President Nixon speaks on the war

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Nixon last night rejected demands for total, immediate U.S. withdrawal from Vietnam and asked the "great, silent majority" of American voters to support his careful course toward a settlement of the war.

"For the future of peace," he told a nationwide broadcast audience from his White House office, "precipitate withdrawal would be a disaster of immense magnitude."

In appealing for greater public support, the President took what he called "the unprecedented step" of disclosing a number of secret peace initiatives including a special letter to North Vietnam President Ho Chi Minh last July. Asking public copies of the private exchange, Nixon urged Hanoi to accept immediately for "an early end" to the war. Ho's reply, received on Aug. 30, three days before his death in Hanoi, "flatly rejected my initiative," the President said. Nixon, he said, made two separate private offers to Hanoi through ambassadors, once for a rapid settlement of the war. Other private initiatives were made in Paris, through the Soviet Union and through other secret channels, he said.

"The effect of all the public, private and secret negotiations that have been undertaken since the bombing halt a year ago and since this administration came into office on Jan. 20. can be summed up in one sentence -- no progress at all. Nixon said. He said the administration's policy had been made except agreement on the shape of the bargaining table. But Nixon, who picked the first anniversary of the bombing halt of North Vietnam for his major policy address, said there was good news as well as bad.

The University of Notre Dame and the South Vietnamese government, he said, had adopted a plan "for the complete withdrawal of all U.S. ground combat forces and their replacement by South Vietnamese forces on an orderly scheduled timetable." The President chose to divulge his timetable, saying he could not be "frozen" in a set schedule. But he disclosed that when he told the council last June "is more optimistic now," partly because of the "new currents of action" and the progress in training South Vietnamese forces to take over a greater share of the fighting.

Officials said an orderly withdrawal of all combat forces was planned first, leaving eventually to withdrawal of all American forces.

Nixon warned that if Communist infiltration or American casualties increase while the United States is trying to scale down the fighting, "it will be the result of a conscious decision by the enemy" that will be made by "strong and effective measures."

"I am asking for an administration with a policy of this nation to be dictated by the minority who hold it is in the interests of the war, can be turned to the great challenges of peace, a better life for all Americans, and for people throughout the world."

Then, the President said, "To you, the great silent majority of my fellow Americans, I ask for your support."

approval by Fr. Hesburgh, the Judicial Board would be ready to go into effect.

Later in the meeting student representative Rich Meckel presented a proposal which called for a six man tri-partite committee to be chosen from the members of the SLC for the purpose of examining the present "demonstration policy" at Notre Dame. Meckel said the committee was needed because the University policy on student demonstrations is stated in the Student Manual differed in many respects with the policy as outlined in Fr. Hesburgh's letter last year.

"This conflict has created a good deal of ambiguity on the question of where the University stands on this issue," he said. "I think that it's important that everyone know exactly what the University's position is."

The proposal was passed with only one negative vote and once again the formation of the committee was put off a week.

In a final piece of business McKenna presented a resolution which called for the elimination of the CAF. McKenna and the other student representatives argued that activities often aid in bringing a student back to a satisfactory academic and disciplinary standing.

There was considerable opposition to the proposal among the student representatives and the discussion was extended until the adjournment hour. It was stated that the resolution be tabled until next week.

Hall Presidents Council argues over financial proposition by Glen Conso

The Hall Presidents Council met last night, and wrangled for an hour and a half over a resolution to be presented to the Student Senate, concerning the budget. The discussion was prompted when Tom Suddes, Chairman of the HPC, read to the body, a copy of Joe Wemhoff's letter condemning the proposal of a new Hall.

At first the discussion centered around whether or not the HPC should officially sign Wemhoff's letter. Suddes conceded that there was "some valid points" but questioned whether or not it was expressed the HPC's feelings accurately. The point that was generally agreed upon was the fact that the debt should not be paid off in one year.

"It's stupid to cut everything this year and then give all the money back in the second year," Suddes commented.

Other off-campus Senator who was at the meeting, gave a presentation on Junior-Parent Weekend, was asked for his comments on the mood of the Senate.

"There was a lot of damage done by the Afro's at the end of Thursday night's meeting. The Senators realize that they have hurt a lot of people. A lot of Senators feel we have lost sight of what student government is supposed to be." As Rak was speaking, Tom Duffly, Secretary of the HPC, drew up a resolution for the presidents to discuss. His proposal called for the full funding of The Observer, An Tostal Weekend, the Sophomore Literary Festival, and the minorities. It also recommended the HPC's Coordinator of the Office of Campus Affairs to assist the HPC for a $2,000 deficit.

When asked about his feelings on the proposal, Rak said, "There are 20 votes on one Senate who want to go on $46,000. I feel that Heinz and Thaddeus could hold it there, but probably won't. He urged the HPC to show the Senate that some things should receive more funds this year.

Ron Martisota, Executive Coordinator of the HPC, stated that he felt that as much as $10,000 should be added to the budget. He then asked Rak who would be more free of debt, to have a Senator introduce a resolution calling for increased funds for An Tostal, or to present a resolution made by Suddes.

Rak urged the writing of a resolution. He cited several Senators who were planning to introduce resolutions favoring increased funds for The Sophomore Literary Festival, The Observer, The Contemporary Arts Festival, and An Tostal Weekend. He also felt that it would be more effective to have Suddes read the statement.

Debate then moved to the question of amendments to the original statement. The second amendment added the CAF to the list of organizations the HPC felt should get more money, and the third substituted the "Afro-American Society" for the "minority groups" that the original contained. The fully amended statement then passed by a 10 to 5 vote.

Ron Martisota then revealed that the HPC Board had conducted an investigation into the pastel procedures of each of its groups in 1944. He claimed that the Board had tried to do something about eliminating such-ins, but that Fr. Heimhotz had declared that the board lacked authority for such a move.

Seven halls were cited by Martisota as having enough parietal violations to warrant notice from the HLB and added that their hours were in danger of suspension. They are: Holy Cross, Dillon, Walsh, Alumni, Platten, Carroll, and Morrish.

"These halls have until Nov. 10 to correct their procedures."

The University of Notre Dame today appointed civil rights leader Bayed Rustin as the first Negro member of its Board of Trustees.

Rustin's career as a civil rights leader began in 1941, when he served as Race Relations Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation. He participated in the first Freedom Ride, designed to test laws outlawing discrimination in interstate travel, and later became director of A. Philip Randolph's Committee Against Discrimination in the Armed Forces.

A long-time friend of Martin Luther King, Rustin drew up the original statement. The President of the Fellowship of Reconciliation sponsoring programs to desegregate the Armed Forces.

In addition to his efforts on behalf of American blacks, Rustin led the American anti-apartheid movement of the 1940's. Rustin was imprisoned in 1942 as a conscientious objector. In 1953, he became Executive Director of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, the first of the Aldershot peace marches in England.

The Senate's Fiscal Responsibility

The Senate will meet tonight in order to finalize the student government budget. From all indications, it looks as if the finance committee's recommendations will be accepted with only minor changes.

If so, we feel that the Senate will be following an imprudent course of action. Many programs which are struggling to bring a breath of fresh air to the stale atmosphere which this butchering is being used in its proper context.

The Senate has already paid back its debt to the University—o r to look at it another way, the University has collected its money from the funds it received when the student-activities-fees were paid. The overspending that student government has already planned for in its new budget will have to take the form of another loan from the University. This new loan will have to be paid back next year.

Look at it this way. The proposed budget already provides for a new debt of approximately $14,000. The budget is now close to $60,000. Next year receipts from the activities fee will be approximately $96,000. Subtracting $14,000 to pay off this year's debt leaves about $82,000 for student government to work with. That means student government will have to figure out how they can spend $22,000 more next year than they are spending this year. We feel that they are going to have a hard time figuring out where to spend it since many organizations might come close to going out of business this year because of the budget cuts.

Why not prorate the repayment of the debt over two years? Student government could easily incur a $20,000 to $25,000 debt this year and pay it back next year, while balancing the budget. We feel that this is the path that students should encourage their senators to follow.

The Senate must pause and consider what kind of damage it is doing to the various clubs and organizations whose monies they have slashed far below the requested amount. The effects are almost beyond comprehension. Many, many people are devoting long hours to the success of these various organizations. Many, many people are devoting long hours to the success of these various projects. Most do it without compensation. Their prime motivation is the pride in their accomplishments and the satisfaction derived from helping to improve the Notre Dame community. How much pride and satisfaction can be derived from an aborted project that is hamstring by lack of funds? What further motivation can be derived when the means for accomplishing an objective of excellence are beyond attainment?

Something that the Senate must also consider are the effects on next year's activities. Such things as the Contemporary Arts Festival, the Sophomore Literary Festival, and An Tostal Weekend, cannot be rejuvenated overnight. The directors of these things depend heavily on the advice of those who headed them the previous year. What kind of advice can a disappointed and dispirited individual give?

The Senate must consider that full funding of these projects is an investment in the future of Notre Dame. There is no reason to shortchange the students this year. A debt of $20-25,000 is not that bad at all when it is measured against the ill effects that a smaller deficit will have on the community.

The Observer budget

The Observer would like to encourage students once again to talk to their Senators and ask them to vote for a $12,000 appropriation for The Observer.

The rationale for our request, we believe, was adequately presented in last Friday's paper by our publisher.

We need the $12,000 to insure that we continue daily publication in the format that would be best for the future of the paper—that is, eight pages per day. An eight-page daily paper will provide us with the opportunity to develop the best caliber newspaper that we can, and would provide us with the opportunity to attract more advertising.

Perhaps the second point is the most significant since if The Observer has the space to attract new advertising there is the possibility that it will someday be able to cover most of its cost through advertising receipts. If not student government will be allocating money to The Observer year after year—and to a three day Observer to boot.

In that vein the additional allocation to The Observer is an investment in the future—an investment that will provide the community not only with a fine newspaper but one that someday will be able to pay its own way.
Vikings find Valhalla

by Buzz Craven

OHHH! UH-HUHNNNN!

With this cry the Vikings burst from their fortress in the Dillon-Alumni courtyard, prepared to sacrifice their vocal cords to defend Notre Dame honor at home football games.

The Vikings originated in the first floor building section of Dillon Hall, more commonly called "Valhalla." Since then founding, the Vikings fame has spread far with the aid of pictures in the South Bend Tribune and the Chicago Sun Times.

This spirited group was the idea of two ND sophomores who were diagnosed with the lack of spirit shown at the Northwestern game at the opening of the home football season. The two, Rich Sherman and Mike Murphy, formed the Vikings to show that some Notre Dame men still believe the lighting Irish should have "6000 teammates in the stands." From an initial membership of two, the Vikings have grown to an informal organization with at least 70 regular members and at least 150 more irregulars and they invite anyone else who has a strong sense of pride but "no sense of shame" to join their ranks.

A football weekend for a Viking begins with the Friday night pep rally, which the Vikings attend as a group. However, the popularity is just a warm-up for the game-day activities. Dressed in their Viking outfits, the group meets at 11:00 O'Dlock in the Dillon-Alumni courtyard for prayers to Odin, the chief Viking god, and for jousting sessions which prepare the Vikings for the torture they will receive later in the game. This prayer service- pep rally is followed by a Viking march around campus to recruit new members for the war-party.

When the group is assembled in full force, the Vikings march straight through traffic to the stadium. The parade continues once around the stadium "to the old folks a thrill," and ends outside the football team's locker room with a brief pep rally, then on to the game. Once in the stadium the Vikings follow a ritual of cheering each starting player individually and re-enacting the life of George Gipp.

After that, it's impossible to tell what will happen. Occasionally the Vikings condone to follow the cheerleaders, but they usually do only original cheers.

The highlight of the Viking's day is the "6000 teammates in the stands." At last week's game when several members of the team of 1949 expressed a desire to join them in the stands to cheer on the Irish.

Future plans for the Vikings include continuing their support of Notre Dame athletic teams, at least through the basketball and hockey seasons. Next year the Vikings hope to organize as an official campus club, and perhaps charters to some of the away football games. This club will show movies to raise money for their activities, and they promise that Burt Lancaster and Tony Curtis in "The Vikings" will be their first film.

Waiting for Sadie

by Harold J. Taege

Bleak. That word has weighed heavily on my mind these past few days producing a feeling of, well, bleakness.

Bleak is the weather – five consecutive days of cloudy, drizzly, miserably wet.

Bleak is the time of year – midsemester tests, papers due, loss of sleep.

Bleak is the news (it always seems that way) – Vietnam continues, stock market drops, another plane hijacked, Arabs on the warpath.

Bleak days, also, for Sadie.

But, contributing considerably to my feeling of bleakness is a day known generally at St. Mary's as Sadie Hawkins Day. Some of you may be wondering who Sadie was and what she did to endure herself in the hearts of women-kind everywhere (especially the kind of women St. Mary's is noted for).

Well, having had the experience I've had with women, I have, of course, stumbled across the legend of this goddess of girls' private colleges. She, I feel it my solemn duty as a conscientious and contributing member of the male community to expose this gal and the reasons her feat is celebrated with such fervent solemnity and devotion.

Sadie lived (boy, did she live!) in Alaska during the gold rush days of the 1890's. She was a mountain of a woman who stood 6 feet 4 and weighed 245. With those kinds of dimensions (we're not mentioning any other figures – they're too unbelievable) you naturally look to lumberjacking. While she took to lumberjacking, her fellow lumber-jacks didn't take too well to her. You see, she was always fetching about something – hours too long, unfair compensation, something about women's rights. Sadie was causing division in the ranks, so the foreman had to let her go (it took four men and their muscle to convince him to let her go).

The gold rush was beginning so Sadie decided to set up buns (a saloon business, that is) in one of the boom towns. There she prospered monetarily and socially. Gals were scarce – the ratio was about 4 to 1 and since she came into contact with large numbers of men through her business (the boys loved her) she found her share of dates (on some weekend nights her book two or three dates). But, Sadie was chomping at the bit and she didn't like the boy-ask-girl custom. She was getting old – almost 21 – and the didn't want to waste time with guys who weren't good marriage prospects. So, she decided to become an independent, liberated woman and take the bull by the horns (as to speak).

Using her size to her best advantage, she reversed the process and began taking the initiative in dating relationships. Legend has it that she never was turned down. I believe it – would you dare risk the consequences of the wrath of such a woman? Finally she got her man (just like the Royal Canadian Mounted Police) and every woman likes to think she does; he was 5 feet 2 and weighed 110 pounds.

It must be quite apparent by now why Sadie Hawkins is honored with a special day. She embodied and exemplified all the characteristics of the dominating woman which all women secretly (but sometimes not so secretly) strive to attain.

But, to come back to my present plight. It is a social custom at St. Mary's to observe Sadie Hawkins Day and to revere the usual provisions of boy-ask-girl. Since I am a social animal, I am to fight custom.

With that in mind, let it be known to one and all alike at that school-across-the-road that in order to be prepared for a flurry of phone calls, I am doing the following:

1) I am cutting all of my classes for the rest of the week.
2) I am leaving my meals delivered to my room.
3) I am sleeping at night with the telephone under my pillow.
4) I have made arrangements for the overflow of calls to be diverted to the two rooms immediately adjoining mine.

So, Amy, Robyn, Joanne, Ann, Carol, Gret, Edi, Sheila, Sue, Teri, Marilyn, Patty, Mary Chris and any other interested girls – get on the phone. I'm waiting.

Editor: Re: "The Sex Questionnaire at SMC" (Thurs., Oct. 30).

1. It seems ironic that something as insignificant as a sex questionnaire can evoke such responses.

2. The offended, shocked, disturbed attitude displayed by the students makes one wonder what they are afraid people might find out.

3. It also seems unfair that the survey was only attributed as the work of one student when the person in question did have a partner (who does not attend SMC).

4. Finally, it strikes this person as extremely weird that only certain types of questions were reported (or sarcastically listed) in the "Observer" (an unbiased newspaper?).

But, what do I know — I'm only a freshman.

Sincerely,

Mary Ann Chory

ROTC's role

Editor: I believe the question Bernie Ryan and Professor Estabrook wish to raise is not to be limited to a discussion of insufficient representation of the rest of the student body, for clearly most of the student body is content to be represented by that portion of the military complex here on campus, R.O.T.C., whose role, ironically enough, within the confines of the university was seriously questioned only a few short years ago.

In the future I only wish display of the flag to represent the issue of the role of the majority in this here democracy, the majority being that portion of the stars and stripes could be a beautiful symbol of a turn away from further violent involvements and an orientation toward peaceful settlement of controversy. If this is not to be the case I say Amen, and so ends my catchphrase.

Fieldhouse forever

Editor: I wanted to write to tell you about something that made a deep and lasting impression on me.

I visited Notre Dame on the weekend of the USC game on October 18. Naturally, the visit was only a freshman! It would not have been complete without a look at the fieldhouse.

I was also told how the fieldhouse and how the pep rallies just weren't the same in the Athletic and Convocation Center. I smiled but secretly I wondered how anyone could get so attached to a building. I walked down the quad, and from what I heard about it, I expected to see some shining example of architecture majes-

Editor: Concerning the article of Joseph Carroll in the October 22nd Observer, I really believe the time has come to make a few points clear from the beginning. First of all, I would hate to see anyone "lose head peace freaks". Can Mr. Carroll really believe what he has written or is it just the result of an emotional outburst? He blames those who are against the war for being "peaceful" instead of premising the government to cut the ridiculous $80 billion dollar defense budget, which, by any way you perceive it, is billions of dollars lost to contain the strength of our armed forces. We want to tell Mr. Carroll, that is the whole point behind our actions. We do support you; we want to bring you home and put an end to the killing which has gone on for far past the realms of sanity. It is the people in our government and our military who support the war to whom you should address your criticism. They talk of militaristic victories and "peace with honor" while you suffer for their ignorant and foolish acts of war. You are the "sacrificial lamb" because they refuse to realize the idiocy of the war.

We do not criticize dedication to the ideals upon which this country was founded, but do you consider the South Vietnamese and the civilians of South Vietnam one which is worthy of such ideals? Surely you do not serve to remove the fear of a communist takeover is the top of their collective lungs. They were pounded into the turf technically waiting to receive the thought of this marvelous nation never arises again. We have been called to intervene in a domestic crisis only twice in the history of the United States. We do not want to have our citizens come to Vietnam and that is my reason for working for peace. I am quite certain my feelings are shared by many other both here and across the nation. The only reason I am writing is to save your life and those of all other servicemen, and to make sure that that idiotic war never comes again. We have not fomaced any.

Hesburgh worries that nation is falling apart

by Jim Holsinger

"I'm worried about this nation because," as the Kerner Report warned, we're heading toward two Americas: one white, one black; one rich, one poor, one educated, one uneducated," said Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, President of the University of Notre Dame, in the current issue of Look Magazine.

The article, which appears this week in nationally circulated Look Magazine, claims that Hesburgh is "grimly absolute about the necessity for radical social reform to rescue youth and rehabilitate the poor." Hesburgh is presented nationally as a versatile, hard-line spokesman for civil rights in the United States, the optimistic president of a university "steaming with ferment."

Look points out that Hesburgh has taken it out to be the kind of Chairman Richard Nixon anticipated when he appointed Hesburgh to the chairmanship of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights. Most Americans, and probably Richard Nixon also, thought of Hesburgh in relation to the much publicized letter on demonstrations last year.

"Now, an aroused Hesburgh confronts the leaders of a comfortable white society with the same bare-knuckled frankness that he showed campus anarchists," Look explains.

Much of the Look interview presents Hesburgh in relationship to Notre Dame. Actionists on campus describe Hesburgh as a gradualist, one student describes him as a "tragic hero," but Look explains what Hesburgh is to the comfortable American.

"Colleged with the sweet smell of success, he has discovered that the armchair is rich and powerful, there is also the stink of death," says Look. "Time to put ourselves out on us as a nation," says Hesburgh.

SAC tables SMG open house discussion

by Prudence Wear

The SMG Student Affairs Council last night on open houses and drinking on campus pending further studies.

The open house bill sent to the Student Affairs Council last month was returned to the Committee for revision and clarification on the part of the Student Council and the Committee Chairman, comment made the President of the S.A.C. felt the procedures for determining whether students wanted on open house on a particular day were not definitely outlined." McCandless Senator Carol ("Cusick noted then the hall's abstorted attempt to put through an open house for last weekend. The T.A.'s, numbering about 30, stationed themselves in the parking lots and around the library and the administration building in order to inform visitors and alumni about their recent resolution submitted together with the English Department to Fr. John Walsh, Vice President for Academic Affairs.

"We feel pretty happy about it," was the opinion yesterday on Bill Lorimer, a T.A. who teaches two Freshman English courses. He said that the T.A.'s and other English graduate students distrubted about 7,000 leaflets.

"Our purpose was to make our situation known to the alumni," added Bill Hinkle, a two-year graduate student in English. "It was not so much a confrontation, but a friendly reminder." Hinkle explained that the leaflet passed out asked alumni to write to Fr. Hesburgh to express their sentiment about the T.A. request. The leaflet also asked alumni making contributions, to designate part of their contribution to the proposed salary increase of the T.A.'s. The leaflet also included the address of the Notre Dame English Association so people would know the source of the leaflet. Presently, Hinkle explained, T.A.'s who teach and T.A.'s who merely assist professors receive the same salary—$2,100 for a nine-month year. "And this is a problem," he said.

Correction

In the October 31 issue of The Observer, Professor Godfrey C. Henry was quoted in the story on Black Studies as saying "... the white students would have a real and experimental exposure..." to Black Studies. What Henry actually said was that the student would have "real and experimental exposure..."
Pangborn, Zahm remain undefeated

Zahm 8 - Breen-Philips 8

Zahm remained the only undefeated team in League 3 as they came from behind to defeat Breen-Philips. Breen-Philips scored in the first half after a fine 33 yard pass play, Tom Joseph to Bob May, moved the ball to the Zahm 6. From there Joseph carried for the score. Tom Figar ran for the two point conversion. Zahm came back in the second half when Paul Tufts fumbled a pass to George Phelps in the left flat. Phelps shook off tacklers and went 44 yards for the TD. Breen-Curtis scored the crucial two point conversion which enabled Zahm to come away with a tie.

Morrissey 22 - Lyons 0

An alert Morrissey team rolled over Lyons on the strength of three TD passes. Morrissey's first TD came on an 81 yard pass from Jeff Shula to Paul Breen. Jim Shula scored the two point conversion to give Morrissey an 8-0 halftime lead. In the second
