Vance Hartke attacks news media

by Mark Nelson

Vance Hartke, Democratic U.S. Representative from Indiana, spoke yesterday in the Memorial Library at Saint Mary's College on the inadequacies of the news media. Senator Hartke, sponsored by the Student Union National Moratorium Commission, attacked the news media for its shallow coverage in reporting local and national events.

Hartke said, "Radio, television, and newspaper coverage treat breaking news events as one world view an iceberg: the underlying part of the story, which is the most important part, is left unnoticed. The media reports only the obvious details of the story, without giving any reasons or background.

Hartke also challenged the type of news stories that are "brought us to our knees..." He said that due to the media, "we are forced to see things that we do not wish to see. News media output is like being trapped in a bear's three times a day.

The Senator criticized local media for "hiding under the umbrella," and said it should be used more in the area of local events.

Hartke, an advocate of peace in Vietnam since 1965, commented on the upcoming Viet Nam Moratorium. Hartke said, "I think the Moratorium is just another part of the total opposition against the war.

"However, in a war which the President cannot said gain control of his own administration, the Moratorium is a good way to get a hearing and attention for the items, and therefore, as long as it remains non-violent, has a very worthwhile purpose.

Hartke went on to say that "it is impossible to see victory of any kind in Viet Nam while we still support dishonorable dice in the Vietnam War.

Senator Hartke, who saw the withdrawal of Lyndon Johnson from the presidency long before it was announced, predicted that "the Republic will not re-elect a President," and said the probable prime Democrat candidates would be Senators Muskie and McCarthy, and Hubert Humphrey.

(Continued on page 2)

U.S.-Russia closing gap

by Tim Westman

Will the two world giants - the United States and the Soviet Union - eventually come together? Is there any real hope for global peace? If so, what kind? These were some of the questions posed and answered last weekend by Dr. E. Mosely of Indiana University. Dr. Mosely cited reasons for the current "thaw" in the air as combat fatigue from the tension, cost, and risk of continual arming; for a single, overall solution to global strife; for the fear of nuclear catastrophe; and for concern over alliances that no longer provide protection.

In Mosely's opinion, more could be done to further the slowly developing friendship which is now underway. Foremost among them would be the actual trade between the two countries and an exchange program involving Russian and American citizens.

Windows smashed by explosives

by Tom Bornholdt

Several campus windows were smashed by explosives over the weekend. It was revealed yesterday afternoon by Director of Security, Arthur Pears.

Four windows in Badin and nine in the library were destroyed by a powerful pocket-sized explosive known as M80. The M80 had a lengthy fuse and was taped to the windows before the explosion. Another was taped to the window of a maid's car. The M80 exploded just at the moment the maid was approaching the car to get in.

Though no one has been hurt by any of these explosions, Director Pears warned that anyone in the room during such detonation could be badly mangled by the razor sharp glass shards. The M80 blew a basketball-sized hole in the windows, twisted and tore the Venetian blinds, and showered the room with glass splinters.

"The guy who did it would have to be out of his damn mind," said Pears concerning the bomber. Asked of the possibility of a M80 detonating in the midst of a crowd or thrown at a student, Pears answered, "That thing could blow off someone's leg.

Director Pears admitted that he had no leads on the culprit at yet.

Anyone having information concerning these bombings is asked to contact the campus security force.

However, there were fewer incidents of vandalism to the campus yesterday, according to Pears. Destruction to school property was also considerably less than the weekend before.

In a news conference held before the speech, Hartke said he would vote against any reconfirmation of Judge Chauncey Haysworth to the U.S. Supreme Court. Hartke said to another Senator, Birch Bayh, who has been leading the opposition to the nomination.

Hartke told the news conference that the nomination had 'no purpose.'

"I think the Moratorium is just another part of the total opposition against the war."

The Indiana senator also said: "There will be more in-flight collisions such as the Sept. 9 crash near Indianapolis which killed 83 persons. He said air traffic controllers are working under too much stress and strain.

The largest increase in unemployment for one month since 1964 "is the bitter fruit of the Nixon Administration's misguided economic policies."

The Student Union National Moratorium Commission has also scheduled talks by Edward Teller and New York Senator Charles Goodell in the near future.

Goodell will speak Friday at 3:00 in the Stepan Center, and Teller, developer of the hydrogen bomb, will speak October 16 at 8:00 in the library auditorium.

Classes scheduled at Saint Mary's

Mags. John J. McGrath, presi- dent of Saint Mary's College, issued a statement yesterday concerning the school's policy on the Vietnam war moratorium October 15th.

"On October 7, 1969, the Academic Affairs Council of Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Indiana, received two stu­ dent petitions. Two hundred and fifty-three students were forced to see things that we do not wish to see. News media output is like being trapped in a bear's three times a day.

The Senator criticized local media for "hiding under the umbrella," and said it should be used more in the area of local events.

Hartke, an advocate of peace in Vietnam since 1965, commented on the upcoming Viet Nam Moratorium. Hartke said, "I think the Moratorium is just another part of the total opposition against the war.

"However, in a war which the President cannot gain control of his own administration, the Moratorium is a good way to get a hearing and attention for the items, and therefore, as long as it remains non-violent, has a very worthwhile purpose.

Hartke went on to say that "it is impossible to see victory of any kind in Viet Nam while we still support dishonorable dice in the Vietnam War.

Senator Hartke, who saw the withdrawal of Lyndon Johnson from the presidency long before it was announced, predicted that "the Republic will not re-elect a President," and said the probable prime Democrat candidates would be Senators Muskie and McCarthy, and Hubert Humphrey.

(Continued on page 2)

The nature of a college to be the locus of controversy and debate; it should not engage in tactics designed to further either side of a particular debate.

"In view of the above con­ sideration and after consultation with the Student Affairs Coun­ cil, the Academic Affairs Coun­ cil has adopted the following policy in regard to the Vietnam Moratorium:

1. On the 15th of October, the meeting facilities of Saint Mary's College will be made available (subject to the usual conditions of order) for the use of faculty, students, and their guests for such discussions as they desire.

The classes at Saint Mary's College will meet as scheduled. As stated in the college bulletin, responsibility for attendance rests with the student and ab­sences on October 15 will be treated in a normal manner.

Fr. McGrath

The Student Life Council has a meeting scheduled for 4:15 this afternoon to discuss a proposal concerning the Vietnam Moratorium.

The fear that the Council would not have a quorum to di­ scuss the bill was dispelled Tues­ day by SLC Chairman Prof. James Massey. Massey stated that mem­ bers of all three of the groups on the Council agreed to meet and make extreme efforts to attend the meeting. Some of the faculty and administrative representa­ tives had promised to forgo other commitments to attend the meeting in order to insure that the bill could be discussed.

SLC meets today

Prof. Massey issued a new statement yesterday in light of Father Walsh's statement about the University's attitude on the Moratorium.

In it Massey said that there was a distinct possibility of a lack of a quorum today since some members of the Council had informed him that they felt that Father Walsh's statement on the necessity for SLC action on Roickle's bill. They felt that they would then forgo their earlier commitments.
GO program is beginning second phase

by Janet Renner

The Group Orientation (GO) Program inaugurated this year for Saint Mary's College freshmen is entering its second phase. Junior Lonnie Donahue, chairman of the GO Program, states that its first purpose was to provide content and new contacts for freshmen—literally telling where the library was. Now she would like to see groups getting to know each other better and dealing with any and all aspects of college life.

On Sunday, September 14, group members got together for the first, and in a few cases final, time for a field day. Most groups met for other social activities such as painting posters with Dillon Hall for the Northwestern pep rally, or playing touch football with Cavanaugh.

Also arranged were meetings on academic information. Sister Jeanne Finski-Academic Dean, Sister Immaculata-Dean of Students, and Mrs. Mary Martucci-Director of Counseling, held conferences with students. They presented the required courses for a degree and information on the grade average needed to make the dean's list, pass or fail. Pam Carey, Academic Affairs Commissioner, included information on pass/fail courses and the Scholastic Course Evaluation Booklet. Many students considered them a wasteful repetition.

Pam Carey states that each group will have to choose its own course. She adds: "This year is experimental, and we're learning from our mistakes for next year." As an example, since the functions of senior student advisors and group leaders often overlap, there will be no 2001 college students will have to decide soon whether to remain together at all.

Dr. Mosely cites ABM argument

(last page of 1 page)

"In general," he said, "limitations on the Soviet Union's side rather than ours inhibit meaningful progress in these areas.

The Columbia political scientist also offered a novel idea in support of an Anti-Ballistic Missile system for both world powers. "If we could get effective ABM's on both sides, we could start concentrating on scaling down offensive weaponry," he commented.

In concluding, Mosely warned that peace in terms of "no conflict whatsoever" is unlikely. "Conflicts, however, are likely," he said, "but we must try to limit and contain them. Detente is the best thing we have, so we must cherish it and try to make it meaningful and permanent."

Editor to speak

John Segenhalter, editor of the Nashville Tennessean, will speak at 8 p.m. Thursday (October 9) in the University of Notre Dame Memorial Library Auditorium.

HUNGRY? FOR A JUICY STEAK?

Half-price Offer

Now, through Oct. 14, this coupon lets you pay for a steak dinner at half-price when you have the first one at the regular low prices from $1.99 to $1.99. What a deal! Broiled to order, delicious.

Black Angus Steak House

1516 N. Ironwood Dr. South of downtown between South Bend Ave. & Edison Rd.

Gandhi's comrade relates experiences by Jinn Graff

Dr. C. Amiya Chakravarty, a former associate of Mahatma Gandhi spoke on his experiences with Gandhi and the non-violent approach Oct. 2nd in the library assembly room.

His topic was "The Relevance of Gandhi in the Modern Age: A Study in Non-Violent Techniques."

He began by explaining that Gandhi's genius consisted in the fact that he presented an approach to problems rather than answers to them. He believed that Gandhi didn't try to be a formidable dictator but instead tried to lead from "within." Gandhi admitted his mistakes because his primary goal was always to seek the truth.

Dr. Chakravarty said that Gandhi felt that once must become involved in life and in its problems. He pointed out that Gandhi often asked the question: "What did I do to make this happen?" and "What am I doing about it?"

The Professor of Philosophy at St. Mary's College, N.P. New Paltz, New York felt that pacifism was a necessary virtue in our time. Gandhi's philosophy said that Gandhi did not condemn ignorant laws but would try to make them. He could not change the evil in the world because he could not overcome that evil.

A panel discussion followed the speech. Each member expressed his thoughts on Gandhi and non-violence.

Mr. Jesse Dickenson, chairman of the Indian Civil Rights Committee pictured out that Dr. Martin Luther King, used Gandhi's methods extensively in the battle for black civil rights.

Another panel member, Notre Dame student Tim MacDonarry felt that Gandhi did things which seemed absurd in order to make people take a good look at themselves.

Dr. Bernard Nolling, associate Professor of History, who said that he is often called the devil's advocate, reminded the audience that force shapes foreign policy. He maintained that non-violence could only take effect in free societies such as the United States and the British Commonwealth nations. In a totalitarian nation, the movement would be quickly snuffed out. Christianity would not have survived if it had practiced non-violence, he said. "It remained in existence only because it was able to win wars against forces which tried to destroy it."

Dr. John Yoder of the Department of Theology felt that everyone was measuring relevance by its effectiveness whereas he understood it to mean integrity and responsibility.

The lecture and discussion were part of the India Week Program, sponsored by the India Association of Notre Dame. The coordinators of the event were Rev. Daniel O'Neil, C.S.C., Director of the Office of International Student Services, and by Dr. Charles McCarthy, Chairman of the Notre Dame Program in Non-Violence.

Student ideas sought for cafeteria by Dave Fromm

Edmund Price, Director of Food Services at Notre Dame, outlined yesterday some of the changes he would like to see in the dining halls. Mr. Edmund Price

Father Harvey is named to assist Vice President

The Rev. Arthur S. Harvey, C.S.C., former joint head of the Notre Dame-Saint Mary's Theater, has been named an administrative assistant to the Rev. Edmund P. Joyce, C.S.C., executive vice president of Notre Dame.

Father Harvey continues on leave of absence from his academic duties. He recently concluded a sabbatical leave during which he visited a number of drama departments and repertory companies in the United States and England. A veteran of 40 years in theater work both as a layman and a priest, he produced nearly 50 campus plays and musicals since he was named director of Notre Dame's University Theater in 1954 and joint head of the Notre Dame Saint Mary's Theater 12 years later.

A 1947 graduate of Notre Dame, Father Harvey was ordained in 1951 and received his M.A. on theater from Catholic University of America two years later.

"77 Far convertible
Excellent condition must sell $3195 or best offer
Phone 324-6639.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1969 PAGE 3

THE OBSERVER

REDISCOVER
TAPE RECORDING

"Norelco"
150
REGULAR $40.99
Now at Charlie's
$59.97
-custom make to
TYPE YOUR BANK CARD!

NEW OPEN DAILY 8-6
Sat. 9A.m. to 8p.m.
PH. 287-7218
774 Lincoln Way East

A New Leather Fashion
British Tan
...by Douglas
SPORTS FOR MEN

REACH EXCELLENCE
IN EYEGlasseS

FOR THE FINEST EYEGlasses AND CONTACT LENSES

M ost s t y le s $9.99–$17.99

SIZEs 61/4–14

British Tan... the softly flecked fashion leather that complements the lighter tones and colors of today's colorful styles.
Distinctive. Contemporary. A MUST for the coordi­ ated wardrobe. British Tan... by Douglas.

CHECKS WELCOME WITH I.D.

BECKER'S MEN'S SHOES
108 S. Michigan St.

NOTE DAME BOOKSTORE
Disarmament

The pre-amble to the Soviet-American draft on an agreement to limit the spread of nuclear arms on the seabed states that the hope that the agreement will be a first step toward general and complete disarmament.

We hope those words are not shallow. If one is to be totally realistic about the situation, however, the chances for such an agreement are probably very slight since nations are usually reluctant to take a major step which involves such risks.

Men have always been willing to take risks. Columbus's voyage was a gigantic risk. The lack of marijuana has made it easier for pushers to sell people on the idea of marijuana. The Mexican government's search and seizure operations along the Mexican American border to cut off the flow of narcotics into the United States may prove to have detrimental effects which more than outweigh the benefits of cutting down the narcotics flow.

We hope that immediate efforts are made by the United States and the Soviet Union to reach an agreement on general disarmament.

'Operation Intercept'

"Operation Intercept" the U.S. government's search and seizure operation along the Mexican American border to cut off the flow of narcotics into the United States may prove to have detrimental effects which more than outweigh the benefits of cutting down the narcotics flow.

Mexicans who cross the border each day to work in American cities such as El Paso are beginning to express their dissatisfaction with the checking procedures. Crossing the Mexican-American border, normally a quick and routine matter, has now been turned into an elaborate process with long lines of visitors on both sides of the border. Mexicans are trying to devise ways of protesting the checking procedures and relations between the two countries, normally on an amiable basis, are beginning to deteriorate.

Mexicans who spend hundreds of dollars daily in American cities are planning a boycott of American shops. A movement to boycott the stores of El Paso is already underway. Mexican workers are thinking of organizing mass sick days in which they will refuse to cross the border to go to work.

Situations on this side of the border are not any better. The cut back in the lack of marijuana has made it easier for pushers to sell people on "hard" drugs, or chemicals, which can be very dangerous to a young or inexperienced user.

We feel the government should examine all of its policy on drugs, especially "operation intercept." We feel that control of the drug flow is not worth straining relations between the United States and Mexico. We feel that a thorough investigation should be made of the actual effects of marijuana and the penalties against users. Many have claimed that the drug presents less a risk, as was the walk on the moon. Almost every business venture is a risk of its own.

The government also needs to focus its attentions on providing help for drug addicts. Educational and counseling centers should be established nationwide to disseminate information about different types of narcotics, their relative dangers and their proper uses.

Special attention should be given to individuals who feel that they want to stop using drugs but are forced to continue for psychological or physical reasons.

---

Tim O'Mellia

Garbage

Despite Vice President for Student Affairs Father McCarragher's pronouncements that The Juggler was only "temporarily suspended," even the poor, misguided editors and writers of Alumnus magazine believe the contrary.

Alumnus published almost monthly during the school year by the University for the alumni, carried a story on page eight of the September issue under the headline "Juggler shut down." The article began: "The Juggler, a magazine of the arts founded at ND in 1947, was closed during the summer by the Vice Presidents' Council." The story went on to quote extensively from Father Hesburgh's letter to Richard Moran, Bill Mitchell, and Michael Patrick O'Connor.

My, there were a lot of people laboring under the wrong impression early in September. It's good to know that Father Mac, with a little encouragement from the SLC, was able to clear up the situation.

Little Known Facts Of Little Use:

Michael Patrick O'Connor, editor of the University's chshire cat publication, The Juggler, was actually once a biology major until he found out that writing poetry was just as incomprehensible as writing out the scientific names for RNA or DNA.

While a freshman arts and letters jock, Scholastic Editor Richard Moran actually took a science course—required, of course—"One—Third" Danbery Chemistry Course For Arts And Letters Jocks. It was widely believed that Daneby hated arts and letters jocks and so enjoyed flunking one-third of the class each semester. It is shocking that I think Moran got an A at least one of the semesters. But, we're happy Rich has finally seen the light, aren't we?

Phil McKenna, of the simon-pure heart, once committed a sin. Two years ago, during a Spanish final when it became clear that the language we had studied and the language on the exam were not the same, the entire class decided to invite the Prof out for a night on the town. The very night, most of the class took a lonely, foreign-born Spanish instructor out and got him sloshed. Checking around later, we could not discover anyone who had participated in the little foray with a grade less than B.

Tom Ehrbar once wrote a news story. Rick Libowitz was once a freshman and was not born with a mustache.

John McKay, Jimmy Joon, Bob Chandler and Clarence Davis will once again show Notre Dame the quicker the better. Texas is better than Ohio State.

Among the activities scheduled for October 15 are a rally, a co-celebrated Mass, a teach-in by the theology undergraduates and a continuous free showing of an anti-war film made in the 1830's. All activities will take place during the day.

After checking with those who should know, we have discovered that the day's closing event will absolutely not be a weiner and marshmallow roast held by the light of the ROTC building.

And hello, Don Hyens, wherever you are.
The saga of rock 'n' roll

by Mike Kendall

Many critics of the early Beatles dismissed their music as a throwback to 1956 rock. Others simply called them a passing fad. A reaction at first was similar to the reaction to Presley in earlier years. But there was something different about the Beatles. Although their music was very much in a new style, there was something essentially different, even in the early recordings.

As Beatle John Lennon put it, "It isn't rhythm and blues, and it's not exactly rock and roll. Our music is just -- well, our music."

The teens of the nation took Lennon at his word, and the Beatles' music took shape.

A million record sales is considered reason for getting into the music business. But early Beatles recordings were guaranteed one to two million in sales even before release. Like a shot in the arm to a sagging rock industry, the music from England brought new life to rock 'n' roll. (With the exception of the Beach Boys, the American rock scene on a popular level was devoid of anything new.)

The Rolling Stones, the Dave Clark Five, Petula Clark -- the American scene was flooded with British groups. In fact, during one six-month period from 1964 to 1965, some 80 per cent of the tunes in the top twenty in this country were written or performed by British groups.

The Beatles were filling the void left by the older Presley. Teens across the country had a new idol to turn to -- the Beatles.

The OTHER SIDE

While the Beatles were storming the country, from another direction, two other dominant musical forces were beginning in the American pop music industry.

One of these has come to be called "soul music" or simply "soul." People like Ray Charles were the force behind this music.

It started some time before the two of us, and we descended the stairs to the McCandless Hall desk to try to get our guests, only to be engulfed there by a cloud of panic, hysteria, chaos, and other manifestations of apprehension and nervousness.

It seemed that 7:00 (did you notice the exaggeration, purely for effect?) visiting girls (variously designated as Barat bombers, MSU coeds, hometown bionics, high school friends, visiting little sisters, and strange strangers who happened to arrive with any of the above) were about to descend on the hollowed halls of our erstwhile serene dorm. (If you managed to read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you read that last sentence in one breath, you)

We felt that we should have expected this vast influx of The Friends of SMC as soon as we stepped on the purple carpet. The students, which read "McCandless Motor Lodge," going up over the front door.

Meanwhile a few words of comfort to the harried house mother, we departed to collect sheets for our guests, catch a few minutes of class, wash our hair, and, in general, prepare for the mad social whirl of another Friday night at Notre Dame. It was somewhere between being put on eyeliner and brushing our hair that we heard the ominous rumble of approaching music. But as we were safe within our own room, we formed no very clear impression of the magnitude of the invasion.

It was only later, at 3:30 a.m. It was a good party, that we returned to our room to find a roommate, four guests, and ourselves, all eyeing the beds (of which there were two) with a mixture of blood-thirsty determination and desperate hope. There was a short lull before the storm -- we checked the third-floor lounge in the hope of finding a few seats on the carpet there. Alas, the idea died a quick death as we entered the lounge and stumbled over twelve sleeping bodies and an empty chair.

With fire in our eye, we went back to the room, made a dive for the bed, and joined the fray. When the dust settled, two guests had managed to grab the beds, and our roommate and myself had claimed mattresses on the floor. We all settled down for a peaceful, if somewhat crowded, night, complete even, by some miracle, with sheets, blankets, and/or spread sheets.

Unfortunately, we're sure they had not been here than four or five a.m. when a straying guest returned stealthily to our room. We heard the door open as it banged gently against our head, where we lay crunching on our mattress on the floor. (Did we mention how easy it is not to fit six sleeping bodies into a room five feet x five feet?) Tenderly, we suggested that she might like to freeze in her tracks 'til the light came on, as we didn't want to be kicked, squashed, or mauled in our bed.

Well, the light came on, somehow causing our stray guest to lose her balance.

With due grace, she stepped into one sleeping guest (who woke rather suddenly), fell across her bed into a chair, and knocked the chair green across the room, which hit the innocent pole lamp which promptly fell to the floor, hitting our roommate on its way to the ground.

We can find words to tell you how pleased we were? Probably, but the Observer wouldn't print them.

But we have one more thing to say: if we, at any time, promised to keep your HTH, sister, mother, or cousin in our room this year, FORGET IT, Charley! Howard Johnson's on the right up the road...
Serving a function
Editor:
I have just read the account of Father Hesburgh's meeting with student leaders and would like to offer the following thoughts in connection with the student demand to examine the University portfolio. Let me make three general points.
First, as I have said in the past, the linkage of American industry to the Viet Nam war is so vast that the isolation of a single or select group of companies for punitive treatment of the kind that Mr. McKenna is suggesting not only is discretionary but also misses the real target. If I understand him correctly he would have the University withdraw its investments from companies which "serve a function" of exploiting colored people or of furthering the Viet Nam war. But how does one measure the link of a company, such as Dow, to an issue such as Viet Nam? Here the link is somewhat visible because Dow manufactures napalm for battlefield use, and napalm conjures up terrible images in the mind of man.

The visibility of a link ("serving a function"); however, is no measure of its magnitude. Actually, there are hundreds of companies in this country which serve steps toward preserving the war to a far greater extent than Dow. That is why I have regarded the isolation of Dow for special treatment by university students as unfair and discriminatory. Under Mr. McKenna's reasoning, certain producers of food and clothing could be regarded as equally culpable for the continued prosecution of the Viet Nam war. For that matter, why not apply Mr. McKenna's theory to companies which buy Dow's products and therefore keep Dow in business? Why shouldn't the University, under the same theory, withdraw its investments from companies which invest in Dow? Perhaps students should be asked to articulate a consistent philosophy of boycott before they demand from the University a philosophy of investment. For my part, I would find either an impossible exercise in moral calculus.

Second, students should remember that the power, influence, and maneuverability of many companies with strong links to the federal system is severely limited. Many industries depend on the government for survival. The U.S. government is the biggest buyer in the world, buying up to 70% of the products of some corporations. As might be expected, the leverage of the federal government over these companies is enormous. We remember how Kennedy brought the steel industry to heel in 1962; as we remember how Johnson bludgeoned General Motors with some justification — the aluminum industry into conformity with presidential price guidelines some years later. One may legitimately wonder how free some corporations really are in their activities on multiple negotiations with government. In many cases, too, defense (or war) contracts are the result of myriad community and political pressures. Even politicians should have special representation on the Board.

Second, McKenna desires full disclosure of University endowment investments so that those investments in companies connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of people of color may be properly identifiable. Much of the income, of course, used for basic University operating costs, contributes perhaps less than one-third of the amount necessary to run the University. The primary source of the University's income is the tuition furnished by parents. This money, too, may be tainted, hence it seems only fair that the jobs and all of the investments of the fathers of those who desire such University disclosures should be made public. The same demands and penalties directed towards University endowments should also be directed toward students. If the fathers of these students have jobs or investments connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of the colored races of Africa, such givens should be determined and equal justice applied to all offsprings.

Sincerely,

Prof. J.F. McLaure, English Professor

Letters to the editor

Editor, SBP McKenna's proposals to Father Hesburgh are of great importance. I think he is overly modest when he confesses that he is "in capable of representing everyone in the University except the black students." It seems to me he represents them commendably and eloquently. If there is logic in his suggestion that those he has written to the Board of Trustees should be given a special representation with full voting and speaking privileges, it should be pointed out there is probably another group that he does not well represent—the ROTC students. These perhaps too, in all logic, and logic, should have special representation on the Board.

Second, McKenna desires full disclosure of University endowment investments so that those investments in companies connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of people of color may be properly identifiable. Much of the income, of course, used for basic University operating costs, contributes perhaps less than one-third of the amount necessary to run the University. The primary source of the University's income is the tuition furnished by parents. This money, too, may be tainted, hence it seems only fair that the jobs and all of the investments of the fathers of those who desire such University disclosures should be made public. The same demands and penalties directed towards University endowments should also be directed toward students. If the fathers of these students have jobs or investments connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of the colored races of Africa, such givens should be determined and equal justice applied to all offsprings.

Sincerely,

Prof. J.F. McLaure, English Professor

The Natural Wonder "Kiss Collection"

If you collected one kiss for each shade of Natural Wonder "Un-Lipstick" you wear... you could have yourself one sweet little collection. Twenty-four "Un-Lipsticks"... the sheerest, clearest, shiniest lip colors ever. They're bare, but the color is there.

Available at:
SAIN'T MARY'S COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

IN CONCERT
BRAND X
AND
AMERICA'S STOP

LITTLE THEATER, SMC
Saturday, October 11, 1969
8:00pm - 11:00pm

Tickets: $1.50 per person
Available in the SMC Dining Hall and at the door.

Sponsored by:
Student Service Organization of St. Mary's College

Student Union Social Commission

BLOOD, SWEAT, & TEARS

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1969
8:00 PM

Athletic and Convocation Center

SPECIAL REPRESENTATION

Editor, SBP McKenna's proposals to Father Hesburgh are of great importance. I think he is overly modest when he confesses that he is "in capable of representing everyone in the University except the black students." It seems to me he represents them commendably and eloquently. If there is logic in his suggestion that those he has written to the Board of Trustees should be given a special representation with full voting and speaking privileges, it should be pointed out there is probably another group that he does not well represent—the ROTC students. These perhaps too, in all logic, and logic, should have special representation on the Board.

Second, McKenna desires full disclosure of University endowment investments so that those investments in companies connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of people of color may be properly identifiable. Much of the income, of course, used for basic University operating costs, contributes perhaps less than one-third of the amount necessary to run the University. The primary source of the University's income is the tuition furnished by parents. This money, too, may be tainted, hence it seems only fair that the jobs and all of the investments of the fathers of those who desire such University disclosures should be made public. The same demands and penalties directed towards University endowments should also be directed toward students. If the fathers of these students have jobs or investments connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of the colored races of Africa, such givens should be determined and equal justice applied to all offsprings.

Sincerely,

Prof. J.F. McLaure, English Professor

The Natural Wonder "Kiss Collection"

If you collected one kiss for each shade of Natural Wonder "Un-Lipstick" you wear... you could have yourself one sweet little collection. Twenty-four "Un-Lipsticks"... the sheerest, clearest, shiniest lip colors ever. They're bare, but the color is there.

Available at:
SAIN'T MARY'S COLLEGE BOOKSTORE

IN CONCERT
BRAND X
AND
AMERICA'S STOP

LITTLE THEATER, SMC
Saturday, October 11, 1969
8:00pm - 11:00pm

Tickets: $1.50 per person
Available in the SMC Dining Hall and at the door.

Sponsored by:
Student Service Organization of St. Mary's College

Student Union Social Commission

BLOOD, SWEAT, & TEARS

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 11, 1969
8:00 PM

Athletic and Convocation Center

SPECIAL REPRESENTATION

Editor, SBP McKenna's proposals to Father Hesburgh are of great importance. I think he is overly modest when he confesses that he is "in capable of representing everyone in the University except the black students." It seems to me he represents them commendably and eloquently. If there is logic in his suggestion that those he has written to the Board of Trustees should be given a special representation with full voting and speaking privileges, it should be pointed out there is probably another group that he does not well represent—the ROTC students. These perhaps too, in all logic, and logic, should have special representation on the Board.

Second, McKenna desires full disclosure of University endowment investments so that those investments in companies connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of people of color may be properly identifiable. Much of the income, of course, used for basic University operating costs, contributes perhaps less than one-third of the amount necessary to run the University. The primary source of the University's income is the tuition furnished by parents. This money, too, may be tainted, hence it seems only fair that the jobs and all of the investments of the fathers of those who desire such University disclosures should be made public. The same demands and penalties directed towards University endowments should also be directed toward students. If the fathers of these students have jobs or investments connected with the "war effort" or the exploitation of the colored races of Africa, such givens should be determined and equal justice applied to all offsprings.

Sincerely,

Prof. J.F. McLaure, English Professor
Co-exchange students render opinion

by Don Ruane

In a recent survey, approximately fifteen students involved in the Notre Dame-St. Mary's co-exchange program were asked to give their opinions on four points. The students expressed the following views on the program in general, their classes, transportation and improvements they would like to see.

The general consensus among those interviewed was that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.

Larry Byrnes summarized the consensus among persons interviewed that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.

Larry Byrnes summarized the consensus among persons interviewed that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.

Larry Byrnes summarized the consensus among persons interviewed that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.

Larry Byrnes summarized the consensus among persons interviewed that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.

Larry Byrnes summarized the consensus among persons interviewed that the program is good because it presents both male and female views on a variety of subjects. Larry Byrnes summarized the idea by saying "... any kind of education that isn't based on co-education is a farce because we are educated intellectually, should be educated socially just to habituate ourselves with the normal world."

Opinions varied as to which institution has the better facilities. Professors were described as "really good" and in other cases as "boring." One student suggested that more classes be held at Notre Dame "so we could have the better professors and the girls." Nick Peluse feels the program is good because it offers the facilities of both schools to the students. Everyone felt the program should be expanded.

The students presented several views on their classes. Several feel the classes are challenging and stimulating while others are disappointed. Those pleased said that the different views of the women and how the course is presented make the classes worthwhile. Those disappointed point to boring material, poor professors, and the high ratio of men to women and vice versa in some of the classes. The high ratio may cause the smaller group to be less active in discussion according to one student. Smaller classes and better professors were recommended by several persons to improve the classes. All of the students interviewed felt that the shuttle bus is providing adequate service but several improvements could be made. Over-crowding was one of the major complaints. Suggestions offered ranged from adding an extra bus to closer co-ordination of bus and class schedules. Other suggestions were to reduce the number of runs to two an hour and add another but after four-thirty. If the number of runs were reduced, the money saved could be used to finance the shuttle after six-o'clock.
On Tuesday night, October 14, the Indiana Pacers of the American Basketball Association will play their opening game with the Pittsburgh Panthers in the Atlantic Conference. General Admission tickets are $1.00 and can be purchased through the Indiana Club. Members will sell tickets in the individual halls until three o'clock. Three tickets must be purchased at the ACC box office.

The team is looking forward to defending the championships in the ABA's Eastern Division (they lost out to Oak- land in the league championship last season). Last season, Indiana placed two players, Bob Netolicky and Dan Lewis, on the All-Star Team. Daniels was the only unanimous choice on the All-Pro Team, and Netolicky was the only one to receive honorable mention. This year, despite Daniels', the ABA's Most Valuable Player, is ranked by 6-9 Netolicky and 6-5 Roger Brown, a second team All-Pro, at the forward posts. Daniels was voted the MVP in three separate polls. The victorious Pacers were the Basketball Team of the Year, and the Bally Sports Press, with the honor. The guard position could give the Pacers trouble. Although Fred Lewis starred at one center, the other, Blair, is just 6-0 Denver, and is not the only player who knocked in 76 runs or more. It's probably a coincidence that the Baltimore Orioles and Tommie Agee of the Mets both had 42 home runs last year.

But while Agee is one of the Mets' top two hitters, Cleon Jones was one of the Mets' top three batters. As a hitter, Cleon Jones is one of a quartet of top Orioles hitters. The club also has Frank Robinson, Brooks Robinson, and Boog Powell.

It's a logical explanation why the oddsmakers, who gave you the Baltimore Colts by 17 points over the New York Jets, list the Orioles as an 8-5 favorite to win the Eastern division of the American League. The players don't have a player who hit more than 26 home runs this season and their leading RBI producer had just 76. The Baltimore Orioles had four players who hit 26 or more home runs and four players who knocked in 76 runs or more.

As matters now stand, the Orioles figure the '69 Mets are pretty much like the '66 Dodgers, since you can't win everything. The New York Mets of Los Angeles coming out three years ago merely thumbed through that part of the record book which said the Dodgers were the best.

The Dodgers had a couple of pitchers that year whose names you may remember, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale. They also had eight outfielders, Bob Fontaine and Donn Clendenon, and two middle infielders. Jim Palmer remembers because he pitched against them in the World Series. Palmer figures that the Mets come out as the youngest pitcher ever to hurl a shutout in a World Series.

Palmer feels the same way most of the other Orioles do. He feels pitching is the Mets' strong suit, and he's right. The other Orioles also feel the Mets, like those '66 Dodgers, have only two real hitters, Cleon Jones and Tommie Agee, and that's where Jim Palmer and the rest of the Orioles are wrong.

Sometime football Earl Weaver, the Orioles' manager, will sit down with his players and go over the scouting report on the Mets. If Jim Russo, Al Kubski and Don Pries, the three Baltimore scouts who got up the report on the Mets, did their customary fine job then the Orioles will discover the Mets have more than two real hitters. They'll also find out they also have a guy like Ken Bowsher, who can peck and punch you dizzy, guys like Bud Harrelson, Jerry Grote and Steve Liddle who can ruin you when you never expect it, guys like Ron Swoboda and Donn Clendenon who can hurt you when you do expect it, and a guy like Art Shamsky who, on any given day, can kill you.

They also have a pitcher who's too much. He's Tom Seaver and when he saw his real-life professional game he actually appeared he wondered how he could possibly get any better. But Tom Seaver, the young right-handed pitcher, will be one of the pitchers on the Mets this year. Tom Seaver, the pitcher, is one of the reasons the Mets come out as the youngest pitcher ever to hurl a shutout in a World Series.

Palmer feels the same way most of the other Orioles do. He feels pitching is the Mets' strong suit, and he's right. The other Orioles also feel the Mets, like those '66 Dodgers, have only two real hitters, Cleon Jones and Tommie Agee, and that's where Jim Palmer and the rest of the Orioles are wrong.

Sometime football Earl Weaver, the Orioles' manager, will sit down with his players and go over the scouting report on the Mets. If Jim Russo, Al Kubski and Don Pries, the three Baltimore scouts who got up the report on the Mets, did their customary fine job then the Orioles will discover the Mets have more than two real hitters. They'll also find out they also have a guy like Ken Bowsher, who can peck and punch you dizzy, guys like Bud Harrelson, Jerry Grote and Steve Liddle who can ruin you when you never expect it, guys like Ron Swoboda and Donn Clendenon who can hurt you when you do expect it, and a guy like Art Shamsky who, on any given day, can kill you.