Non-violent program greeted with approval

By Dave Lammers

Last spring a new program of study and action began at Notre Dame, namely the Program for the Study and Practice of the Non-violent Resolution of Human Conflict. The program emanated from a collegiate seminar meet- ing of Professor Charles McCarthy, and was presented to Father Hesburgh by a non-partisan group of student leaders. The response to this idea is fascinating; it is more than that, it is living proof of the power of an idea come of age. The response is evidence that many Americans are convinced violence is death as a means of resolving human conflict or achieving positive social change. Very simply, the life of a non-violent person is founded on the conviction that all human beings must be treated as persons and not as things, tools, or instruments for personal gratification.

Observe. Two weeks after the program was proposed to Father Hesburgh, the Gulf Oil Corporation granted $100,000 to Father Hesburgh to be used for the founding of a program of non-violence. In addition, constant, behind the scenes, support was given by Father Hesburgh and his staff to the program. When the Program for the Study and Practice of the Non-violent Resolution of Human Conflict began reality, Professor McCarthy received over three hundred personal requests for entrance into the two seminar sections, including some sixty or seventy requests from St. Mary's College, in spite of the fact that the seminar was not listed in the spring course booklet. According to this student response, Paul Douglass, a Hawaiian theologian and author of The Non-violent Owen: A Theology of Resolution and Peace, was enticed into coming to Notre Dame. Douglass is presently taking three sections of the non-violent seminar. Mario Corradi, an Italian who writes for a monthly devoted to non-violence here last year, is now at Yale studying non-violence, and we hear there is another Notre Dame in his studies. It is indeed very encouraging to see this new breed of people for graduate work, and the people who are special to them, and this action deprived them of this feeling.

“Were worried about the low men on the totem pole,” he continued, “the people who are selling tickets. We can’t pay them. They get nothing out of being there and selling tickets - a job that can’t be classified as a job. That’s what we’re going to keep them working.”

By Tim Treanor

The decision of Student Union Director Dennis Clark to distribute fifty tickets for Saturday’s Purdue game which were being held for special sale to the Student Union Staff has apparently met with less than support from the student body, according to a recent story in the campus newspaper.

ND Science alters requirements

If the trend in the past has been increasing specialization, the road of the future may well be toward "double specialization." At Notre Dame, the College of Science is making room in its program for the new double specialist, or interdisciplinary major.

“The boy who wants to combine science with writing, business, law or education often has a good career waiting for him upon graduation even if he has only a bachelor’s degree,” Dr. Bernard Waldman, dean of the college, explained. “We also have to consider the student who wants to combine his biology major with chemistry, physics or mathematics,” he added. "Many of these science fields are on the frontiers of research."

To accommodate this new breed of student, the College of Science will alter its requirements to fit a new, more flexible program, according to Dr. Emil T. Hoffman, assistant dean of the college, and chairman of the College Curriculum Committee. Dr. Hoffman explained that the new program will incorporate "the best ideas of the new breed of student." This, he said, demands that the curriculum "be more flexible to allow the student to pursue the major in a more personal manner and to develop the skills of a scientist." The program will be designed to meet the needs of students for graduate work, and eventual research.

Professor Waldman explained that the new concentration program was created primarily to meet the need for a new breed of student. This student, he said, demands that the curriculum be more flexible to allow the student to pursue the major in a more personal manner and to develop the skills of a scientist.

"This was demonstrated recently when a talented Notre Dame student turned down a National Science Foundation fellowship for graduate study, rather than agree to teach in the inner-city. Waldman noted, "this shows us that we have a different group of students now, (continued on page 2)"
Father Edmund Joyce, Acting President of the University, signed Monday a proclamation declaring the week of September 29th as "India Week at Notre Dame." Mayor Lloyd Allan signed a similar proclamation for South Bend last week.

India week is designed to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the birth of the Indian leader, Mohandas Gandhi. The proclamation reads in part, "The life of Mohandas Gandhi was a life dedicated to freedom, self-sacrifice, non-violence, racial equality, and religious tolerance. It is fitting that the University of Notre Dame community join in celebrating the memory of this great man and the principles which guided his life..."

The Indian Association has organized a week-long series of events to honor the memory of Gandhi. The event will feature two exhibitions of books and pictures on India that will be displayed at both the Memorial Library on campus, and the downtown South Bend public library. These will be available for viewing towards the middle of the week.

On October 2nd, the birthday of Gandhi, a lecture and a panel discussion will be held in the library auditorium, at 8 p.m. The chief speaker will be Dr. Amiya Chakravarty. His talk will be entitled "Gandhi: The Relevance of his person and political philosophy today.

Prof. Chakravarty teaches philosophy courses at the State University of New York at Albany.

The panel discussion afterwards will include Dr. McCarthy, head of the Non-Violent Studies program, and Mr. James Douglas, an instructor in non-violent studies.

Tentative plans also include a representative of the black people. The panel will discuss Dr. Chakravy's speech with special emphasis in its relevance to the United States.

On October 3rd, the award winning Indian film "Ram Aur Shyam" will be shown in the library auditorium.

The appointment of Thomas Brocken, professor of law, to coordinate urban studies programs at Notre Dame was announced yesterday.

In a letter to Notre Dame faculty members, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., said that University recognized the inter-disciplinary aspect of urban studies and wanted "to devise a coordinating process which will encourage and support those whose interests, talents, and responsibilities are oriented toward urban affairs.

Notre Dame's president said urban problems included racial discrimination, poverty, and alienation; the insensitivity, ineffectiveness, and injustice of public and private institutions; pollution; and waste, and "meteoric" technological change.

"We want to develop a process and program that addresses high priority urban concerns in such a responsive to the interests and talents of the faculty and students," Father Hesburgh went on. "We want to add that he expected that the "resources of the University will be brought more forcefully to bear" on local, regional, national and international levels. The local area, in particular, he said, "will be the laboratory of the urban studies program."

Father Hesburgh's letter appeared in the November 10 issue of the Chicago Sun Times and was published in Education for those who are interested in the field of urban studies.

The reaction of this group, which stood to lose most in the current turmoil, ranged from enthusiastic endorsement by Hunter to bitter denunciation by Collins.

The people who work in the Student Union are volunteers, and Collins went on, "we can't ask paid a big salary, do what we want, do it."

The decision was obviously not the best of all possible decisions, but zero is patently unfair.

Performing arts is topic of speakers

Well-known educators, Nancy McKeon, director of the University of Notre Dame's Department of Communication Arts, and Rosemary Dudas, associate professor of English at St. Mary's College, are slated to appear on the St. Mary's College campus during the final months of the school's 125th Anniversary. They will be guest speakers in a popular series, "Dialogue: Trends in Contemporary Education."

Trend: The current series, which lasts through mid-January, is "Utilizing the Performing Arts in a Civic Community: A Learning Experience." This emphasis will be upon the importance of utilizing the performing arts as an integral part of the educational process. Speakers and panel discussions will highlight the means of teaching students how to listen and what to listen for in order to get the most out of a performance.

The guest speakers and panel discussions throughout the course of the series have been scheduled to coincide with selected events of the Saint Mary's College Performing Arts series. Tickets for these functions may be purchased by non-students at the O'Loughlin Auditorium box office.

Art. Rambusch, director of the Early Learning Project at the New York Foundling Hospital and a widely acknowledged expert on the Montessori philosophy of teaching, will speak on October 19. His topic will be "The Montessori Paradox."

On October 22, Maurice Belanger will speak on "The Piaget School: A Theory of Knowledge." Belanger, recently named Professor Agretto at the University of Montreal, was formerly at Harvard.

Professor Edward Fischer, of the University of Notre Dame's Department of Communication Arts, will speak on the keynote theme of "Trends in Performing Arts."" He will present the November 7/9 symposium on the topic, featuring Karl Menninger, S.J. Hayakawa, Meyer Schapiro, David Cribb, Michael Butler, Paul Ruscio, Robert Jakobson, and Roland Wells. There will also be meetings preceding the October 9 presentation of "The Bellewicz," a musical drama of the history of the black people, and the November 2 presentation of "Moliere's "The Misanthrope."

Robert Spright of Kent, England, who will direct the performance of "Romeo and Juliet," which will be presented in early November, will be the featured speaker on November 19. His topic will be "Literature: The Story or the Art."

On December 3, 1969, preceding the presentation of Norman Drolin, Joos' special Fest--I Was on Tap in July and 8, Emma Kountz, concert pianist and visiting lecturer at Johns Hopkins University in 1968, will discuss religious music in the church. Her topic will be "Tradition Trivia Triumph in Contemporary Church Music."

"TV: Who Cares?" will be the subject of Curtis W. Davis, director of cultural programs, National Educational Television, on December 10.

The final dialogue on January 14, 1970, will precede the January 17 performance of the Performing Folk Singers at the final meeting of the group on January 21, attendees will be asked for a written evaluation of the lecture series as a learning experience.

All persons interested and involved in education are invited to attend the free sessions. Meetings will be held on the campus on Wednesday evenings, from 7:30 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. in the Madelver Memorial Building's Carroll Hall.

Grace students discuss govt.

The residents of Grace Tower met last week to approve a constitution and set up an interim tower government so that the hall until its members move into their rooms.

The meeting was held primarily to insure that Grace Tower would meet SLC requirements for hall parietal hours. The interim government met immediately following the meeting to arrange the presentation of Grace's constitution and government to the SLC review board. With the approval of the board, the women's visiting hours for Grace Hall will be as follows:

Friday 8-11 p.m. Saturday 12-1 p.m. Sunday 1-7 p.m.

The new temporary government also intends to begin work on the hall's judicial code.

Monetary reward for any student wishing to move on campus. Please contact Tom Gustafson, 243 B.P. 385-1-394.

Recall, if you will, the headline in Sunday’s South Bend Tribune: “Phipps, Brilliant Again, Passed Record For Average as Purdue Wins Wild Tilt.” That just about says what has to be said about Purdue’s victory over Notre Dame. The Fighting Irish failed to capitalize on their big first-half lead, and lost the game, 27-13.

Scrambler Phipps

must beat ND blitz

The Notre Dame Sailing team ended its season with a victory at Milwaukee, Wisconsin this weekend breasting by Marquette, Oasisko (Wls.), Wisconsin Lawrence (Wes.) and Iowa. Returning skippers are Ducho Doyle, Mike Morrissey, Chuck Taylor, and Bill McElroy led the entry this season. This victory capped a successful summer for members of the team. In June, ND represented the MidWest Collegiate Sailing Association in the North American Championships and placed eighth in the nation. Three ND boatmen took third in the team racing division. Team captain Doyle then left for the British Isles to sail with the US Collegiate All-American team in the annual British university regatta. The US team won 16 of 27 race matches.

A less tangible achievement is the fact that the last ND win over the Boilermakers was when Purdue featured a senior quarterback (1966, Griese). Phipps is a senior.

Sailors win regatta

The Midwest included Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois, and Wisconsin. The goal for the fall will be the Timme Anzton Memorial Cup Regatta held in Chicago on November 30. Notre Dame placed third in this nation-
