Seigenthaler: press keeps politicians honest

by Paul Gallagher

"The press helps keep politicians honest," John Seigenthaler, editor of the Nashville Tennessean, said last night in the literary auditorium, speaking to the media in justice and politics.

Mr. Seigenthaler's lecture was the third in a series of the News Media Conference presented by the Student Union Academic Commission. Seigenthaler, editor of the Tennessean, was a former aide to both the late President Kennedy and the late Senator Robert Kennedy.

Seigenthaler in commenting on Senator Vance Hartke's lecture Thursday in which the Senator criticized the role of the press in politics said he would examine "in a candid way" the other side of the issue.

In "John Seigenthaler: press keeps politicians honest," the First Amendment of the Constitution is explored. Because the press involves human beings it is fallible, he said. It makes mistakes everyday.

Newspapers, he added, are often disagree among themselves.

He cited the controversy over Nixon's appointment of Clement Haynsworth to the Supreme Court as an example.

Seigenthaler thought it ironic that "conservative" newspapers opposed the appointment of Justice Abe Fortas. "They are more similar to those pointed at Haynsworth," he said.

The pulse of the press, in his view, is somewhat "mythological." Since 1912, the majority of newspapers have endorsed Republican presidential candidates with the exception of Barry Goldwater in 1964.

"The press does have power," he added. It"is limited."

He said Pres. John Kennedy's selection of former Pres. John F. Kennedy as chief of staff, the decision to send the president's brother to the Caribbean, and "the reality of the challenge of his office and the unreality of his campaign promises," he added.

Tobin and Larry Pino to win one of Cavanaugh's two posts in the Senate. Tobin, who finished second, assumed the other post. The controversy arose when half president Steve Danzko refused to use the standardized student election ballot which had no line designated for write-in votes and instead used a ballot that did have such a line.

Representatives from balloted candidates Tobin and Pino explained that the single line for write-ins on the Cavanaugh ballot gave write-ins from across campus and hence put them at a disadvantage.

The vote, however, was validated after more than an hour's discussion before the election committee.

The Observer in an interview, admitted that Crawford "did a very good job; he had a very difficult assignment, and he would have done well under any circumstances." He commented, however, that Crawford's

His topic is "From Protest to Resistance," and the location of his talk will be announced later.

Another Service of Student Services Commission President of the Theology Majors concerning the apathy of the University community towards the Vietnam War when a Christian conscience, informed by the teachings of the Church, e.g. the Pastoral Constitution on "The Church in the Modern World" and the encyclical "Peace on Earth," should have gained clarity concerning the immorality of any continuance of this war. A positive statement of Christian morality is not, in fact, "tantamount to forcing participation in a protest on some who, in conscience, hold other views."

We further wish to express our full approval of the statement of the Theology Faculty and the Graduate Theological Union welcoming the statement of the University policy on the observance of the Vietnam Moratorium Day. We wish, however, to express our disappointment that the University, in its first official statement with regard to this matter, did not take a positive stand condemning the Vietnam War and fully supporting the intentions of the Moratorium. As the President of this University has often emphasized in the past, there are issues of basic human concern on which the University in general, and a Catholic University in particular, is not permitted to take a merely neutral stand.

Moratorium exams

The Observer has been approached by a number of students who want us to confirm or deny reports that certain professors are scheduling tests for next Wednesday, the day of the Vietnam Moratorium.

It would take an endless amount of time to check out each of the rumors. We hope that they will be brief enough to deal with, for if there is, indeed, a Moratorium, it would be ruinous to the student body, for it would mean a complete halt to the academic pursuits of the University. We believe not. We feel that there is only room for the use of pressure tactics at a great university. Free discussion, unrestricted inquiry, and the freedom to manifest the beliefs of one's conscience through legitimate means, should be characteristic of everything that happens at Notre Dame.

It is with this in mind that we called for the application of the true academic spirit in all events that transpire next Wednesday. We call for participation in the Moratorium in order to govern their actions with respect for the rights of individuals who will attend classes that day. We call on professors to respect the moral convictions of students who wish to participate in the Moratorium by not scheduling tests or quizzes for that day.

The argument will always be made that to not schedule tests on Wednesday would be to allow outside influences (the Moratorium) to affect the normal pursuals of the University. We believe not. One of the characteristics of a truly admirable curriculum is that it is flexible enough to provide for the examination of pressing topics which students are concerned with at the time of their concern.

A lot of students are restless about the war. It makes no sense to add to that restlessness by stifling students' opportunities to participate in the Moratorium.

Employee's rights

A group of University employees have issued an anonymous statement through WSND expressing their dissatisfaction with Father Walsh's statement about the Moratorium.

The fact that the University failed to say anything about their being able to participate in the day's activities has annoyed them. Spokesmen for the group claim that the lack of any statement about their protests on Wednesday suggests that they do not have moral right to follow the dictates of their consciences. Or rather, that the consciences of the faculty, students and administrators are more important than theirs.

We feel that Father Walsh's statement fails to mention employees for the simple fact that he failed to consider the fact that the University can not dictate the student's rights of individuals who will attend classes that day.

The case of employees is different in the sense that the University can not dictate the restlessness by stifling employees' opportunities to participate in the Moratorium.

Employee's feelings but understand the University's present position; but we think that the University should have come forward to respect the moral convictions of students who wish to participate in the Moratorium by not scheduling tests or quizzes for that day.

I think I would rather go crazy, but I do not know.

There is another thing. I don't trust Ivan Chen, in a dream I think, but I do not know. I remember that Ivan leaped upon me. I intendly following the row of blips, and he wrestled the white lightbulb from my grasp. My People had averted me to beware the tactics of Ivan, and to cherish and honor the lightbulb, defend it, even if it meant my life. But I had observed Ivan, secretly for a long while, and did not believe him capable of violence. Nor did I have the means to ward off his attacks if I wanted to. I don't have both arms fully outstretched he could not, could not quite accomplish the task. Infinite fraction short. It was all so amazing. I watched. Chen watched too and his thin lips, just for a moment seemed to curl into a vague, all-knowing smile. Then Chen returned to his matches and his shadows.

Within a matter of hours Ivan was sprawled out on the floor of the cave, whimpering in total exhaustion. That night Ivan handed over my lightbulb, apologized, promised no more of such nonsense, and I forgave him. The next day we watched blips again in tranquility and peace. Still I observed Ivan a little more carefully now, a little more secretly. This is a serious business. Very serious.

But all in all, I think, but I do not know, the relationship among the three of us, Ivan and I and Chen, is a workable one; if not the best of all possible relationships.

For my part: I will not complain or utter blasphemies at the People.

I will watch the blips, I will await the Hawk. I will ignore Chen and his mysterious ways.

I will tolerate Ivan, study him too. For one day, some day, if I don't go crazy, I may get bored. And I think, but I do not know, that my arms are just a fraction longer than his.

Laird's son protests

UPI Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird's son revealed yesterday he will march with other students next Wednesday, in a scheduled nationwide demonstration against the Vietnam War.

John Laird, who is studying to be a teacher at Eau Claire State University in Wisconsin, said he has informed his father about his plans.

"I thought it was great of him not to object," young Laird said.

Plans for the demonstration gathered momentum last week amid calls for total withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Senator Goodell, considered a conservative at the time of his appointment by Governor Nelson Rockefeller, was the first Repub-lican member of the U.S. Senate to openly and formally oppose the Vietnam policy of the Nixon administration. Speaking in sup-port of his Vietnam Disengage-ment Act, Goodell recently told the Senate: "This slaughter must cease. The prosecution of the war with American troops must be ended, not merely reduced." Proposing December 1, 1970 as a mandatory withdrawal date for all U.S. troops in Vietnam, the Senator went on to point out that his bill "Would end Congress' role as a passive bystander in a war effort directed by three Presi-dents," and "Give clear notice to the Thieu Government of South Vietnam that at the end of one year, they must assume the full burden of fighting.

Placing his personal commitment to peace above par-tisanship, Goodell faces possible opposition from Rockefeller, the man who appointed him, in his 1970 bid for re-election.

Harriers host invitational

The 1969 Notre Dame cross country team will open the season this afternoon by hosting the annual Notre Dame Invitational Meet at the Burke Memorial Golf Course. However, coach Alex Wilson would hesitate to make any real predictions on the outcome of this year's meet.

Wilson is unsure of his charges. He has only two returning men for the team, and fellow members of the team, and other members who may prove valuable to the Irish are Mike McCann, captain of the track team and second in the conference to the star backer Mike Donnelly and Vince Ambro, both seniors, and Robert Miller, a junior.

Coach Wilson's statement concerning the meet this afternoon are as follows. "Our injured men run well and if the freshmen go well, we could have a good season." Concerning the meet this afternoon are as follows.

The conference begins

After a horrendous weekend of upsets (Colorado over Indiana, New Mexico over Utah, and poor games), I move into conference play which, if anything, is harder to pick. There's no telling what doormat is going to shine when conference foes come to town.

Notre Dame over Army--by 24. Fun in the big city as the Irish get a chance to test some reserves.

Georgia over Mississippi--by 6. Quarterback Archie Manning rolled up 540 yards in total offense as Ole Miss lost to Alabama. He'll need at least that much to keep up with Georgia.

Simpson's pace. Defensive-minded Phil Currie may be too much for the Volunteers.

New Mexico over Utah--by 10. The conference game and Duffy won't be shellacked two weeks in a row.

Pitt over Navy--by 13. Delicious Panther fans will watch their team extend its winning streak to two.

Delaware over Hofstra--by 28. A "breather" for the 8th-ranked Blue Hens.

Michigan over Utah State--by 20. Purdue over Wisconsin--by 27. West Virginia over Texas Tech--by 31.
