Welcome Freshmen! You are Here! But where are you? Freshman Tom Carlyle ponders the campus map and his next four years in the shadows of the Golden Dome. Fifteen hundred forty-nine ND frosh and 413 new SMers arrive today for Freshman Orientation.

Muskie Pleases 'Mutual Trust'

In a short, impromptu speech to a crowd of more than 2000 in Stepan Center Wednesday night, Democratic Vice Presidential nominee Edmund Muskie issued a call for national unity and "an attitude of mutual trust among men." The speech by the Maine Senator was generally well received, but a group of students in the crowd chanted "Peace Now!" as Muskie commenced his speech. Discussing the Vietnam War, Muskie emphasized a unity of purpose and was critical of some proposals for immediate cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam. Muskie contended "to regard to this war there are things we can agree on. The war must end. It must be settled in a negotiated settlement. We must take some risks to end the war and end the fighting. It is at this point that we begin to part company..." We cannot end the bombing in a way which creates greater risks to our boys who are fighting there. We must consider our responsibilities and not abandon them.

In a further admonition to protesters, Muskie stated that "Those crying out for a role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."

Muskie was strongly critical of some dissenters. The Maine senator conceded that, "The young and the disadvantaged role ought to take a look at what America was like when it was new. It was made up of people who trusted each other, who had differences but who went on address. Freedom does not come from that of other years. The theme will be peace, freedom does not come from those who do not tolerate those who will undermine our society. However, let's not equate the law and order of a democratic society with the restrictions imposed by the police state."
The new and more liberal 1966-69 student manual for the first time gives students some student rights, including 16 statements of rights guaranteed to accredited students. The manual was written by representatives of the students, faculty, and administration as an outgrowth of the course, "Principles of Policy on Student Life.

The manual is much more explicit in its rules than last year's book, and lengthier, covering library regulations, discipline, and expanding in most other sections with more explanations. The new section guarantees a clear delineation of all actions which can be considered a violation of University rules.

The section guarantees a fair trial for the accused including choice of counsel, the right to call witnesses, trial before an impartial body, and access to the identities of his accusers.

It includes most of the provisions of what Arizona College considers a fair trial. The accused may request a trial by the Dean of Students and the right of appeal "to a higher body in the event of new evidence or prejudicial error can be demonstrated.

The defendant may even request the right to have a closed hearing.

The University rules, as a d i f f e r e n t i a l f r o m the University regulations, include: one addition and several alterations, although most of the rules are carry-overs from previous years. No new additional rules deal with demonstrations.

Demonstrators are required to be peacefully and must not make any "derogatory statements of the University community.

One important rule change deals with a student who has been arrested. Previously, such a student was "subject to disciplinary action by the Dean of Students." The new rule states, "A student who violates the civil law should not automatically be subjected to penalties by the institution.

However action may be taken against a student who is found to be a detriment to the University community as a result of his off-campus activities."

Long-standing rules against drinking and gambling, in accordance with Indiana state laws have remained unchanged.

The new regulations on class attendance approved last spring, have been reprinted on the 28-page pamphlet. The University will not make any rules concerning class absences, leaving cuts to the discretion of the individual professor or department. However all instructors "will present a clear statement of the policy by the Instructor, or where appropriate by his Department" setting forth the class policy concerning excessive absences and permission to make up work missed by reason of absence.

The Open Speaker Policy which allows the Notre Dame administration to ban any person of their own choosing.

There is an expanded section of publications. The preface these regulations: "Whenever possible the student newspaper should be an independent corporation financially and legally separate from the University." Three provisions are set forth for students "publishing material which will be free of censorship and will be able to developed its own editorial policy and be protected from "arbitrary suspension and removal" due to publication of a "seditious" article by the student and administrative or student disapproval.

Certainly one improvement in the new rules is the ease of the "new tone which is an attractive lime green.

---

The Student Union Academic Commission, under the direction of John Moo, has announced a tentative schedule of concerts and events to take place throughout the football season.

Lawnermeyer said that, due to contractual negotiations which are still going on with the entertainers, this schedule could only be considered tentative but he is hopeful right now and I'm optimistic about our chances of coming up with the groups we're after.

Lawnermeyer said that he plans to hold the first concert Friday evening, Sept. 20 featuring Friend and Lover, on the lawn of the Holy Cross Hall around St. Mary's lake. This will be the first outdoor concert staged by the Social Commission.

The following evening after the ND-Oklahoma game the Social Commission will sponsor an informal Dance in St. Mary's Center. On September 28, Harry Belafonte will appear in St. Mary's Center and on the next weekend, October 12, The Fifth Dimension will return to Notre Dame for the first time since their highly successful appearance last fall. Homecoming weekend, October 19, which pits the Irish against Illinois will be highlighted by The Young Rascals in concert in addition to the traditional dances and Sunday morning brunch.

Lawnermeyer hopes to stage the final two concerts of the football season in the new convention center if a site is available. These concerts will feature Sergio Mendes and Brazil 65 on November 9 and Lou Rawls on November 16.

The Social Commission plans a "homecoming" for girls to the first Notre Dame football weekend which has been christened "MOD weekend."

The New Parking Rules: More Parking Lots

During the upcoming academic year new parking arrangements will be installed at Notre Dame. Students, staff, and faculty members will be assigned particular lots where they register their cars this fall.

Security Director Arthur Noonan said that "off-campus students can attend the universities and where they do their work."

The students who do most of the parking on the other part of the campus can request assignment in the parking lot around Notre Dame, because many of the vehicles there are utilized for some time of the library will park in the lots east of the world's largest oven. Rounding off the schedule will be a lecture on October 28 by Francois Mitterrand, 1964 presidential opponent of General DeGaulle and leader of the Federation of the Left which is the largest non-Communist coalition party opposing the Gaullist regime.

More said the seating diffi- culties between the University in establishing a definite location for several of the lectures but promised that posters would appear in the University in announcing the time and place of the event as soon as arrangements have been finalized.
The delegation from Notre Dame, of which Rosie was the ex officio chairman, participated in most of the workshops offered, including those on White Racism, Student Power, Drug Involvement and Educational Reform. One immediate effect of this program here at ND will be the Farley Experiment, which will engage the freshmen form Farley and 100 SMC Frosh in “Sensitivity Training.”

Rosie also said that as a direct result of the workshop on White Racism, he intends to investigate what he termed institutional racism” at Notre Dame. “The structure of the

ND, SMC Set Frosh Experiment

There should be more to Freshman Orientation than watching a Knute Rockne movie. Now there may be. The Farley Experiment headed by a team of 26 Notre Dame and Saint Mary’s upperclassmen will attempt, during the week of September 15th, to re-orient 200 freshmen from both campuses away from academic institutions and towards people in a series of unorthodox lessons in group dynamics.

The experiment is unofficially headed by Michael McCauley, ND Senior, Kathleen Sweaney and Caroline Gatz, SMC Senior and sophomore. It is intended to supplement the regular orientation programs of both campuses. The 26 leaders are a composite group of upperclassmen from both campuses who were appointed by the core group of leaders, all delegates or alternates to the annual National Student Association Congress where the program was introduced.

The principal aim of experimentation, according to Miss Sweaney is: “To enable these particular students to re-orient themselves to each other, and then through the solidarity that they gain from the encounter expand and encompass, first the other freshmen and finally the campus itself.”

Farley Hall was chosen to represent Notre Dame freshmen because of its position on campus as a stay hall, and because of the relatively manageable number of freshmen (100) assigned there, McCauley said.

Miss Sweaney stated that all 200 incoming SMC freshmen received a letter in late August explaining, the program and inviting them to participate. Out of the 200 who responded the leaders picked 100 girls according to earliest postmark and apt geographical distribution.

“Farley Experiment”, according to McCauley, was conceived with three aims. The first of these is “to supplement the regular orientation programs rather than to sabotage them.” The second is “to proceed in a very unstructured and open manner so that the freshmen participating can easily return to their normal campus environment.

There will be possible for them to affect other students, rather than splintering into the cliques that are the norm on both campuses.” The third aim McCauley said “ultimately to involve the products of the orientation program in the entire Farley College experiment which affects all sides of campus life.”

Dining Halls Add Drinks

Tradition, even her at Notre Dame, must occasionally give way to a more modern, more orderly system. The Era of Rockne and his accompanying brand of football have long passed into oblivion. And this year a new Notre Dame’s most cherished moments has come to an end: the DHQ’s (Dining Hall Queen) are gone(at least from the South side of campus).

In an effort to improve the dining atmosphere and to add a note of civility to meals, Bernard Mehall, Director of Food Services, has introduced two distinctive innovations for the coming school year. Some may find the changes hard to swallow. The first, because of limited equipment, takes place only in the South Dining Hall. It involves a system of self-bussing, which will eliminate the need for service girls. Students instead will bring their trays to conveniently located tray-racks, which will be continuously unloaded during a particular meal.

Mehall cited three reasons for the switch to self-bussing: 1. “We can remove the old food sheds which were unnecessarily and which only contributed to the noise and confusion. We will also have more seating space.”

2. “It will facilitate the scheduling of dishwashing.”

3. “It is true we will save some money by not hiring the girls, but I’m more interested in establishing a flow of order.”

Mehall admitted that the move toward self-bussing was prompted by a referendum held last spring. “This year,” he said, “we will need more student cooperation.”

The second major innovation is the installment in both dining halls of eight carbonated beverage machines.

Reps Educated At NSA Convention

“It was an education in itself,” Student Body President Richard Rosie said yesterday, referring to last month’s convention of the National Student Association.

The delegation from Notre Dame, of which Rosie was the ex officio chairman, participated in most of the workshops offered, including those on White Racism, Student Power, Drug Involvement and Educational Reform. One immediate effect of this program here at ND will be the Farley Experiment, which will engage the freshmen form Farley and 100 SMC Frosh in “Sensitivity Training.”

Rosie also said that as a direct result of the workshop on White Racism, he intends to investigate what he termed institutional racism” at Notre Dame. “The structure of the society here at Notre Dame,” said Rosie, “is a reflection of the racist structure of the larger society of which it is a part.”

He cited the small number of Negroes among the student body as one indication of this predicament. “However,” he said, “I do not mean to suggest that the problem will be solved merely by admitting a large number of Negroes. The Negroes who are here are never recognized as such — they become lost in this white, middle class student body.”

The politicking at the NSA convention saw Mike McCauley elected chairman of the Indiana-Ohio-Kentucky region and Mike Kendall elected as Vice President for Indiana.

Rosie summed it all up by saying, “Good things do occasionally come out of Kzman, you know.”

The Notre Dame Student Union Social Commission

Welcomes the Class of ’72

with an invitation to get set for two big social events

"Friend and Lover" and a concert dance

Kick-off the year’s social calendar

New Sound
At WSND

“We’ll be playing music that’s fairly unique, certainly in Indiana,” said Don Sturm through-out the nation”, claims Don Sturm station manager of Notre Dame radio station WSND (640).

WSND’s AM program has been completely modernized to stress hard, “progressive” rock. Previously their selections were played around a Top 40 record chart. This year the chart will be dropped. Sturm said, “We plan to play records before they become hits, to introduce new sounds, rather than just playing the same established hits over and over again.”

Once again WSND will operate about 18 hours a day, from 7:00 a.m. till 1:00 or 2:00 a.m. The morning hours will highlight a soft easy rock, later in the day the music will become a little “heavier”; and after midnight there will be a shift to “really hip, psychedelic stuff.”

A possible supplement to the WSND record stock would be a syndicated radio show, probably Dick Summers, a former Boston DJ, now performing in New York. Hopefully this program could be brought in for a two hour evening spot daily.

The OBSERVER
Never Forgets To Write Home

One of the best ways to keep in touch with home is to let the OBSERVER write home for you. Starting Sept. 23 the Observer will be writing home every day. Keep your parents informed as to what students are doing and thinking at Notre Dame.

Please send the OBSERVER to:

One year’s subscription $10. Send to The Observer, Box 11, Notre Dame Indiana. 46556
Ea Good Place

At one time or another before we come here our parents are told in a reassuring manner "South Bend is a good place to send your child."

This statement is revealing in that it is true, but true in a far different sense from that intended.

Notre Dame and St. Mary's, as one looks at them from the outside, present a picture of tranquility and order in an age of student ferment. At Notre Dame there is a great football team, a student body of enthusiastic but pious Catholic boys, wise Irish priests who know how to straighten out a wayward youth, while a nearby Catholic girls school has clean, wholesome young ladies who smell of Pepsodent rather than My Sin. The studies are hard, with the boys working hard so they may one day be successful lawyers or businessmen, and the girls preparing for suburban motherhood.

From the point of view of the protective parent this description has great appeal and Notre Dame and St. Mary's institutions are good in that they provide parental guidance in the university context. However, this view, popular as it might be, is mistaken. In fact, despite reams of University propagandists to the contrary, Notre Dame is getting to be a very open, spiritual, demotic, and unpretentious place. St. Mary's College is making enormous strides to the point where the description "decent girls school" is grossly inappropriate.

We would contend that the very contrast between the atmosphere and the real life is something enormously encouraging. We, too, feel this to be a good place to go, but in our opinion the value of these institutions derives from their being more and more the antithesis of the stereotyped model pictured in "Knute Rockne: All American."

This fall we will get our usual dose of the bread and circuses of football, but we will be exposed to much more. Such controversial figures as Senator Strom Thurmond, SDS leader Tom Hayden, and LSD Proponent Dr. Timothy Leary will present their opinions to students. The Vietnam war and other issues will excite student opinion and may inspire demonstrations or teach-ins.

In addition to opinion and demonstration, Notre Dame and St. Mary's will this fall provide an exercise in genuine student self-government. At Notre Dame students will be judging and disciplining themselves, striving to build self-governing communities in their residence halls, and helping formulate the guidelines under which they must live. Student government will be negotiating and participating as an equal as it strives to eliminate antiquated rules such as those governing parietal hours and possession of liquor. St. Mary's students will undertake a major reevaluation of their institutions and will study the development of a true community government.

The atmosphere of openness and responsibilities of self-government do much to change and mature the student. Gone are the days of the silent, hard-working Protected student. The Notre Dame or St. Mary's freshman of today will experience an enormous change of attitude as a result of the very changes in atmosphere. Where yesterday's "Notre Dame Man" usually emerged after four years as essentially the same person, educated in engineering or science but similar in opinion and lack of social awareness, today's student becomes a far different person. He or she will have taken in a wide range of opinions, observed those who are dissatisfied and offer new solutions.

As its students are changed, Notre Dame, once the narrow middle-class football factory, becomes a far different place. Just as the South Bend miracle has changed the students, so the newly aware students have changed the very institutions.

So we see a pattern, a pattern of change which goes two ways. An open and evolving institution has a profound effect on its students. What once was a glorified boarding school is now a producer of well-rounded college graduates.

This is still the case at South Bend, where the students of today inquire, demonstrate, and to a large degree govern themselves. Students have been profoundly effective, and, at the end of four years, are far, far, different persons. The change which occurs plus the results of that change are the prime reasons why South Bend is a good place to send your child.
I recently explained to a correspondent of mine that I should forthwith, be pressed to present to some freshmen a reasonable guide for University life. He generously responded by sending me notes he has been, he tells me, using for three decades to lecture to eighteen-year olds on such varied subjects as "The Geography of Shropshire as Reflected in Houseman" or "The Mighty Quinn as Salvific Figure." These both fascinating and useful notes follow.

These jottings carry on in this pleasant, conversational tone for several more pages when, having failed to treat the subject of whether it is more desirable to take one's allowance in monthly installments or semi-annually, they fall silent. In case certain references in these notes seem obscure to the new freshman at Notre Dame, I should explain that they were written with regard to the Young Americans reaffirms the essentially moral, i.e., good, clean nature of the American young.

Four pages when, having failed to treat the subject of whether it is more desirable to take one's allowance in monthly installments or semi-annually, they fall silent. In case certain references in these notes seem obscure to the new freshman at Notre Dame, I should explain that they were written with regard to the Young Americans reaffirms the essentially moral, i.e., good, clean nature of the American young.

In order to maintain the attitude of attending university, one must begin with great care to his personal circumstances. A good basic set of stores for the freshman in need of a general re-upholstering is Lafortune Student Center or Gaudeamus and Igitus, for most clothes, but Jugular and Vain for neckties, Ambergn's and Lafortune Student Center for men's cologne and so on. The other essential component of one's basic environment is books. Adequate, but hardly the sort of place you'd want to rely on.

In order to maintain the attitude of attending university, one must begin with great care to his personal circumstances. A good basic set of stores for the freshman in need of a general re-upholstering is Lafortune Student Center or Gaudeamus and Igitus, for most clothes, but Jugular and Vain for neckties, Ambergn's and Lafortune Student Center for men's cologne and so on. The other essential component of one's basic environment is books. Adequate, but hardly the sort of place you'd want to rely on.
Notre Dame Best In Nation In 1968

But Sooners, Purdue and USC Say No

BY JOHN HEINRICH

"Notre Dame's Fighting Irish will rank fourth nationally after losing only to Purdue and Southern California..." Thus spoke "Look" magazine in a letter to this department, and it appears that they may be right for a change.

There are the usual iconoclasts: "phony", "overrated," "original, places fifth behind teams like Ohio State and Texas A&M; Street and Smith, where hope springs eternal, pick Purdue No. 1. But the consensus of the media seems to be that the Irish will be fourth in the shout obscurities at him as he runs by. Keyes alone would come as close to carrying Purdue as any man can come, but Keyes is hardly alone. Most of his playmates, both on offense and defense, understudy last year, led the Big Eight in rushing. The offensive line, even with the usual imposing schedule. The pressure will be intense and unrelenting, beginning the very first week against Oklahoma.

Oklahoma

The Sooners boasted a packed offense last year, and it should be better this year. Nine of eleven starters return from the team that outscored all but one of its eleven opponents.

Among the returnees are quarterback Bob Warmack, a fine faker and passer, and running back Perry Williams, the bulldozing fullback whose presence inside keeps the defense wary so that Keyes can run with ease. The offensive line will be green and a little slower but at least as powerful.

Look for Keyes to take advantage of this strength by running more inside this year.

The only major loss is superb Split End Jim Keyes. His absence may make things tougher on Keyes the receiver, but nothing short of an earthquake can stop Keyes the runner.

On defense, the personnel is a less experienced but no less imposing. Chuck Kyle, the All-American candidate, returns at middle guard. The rest of the defensive line is BIG--averaging over 240 pounds per man. The linebackers are both veterans, and two of the deep backs return to line up with two rookies.

Their offense will attack Notre Dame's defense at its weakest point: on the line. Notre Dame's best defensive unit is BIG--averaging over 220 pounds per man. The Sooners' passing game is a shadow of last year's, and the Sooners' running game is not as strong as last year's.

Iowa

The Purdue experience will not be without value, however. It should prepare Notre Dame's young defenders to face Iowa's Ed Podolak and Al Bream. Podolak, like Bream of Purdue, likes to work the sprint-out, and Bream, like Keyes, is a superb receiver, particularly on sideline patterns.

Podolak gained over 1,000 yards last year and Bream led the Big Ten with 55 catches. Barry Crews is a good flanker, but the Iowa offense ends there.

The running backs are promising but inexperienced, and the offensive line, though experienced, is only average. Defensive Iowa has some radical changes, discarding its 6-2-3 in favor of a 5-3-3, in an attempt to halt the parade across its goal line. But no change can disguise the fact that Iowa has seven rookies on its defensive platoon, including three new defensive backs. Greg Allinon will perform well at guard or linebacker, but he can't do it all. The linemen are big, and the defensive backs are fast, but they will make sophomores mistakes and allow more touchdowns than they should, certainly more than Purdue

Erle Lyle is as quick and creative. He does everything imaginable with a football. He runs with it, throws it, catches it, kicks it, even bats it down upon occasion. Discover a new use for it, like "balancing on your nose, and he would master it and find a way to score a touchdown in the process. Keyes is awesome.

About all you can do about him is be tough on the Irish this year. Coach Dave Hart is beginning to see the results of his recruiting as some fine sophs join fourteen seniors in his attempt to push the Panthers over .500 for the first time in five years. Pitt may become a winner this year, but not at Notre Dame's expense. The Panthers have some good performers but lack depth and an experienced quarterback.

Georgia Tech

Georgia Tech will be as unpredictable as any team in the country this season. They lost players like King Kim and Leney Snow last year and are left with few established players. They are depending heavily on sophomores, in combination with last year's reserves, to improve their 4-6 record.

Sooner Chuck Fairbanks

No matter what happens, Gasperian will perform well at guard or linebacker and many of the talented offensive personnel like Brenner working at defensive back.

The Spartans, whose home-field advantage is nearly at pot as our own, will present the Irish, but they may be asking too much of their stars by using them both ways. Notre Dame's superior depth should show through especially on defense.

USC's John McKay and the receivers, like flanker Jim Lawrence, will be solid. The offensive line is questionable. No regulars return and McKay must replace top-college-type All-Americans. Willard, Scott and Jim Gunn will anchor the line, but the linebacking is thin and short on experience. The secondary boasts two veterans including star Mike Battle and should be strong. The Trojans beat the Irish last year with Roseveich, Young, and Simpson. Two of them are gone, and USC may not be able to match last year's defensive efforts. McKay has an unattractive 6-3 record.

The Irish will be weaker defensively too, but this year's meeting should be more even than last year's.

"Notre Dame's Fighting Irish will rank fourth nationally"—probably "after losing only to Purdue and Southern California." Maybe, "Look", but don't bet your Life on it.
Hockey Now Varsity Sport; Slates 29-Game Schedule

After four years as a club sport, hockey will assume varsity status this winter.

Athletic director Ed "Moosie" Kruse has announced a 29-game schedule for the Irish skaters, with 16 to be contested at the shingling, new Athletic and Convocation Center on campus. Coaching the highly successful conference school hockey team.

Smith played his college hockey at St. Thomas, a prominent puckster school, in his native state of Minnesota. Assisting Smith with coaching chores will be Tim McNeill, who has been coaching at another strong Minnesota hockey school, Saint Mary's college. McNeill, like Smith, spent his undergraduate at the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference powerhouse St. Thomas.

Notre Dame has jumped headlong into the hockey world with a forbidding schedule which includes eight games with MIAA members, probably the strongest hockey conference in the nation, including major colleges.

Krause has also slated nine games with Big Ten teams not competing in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association. The Irish have scheduled 13 consecutive home dates from Jan. 9 through Feb. 12. That home stand includes St. John's, St. Thomas, St. Mary's, A&M.

Irish Items

Since 1930, Notre Dame's record at home is 127 wins, 38 losses, and 3 ties.

In 79 previous seasons Notre Dame has played 675 games in which the Irish have outnumbered their opponents 15,724 to 5,460.

Kline Voted Into Hall After 35 Years

Head baseball coach Jake Kline, veteran of 35 years at the helm of Irish clubs, was voted into the College Baseball Hall of Fame last summer.

Five other coaches were inducted into the hall of fame at the Convocation Center in January. The other coaches include: Kyle Anderson, University of Chicago; Pete Butler, Colorado State College; Andy Coakley (deceased), Columbia University; Jamie "Bucky" Freeman, Indiana University, and Wise Whitford, University of Northern Iowa (formerly State College of Iowa).

Kline has won more than 446 games while losing 318 and tying 55. Since 1940, the Irish have played in 25 post-season games, winning 11.

Kline won three varsity monograms playing for Notre Dame 1915-1917. Playing third base, he hit over .300 in all three campaigns, and was elected captain of the team his senior season.

In 1916 he paced three home runs to lead the Irish in a 14-6 romp over Michigan.

After graduation, Kline turned down an offer to play with the Pittsburgh Pirates and joined the infantry during World War I. Following the war, Kline coached in the minor leagues for eight years before joining the staff at Notre Dame.

He became freshman coach in 1931, and succeeded George Krogan as head coach three years later.

Hurd Hurt In Trials

Bill Hurd, Notre Dame's sprint star for the past two years, pulled a muscle at the Olympic Trials in Lake Tahoe Wednesday and will not compete further for a spot on the squad in the 200 meters.

Monday and Tuesday Hurd and ten other aspirants, including former Nebraska star Charlie Greene and San Jose State's Jimmy Ray Smith, went through a set of four races exactly like the procedure which will be in Mexico City next month, in the 100 meters.

Hurd finished sixth overall in the four races, not good enough for an Olympic spot as the first four will represent the United States. Only three are eligible for the 100 meters, but a fourth is needed for the 400 meter relay.

Hurd's times for the four races were 10.2, 10.1, 10.2, and 10.1. The third through sixth place finishers all finished with identical times, but judges' decisions placed Hurd sixth.

Irish Items

Since 1930, Notre Dame's record at home is 127 wins, 38 losses, and 3 ties.

In 79 previous seasons Notre Dame has played 675 games in which the Irish have outnumbered their opponents 15,724 to 5,460.

---

FOOTBALL SPORTS

Irish Items

Since 1930, Notre Dame's record at home is 127 wins, 38 losses, and 3 ties.

In 79 previous seasons Notre Dame has played 675 games in which the Irish have outnumbered their opponents 15,724 to 5,460.

---

Hurd Hurt In Trials

Bill Hurd, Notre Dame's sprint star for the past two years, pulled a muscle at the Olympic Trials in Lake Tahoe Wednesday and will not compete further for a spot on the squad in the 200 meters.

Monday and Tuesday Hurd and ten other aspirants, including former Nebraska star Charlie Greene and San Jose State's Jimmy Ray Smith, went through a set of four races exactly like the procedure which will be in Mexico City next month, in the 100 meters.

Hurd finished sixth overall in the four races, not good enough for an Olympic spot as the first four will represent the United States. Only three are eligible for the 100 meters, but a fourth is needed for the 400 meter relay.

Hurd's times for the four races were 10.2, 10.1, 10.2, and 10.1. The third through sixth place finishers all finished with identical times, but judges' decisions placed Hurd sixth.
...plus personalized monogram checks

Open a checking account at the St. Joe Bank and get this handsome, distinctive and practical ND checkbook and a supply of personalized monogram checks.

It's exclusive! Created especially for men of Notre Dame. Personalized monogrammed checks will help insure quick and satisfactory identification.

ST. JOSEPH BANK & TRUST COMPANY
MAIN OFFICE: MICHIGAN AT JEFFERSON, SOUTH BEND

Stop in today and ask us how you can have a free ND Monogram Checking Account!

"or mail this coupon today"

You'll get more for your money banking at the St. Joe -- everyone does!

St. Joseph Bank & Trust Company
South Bend, Indiana 46601

Please send information on ND Monogram Checkbook Accounts.

Name ____________________________________________

ND Address ________________________________________

City __________________________ State ____________