British to invade rebel Anguilla

ST. JOHN'S, Antigua (UPI) — A battle-ready company of British paratroopers landed on two Royal Navy frigates yesterday preparatory to taking the breakwater from the Commonwealth possession of Anguilla, 35 square mile island in the Caribbean.

The former British representative to Anguilla, Tony Loy, said the troops would move against Anguilla within 48 hours unless Anguillan President Ronald Webster and the 6,000 other residents of the island surrendered independence.

Residents of this British island position greeted the British military force with a volley of bullets, shouting, "Hired murderers!...Go to Rhodesia!" and "Shame on Mother England!"

In London, Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart made a last minute plea for a peaceful solution to the Anglo-British dispute in hopes of drawing Anguilla back into the Commonwealth fold.

But in Anguilla, Webster vowed to defend the island's independence. "I can't even imagine a government by another people," said Premier R. G. Ford. said the President favored strict enforcement of existing laws providing for withholding aid funds.

"Our previous administration did not implement the laws Congress passed last year," Ford told newsmen as he and Dirksen left the White House.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler, announcing Nixon's decision against issuing a statement on the matter said: "The President was embarrassed with the problems that are occurring on Anguilla campuses. And...there is a very definite desire on the part of the President to see that those laws are enforced."

GM to recall 3.1 million more cars

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corporation yesterday announced it was recalling more than 3.1 million cars, trucks and school buses for correction of possible brake malfunctions. It was the second "safety recall" campaign announced by the world's largest automakers in less than one month.

At least one death and three injuries may have resulted from the failure of a hub-type seal which controlled hydraulic pressure in the braking system of a school bus carrying 46 persons, GM said.

The recall included all 967,000 regular size school buses for 1965 and 1966, 164,000 Chevrolet and GMC truck and coach bus chassis and medium duty trucks; 1,450 Chevrolet and 590 GMC grum and about 4,500 four-wheel drive light duty trucks, and 630 heavy duty heavy tractors.

Reduced sentence in Presley case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Attorney General outlined criteria for its handling of the San Francisco Presidio stockade matter, indicated yesterday a reduction in the sentence of one of the held defendant in the Presley case.

The reduction was granted to Pvt. Neryi D. Sool, 26, of Oakland, Calif., one of 287 prisoners charged with mutiny for staging a 12-hour sit-in demonstration by a fellow inmate with a gun, who claimed the man was being kept.

Sool, who was to go to the Presidio Review Board, which could further reduce the sentence but cannot increase it.

The Army gave no explanation on the reduction of punishment of Sool, who was the first man tried on the charges of competing to disobey orders. But public protests have mounted steadily following suspensions of the three-man board.

White House egg roll date April 7

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The annual White House Easter egg roll will be held on the South Lawn Monday, April 7, it was announced yesterday.

The rules are traditional: An adult must be accompanied by a child under 12.

The roll will be entertaining from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. by the Army, Navy, and Air Force bands and the Air Force buglers.

Presidential families have sponsored egg rolls, although eggs no longer are actually rolled since the Rockefeller Hayes administration in 1878.

Lindsay to run for second term

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mayor John V. Lindsay announced yesterday he will run for a second term as mayor of New York City, the "toughest job in the world."

Lindsay made the expected announcement at his Gracie Mansion residence.

"I will run for reelection to the office of Mayor of New York City," he said. "I won't pretend that running for a second term will be easy. But you can achieve fundamental changes in a city of eight million people without mistakes."

Two juniors, Susan Turnbull and Barbara Curtin, will place black and white academic speech of Hatcher by a debate last night at Stetson Center around the "battle for the minds of Negroes" between moderation and revolutionaries.

Hatcher, a vice-president of a large civil rights firm and the former press secretary of John Kennedy, termed himself a "moderate, though 15 years ago I never would have been called moderate." In a speech and composed tone, Hatcher gave a history of the "battle for Negro minds" from the conflict between the thinking of Booker T. Washington and W. E. B. Du Bois down to the present day "black power." Hatcher called for new "deeds" and the right to self-defense of the black community.

Dick Gregory contrasted the academic speech of Hatcher by a debate last night at Stetson Center around the "battle for the minds of Negroes" between moderation and revolutionaries.

Louis Herca, chief Washington correspondent for the London Times, pinpointed what he believes to be the true ruling body of the United States in a lecture delivered last evening at 8 p.m. in the Center for Continuing Education. "This country is governed by an eastern Anglo-American establishment," he said, "despite the fact that most Americans are annoyed to hear it so.

This weekend the Notre Dame campus will be the scene of the annual Junior Parents-Son Weekend. The Class of 1970 has prepared a program which will hopefully give the juniors and their parents a chance to pause and enjoy the education offered at Notre Dame.

This year's weekend will involve approximately 1500 parents and over 750 juniors. The main attraction is the President's Dinner Saturday night in the St. Patrick Center.

In the booklet, entitled "A Weekend Preview," Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh addresses the parents.

His letter reads, "It is often very difficult to describe the elements comprising a Notre Dame education. It is more than just the lectures, books, and research, much more than values, traditions, and classes. A true Catholic education is promoted by the influence of each of those in proper proportion, together with the guidance of Catholic ideals and principles, Christian surroundings, and the peaceful beauty of the campus, inspired by the statue of Our Lady and the Golden Dome. All of these are to develop a graduate who is truly capable of the moral, responsible leadership he must provide.

Chairman of the Junior Parents-Son Weekend, Jay Fitzsimmons, also addressed the parents in a letter. He said, "The clean of the Golden Dome, the roar of a pet rally, the peacefulness of the grotto are things that a student has experienced many times, but only their physical attributes are seen by his many parents. The attention of the entire university students, faculty, and administration is focused on you."

SMI starts Sun.

Seniors Joyce O'Donnell of St. Mary's and Bruce Eideleit of Notre Dame have announced plans for a Senior Marriage Institute to begin this Sunday.

The first two sessions on Sunday evenings are intended to provide those who are planning for marriage in the near future with an opportunity to fulfill the requirement of attending a premarital course without having to wait for the summer. Attendance at Pre-Cana Conferences is still required by most dioceses.

The talks are scheduled for 7:30. The first two will be held in the Library Auditorium. The second will be held at St. Mary's.

Registration is planned for today through Thursday in the dining halls at Notre Dame. Registration will be held all week in the dining halls at St. Mary's and in the Notre Dame off-campus office.

Some people argue that poetry is poetry, regardless of whether a black man or white man writes it. My poetry is a distillation of my own life - poetry that should speak to all black men.

This is how Gwendolyn Brooks, Pulitzer-winning black poetess from Chicago, described her own poetry in the lecture for the 1969 Black Culture and Fine Arts Festival last night in the Engin-

Why Residential?

One of the problems that will soon be a major concern of student government, the SLF, and others is that of off-campus housing. This specific issue itself will be discussed, but hopefully within the context of a somewhat more important question, namely, should Notre Dame be solely a residential University?

The primary difficulty with the topic is that everybody’s argument, no matter what the content, is based on copious appeals to the ideal of community. This idea, of course, tremendously ambiguous, because everybody admits that community involves some sort of sharing, but few seem to agree on the context or method of sharing.

A case can be made against the idea of a residential University in this way: a University is a community of scholars, and the community should therefore involve a sharing of scholarly activities; since the sharing ought to be to of this particular type, there seems to be no reason for denouncing a residential community, which involves sharing of non-academic factors, i.e. hall life.

The alternative approach (demanding a residential university) ought say something like this: a University is granted, a community of scholars, but the community need not be limited to a sharing of just academic activities; the scholar is also a social animal, and it would also be beneficial for the community aspect to include the sharing of broadly social activities, e.g. hall life.

The question of which theoretical argument makes more sense is only going to be resolved ultimately by observing the effect that off-campus living has had on the “community” so far. Has this non-residential aspect of Notre Dame contributed to community, not affected it, or affected it for the worse?

The overall impression that one gets in observing Notre Dame now is that there are two distinct communities: hall life and off-campus living. One can debate whether hall life contributes positively to the overall existence of community, but it seems pretty obvious that the existence of off-campus housing has had a substantially negative effect. Living together in halls may or may not lead to a more communal spirit, but living separately, off and on campus, clearly leads to a separation of communities.

It would be nice if the only thing required for a closely-knit University would be a sharing of academic activities, and in theory that is all that is required. Unfortunately, if the idea of community is serious, and not just a campaign slogan for every senatorial campaign of the last few years, then the only practical way of avoiding division and the creation of two distinct communities within one University is a commitment to the idea of a residential University.

Soph. Literary Festival starts
Sunday at 4 pm

Sunday afternoon Harold Hayen, the editor of Enquire magazine, will kick off the 1969 Sophomore Class Literary Festival with a keynote address on “The Search for a New Literary Generation” at 4 p.m. in the Library Auditorium. Mr. Hayen will be the first of seven noted literary figures to appear at the six day festival, which gained national prominence last year with the premier of Norman Mailer’s film, “Beyond the Law”, now playing across the country in art theaters.

One of the highlights of the festival will be George Plimpton’s slide lecture in Stepan Center on March 26. Plimpton, editor of The Paris Review and probably the nation’s most atypical sports writer, will talk about his personal experiences as recounted in his two best-sellers, Paper Lion and The Bogey Man.

In selecting this diversified collection of literary figures, Festival Chairman Jim Metzger said, “We tried to get away from every other seminar on novelists. We wanted to present a picture of what literature is today. So we brought the hits and pieces of that picture together here.”

Metzger added that most of the writers will be making appearances in classes and at private parties, and that arrangements are now being made with the English Department to enable students to attend these functions.

John Knowles, who produced the award-winning novel in 1960, A Separate Peace, will lecture in Washington Hall on March 27. On the following day, John Barth, whose prototypical novel, The Sot-Wed Factor, established him as one of the nation’s most promising young writers, will present a 90-minute program of reading from his works in Washington Hall on March 28.

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) - Police will maintain a "driving joke" at Indianapolis high school basketball tourney finals for anyone who misbehaves, according to Indiana Commissioner Phil Eskew.

Eskew said "We won't put up with any horseplay," as preparations were being made for Saturday's three-game finals between Indiana's Washington, Marion, Vincennes and Gary Tolleston.

"When we're in the final, we're in some difficult time for our longevity," said Eskew. "It's of the utmost importance that everybody be on their best behavior. We won't take any guff."

Eskew was referring to a chain reaction that broke out when the night Washington beat city foe Indianapolis Attacks for the sectional crown. A number of persons were injured and several were arrested before order could be restored.

Eskew told the coaches that if a boy loses his temper on the playing floor, "I'd get him out for a few minutes and let him cool off a bit."

"We'll have a great tourney. It gets out of hand, those responsible are the officials, the coaches and the principals."

Rainy spring

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) - Tom Seaver, the good right arm of the New York Mets, was drenched to the bone at the latter morning with Jerry Koosman, the good left arm.

The two of them talked about the kind of spring this was and Koosman said,"They had no trouble arriving at the same conclusion. They agreed this had been a bum spring." What they had in mind primarily was their pitching but they could be throw in the Florida weather, he said. They're thinking of the rain and dapperness, some baseball people are going around saying this has been one of the worst springs on record.

The only other close in recent times was the forty, depressing dampness 10 years ago. Wally Moses, the Detroit ciach but then with Cincinnati, remembers that well.

"It rained so much that spring, none of the clubs were getting any work," he says. "Gabe Paul, running the Reds then, flew the whole ball club down to Cuba. We were just getting ready to land in Havana when it happened to glance out of the window. I nudged Gabe and said, "Look, rain.""

The bad weather isn't what's disturbing Seaver and Koosman so much, however. They're thinking about their performances this spring, which have been pretty much the same as the weather. Loupy.

"Jerry and I were talking about it coming out to the bright side of it," Koosman said. "It was a hit game. Six ball games for his second straight season with the Mets last year, came with the 19 win Koosman clicked off as a rookie."

"I've been hit both times I pitched and so has Jerry," Seaver went on. "I worked three innings a piece against the Cardinals and Red Sox and gave up four hits and two runs in both games. Does it bother me? I can't put it that way. I'm concerned about what happens any time I go out to the mound. You always try to do your best. It's the ego factor. You don't want to be embarrassed because people in the stands are always watching and so are your teammates."

For a ballplayer, Tom Seaver has deep understanding about human capacities and emotions. For a 24-year-old ballplayer, he has uncommon problem is different. He isn't getting the ball down."

"I think it's a matter of getting my timing and rhythm adjusted and once that happens I'll be right," Koosman said.

He didn't have either his first two times out, the Phillies clubbing him for five runs in two innings and Kansas City's expansion Royals for three runs in three innings. Next time for him is Thursday when he gets another shot at the Phillies.

Koosman, a year older than Seaver at 25, barely missed being selected as the 1968 rookie of the year on the face of his 19.12 record and superlative 2.06 earned run average. He enjoyed a good part of the winter in New York as a celebrity because the people there aren't used to seeing anybody with the Mets win 19 games.

His only bad moment came when accidentally spilled hot butter on his left index finger while fixing some popcorn but everything's fine now except his ERA and Koosman isn't particularly worried about that.

One reason he feels good is the Met's hitting, up around 300 now."

"We've gotta do all right this year," Koosman says. "I think we'll finish in the money." Seaver goes further:

"I might be a supreme optimist, but I think we've got a chance to be in the World Series."

Maybe 70 cars in 500 field

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) - Cars have been assigned to three more drivers in the Indianapolis 500 Memorial Day race.

Rookie Lee Scott and veterans Roger McClusky and Johnny Rutherford were added to the list of drivers Monday who will be battling for the 33 positions on the starting grid. Speedway president Tony Hulman speculated that 70 cars might be entered this year.

Scott, who passed his rookie drivers test in 1967, will be making his third attempt to qualify a machine owned by B. J. Navarro of Glendale, Calif. Navarro will also serve as chief mechanic for the car, which will be powered by a 220 cubic inch six cylinder supercharged Navarro engine.

McClusky has been aboard one of two cars entered jointly by A. J. Foyt and James H. Greer, both of Houston, Tex. A. J. Foyt Sr. will serve as chief for the 161 cubic inch turbocharged Fords.

Rutherford, a 33-year-old Texan bidding for his sixth $500 starting berth, will pilot a car entered last month by Michner Petroleum, Inc., of Jackson, Mich.
