SBP candidates agree to discussion in open forum

Three Student Body Presidential hopefuls, John Mess, Phil McKenna and Mike Kendall, agreed yesterday to a format for an open forum discussion. The open forum will be held Sunday, March 9th, from 4:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium. In a joint statement the candidates said, "With the number of candidates now in the race, each of us feels it essential that the student body be given maximum opportunity to view the issues from all perspectives." All three expressed hope more candidates would join them.

SBC legislative meets

Last night, the St. Mary's Legislative approved two recommendations of the department's regulations and smoking in the Student Affairs Committee for their approval.

The dress regulation was submitted by Carol Henninger in response to a student petition circulated in November 1968, asking for a change in the regulations, which gathered legalization of smoking in the hall. But the department recommended that any study of non-violence would have to be "rigorously free of visual and spiritual non-violence would have to be practiced by the members." Hesburgh promised financial support for the idea would receive support from the student body and faculty. "Leadership is the only way to do it in a sea of futility." Hesburgh said.

Gene McCarthy wants President Nixon to send me a letter on Viet Nam.

Gene McCarthy won't be remembered for his flamboyance. He's about as flashy as Gary Cooper in High Noon. And just about as deadly with a gun. No matter how much he ducks to lunch with twenty awestruck admirers than he starts swinging at Father Hesburgh. "That letter was unnecessary. It wasn't about the war. It was about the man. He thought he was smart, and he was. He was a genius. He was a master of the art of war. He was a master of the art of deception. He was a master of the art of manipulation. He was a master of the art of politics. He was a master of the art of the art of war."

In most cases the police outnumbered the demonstrators. Still they retained their usual strong reaction. It's as if they were saying: "We know there are bombs going on out there but we just can't see them, so let's go out and get 'em."

Gene may or may have disapproved the Democratic Party (he's a master of the art of politics, but not saying it so that anyone can understand) and he still clings to the old democratic principle of equality. Especially where Nixon and Johnson are concerned.

"Nixon certainly hasn't done much yet— but that's understandable. However I do think there are a few more important problems than campus unrest he might concern himself with-like the war in Vietnam. I'll admit that he's a little better than his predecessor's Cabinet without Rusk is better than what Johnson had."

We may just have found Lenny Bruce's successor here. But I think not. The Senator really seems interested in arguments that are going to require poetry under the benign gaze of none other than Professor Frank O'Malley. I guess he felt it too because at first he said he was only going to read a couple of the poems. He opened the book and read quickly in a low, almost in a monotone. The voice rose imperceptibly the pace slowed, the voice rose and fell with each alliteration and the sound came of of the paper and looked...somewhere far from New Hampshire or South Ben or Chicago. The voice of Gene the Johnson Slayer were forgotten. The lines of fatigue seemed to fade. The War was far away and for a little while at least the myth was shattered and we had a fleeting glimpse of the man.

Fr. Hesburgh, 'sympathetic to pariental hours legislation as expressed'

Reverend Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., last night said that he was "sympathetic to the pariental hours legislation as expressed, that is, on an experimental basis." Hesburgh stated the experimental nature of the SLC resolution as the basis for his decision.

A meeting of a subcommittee of the Board of Trustees is planned for March 15 in Palm Beach, Florida. Hesburgh said that he intends to recommend the pariental legislation to the trustees, but would not predict their response to his remmendation.

Racist obsession
Editor: Terry O’Neil
Tuesday and Wednesday your racist obsession of showing the disagreements and credibility gaps in the blacks’ plight on this campus came across poignantly. Let it be your information that one more of this type of word-games “with nigger-splits” as your basis will show you another type of nigger.
Another type of nigger that one more of this type of racist obsession of showing the so much explicitly portrays racism is another thing, and COMMUNITY Winner of 3 Academy Awards!

Tuesday and Wednesday your SEMINARS best attempt to run a two hour test outside the Apollo 9 untried craft. They were very happy with, said flight director Eugene Kranz at the end of the wearying day.

Schweickart and McDvitt worked all day inside the fragile shelled landing machine. It was the first time this craft had 668 carry men in space. Their colleague, David R. Scott remained alone inside the newly completed command module, which all three had spent the first two days of their earth orbiting flight.

Reds bombard Saigon with rockets
SAIGON (UPI) Communists fired seven rockets into Saigon today and took the worst toll of lives in the capital since the Nov. 1 bombing halt. The attack comes hours before the scheduled arrival of U.S. Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

U.S. military police said at least 21 persons were killed and more than a dozen wounded when powerful 122mm rockets smashed into downtown Saigon, along the riverfront district and into a populous residential neighborhood still recovering from last month's NATO strikes. The attack, said last 12 hours of the community’s winter offensive, came less than 24 hours after President Nixon warned Asian nations of an “appropriate response” if attacks on civilian population centers continued.

Daley pages on Democratic Convention
CHICAGO (UPI) An aides Mayor Richard J. Daley, his voice quaking with rage, said yesterday the 1968 Democratic National Convention should not have nominated Hubert Humphrey.

“Talk is nonsense,” he told the House Ways and Means committee Friday afternoon in Washington. “His name is the name of a former president of the United States.”

Daley did not specify whether the allusion to a former president meant then President Lyndon Johnson or Massachusetts Democratic Senator Ted Kennedy.

The attack on Humphrey came in the wake of a Monday television interview with the former vice president in which Humphrey said Daley’s handling of the convention was “an appropriate response” if attacks on civilian population centers continued.

Nixon requests 10% surtax extension
WASHINGTON (UPI)-The Nixon Administration asked Congress yesterday to lift inflation by extending the 10 per cent income tax surtax beyond its June 30 expiration date. It also asked for extensions of the 10 per cent telephone excise tax and the 5 per cent auto insurance tax.

Treasury Secretary David M. Kennedy and Budget Director Robert P. Mayo told the House Ways and Means committee the surtax, imposed as a “temporary” one year levy in 1968, was needed to help control the economy, was needed for at least another year.

It was the first of a significant change in the level of our Southeast Asia involvement or in the economic outlook,” Mayo said, “extending the surcharge and excises clearly seems required.”

Under present law, the income tax surcharge is scheduled to expire June 30.

Degenerate in peace
Editor: Terry O’Neil

An insidious, authoritarian plot is being brewed in the ND Student Senate, and the student body in its eternal night sleeps on as its freedom is being undermined. By proposing that co-eds be brought to the campus the Senate is attempting to force a moral decision on this community which would all but destroy its freedom of choice, not to mention some of its finest traditions. What ND man worth his sideburns would think of “streaking” the main quad when female presence probably would be perilously high? What would become of our educate student rooms? Who could throw t.p. at girl cheerleaders? Freshmen would no longer thrill to the excitement of their first raid. New patterns of speech and discussion topics would have to be found. The whole style of life here would be radically upset for an indefinite period of time; and when we consider how long it has taken just to be able to ignore the hall mauls the potential loss looks bleak.

The real problem is that this change would not involve our free choice. We would be forced to live as stilted, straight-laced gentlemen and no one has the right to impose such moral dictates on the community. We must rally to the defense of our sacred freedom: the freedom to degenerate in peace.

Sheedy kudos
Editor:
The Senior Class, indeed the whole of Notre Dame, owes an massive debt of gratitude to Chuck Sheedy, the chairman of the Senior Class Committee.

Sheedy has done much to make the former Patriot Award a meaningful experience for all involved, rather than simply presenting a speaker for a quick evening with few questions.

The several seminars, class visits, lecturers and private meetings with Senator McCarthy will, I am sure, be rewarding in the extreme.

Sheedy’s preparation has been both thorough and thorough, from both the written program to the atmosphere of authority at the Farley Hall Wine Tasting Festival. Class participation has been optimum, both from the actual choice of the fellow, to possible attendance at the various meetings. Chuck Sheedy and his cohorts have demonstrated throughout the last several months of planning their concern and interest in the desires of our class. Is this for we owe him our thanks, and, in the next several days, our full and meaningful support.

Mr. Doan:

Dear Mr. Doan:

Just once and for all—will business admit that it does make mistakes? Over and over again we see the major corporations stamping out criticism as they cover up flaws. Somehow, the “ethics” always seem to get lost in the rhetoric.

Several notable cases come to mind, the most recent being the much-publicized affair of the General Motors Galosh versus Ralph Nader. Here Big Business exposed itself as being oversensitive to criticism— as well as callous in its ignominious attack on its critic. Surely, while we don’t expect Big Business to change its ways overnight, we can expect a rational consideration— and not merely a cover-up job.

Yet the Nader episode is not unique. One receives a similar overreaction—and this time by the chemical industry— to Rachel Carson’s exposé on indiscriminate uses of insecticides. The Big Business response to Jessica Mitford’s eye-opening portrayal of the realities of the funeral business was equally bitter—not so much against her arguments in “The American Way of Death” but against the author herself. In none of these instances did business admit its imperfections on its own accord. Only public pressure—and the fear of continued negative publicity— was able to draw out the truth about auto hazards, bug sprays and casket costs.

It’s instances like these that prove business is responsible for the myth that it sees only facts it wants to see. In the instances like these that reinforce the image of business justifying any means to an end. The Big Business type can and does.

Twenty First Century Big Business appears to be nothing more than a reincarnation of the Nineteenth Century stereotype, the Robber Barons. Jay Gould’s stock-market rigging has its 1961 counterpart in G.E. Westinghouse price fixing. We have our Billie Sol Estes and our Bobby Bakers. Today’s business covertly sanctions such nefarious practices as bribes, kickbacks, company callgirls and tacit collusion. The Big Business type has created a business unto itself—industrial espionage. Here anything goes—from duplicated office keys to parabolic microphones. And even packaging frauds are becoming more and more blatant in today’s age of the 10-ounce giant economy size.

Thus, when college youth are asked, “What’s wrong with Big Business?”, we answer most simply, “What’s right with Big Business?” Very little, it seems.

Sincerely,

Stan Chess

Jornalism, Cornell

Dear Mr. Chess:

Big Business does not hold itself out as a sacred cow whose actions or ethics are not subject to scrutiny or valid criticism. But in making value judgments of the “right” or “wrong” of business, I question whether isolated instances are definitive criteria.

Critical judgments should be made in perspective with the phenomenal growth of our national economy since the end of World War II, a period during which gross national product more than tripled from $208.5 billion to approximately $740 billion last year.

This growth has resulted from a continuous effort on the part of the business community to respond both to society’s demands, and its needs. On the one hand, the constant demand for product improvement leads to better design and greater performance through advances in technology. Similarly, society’s needs prompt extensive research for the development of completely new products which create the additional profit-making opportunities essential for the nation’s economic growth— while serving a social purpose.

The measles vaccine developed at Dow is an example. The benefits to society from planned inoculation programs multiply in astounding geometric proportions. Not only can the total incidence of measles be cut substantially, but also a far lesser number will suffer the crippling mental defects which before destined many to a life of perpetual care in institutions. Human lives are being saved, their useful purposefulness unimpaired, while millions of dollars are freed for reallocation to other uses.

The focus on profit-making products to serve definable social needs reflects the times just as the community’s more advanced affects standards of ethics. In the less-than-perfect society in which we live, the ranks of business, and government, and education, and virtually every other segment of the community, unfortunately harbor those who cheat and scheme to gain their personal ends. It’s probably rather remarkable that our times have not produced more Billy Sol Estes and Bobby Bakers. But usually they are found out in short order. Neither I, nor any other responsible businessman, condone their actions. Certainly their conduct cannot be regarded as typifying business any more than the activity of the S.O.S. on various campuses speak for the majority segment of the student body.

Equally, an inquiry into press-sensationalized episodes of bribery, collusion, kickbacks and callgirls probably will reveal involvement of the same kinds of cheaters and schemers looking for a fast dollar. No company that I know condones this conduct. It simply does not represent the ethics of business, any more than does industrial espionage. Frankly, I think its significance has been quite exaggerated.

What it all adds up to is that most business enterprises, under the strict discipline of our competitive profit-making system, constantly are providing improved products and better service. In doing so they mirror the community of which they are an integral part, both in the advances made, and in their standards of performance. In the course of this, mistakes, as distinguished from unethical practices, occur. I suppose, however, that those who make them are no less reluctant to admit their mistakes, or to sustain public criticism than are people in other walks of life.

I am not acquainted with all the facts surrounding General Motors’ issue with Ralph Nader, but it is a matter of record that James Roche, then President of GM, made a public apology on this matter before the Senate’s Investigating Committee.

As regards Rachel Carson and insecticides, I will say that my own company had done research on the toxicology of insecticides long before the Food & Drug Administration voiced any concern in this subject. Research was not forced by Miss Carson’s work. The chemical control of agricultural pests certainly is a direct bearing on the very critical question of world food supply. Such control measures, coupled with increased knowledge of agronomists improving crop yields, constantly are increasing food supplies to meet expanding population needs.

I feel, therefore, that while your question as to “What’s Right About Big Business” focuses on its conduct, rather than its accomplishments, real objectivity requires that both be weighed in balance. On this broad scale, then, business is pacing the times in accordance with the community’s needs and the ground rules of its environment.

An apology

Perhaps it was presumptuous of me to believe I could direct, comprehend and communicate the thoughts of Notre Dame's black athletes through a series of interviews with them.

Yesterday, I misunderstood the thoughts of Austin Carr and Collin Jones. I apologize. It was unintentional. I had their words, but not their meaning. If in the process, I discredited the Afro-American Society or any other person or organization, I am truly sorry.

However, there remains the problem which I originally sought to attack—the difficult position of Notre Dame's black athletes. He is subjected to hateful, threatening mail from the South Bend community, to blatant insults from fellow students and University personnel.

There is one additional pressure. There is that desire "to be a black man first." He sees his non-athlete "brothers," who may live an unhindered black life. But the athlete, of necessity, must compromise with his predominantly white University and its "Notre Dame image." Coach will not want to see him at a black demonstration. He must say the right words to campus media. He must keep his hair cut and his sideburns trimmed.

And then one of his hang-ups does hurt forth. He thinks the Notre Dame student body was booping its all-black team for racist reasons. What does he get? A fast "We're sorry." From the Student Body President.

Why must we shove these guys right back to the court? They didn't want a statement from Richard Rossie. They needed a statement from the black athlete himself. By Terry O'Neil, sports editor
