first time I saw Terry Hanratty play football. He didn't show me his full potential that night. Oh, he wasn't that bad. But if you had asked me the possibilities of him being on the cover of Time magazine two years later and contending for the Heisman Trophy two years after that, I'd have told you he was headed for two — slim and none. It was Sept. 27, 1964, when Terry led the Butler High Tornadoes into Natrona Heights, Pa. (my hometown), for a game with Har-Brack. At that time, Butler was undefeated and among the favorites for the Western Pennsylvania title, which is pretty much equivalent to the world high school championship (despite all the Texas who just burned this). It's one of those reasons Terry wasn't impressive to me. He hadn't even become Ohio State's top two signal-callers in the sophomore (and brother Ron led Michigan back Tim Karrs. He is remembered to the Butler line were George Kelly of running, but handing off was his as a sophomore), Rich Saul (who played against Har-Brack in '64, but today he's the biggest man in the powerful ball carriers. Terry did his share of running, but handing off was his principal duty. He only threw about nine passes a game; it was mostly a power-based offense," he recalls. On the Butler line were George Kelly (ND sophomore guard), Rich Saul (who led Michigan State in tackles last year as a sophomore) and brother Ron Saul (also MSU). In the backfield were fullback Terry Rettig (who will probably start for Vanderbilt this fall) and halfback Mike Gugino (who is playing at little Clarion, Pa.). Har-Brack's best counter was quarter- back Tom Karrs. He is remembered to Irish fans as a third-string quarterback at North Carolina who played against ND in 1966. (After Kevin Hardy and Alan Page had put the top two signal-caller in the hospital, Karrs threw three interceptions during his brief stint at the helm. Butler beat Har-Brack 47-0 that night, but the score is no indication of how the game really went. It wasn't that close. In seven handoffs, Hanratty scored two TDs on runs of nine and 25 yards. He, and most of the other regulars, left the field trailing 26-0 midway in the second period. Butler finished the game with 17 first downs, 317 yards rushing, 54 yards passing and four of eight passes completed.

Later that year, Terry's brother Pete ("a very low high jumper here") tipped off Coach Johnny Ray, who recruited Terry. Hanratty made one All-State team and received All-America honorable mention, but as Ray says, "he was never the standout among our recruits that year." Hanratty's development since he left Butler came in many areas, of which his physical change is most startling. He was 187 pounds playing against Har-Brack in '64, but today he's the biggest man in the Irish backfield at 213. And it's all solid.

"I don't really know how I put on the weight," he says. "I never lifted weights of more than 100 pounds. I've done a lot of bench presses, but I used light weight and didn't do them slowly like most weight-lifters. I never felt it was good for a quarterback to lift weights because it stiffens you up too much."

"I've never do any special exercises to strengthen my throwing arm….just throw. I think the more you throw, the stronger you get. It hasn't helped my distance any; I can throw the ball 70 yards at most now and I could do that in high school. But now I can throw up to 50 yards with accuracy and I couldn't do that four years ago."

Backfield coach Tom Pagna sums up Hanratty's other major evolution when he jokes, "We like to think Terry's improvement since high school is due to the good coaching he got out here." "That's true," Hanratty says. "In high school, you have double sessions, you might work on offense in the morning and defense in the afternoon. But in college, everybody is a specialist. We have coaches who work only with the quarterbacks and if you have a double session you work on your specialty all the time."

"The coaches have improved my fak­ing, footwork and play calling especially. We run about 70 plays a game and I call about 90 to 95 per cent of those. That means I have to recognize all the different defenses and call about 15 to 20 audibles."

Terry's habit of snuggling one leg away from the center just before the snap of the ball is another direct result of ND coaching. "I just picked that up," he says. "They kept telling me to get away quick and I found that's the quickest way."

This Hanratty-type improvement is going on every day at Cartier Field among the freshmen and sophomores. "Spring practice is mostly to teach the young guys and keep the old guys in shape," Terry says.

If team improvement comes fast enough to get the Irish past Oklahoma and Purdue in the first two games of 1968, Nov. 30 may become very important. On that day, Notre Dame and Southern Cali­fornia might battle for a National Cham­pionship while Terry Hanratty and G.J. Simpson are dueling for the Heisman Tro­phy. Do I hear some Har-Brack lads chant­ing, "T.H. for the H.T.?"

"Nappy" Napolitano, director of club sports, is under intense fire for an intestinal disorder at North Westchester Hospital, Mt. Kisco, N. Y.

Weekend sports schedule: The baseball team visits Bowling Green for Friday and Saturday games, then journeys to St. Joseph's (Ontario) for a 1 p.m. Saturday afternoon contest Sunday. The golf team battles Michi­gan State and Purdue at Lansing in its Open Saturday. Tennis teams visit ND for a 1 p.m. tennis match Saturday and Iowa comes in for a 10 a.m. engagement Sunday. The lacrosse club motors to U. of Chicago Saturday. The interhall tennis tourney is slated Saturday and Sunday. 13-man track contingent will represent ND at the Drake Relays Saturday.

Injuries have struck down the Bayonne Duo and Notre Dame is building on it.

Senior center fielder Bob Koczalski suffered a shoulder separation Friday in a motorcycle accident. That depressed Coach Jake Kline of the biggest bat in the starting lineup. The Koczalski was hitting .485 with two homers and nine RBI's to compound Kline's problems, "We run about 70 plays a game and I call about 90 to 95 per cent of those. That means I have to recognize all the different defenses and call about 15 to 20 audibles."
