Anti-racism most important

SBP McKenna explains summer projects

by Martin Graham

Student Body President Phil McKenna announced yesterday that his cabinet has been working to develop a plan for the issue they will present to the student organizations this year. These organizations include the Student Life Council, the Student Senate, and the Academic Council.

The eight-point program worked on by McKenna's cabinet, covers a wide range of matters concerning the student body. McKenna stated that none of these eight points holds any special priority. He commented that he would just like to see all of them worked on throughout the year.

McKenna said, "I feel that one of the most important projects which my cabinet has been dealing with concerns anti-racism." The points he considers most important under this project are the formal education of both the student government personnel and the student body, and also the investigation of the racist structure of Notre Dame.

Another project is the consideration of student rights. Two of the points, which fall under this concern a monetary return to the occupants of Grace Hall, who have been forced to live elsewhere, and the publication of the magazine, Juggler, which the University is against.

McKenna said, "The University has a policy clause with the contractors who are building Grace Hall. For every work day in which an organization of completion, the contractor must pay the University a fine." He feels that since the University is getting a monetary return, the evicted students should also be allotted a return.

McKenna would not make an official comment on what he has planned to do about the publication of Juggler, although he stated that he will leave the course of action open to its editors.

The next three projects deal with a revision in the judicial code, a student bill of rights and responsibilities, and an analysis of academic fees.

McKenna stated that the next major project concerns student development. The most important point which will focus on student growth is a development that will assure that a cutdown in Grand Prix and Homcoming activities is most likely.

McKenna stated that the last major program concerns the academic affairs of the student body. "Student participation in anything concerning them," McKenna said, "is most important." The major points in this program primarily concern ROTC, black studies, and a continuation of the life council.

McKenna is not yet sure how which of these projects will be presented to the Student Life Council, the Student Senate, and the Academic Council. "It all depends," he said, "on how many other considerations these organizations will have."

McKenna stated that he does plan on presenting the Student Bill of Rights and Responsibilities and also the Student Life Council, which first meets on September 12th, to the student programs, which are still in their first draft stages.

NSA grants $50,000 to NABS

by Jim Hobinger

Notre Dame's delegation to the National Student Association congress this summer voted unanimously to grant $50,000 in previously mismanaged funds to the newly formed National Association of Black Students.

The vote came in the last day of the NSA congress held August 29-31 at the University of Texas at El Paso.

The congress, attended by 1300 student leaders from across the nation, came to life after violent demonstrations by Afro-American student leaders disrupted a plenary meeting originally set to elect new officers to the NSA.

The black students began ripping out microphones and telephones in the University of Texas auditorium when a white student was allowed to continue for nearly five minutes in a comical impersonation of Richard Nixon.

The black leader has previously been ruled out-of-order when he called for an end to nominations and suggested that the delegation return to the important issues confronting the NSA.

The following morning Afro-American students started their own discussions and founded NABS. They were joined by sympathetic-white delegations who moved to end the parliamentary procedure which had previously stifled free discussion. After a general return to the issues in a more relaxed atmosphere, the final day ended with the vote to support NABS. The funds granted to NABS were collected since 1961 by the Fast for Freedom, an organization of college students who give up their Thanksgiving meal each year on the agreement that the money saved by university dining halls on the meal will be used for relief projects in the Southern states.

The NSA misappropriated $50,000 from this project and used the money to pay NSA salaries and debts that have accumulated in that time.

Black students further demanded that minority groups be given the right to direct any and all programs that are directly related to minority problems.

In a statement issued by the well-organized black delegations, they revealed that "white administrators have always administered the programs and funds have been misdirected."

The new NABS will now handle the relief programs previously administered by the NSA.

A spokesman for NABS said, "We hope that white students will begin to deal with the problems that affect them so we can begin to develop a real student union." Phil McKenna, Notre Dame student body president who attended the convention as a member of the Notre Dame delegation, commented, "The black students were more serious than the white students. They did a lot of hard work. They know where they're going."

Juggler axed by ND; decision to be fought

by Mike Mooney

Student Body President Phil McKenna announced yesterday that "Juggler," the University Life Council's newspaper, will be continued publication of the Juggler, the University Life Council's newspaper. The University did not allocate funds for the Juggler in its 1967-70 budget and, incidentally, stopped publishing the magazine.

Juggler editor Michael Patrick O'Conner yesterday afternoon introduced two motions regarding the future of the magazine. One will be a "motion of censure against Fr. McCarragh (student body President Phil McCarragh, Vice-President for Student Affairs) for prior censuremanship of last year's publication." The other will request the Student Life Council to assure the editors of the magazine that the magazine would be published this way the year.

The grounds for McKenna's first motion came from an alleged order issued by Fr. McCarragh to the staff of the Juggler. The alleged order was issued by Fr. McCarragh to the staff of the Juggler. At the end of last year, the student government to the University reached between $54,000 and $55,000. McKenna stated that every year the student government would be allotted $96,000 in activities fees and it is from the thrifty use of this money that he hopes to pay the last of this debt by the end of the year.

In order to work out a program which will save a large amount of money, McKenna plans on having an audit company come in and make suggestions on how to cut down on student government expenses. It also appears that the student government will look into a tax cut from the University which would cut the budget.

McKenna is not yet sure of which of these projects will be presented to the Student Life Council, the Student Senate, and the Academic Council. "It all depends," he said, "on how many other considerations these organizations will have." McCarragh stated that he does plan on presenting the Student Bill of Rights and Responsibilities and also the Student Life Council, which first meets on September 12th, to the student programs, which are still in their first draft stages.

LINAC will be used to study radiation effects

A new $250,000 linear accelerator (LINAC) will aid research of the $90,000 for the debt, the effects of radiation on electrical discharges, and living organ systems.

Chemists, physicists, and biologists at the Radiation Laboratory, where the accelerator has been installed, hope it will increase the range and delicacy of their experiments.

The new "short" LINAC consists of two portions an electron gun, a television picture tube, and a microwave generator. The electrons are accelerated through a vacuum by bunching them in the crests of the waves, about the same frequency as radio or television waves.

The pulses of electrons may be as short as a billionth of a second, and may contain sub-pulses almost one-hundredth that length. "LINAC Laboratory scientists hope to use these even shorter pulses in their high velocity work.

Viewing the Notre Dame Radiation Laboratory's newly installed $250,000 linear accelerator are, from the left, Dr. William P. Helman, junior faculty fellow in chemistry; Dr. Milton Burton, director of the Radiation Laboratory; Gale W. Hartung, Department of Medical Engineering; and Dr. John Hunt, of the department of medical biology at the University of Toronto.

Black protest: focus of convention

The University’s projected budget deficit, greater than last year’s losses, has forced the administration to make cuts, and the literary magazine got the axe.

“We print about 800 copies, some we didn’t sell at all,” he added. “I would assume that there’s more behind it than finance,” disagreed editor O’Connor.

We must be haggling too much about Beechwood Ageing. Because we’re starting to get some flak about it. Like, “Beechwood, Beechwood... big deal.” And “If Beechwood Ageing is so hot, why don’t you tell everybody what it is?”

So we will. First, it isn’t big wooden casks that we age Budweiser in. But it is a layer of thin wood strips from the beech tree (what else?) laid down in a dense lattice on the bottom of our glass-lined and stainless steel lagering tanks. This is where we let Budweiser ferment a second time. (Most brews quit after one fermentation. We don’t.)

Budweiser is the King of Beers

We give more advice than we can take. The discussions on legal aid and educational reform are more appropriate for smaller schools. We already have most of these programs.

More delegates attended the convention than were originally expected. Several severe problems arose when the hotels became overcrowded with delegates attending the NSA congress.
Turnbull considers academic reform main goal

by Prudence Wear

In an interview yesterday, Saint Mary's Student Body President Sue Turnbull said she expects community government to have its most effective year. She feels this will result from a "new sense of cooperation between students, faculty, and administration."

Turnbull said, "There will be problems getting some of our plans through. Many of our ideas are controversial around here. But, I feel that all arising problems will be workable."

Her first intention is to deal with the Shuttle bus fare. Turnbull's main goal will be the examination of academic problems and possibilities. Emphasis will be on re-evaluating the pass-fail system and the freshman and sophomore curriculum, attempting to obtain exemptions from finals for seniors, and exploring the idea of changing the basis of the curriculum from "majors" to "areas of concentration."

On the probability of obtaining senior exemptions, Turnbull's only comment was "I don't know."

The plan to change from the concept of majors to areas of concentration has been under consideration for some time. The aim of such a change is to supply the student with "inner disciplinary studies previously lacking."

One of Turnbull's major goals this year is the precise definition of the role of Student Affairs Council in community to demand on-campus living. Now, in principle they can't oppose it. The money didn't come in, yet, and they have already made tentative plans for 250 extra students they'll have no rooms for," Turnbull said.

A car commission for underclassmen is another 1970-71 hopeful. However, the parking facilities must first be expanded. The Student Services Organization is holding a used books in the Clubhouse today to raise some of the needed funds. The Student Body President's personal desire for the year involves the student body.

"This year I want all the students to become more aware of their rights and responsibilities." Turnbull said, "So many of the students haven't even read the Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities and it's theirs. Someday it might save them from being expelled."

Connell resigns as sopp president

by Jim Frisky

As the first week of school comes to an end, the sophomore class now finds itself without a leader.

Sophomore Class President Ray Connell officially resigned earlier this week, stating he felt it necessary before his senior year to give the student government its "only comment was "I don't know."

The 1969-70 Notre Dame Student Union lecture schedule is being molded into final form, announced Academic Commissioner Pat Dowdall. This year the Academic Commission's schedule will be combined with those arranged by the various departments and organizations in the N.D. S.M.C. campaigns. Speakers of most general interest will be available for the Student Services Organization memberships. Turnbull body.

Turnbull hopes soon to make available lunch passes "This year I want all the students to become more aware of their rights and responsibilities." Turnbull said, "So many of the students haven't even read the Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities and it's theirs. Someday it might save them from being expelled."

Hesburgh...

Father Hesburgh has been away from Notre Dame since mid-summer. Currently he is attending meetings at the Jerusalem Institute in Greece. Last week he was in Washington where he issued a statement as chairman of the United States Civil Rights Commission attacking President Nixon's "slowdown" in enforcing desegregation in Southern Schools. Sunday he will be flying to Vienna to attend a meeting of Atomos for Peace as the official representative of the Vatican.

Weather...

Pleasant days and cool nights were forecast for Indiana into the weekend.

The forecast called for low Friday night in the 40s and 50s, and highs Friday in the low to mid 70s. Sunny and a little warmer Saturday. Highs Saturday were expected to be slightly below average with the mercury climbing into the 70s and 80s.

Speaking about these officers, Connell, said "They're really great guys, and they can do a better job than I could, while being involved with my studies." Realizing the big task these men have in front of them, Connell commented on some of the problems which they encountered last year and will face this year.

He stated, "Now that I'm out, I can look back and see that we did do a lot in a small way last year, but we should have done more. It's really unfortunate that so many of the students themselves... No one takes any interest in their class government. The parties we set up last year were usually attended by about 150 guys, and the academic counseling service was disregarded." The co-operative program between Notre Dame and St. Mary's reached a new dimension of enjoyment last night as each school took turns hosting a romp through their residence halls.

Notre Dame initiated the evening's festivities when after the Dillon Hall pep rally they spontaneously decided to stage a protest march on Holy Cross Hall. Without pausing to stop and ask for panties, the guys plunged into the hallway and adjacent rooms.

After running through the corridors for over ten minutes, some were still inside thirty seconds to the human siege. Corridors for over ten minutes, the second and third floors. They were greeted by shouting crowds of men lining the halls and staircases including one surprised guy who had just gotten out of the shower.

Penalties by Notre Dame included a major for tripping with a hockey stick and dousing a few girls with a full can of beer.

The leader of the St. Mary's delegation when asked why they had retaliated replied:

"We thought Notre Dame would enjoy it. It was fun when they came over. As long as we have co-existant clauses, we might as well have co-existant raids."

"You said Notre Dame would enjoy it. It was fun when they came over. As long as we have co-existing clauses, we might as well have coexisting raids."

Manhattan docks: Oil route open

NEW YORK (UPI) -- The super tanker Manhattan reached its first American port yesterday after sailing around the North Atlantic continent at the top of the world.

The 1,002 foot research vessel dropped anchor nine miles off Bar Harbor, Maine due to shallow water. The small settlement is 200 miles east of Bar Harbor.

State officials will board the Manhattan Friday at Prudhoe Bay to present a symbolic harpoon of Alaskan crude oil to Capt. Roger Steward. The Manhattan's captain has proved that eight oil reserves found in the bay area are commercially viable.

"We wanted the men to know that we are not stuck up and that we are friendly. The Notre Dame guys are welcome any time."

C P A discusses structure, plans

About 80 people attended the first meeting of the Coalition for Political Action last night in O'Shaughnessy Hall. Chuck Leoni conducted the meeting and said: "The CPA is an organization formed to meet the changing needs of the Notre Dame/South Bend community for semi-independent, project oriented groups with a radical outlook. Each group will have a particular project and will operate in an autonomous manner within its own particular area."

MacCarry noted that present sociology textbooks and the media do not really "tell it like it is" and that there is a definite need for a new intellectual analysis of America. He went on to say that the purpose of his group is to first get people together who are interested in constructing a new radical analysis of the social structure in the Notre Dame/South Bend community and then "cross-fertilize" this information with other aspects of the Coalition.

Junior John Wilson from Students Against Racism said that they hoped to educate the students on the effects of racism, change their thinking as much as possible, and hopefully structure certain policies which perpetuate racism.

Chuck Leoni disclosed suggestions CPA's actions in conjunction with the October 15th Vietnam War Moratorium. Among the possibilities were: a march to the ROTC building and reading of the list of Notre Dame war dead, a teach-in and rally with guest speakers, fasting on an individual basis, a religious celebration perhaps a Mass where students might train in their draft cards, and a formal Catholic exorcism of the ROTC building.

Brian McAlaney said that one reason radical efforts like the Dow-CIA sit-in last fall were not successful because not enough work was done to educate people and create sentiment and that CPA hopes to conduct discussions in all the halls prior to any CPA actions.

Planned shuttle fare attacked

On today's academic calendar is the Fall semester's first shuttle bus trip. The bus will run until 12:15, and on weekends, one bus will run until 2:30 in the morning.

The route this year has also been changed. The first stop will be the library circle, then the stadium, the waiting room at the circle, the ROTC building, and the gates.

Due to the increased service the University has chartered the buses from the South Bend Public Transportation. The buses and drivers will be the same as those in South Bend.

The increase in service has generated a rise in costs. The university has deigned it necessary to charge a dime per passenger. At 6 p.m.

The reason being that the university felt it did not have to "subsidize the social lives of the students," according to Tim Collins, Student Union Manager of Transportation.

The address itself to national as well as to local issues. The Coalition was twofold: Vice-President and one of the certain situations which require some sort of action. Second, we will probably be essentially an organization which will work with other groups and try to be available to help them in any way they can use it.

Ed Ruckel, a member of the coalition, elaborated on this idea. He said that the coalition "is not a party at all, not political" in the sense that it will not put up candidates for election of campus offices nor will it endorse candidates. Chuck Leoni, in commenting on the organizational structure of the coalition, said, "We are setting up projects. The structure will evolve from the projects."

The force of the coalition was noticed by nearly all the freshmen as the coalition, in conjunction with individuals from the Students Against Racism, sent out letters to the parents on the subject of an "Anti-Racism Project" that was started at Notre Dame.

Phil McKenna, Student Body President and primary author of the letter as a member of the coalition stated that: "It is our aim to unveil to each member of the university community the racism inherent in both individuals and institutions."

The letter went on to urge that upon realization of this inherent racism, the Notre Dame community should undertake a program of remedial education which was considered the primary method of addressing racism, followed by preparation to act. "We feel that this two-fold approach of education and action is essential to the project's true success."

Ruckel, in defending the assertion in the letter that the racism in our university and society was "more unconscious than conscious, more covert than overt, and more behavioral than attitudinal" answered: "We can legislate open housing. We can not legislate against racism. We have to understand its roots." In the same envelope as the anti-racism letter, the coalition sent out a letter to "present a more accurate picture of the limitations and obligations" of the ROTC program than is given by ROTC during orientation.

The Coalition's counter efforts were centered around four arguments why a student should delay a decision on whether or not to join ROTC. First consideration was directed at the moral decision a student makes while not seriously considering the implications involved. They felt that "to decide to join ROTC before a thorough investigation of the theological, philosophical, psychological, and sociological consequences would be a mistake."

Second priority was that ROTC "limits the opportunity of the student to pursue areas of study by requiring him to use many of his electives in order to take ROTC courses."

Third, the coalition deplored the situation where a decision "will affect the next ten years of one's life." They mentioned two alternatives: Officer Candidate School and the ROTC two year program.

The fourth argument was expressed in this way: "Finally the uncertainties of the status of the selective service system make a choice to join ROTC at this time somewhat imprudent."

The coalition closed the letter asking, as fellow students, "to discuss these (serious) issues with you when you arrive in the fall."

Leoni said the letter represented a "rational kind of level headed approach which would appeal to parents more than any other way."

Ruckel replied that in the letter "We are not attacking ROTC as such. We are asking people to stop and take a look at both sides of the story because the decision to join ROTC may be one of the most important decisions he will make at the university. It will affect the next few years of his life after graduation."

John Cranick, a member of the coalition, responded to a question of why this "rational level-headed" approach was employed in this way: "In the long run this will start people thinking about the question, and they may eventually evolve toward a more militant position on the issue."

The first big push of the coalition will be felt in accordance with the Viet Nam War moratorium on October 15. They hope that Notre Dame, St. Mary's, IU, high school students, and South Bend residents will be represented in the protest.

India Week proclaimed

South Bend Mayor Lloyd Allen signed a proclamation yesterday, declaring the week of September 29 as India Week in conjunction with the India Association of Notre Dame.

India week activities will be held on the Notre Dame campus in Washington Hall.

The proclamation stated: "Whereas, the India Association of Notre Dame is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the birth of Mahatma Gandhi on October 2, 1969; and whereas, in his leadership of the people of India, Mahatma Gandhi brought to the world's attention the philosophy and attributes of non-violent accomplishments; and whereas the India Association of Notre Dame is sponsoring a week long informative and entertaining program related to Gandhi's life and Indian culture; "Now therefore, I, Lloyd M. Allen, Mayor of South Bend, Indiana, hereby proclaim the week of September 29 through October 5, 1969, as India Week and urge all thoughtful citizens to participate in these ceremonies designed to call attention to this observance."

In Allen's absence, his administrative assistant, Vernon Sutton, presented the proclamation to Vinod Khera, president of the India Association of Notre Dame. Sutton stated, 'I think it might be well again at this point to review the life and activities of a great man of the world because of his advocacy of non-violent solutions to problems of humanity. It would be well for citizens of local University bodies as well as the community to re-examine the life of this great man. We urge all thoughtful citizens to participate in this activity.'

The coalition is aiming to reach these objectives on the day of the moratorium: induce the administration to call off classes, have high school and college students boycott classes if the administration refuses to call off classes, persuade businesses to release their workers for the day. Leoni commented: 'It is not a student strike as such; it is a moratorium on business as usual.'

Assembly will study shuttle bus finances

by Jeanne Sweeney

At the first meeting for this academic year, the St. Mary’s Student Assembly took action on the newly established ten cent fare for the shuttle bus connecting the St. Mary’s and Notre Dame campuses.

Student Body Vice President Beth Bernie, who chairs the Student Assembly, proposed a resolution to investigate the fare which is effective after 6 PM.

Miss Bernie called for the “investigation into the financing of the shuttle bus,” which is operated by the South Bend City Bus Co., but is financed by Notre Dame and St. Mary’s. According to the proposal, unified unanimously by the assembly, this would lower the bus expense and freeze pending the outcome of the investigation.

“The purpose of this investigation is to examine and evaluate difficulties and misunderstandings in the financing of the said service.”

The difficulties discussed were in the gross overcharge of ten cents and what will be done with the credits which will come from this new system.

The Assembly also continued the executive committee appointment of nine girls to the academic committees of College. These girls will be the first students to hold seats on their respective academic committees.

Frank Nixon and Fred Tripel were approved by the Assembly for the Admissions and Recruitment Committee. Tripel is a senior day student who has worked in the student aid office for three years, and Fred Nixon is a senior staff student who has a great interest in this committee.

Marilyn Reidy, a senior, will be seated on the Academic Standing Committee. The library committee will have two new members, one a senior, Carolyn Bayer, and one junior, a junior who has worked in New York public libraries.

Validation cards introduced here; supplement IDs

The new validation cards that were issued to all students at registration are designed to take the place of the combination schedule-certificate of validation paper issued in previous years.

The validation card will also be used for all embargoing which is done at the bookstore and the library. The new freshman ID cards will be flat, with no raised lettering.

There are six different types of validation cards. Two types for the students of ND and SM and two types for the staffs and the faculties of both schools. All will be re-issued annually, except student cards, which will be re-issued each semester.

Some students, especially those accepted to the university late, did not receive their cards. These students will receive cards, which will be issued by the Dean of Students sometime next week.

Good-fellow function of the new matrix organization, Hogan hopes the matrix groups will stimulate research.

Cornell's plight:

Cornell University's Board of Trustees issued a special report last week on the student disorders that occurred there last April. The special investigative committee which compiled the report lashed out at the blunders on the University's failure to enforce its disciplinary procedures and then fail to follow through.

The report was also critical of President James.A. Perkins with its recommendation to students. The report demands too readily and the University's failure to communicate clearly to students the goals of the academic community. Because of a communication gap, the University failed to rally students in support of those goals.

The report was also critical of the University's efforts to establish a Black studies program. It stated that the University did not have a clear understanding of the ultimate goals of the program nor of Black student needs.

Ominous parallels exist between the report's description of the situation at Cornell before their disorders and the situation that currently exists at Notre Dame.

It is no secret that University rules and regulations have gone without enforcement over the past few years. The University has not made too valuable an effort to communicate its goals to students and certainly has not rallied too much enthusiasm for any thing. Discussions about dealing with the problems of Black go on, but the students have not progressed very far since last year when they were initiated for the first time in a serious scale.

Notre Dame has no need for any student disorder similar to the one that occurred at Cornell. But the only way to stop one that does not occur is to eliminate whatever might foster it.

Using the Cornell report as a guide, it is time to call for stricter student enforcement and cooperation with the campus judicial code. In the past, students have always hesitated at living up to their responsibilities under the code, using as their excuse the fact that they had no say in establishing the rules.

With the advent of the SLC, however, students have played a major role in constructing the rules which guide their lives. By participating in the SLC, students have made a commitment to live within its guidelines. It is hoped that this year will see the Notre Dame judicial code abide by and supported by students. Student participation in the judicial code is not to be a last resort, but a responsibility.

The first procedure which must be followed in order to add or drop a course should be simplified. St. Mary's charges a student five dollars when a course is added or dropped. The fee is too large as the money is not then a communist after all, I am sure that there is a real ground enough to insure cooperation.

Finally the Administration and students must begin to understand more closely the needs of the Black student not only at Notre Dame but also in American society. Notre Dame is currently looking for someone to head its Black studies program. We hope that a talented and progressive Black director is found soon. Black students at Notre Dame believe that only a Black director will be able to perceive clearly the type of Black studies program needed at the University.

We hope that Black students will embark on a program to inform the Notre Dame community of their goals, their fears, and their dreams. Hopefully, the report stated that no one there really understood what the ultimate goal was to be, Notre Dame can do better than that.

Notre Dame must work in order now so that Cornell's plight will not be our own.

Registration:

Two days of hectic registration and class scheduling have ended for St. Mary's and Notre Dame students. The process of registration at Notre Dame and St. Mary's is characteristic of the quandary in which much of the American educational system has been wallowing for a long time. Students are denied access to the courses which they feel they would like to take and are forced to take some courses in which they have little or no interest.

We realize that both campuses are making extensive re-evaluations of college and university requirements. We hail the efforts and hope that changes will come quickly.

In the mean time, however, changes can be made in the registration process itself in order to make it greater aid toward students receiving good education.

First, the procedure which must be followed in order to add or drop a course should be simplified. St. Mary's charges a student five dollars when a course is added or dropped. The fee is too large as the money is not then a communist after all, I am sure that there is a real ground enough to insure cooperation.

Secondly, students pay enough for an education today and they ought to be able to register for, and to take those course in which they are interested with a minimal amount of effort and red tape.

Teacher Preparation Office to aid Education students

by Jim Holsinger

A new department was added to the university this year as a result of the increase in co-exchange classes with St. Mary's College.

The Institute for Studies in Education was officially established on September 1, and Rev. Neil G. McClosky, S.J., was named as director of the program.

The institute will contain the Graduate Department of Education, St. Mary's Education Department, and the Office of Educational Research, as well as a counseling center and programs to aid students in obtaining teaching certification.

Previously, Notre Dame students had to rely solely on the facilities of St. Mary's College for any education courses or counseling.

Now, through the Office of Teacher Preparation, a division of the newly formed department, undergraduate students can obtain teaching licenses in almost any state upon graduation.

Dr. Eugene V. Campanale is the Associate Director of OTP. His office works in close cooperation with other departments of the university to insure that a student need not spend his entire career to obtain a license upon graduation.

"We hope that a Notre Dame student who graduates in any particular area will not only be able to get a degree in that area, but will also be able to teach in any state," Campanale said.

The OTP has two types of programs. One allows any undergraduate student to take up to 6 credit hours in education. The other is designed for students who plan to teach upon graduation.

All the classes are taken from St. Mary's College, although some classes are taught by St. Mary's professors on the Notre Dame campus.

Two hundred Notre Dame undergraduates are currently involved in some aspect of teacher preparation, and ten are doing practice teaching in the South Bend area this summer.

Dr. Campanale is hopeful that this number will increase to thirty or more by next semester.

The OTP works closely with Arts and Letters Associate Dean Robert Waddick to arrange student schedules to allow for the classes on the St. Mary's campus, and can also provide scheduled time to allow for a full day's practice teaching schedule.

Candidates for the program must have a 2.25 GPA, and three faculty signatures are required on the application.

After a student has made application for the program, Dr. Campanale and a committee from the education department at St. Mary's College decide whether to accept or reject each applicant.

An applicant must then obtain permission from his department head to take education courses.

Before pre-registration, the OTP can work out a student's schedule so that he will fulfill the particular requirements of the state in which he wishes to teach after graduation.

"I think that the program has the possibilities of becoming an excellent one. We are party much in the embryo stage now, but we are making adjustments as necessary. I think the co-operation we have received from other departments has been phenomenal," Dr. Campanale said.

The National Council for Accreditation for Teacher Education (NCATE) has given an initial approval to the program, but a board of examiners must still inspect the courses and facilities.

Dr. Campanale, who is also the certifying officer for Notre Dame, indicated that if Notre Dame receives approval from NCATE, students who graduate from the program could be given a license almost anywhere in the United States through reciprocity.

He has submitted a copy of the program to the State of Indiana, and he is presently preparing a brochure on the courses.

St. Mary's College has already received Senate approval.

DA Dinis submits autopsy petition

WILKES BARRE, Pa. (UPI) - An amended autopsy petition received here yesterday from Massachusetts District Atty. Edmund S. Dinis alleged for the first time that blood was found on the clothing and in the mouth and nose of Mary Jo Kopchne after her body was recovered from the submerged auto of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Dinis cited the alleged findings in an amended petition to bolster his plea for an exhumation and autopsy under Pennsylvania laws.

The amended petition filed by mail by Dinis claimed that "investigation has revealed there was present a certain amount of blood in both Mary Jo Kopchne's mouth and nose, which may or may not have been consistent with death by drowning."

The new petition went on to state that there appears on the white shirt worn by Mary Jo Kopchne "washed out, reddish brown and brown stains on the back of both sleeves, the back and collar."

Pass defense key to Irish victory

by Mike Pavlin

Passing, for three years the focus of the Notre Dame offense, will let the Irish defense this Saturday as Northwestern opens the 1969 season.

The Wildcats, coming off a 4-0-1 debacle, feature a potent passing attack spearheaded by Dave Shelbourne. Last year, the 6-1, 210 lb. junior threw for 1,358 yards, hitting on 105 of 251 passes. Up until a few days ago, Shelbourne faced the happy prospect of having his two leading receivers back. Unfortunately, Bruce Hubbard (33 catches for 551 yards) will miss tomorrow's contest due to an injury. Tight end Pat Harrington (17 for 163) is back, however, and Barry Pearson will replace Hubbard.

Coach Alex Agase has six lettermen returning on defense, but his real concern is the development of a running game. Lettermen Ken Egan and Mike Adamec return to help ease the pressure on Shelbourne.

The Irish, having lost only one home opener since 1934, will not have the lightning combination of Terry Hanratty to Jim Seymore, but figure to be much more than a "three yards and a cloud of dust" offensive team.

While Andy Huff, Ed Ziegler, and Jeff Zimmerman provide solid running potential, quarterback Joe Theismann has the arm necessary to throw when needed. He'll have Tom Gaitwood, who shook off some spring injuries to claim the split end post, and tight end Dewey Poisson as his receivers.

On the rebuilt right side of the line will be junior guard Gary Kos and senior Terry Brennan. Mike Orsard, newly named co-captain, brings half a year's starting experience to the center spot, while Jim Rolly and Larry DiNardo form a powerful, veteran left tackle and guard.

Massive Mike McCoy anchors a defensive line which must get to Shelbourne or ND may be in for a tough afternoon. Three sophomores, Walt Patalisko, Fred Swenenden, and Mike Zikas join McCoy, a pre-season All-America pick.

Sophomores are traditionally prone to mistakes, but the Irish trio have four experienced men to back them up. Co-captain Bob Olson, Larry Schumacher, Bob Neidert, and Tim Kelly man the key inbacking positions.

Speedy soph Clarence Illa won the safety job this spring and is flanked by senior John Center and junior Chuck "Slick" Zieloch. One name sure to be new to Irish fans is that of Mike Eckman, placekicker. Although he didn't show much promise during the spring, Eckman went through a heavy summer workout schedule and won the job this fall.

Eckman will kick-off tomorrow at 1:30 in front of ND's first set of female cheerleaders and a student body experiencing a new concept in seating arrangements— that of boys and girls together. This may not help Joe Theismann scramble any better or Mike McCoy catch Dave Shelbourne, but it ought to stop the cries of "Go Back, Go back across the road."

The winners

Picking a slate of football winners each weekend has always been an editor's job. After all, he is supposed to have the keen mind and cool temperament necessary to make the tough decisions. This is especially true in spring, however, will say that I shouldn't be allowed to pick winners, but the South Quad much less football games.

Mathematically, I've decided not only to pick the game winners, but also the ones that spread. If you're going to be wrong, why not be wrong in a big way-like Spira Agnew?

Notre Dame over Northwestern—by 27. And good headhunting to Mike McCue! Army over New Mexico by 7. Both teams have poor defenses, but the Cadet runners are slightly better.

UCLA over Pitt This is a reverse prediction: Pitt (last year 63-7) will lose by no more than 30.

Indiana over Kentucky by 17. Not yet, Johnny Ray.

SMU over Georgia Tech by 14. A good defensive rush will rattle Chuck Hixson, but Tech doesn't have it.

Missouri over Air Force by 17. The Falcons looked good beating SMU, but the Tigers are big time this year.

Delaware over Gettysburg by 21. My home state university is once again the eastern small college powerhouse.

Syracuse over Iowa State by 10.

Academic Council decides to retain ROTC

by Clifft Wintrobe

At its last meeting of the 16-17 academic year, Notre Dame's Academic Council voted overwhelmingly to retain the University's affiliation with the three ROTC programs now on campus.

However, the council, which is Notre Dame's major academic policy-making body, passed six resolutions regulating ROTC's role in the academic structure of the university.

The first resolution passed by the Council left the determination of academic credit for ROTC offerings in the hands of the deans of the individual Colleges, as it is presently the case for other courses.

The decisions of the deans are tempered by the decisions of that dean's College Council. Although the deans are not bound to follow the wishes of their College Council, it is a very rare circumstance when they do not.

The three departments of military science are part of the College of Arts and Letters. The College of Arts and Letters will give credit for the "upper division" courses.

The College of Business Administration's policy is to grant credit in the third and fourth years up to a maximum of twelve hours.

A maximum of nine credits is allowed by the College of Science, but each department is free to set its own requirements. In addition, the Biology department accepts no credit for ROTC.

The College of Engineering is undergoing a change in the required program for an engineering degree. This is because the military departments are part of that College's curriculum.

The resolution stressed the necessity of prior approval by appropriate University academic authorities of appointments of military teaching personnel.

The process by which a military officer is accepted to be an instructor has been amended this year. Plunkett stated that the reason this was done was to "keep it more in line with the practice in other departments." The academic courses are generally in the history and government areas.

Waddick offered three reasons for this change.

The course would fit better in the academic structure of the university, he said. "It would be highly objective, and there is a duplication of the military department's offerings and university offerings," he added.

Dean Plunkett, Director of Military Affairs, cited another reason.

"The technical, instead of the professional courses, should more properly be taught by professional personnel trained in the area," he said. "They might better be taught by men in our department who have such expertise."

No changes will take place University-wide because the Academic Council's ruling came after course selections for this semester had already been determined.

Dean Plunkett thought some change would be possible in the second semester but he added that "academic units of the university will start to move this year" and some course substitutions will be accepted for the following year.

The Academic Council's third resolution stressed the necessity of prior approval by appropriate University academic authorities of appointments of military teaching personnel.

Under the new rule, the Academic Council's approval must be given for separation from ROTC units, without military or academic penalty, for students "who demonstrate a serious personal reason for separation."

In the academic regulations of the university, a student who withdraws from a ROTC scholarship agreement in his junior or senior year would be subject to immediate cutoff in the reserves as an enlisted man. Dean Plunkett said he had never been imposed until last year.

"The student who was called up at the end of the year was in Navy ROTC and had failed to give "any satisfactory reason" for wanting out. Plunkett said the services will release a student if he provides a "very good reason."

Plunkett described a "very good reason" as "a complete change in a boy's attitude toward war, a conscientious objector."

The Academic Council's fourth resolution interpreted the University's faculty manual to mean that military teaching personnel have "Nontenurable" status on the teaching and research faculty. This means that time spent in service cannot be applied toward tenure.

This resolution is a reaffirmation of past policy. The question has not been rated in the past because the military has avoided assigning an officer to be an instructor on his last assignment before retirement. Also, a military instructor is not a faculty member and does not have a service contract; he is not subject to immediate callup in the reserves. He is "only a noncommissioned officer on active duty under a scholarship agreement in his fourth year."

The fifth resolution asked responsible military and governmental officials to develop procedures for separation from ROTC units, without military or academic penalty, for students "who demonstrate a serious personal reason for separation."

The sixth resolution recommended that the University re-examine its contractual obligations with the Department of Defense. It suggested that aspects of military training more appropriate to military installations be transferred to summer camps.

Dean Plunkett said the university's contract with the armed service "can be terminated by either party with a year's notice but that the contracts are continuous unless either party demands that the contract be broken or requests changes in the contract."

"Every kind of military act of physical training type should be done at summer camps or exercises where these are appropriate," he continued. "Most of the drilling might be done best at summer camp."

Passing to carry Wildcat attack

CHICAGO (UPI) -- Northwestern got some bad news last year's leading Wildcat pass catcher, split end Bruce Hubbard, will not play in the opening game against Notre Dame due to a head injury.

Hubbard sustained a minor head laceration requiring several stitches when his car was hit by another vehicle Saturday night. Coach Alex Agase said Barry Pearson, a sophomore flankerback, will fill in for Hubbard against the Irish.

Evanston, Ill., September 17, That rarity on a Northwestern football squad -- depth -- exists in at least one area for the 1969 Wildcats, and its presence will dictate the type of offense Northwestern will unveil in the opening game at Notre Dame, September 20.

The depth is available in quality at the primary receiving positions, flankerback and split end, and, fortunately, is complemented by the passing skills needed to deliver the ball.

"You've got to utilize what you do best and passing and catching are the things we do best," said Coach Alex Agase.

Agase's confidence in his receivers is based partly on proven performance and partly on exciting potential. The proven performers are senior standouts, split end Bruce Hubbard and flankerback Ken Luxton. The potential is supplied by a pair of sophomores who are challenging the veterans for the starting jobs, split end Jerry Brown and flankerback Barry Pearson.

Hubbard, tallest man on the squad at 6-6, led the team in receiving last year with 33 receptions for 551 yards. His two-year total (49 catches for 782 yards) puts him within range of school career records for total receptions, (88, Cas Banareski) and total yards (1,231, Joe Collier).

Luxton last year caught 13 passes for 202 yards as a running back, despite missing almost half the season with a kidney injury. Throughout early drills he matched spectacular receptions with Hubbard, who has built a reputation for the diving circus catch.

Responsible for the solid improvement of the veterans has been the steady pressure exerted by the newcomers. Brown, who is seven inches shorter than Hubbard, compensates with fluid moves and the best speed of a Wildcat receiver in recent years. In a freshman game against Purdue, he caught bombs for 65 and 60 yards.

Pearson resembles Luxton in size and style. Agase has compared his moves and hands favorably with those of 1962 Wildcat star, Paul Flatley, who went on to become the professional "rookie of the year" in 1963. Pearson caught 19 passes for 327 yards in two freshman games.

A fifth first-rate receiver is co-captain Pat Harrington, tight end, who last year had 17 receptions for 163 yards.

Agase calls this quintet the finest group of receivers he has seen at Northwestern in 14 seasons.

Regardless of who starts at split end and flankerback, the backup man figures to see an equal amount of action. As a result, the Wildcats can expect to have their top receivers comparatively fresh late in the game -- a factor bound to put added pressure upon opposing secondaries.

Hawks, farm club in ACC

Ice hockey comes early to the Notre Dame campus this year as the Chicago Black Hawks take on their Dallas farm club Sunday night in the Convo Center. Dallas won the Central Hockey League championship last year.

The exhibition will be the third of the season for the Black Hawks, who are rumored to be split by ill-feeling between players and management.

Ice meeting

Varsity hockey coach Lefty Smith has announced that a registration meeting will be held this Thursday night at 9:00 for all those interested in trying out for varsity hockey this year. The meeting will be held inside Gate 3 of the Convo Center. Off-ice conditioning and some skating will begin on Monday, Sept. 22.

Bruce Hubbard will be missing from the Northwestern receiving ranks Saturday due to an injury.
