Ya Wanna Run for SBP?
Get In Line, My Friend

By TIM O'MELIA

The Student Body
Presidential elections are a month to a month and a half away, no one knows for sure, already panning credibility gaps are developing between possible candidates and their very real subordinates.

Observer Insight

There may be as many as seven presidential candidates. But, who knows, three or four other perennial students may indulge their egos, just to provide a little competition in what could be the greatest array of archaic politicians since the Orange Bowl Convention of sports writers who picked the Colt but love the Jits.

MIKE KENDALL

That's not to say that anyone has announced his candidacy as of yet, because that's akin to making the cover of Sports Illustrated. The only ones to make any definitive statements are those who say they aren't running. Judicial coordinator Bob Rigney is one of those. "There's been talk for a long time about tickets; my running as president on this ticket or vice-president on that. But I've decided not to run in any capacity," Rigney said, "but I will accept a draft."

Neither is Student Life coordinator Larry Landry running. He said, "I will definitely run someone's campaign however." Landry currently supports Hall Presidents Council Chairman Phil McKenna, who has not yet announced his candidacy. Landry was Rosie's campaign manager last year.

McKenna did say that he was considering running for president. "Basically I don't consider any of the others capable enough to carry on Rosie's ideas." If McKenna jumps in Fred Dedrick will be his running mate "because I can trust him the most. He's a hard worker and we work together with McKenna," said Lyons. Hall Senator Mike Kendall has also been mentioned in connection with the presidency. "I've been giving it a quite a bit of thought. I've spoken with my friends in and out of Student Government. But, for myself I'll be running for president and not for vice president, if I run."

Nth Degree to Provide Scholarship

The Saint Mary's coffeehouse, the Nth Degree, will provide a $2,000 scholarship for an incoming freshman next year. The coffeehouse, completely run by Saint Mary's students, collected money for the scholarship through receipts at the door. The scholarship is open to students from the South Bend area.

Other suggested criteria for the scholarship applicants include that she be a non-Catholic, a member of a minority group not sufficiently represented at Saint Mary's, and finally in need of funds. The Scholarship Committee will make the selection, and coffeehouse managers Kathy Grady and Diane Smith will give final approval. The $2,000 will be distributed to the winner over a four-year period. The only requirement for retention of the scholarship is that the winner maintain a high enough grade-point to stay in school.

Many agree that Kathy Grady hoped that the scholarship winner "would not be a typical Saint Mary's girl" Too many of the girls in this school come from the same background. We hope through the scholarship fund to provide a little variety in the student body. Miss Grady stressed that criteria for the scholarship are flexible, new, and can be changed in the future to suit the needs of the college.

Selection of the scholarship winner will be made in February. Students at Saint Mary's are asked to encourage people they may know in South Bend to apply. Students can continue the scholarship fund in the future by attending the coffeehouse, open on SaturdaYdand Sunday nights from 8 p.m. until midnight. All receipts go into the fund. The Nth Degree was created last April to provide Saint Mary's and Notre Dame students with relaxing atmosphere in which to talk or be entertained.

It has been a foregone conclusion that Academic Coordinator John Morz will run, as it was expected that Kendall would toss in his hat. "I will probably be running and Ted Jones will probably be my running mate," he said. "He mentioned that change was necessary in student government.

Jones, who is Human Affairs Coordinator, isn't so sure that he'll be running on the same ticket with Morz. "I've been approached by (Rick) Libowitz, Morz, and Kendall. But I don't know if I'll run on anyone's ticket as vice president. I may run for president on my own," Jones said.

When asked about his connection with the Afro-American Society, Jones said, "I wouldn't like to run for a scholarship that the winner gives $2,000 will provide a little variety in the student body."--Mike Kendall

RICK LIBOWITZ
quote, for the Afro-American Society, Jones said, "I wouldn't like to run for the Afro-American Society. I'd like their endorsement, just as I'd like the endorsement of all the organizations on campus, I'd like to run for Notre Dame.""AAS President Art McFarland and his Vice President Walter Williams agreed that no decision had yet been made on whether the Society would sponsor a candidate."

Chuck Sheedy, Chairman of the Senior Class Fellow Committee, announced yesterday that Senator Eugene J. McCarthy (D., Minn.) has been selected as the 1969 Senior Class Fellow. Sheedy said that McCarthy has accepted the Committee's invitation to spend two days on campus lecturing, teaching courses and meeting informally with students.

In a telegram received yesterday, McCarthy said: "I am pleased to accept your invitation for the Senior Class Fellow award at Notre Dame on March 5 and 6." The committee outlined the proposed agenda of the Senator's visit saying: "During one full day of his stay we would hope to allow the Senator lead two informal morning discussions of approximately fifty minutes each on a government or political science class. Then, after having lunch with a group of seniors, he would go on to a more formal lecture in a Theology of Marriage class and one auditorium lecture to approximately 250 seniors. The opportunity to meet informally with seniors and to save the real atmosphere of Notre Dame is what we are hoping to achieve. This is the core of our program, but the spontaneous give and take on our part as well as in his essential to its success."

Other members of the Senior Fellow Committee include: Craig Fenchel, in charge of publicity; an extensive biographical and political portfolio on the Senator to be distributed to each Senator; Bill Sweeney, Doug McKesson and Tom Alter, who are handling special arrangements. The Senator was chosen to be recipient of the Award by a special Selection committee composed of representatives of the campus press, student media, an-at-large member of the Senior Class, and Charles Nau, Students' President on the Saint Mary's, who holds an honorary doctorate from Notre Dame given him in 1967 when he was the June commencement speaker, will deliver a formal address in St. Patrick's Center the night of March 6. At this time the Senior Class will present him with his first fellow award, described as honoring "an individual who has had the integrity, the decency, and the willingness to work for the best values and finest traditions of our society, and at the same time can freely join in and contribute to the spontaneous give and take of Notre Dame's social and intellectual life."

The Fellow program, modeled after the Chubb Fellowship at Yale University, grew out of a class decision to change the nature of the traditional Patriot of the Year award, by which seniors yearly chose an outstanding American who was willing to speak on campus in ceremonies normally held in conjunction with Washington's Birthday. Sheedy said that while expenses for the first year of the Fellowships are being shared by the University and the Senior Class, the class is looking for gifts to enable the project on a permanent basis.

A leading critic of the Vietnam war, McCarthy took the issue to the nation's voters in the 1968 primaries but failed to get the party's nomination for president. He has said he will not "run as a Democrat" when his term expires in 1970, but he has not entirely excluded the possibility of seeking re-election. Sen. McCarthy's most recent actions have been a series of criticisms from his followers. He voted against Edward M. Kennedy's successful bid for the post of Senate "whip" and summoned his agent to the presiding Senate Foreign Relations Committee to Sen. Gale McGee (D., Wyo.), a supporter of the administration's Vietnam policies. McCarthy was the junior Democratic member of the committee and his move followed a decision of the Senate to allow the special committees of the Senate to proceed to the floor to debate the bill. Among McCarthy's books are "Frontiers in American Democracy," "Dictionary of American Politics," "A Liberal Answer to the Conservative Challenge," and a volume of poetry entitled "And Time Began."

ATTENTION SOPHS -

If you will complete your first two years of college this spring and have not had ROTC training, you now have a special opportunity to earn an Army officers commission in the next two years. You may qualify to fulfill your military obligation as an officer while you study for a college degree in the field of your choice.

You will receive an allowance of $50 each month during your junior and senior years. If you desire, you may request postponement of your military service while you complete your studies for a graduate degree.

Graduate students with two years of academic work remaining, may also apply for a commission under the two year program.

Army ROTC
Two Year Program

For complete information and application for the Army ROTC Two Year program, attend the briefing at 7:00 pm, 10 Feb. 1969, Rm. 217, ROTC building.

Four Seek SUP

Applications have been received from four juniors for the 1969-70 Student Union Presidency. They are Jim Brogan, who recently resigned from the Student Union and now heads various committees; Dennis Clark, Student Government Public Relations Director; Leo Klemm, Junior Class President; and Dave Stumm, Business Manager of the Observer.

Criteria for selection will be factual information, experience, and ideas - drawn from the application; and an interview, to be held Tuesday evening before the Student Union Board, made up of SUP Richard Rossie, SBVP Chuck New, Student Body Treasurer Dick Roderick, Union President Rich Rembusch, HPC Chairman Phil McKenna, Pro- fessor John Houk, and VP for Student Affairs Father McCarragher.

However, if the Hunter-Duvey Bill passes in the Student Senate on Monday, there will be no need for the applications, as the bill provides for an appointing of the student Union President by the in-coming Student Body President. If the bill fails, the Board will announce the new Union President shortly after semester break. The new Union head will take office April 1.

Student Power in Ads

MADISON, Wis. (UPI)-Marc D. Kaufman, a University of Wisconsin junior and budding advertising man, didn't like the ads he saw in college newspapers. So he gathered about a dozen fellow Wisconsin students together, named the group Kaufman Associates, and proceeded to crack a major national advertising account.

He sent letters to 25 ad agencies under the slogan: "We know how to reach ourselves. You cannot expect a man of 30 or 40 years of age to reach a market that changes spontaneously, and thinks and operates on its own wave lengths."

Libowitz, who works for WSN and is currently organizing the Free Univer's would not admit that he's aiming for the top spot either. "I'm thinking about running but I'm up to my ears in getting the Free U. underway. I won't make a decision until that is finished."

Although Mroz said that his decision has not been made for certain, Junior Class President Leo Klemm has admitted that, "I am his campaign manager." Oops, somebody slipped up. huh, John? And Ted Jones"
Marketing at IBM

"You help company presidents solve their information handling problems."

"It's a lot of responsibility. And if you need help, you always get it," says Earl Andrews. "Because your success is the company's success."

Earl earned his B.A. in Political Science in 1967. Today, he's a Marketing Representative with IBM, involved in the planning, selling and installation of data processing systems.

Earl joined IBM because he felt the career paths were very clearly marked. "You don't have to be a technical genius to fit the job. You get the training. Then on-the-job experience. Before you know it, you're out on your own."

Works with top management
Earl works mainly with small companies—distribution houses, manufacturers, printers, warehouses, electrical supply houses and similar organizations. "I deal with top management," he says. "It gives me a lot of satisfaction to realize that I'm trained to know what this president or that vice-president is trying to learn. I help him solve his information handling problems."

Earl's experience isn't unusual at IBM. There are many marketing and sales representatives who could tell you similar experiences. And they have many kinds of academic backgrounds: business, engineering, liberal arts, science.

They not only market data processing equipment as Earl does, but also IBM office products and information records systems. Many of the more technically inclined are data processing Systems Engineers.

Check with your placement office
If you're interested in marketing at IBM, ask your placement office for more information.

Or send a resume or letter to Irv Pfeiffer, IBM Corp., Dept. C, 100 So. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. 60606. We'd like to hear from you even if you're headed for graduate school or military service.

An Equal Opportunity Employer
Judicial Injustice

The Campus Judicial Board, the subject of proposals, revisions, discussions, referendum and committees for at least two years, finally began functioning. The fact that so many Student Government officials as well as a handful of administration officials had a part in the inception of the Board renders the blunder made by its creators even more inexcusable.

The oversight becomes blatantly evident during the current trials being conducted by the Board against five CIA-Dow demonstrators. The charges were brought by senior Robert Narucki who claimed that the "passive resistance" of the demonstrators caused the cancellation of CIA employment interviews on campus and prevented him from making his own moral decision on the organization.

Consequently five people were ordered to stand trial. Of the five, only one is in danger of being convicted, senior Marty McNamara. The question of jurisdiction arose in the case of Kathy Cecil, a St. Mary's student, whose case was finally dismissed by the SMC judicial board. A notice of the accused is a Notre Dame alumnus, making prosecution by the Judicial Board impossible.

Although the disposition of the latter two cases is perhaps laughable the situation in the remaining two most certainly is not. Jurisdiction will again be a problem in Associate Professor of English Peter Michelson's case but senior Don Hynes will be brought to trial. Both will be released, not only because they are not guilty, but also because they were falsely accused. In its first important cases the Campus Judicial Board will face damaging embarrassment.

Dining Hall Board

On Monday the Student Life Council will consider a proposed board to govern the Notre Dame dining halls. The board would be unique in that it would be the first governing committee at Notre Dame ever to have a student majority.

We strongly favor the propose board. With five out of eight members students, would be able to enact and supervise substantial change.

The board will deal with a controversial subject. Dining Halls Director Mr. Bernard Mehall has of late cooperated in hiring a new chef for the food poison-plagued North Dining Hall.

With five out of eight members students, would be unique in that it would be the first governing committee at Notre Dame ever to have a student majority. The city is enormous, and if you don't at least have a speaking part in the play you might be swallowed up, so no one misses a cue.

I found it next to the typical old lady wearing the outfit of My Sin. There are so many people in New York that most people begin seeming stereotyped. If you're a sensitive young artist you find yourself saying over and over I wish I had my camera, never realizing that if I saw some kid taking pictures in the midst of this crowd I'd be begging for the camera.

Don Hynes

"My Kind Of Town"

The difference in time it takes to get twenty blocks uptown in New York on a bus or walking is negligible, but it was a cold day and I decided to spend for the luxury route. Two middle-aged school mamis and their group of children were in front of me, and one was asking the bus driver if this vehicle went as far up town as Eighth Avenue and the driver denied it. Before he answered, though, the lady had turned to her friend to talk and she missed his reply. Then she turned and again asked on the destination of the bus, and this time the children distracted her while the bus driver hollered yes and another woman on the bus discreetly queried her on why she had neglected to read the sign stupid. After several more more people on the bus she asked the driver to change her direction. The path being cleared, I climbed on board and asked the bus driver if the bus went up as far as eighty-second. With a kind smile he replied that he would take me anywhere that I wanted to go. I asked him what the fare was and discovered that he liked my looks, for so me only twenty cents. The driver had his lines, he had to keep his sainly driving a bus on Madison Avenue. All New Yorkers have got them lines. The city is enormous, and if you don't at least have a speaking part in the play you might be swallowed up, so no one misses a cue.

A boy got on the bus with two hockey sticks and a suitcase. Struggling under the load the old lady greeted him by asking why he hadn't decided on a cab being at least eleven and old enough to work you barn. In the same breath she began her personal guide to shopping on that block of Madison Avenue, commenting on the quality of goods sold and the amount of money thereby for them. She talked about everything and everything that she saw, but they were all objects in her world and it seemed that she was, and had been for a long while, her only audience. The city could have been ignoring her but the old lady wasn't about to let that happen. She was ignoring the city, and was having her say at the same time.

Several other women, more conservatively dressed and made up, were looking through their noses at this feisty character. One of them suddenly got up to leave remarking that she had missed her stop. This opening was too good for the old commentator, and she suggested that if the woman wasn't so defective in thinking ability then perhaps she would know where the hell she was going, and in her first really outward act the old lady tripped the snob. The old lady had made a move in their world though, and she seemed to be caught out of bounds.

This introduction turned their collective evil eyes on her and I was hoping for another charmer, but the old lady had left her security, and frightened she turned to look out the window. Looking into the crowd of people crossing the street she called out to one of them, Mark, how have you been, I haven't seen you in such a long while. She was smiling, and still talking to her friend Mark in the crowd that I joined, as I got off the bus.

SMC Student Union?

A Student Union at a University the size of Notre Dame is necessary. A Student Union at St. Mary's College is pretentious. It is another unnecessary and dangerous diversion of labor in Student Government's attempt to make itself meaningful. THE OBSERVER suggests that before Student government restructures itself in order to bring relevant issues before the legislature, it first decide what these issues are.
Even With McQueen Bullitt Misses the Mark

By MICHAEL PATRICK O'CONNOR

San Francisco, like any city, is a dirty city, full of crime and violence. No matter how many-puny and New Lefty you want to be about it, you need cops to run a dirty city, full of crime and violence. And Dragnet '68 is pretty much a washout. That is why Bullitt was made.

The film is not a justification for police, although that may be what they had in mind. Police need good PR, Bullitt fills that bill nicely, being an efficiently made film that tells what needs telling (cops are people) in a dull plodding manner. Like the Italian poster says, ka-kiss-kaug-bang is what film are all about and evidently so are cops. But Bullitt is a bore.

Steve McQueen, well-beloved of his recent memory in motorcycle films, has the lead and does as competent a job as could be done. The very balderness of Bullitt makes one realize again how good he was in The Thomas Crown Affair by showing the diversity of his acting ability.

The director, Peter Yates, is at fault. He plays around with good photographers and editors so that the hackneyed story about gangsters and gangsters and politicians (O mysterious men!) comes out even worse. He has made an honest job of pretty disgusting enterprise in indigulgence; he has tried to make a good picture about nothing.

Tom Ehrbar

"The Impossible Dream"

It should throw a few scares into those Collegiate Seminar people. If only they knew the wholstory. The story of one polite and mannerly student, who, tucked away in the dim shadows of his room, frantically pouring through Don Quixote for the upcoming exam, was whisked back into the world of chivalry and knighthood.

The student imagined himself a perfect knight, a doer of great deeds, destined to right the unrightable wrongs, to reach the unreachable star, to dream the impossible dream. As for the bit about "loving pure and chaste from afar" the student had other intentions.

As the rosy fingered dawn awoke in the East...

...the young chivalrous lad Donned his valiant attire, including an off-campus football helmet and ventured out from his off-campus apartment. He quickly unplugged his neat little golf cart and speedily raced for the Gold Dome, accompanied by his faithful companion Dogleg.

Then began a typical day of knightly activities. An early morning Post Office Scooter was magically transformed into a charging steed—Don lowered his lance and attacked. As the driver wasn't caged in, the car happily escaped serious injury, but the mail was strewn everywhere.

Meanwhile our modern-day hero silently withdrew post haste.

As he moved bravely onto the campus, Don encountered a dwarf blocking his path. He pleasantly asked the dwarf to step aside—but the water hydrant in the street and proceeded to wildly charge. Soon, a torrent of water spouted out which rusted the knight's trusty head-gear.

Reaching the Main Quad, Don sped over in the direction of Sorin Hall. The regal towers caught his eye, and as he glanced upwards he spied a 5'4" Polish maid, lethargically ridding her dust mop of dust. "Fortune is guiding affairs better than I could have wished" said Don, jovially (a Don Swiftly). "It is still morning and I have already battled two brave foes and now a fair maiden bids me to free her from a distrestful plight."

The maid, however, was in no mood to be saved and she met Don's noble advance by cracking him soundly over the head, toppling him into the snow.

With a gleam in his eye and a lump on his head, the knight wandered eastward, stumbling upon La Fortune Center where a student senate meeting was presently in progress. There his imagination ran wild as he conjured up incredible illusions of what was actually taking place. He romantically pictured two powerful enemies poised against each other in conflict. One was substantially larger than the other, and sat alone at the round table glaring at his glih and well-dressed opponent. (There was not a Union between the two.) The antagonism had been apparently toughed out by the refusal of one party to routinely stamp the royal seal of approval for a brief crusade.

Here, dear reader, I must break off this incident. The folly of such a vicious quarrel over such a slight matter is beyond the intelligence, yet alone the imagination, of all.

As he turned to leave, Don's mood switched to a romantic one. He p r o f o u n d l y d w e l t u p o n h is ladies-in-waiting up at Barat, who in their splendor far surpass their rivals at St. Mary's. SMC maids are fair, but only fair.

Don returned home...

...as the rosy fingered dusk settled down in the West.

The show Yates puts on is, primarily, simply too serious. The caricature of the gangster, wearing a thin white tie and a dark shirt and suit, is taken seriously, but Heaven only knows even Eliot Ness had trouble with that one. The caricature of the politician on the make, ruthless and undercutting and slyly, also wearing thin ties, is taken seriously. Robert Vaughn plays that role and his bad acting reassures one about the fundamental sameness of cosmic processes; he simply hasn't changed since UNCLE.

In fact both McQueen and Vaughn seem to have trouble adjusting to this business of a film about reality, grizzily as all that is. The fantasy backdrops of Thomas Crown and UNCLE are gone, but the stars remain the same.

What is sad about seeing a bad film is that so often it isn't bad enough to even laugh at. Bullitt, with deadly seriousness that keeps even the faintest wisp of humor out, is like that. For example, Robert Vaughn is so bad at bribery that he couldn't give away a pettula on a bet, but he is so serious about it that he is more pitied than censured.

What does make the film worthwhile is the technical competence with which it was made. The interiors fit well with the exteriors and the documentary scenes of San Francisco (sorry, no hippies this year) blend in the stagy inside scenes servicerly. The whole thing was filmed in San Francisco and the beautiful city of the West Coast doesn't hold up, probably justifiably, under the scrutiny of Yates' cameraman.

The most striking part of the film is a chase sequence that comes out of nowhere and ends with all but hero dead (too much violence on the screen these days, tsk, tsk). The sequence is spectacular but then so are San Franciscan hills; it is fun to bump up and down hills with a camera and it is a relief that vaudevillian chases are gone with all the other camp ephemerality of the twenties. But with such a bad film, there has to be some relief.

Shuttle Service Cut

The shuttle bus didn’t run last night, as quite a few students found out, and it won’t run again tonight, as many more will discover (while snow falls and temperature dips). Temporary discontinuance of service was announced by Student Union Services head Al Knappenberger as a result of increasing disturbances of the drivers and damages to the bus. The immediate cause of the action was a second window breaking incident which occurred Wednesday evening.

Knappenberger was informed that the bus would not be able to run by Brother Rogers of the maintenance department, who said that the evening driver refused to show up last night and tonight. The situation was then fully explained to Knappenberger, who “fully agreed” with the driver and Brother Rogers. The reasons for discontinuance as listed by Knappenberger are: 1) jaw-wobbling (of bus and driver), 2) overcrowding, 3) unscheduled stops, 4) obscene language, and 5) broken windows. According to Knappenberger, the bus will make its regular trips during class hours today, and will resume the evening runs as scheduled Saturday evening. But it was also pointed out that if disturbances continue, the evening runs will be permanently halted. Knappenberger said, “This is a valuable service which should not be abused. When this is done it is the students who suffer. They not only lose the transportation, but also a service which they in part pay for.”

Clark Releases Assassination Findings

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The only outsiders to view top secret autopsy photographs have confirmed the Warren commission findings that President John F. Kennedy was killed by two bullets fired from above and behind him, the Justice Department disclosed yesterday.

Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark, with the approval of the Kennedy family, released the report of a four man panel of doctors he appointed to study the photographs. X-rays and clothing sealed in the U.S. archives in 1966. It contains the first full inventory and examination of the autopsy material from the body of the assassinated President.

Because of the path of the two bullets, the Warren Commission concluded in a much disputed decision that the President was killed by one man, Lee Harvey Oswald, Nov. 22, 1963 in Dallas.

“Examination of the clothing and of the photographs and X-rays taken at autopsy revealed that President Kennedy was struck by two bullets fired from above and behind him, one of which traversed the base of the neck on the right side without striking bone and the other of which entered the skull from behind and exploded its right side,” the physicians said in their report.

Clark released the report to General Sessions Judge Charles Hallick in reply to the judge’s order for the director of the National Archives to appear in his court Friday. Hallick ordered the director, Dr. James B. Rhoads, to explain why he should not cooperate with New Orleans Dist. Atty. James Garrison’s investigation of an alleged conspiracy in the assassination of President Kennedy.

Garrison has contended that the autopsy material would prove President Kennedy was shot by more than one man and that the fatal head wounds resulted from shots fired from in front of the President.

The Justice Department asked the District of Columbia Court to refuse to compel Dr. Rhoads to attend the conspiracy trial of Clay Shaw, a New Orleans businessman Garrison has accused of masterminding an alleged assassination plot.

Racial Strife Rips Nation’s Campuses

(UPI) — The president of Swarthmore College died of a heart attack in his office yesterday as Negro students held control of the college admissions office for the eighth day.

About 30 black students ended a sit in in the University of Pittsburgh’s computer center after officials promised to speed action on their demands for two Negro holidays and an institute for black studies.

Fire destroyed the student union building at Wilberforce University, a predominantly Negro school, where a student boycott has prompted disciplinary procedures.

From New England to California, campuses were troubled by demonstrations, most of them of a racial nature.

Dr. Samuel Smith, 52, Swarthmore president, succumbed shortly before he was to meet with a faculty committee which had been studying demands made by Negro demonstrators.

The Quaker affiliated school near Philadelphia was thrown into near shock by the death of Smith Colleagues said he had been under a strain since about 25 blacks took over the admissions office to enforce demands for more Negro students, faculty and administrators and a role in policy making.

A University of Pittsburgh spokesman said the Negro sit-inners left the computer center in the school’s Cathedral of Learning “peacefully and without damage.”

Chancellor Wesley Posvar agreed that a director and assistant director for the proposed black studies institute would be appointed by June and provided with funds to carry on their work.

He also agreed to ask the university senate to establish Jan. 15, birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., as an all school holiday and to allow all black students and faculty to be excused Feb. 21, the anniversary of the death of Malcolm X.

The agreement also provided no punitive action would be taken against the students who occupied the computer room.

At Wilberforce University in Wilberforce, Ohio, President Dr. Rembrandt Stokes said he did not believe there was a connection between the fire and dissention on campus. But authorities were investigating.

The building was burned out and the fire loss was estimated at $90,000. The student boycott continued Thursday.

Senate Set for Action on Hunter-Davey Bill

The Student Senate will meet Monday night to take final action on the Controversial Hunter-Davey constitutional amendment bill. The Senate went through the first reading Tuesday, but action on the bill was delayed until Monday because there is a required five-day delay between first reading and debate on all constitutional amendments.

According to one of its proponents, Brenn-Phillips Senator Richard Hunter, the bill provides for two absolutely essential changes in the Constitution, dealing with the Student Union.

The first of these changes would allow the Student Body President, elected each spring, to name the Student Union Director and the Student Government Treasurer for his Administration. At present, the outgoing Student Union Board of Directors appoints these officers. This practice was originated in order to take Student Union out of the political arena. But Hunter feels that it is vital that the SBP be able to choose the person that he can work with best. "The Student Union is a service organization and in order to serve well there must be maximum co-ordination between the Student Body President and the Student Union." The second change would require that the Student Union Director, as executor of Student Union policy determined by the Board of Directors, appear before the Senate every two weeks. The Board would also be required to meet every month.

Student Union President Rick Rembusch commented, "I'm not 100% in favor of the bill, but I'm not completely against it. The idea of having the board meet every month is an excellent idea. The change of title from Student Union President to Director is not all that important. But I don't think the Student Body President should appoint the Student Union President. This puts the appointment too much into the realm of politics."

Despite the opposition of the Student Union, Hunter is confident that the motion will pass. Hunter stated, "I don't think that Richard Rossie is completely in favor of the bill, and I don't think that Rick Rembusch is completely in favor of the bill. But I think it is the best possible bill and will best serve the students."

Six Advances Slated

One of Notre Dame's loosely organized "weekend" groups is finalizing plans for a series of six get-togethers. Calling the experience the "Advance," the groups move into the Old College building for three days for an assortment of discussions and whatever else seems appropriate.

These Advances will be similar to those that were held last year under the direction of Fr. Burchardt. The idea is to get students from SMC and ND together informally, in an atmosphere more relaxed than conventional social gatherings. It gives them a chance to listen and talk to various faculty members, the likes of Fr. Dunne, Fr. Simons, Sr. Rita Mercille, Sr. Sue Kelly, and Dr. and Mrs. Costello, discussing almost anything. In the past, conversations have focused on interpretations of sin, or the Eucharist, or on marriage. Advances will be held on Jan. 31, Feb. 21, Mar. 7, Mar. 14, Apr. 18, and Apr. 25. If you are interested in being a part of one, please contact Mary Lee Carr, ext. 4675, or Patrick Hayes, ext. 1293.

Poet in America

At 8:00 this evening Dr. Samuel Haze, an alumnus of Notre Dame and prof. of English at Duquesne University, will speak on "The Poet in America." His talk will be given in the Memorial Library Auditorium and is open to the public.

When I competed on my high-school track team, I ran on a variety of surfaces: outdoors, the time-honored cinders or perhaps a special composition at the largest schools; indoor, wooden boards or a gymnastic surface which took hours to remove from my basket and one of Butler's big guys knocked me back. There was a maze of arms in front of me. In and it was close the whole way. With a few down. Well, I was lying there, facing the hoop, did and it went in. Then we went out and beat them in overtime (37-32 to be precise). It was a real big victory for them, I bought an extra steak on the way home and the student body was very excited.

"The funny part about it is that next day everybody was on the floor early, before practice began, trying to duplicate the shot. We were lying around and I was explaining to my teammates how I'd done it.

"So Keogan came out and said, "What's going on here?" I told him we were practicing the shot that had won for us the night before. Keogan got mad. "What do you mean? Get up and go to work." But coach, I said, "you told me last night it was such a great shot."

Now, almost 37 years later, the scene has been re-enacted and "Moose" again made news in the Field-Goal-Made-While-Flat-On-Your-Back Hall of Fame.

This time the scene was University of Virginia fieldhouse. It was Dec. 17, 1968. Virginia vs. North Carolina. Senior Tom Hel德 Tuttle was knocked to the floor during a first-half scrap under North Carolina's basket.

Unlike Krause, Tuttle was facing the opposite basket as he lay on his back. There was no one to adjust "Moose" and make room in the Field-Goal-Made-While-Flat-On-Your-Back Hall of Fame.

As Joe, tutor flipped the ball blindly over his shoulder and it banked straight through the net.

"I didn't know why the ball got through, but it did and it went in. Well, it went back to the bench and George Keogan was patting me on the back, saying, 'Way to shoot, Moose, way to go.' Then we went out and beat them in overtime (37-32 to be precise). It was a real big victory for them, I bought an extra steak on the way home and the student body was very excited.
