Willson, Brady elected

by Steve Hoffman

The Student Senate convened last evening in a special session to discuss the rule concerning the election of the Fieldhouse, and the University Forum. Ed McCartin, Chairman of the University Forum Screening Committee, presented his Committee's recommendation of nine students considered best equipped to serve on the Forum. McCartin called on each nominee to address himself to the Senate for the purpose of rendering his views as to the functioning of the Forum. Nominees were then questioned by the Senators to enlarge upon various aspects of campus policy, ranging from their opinions of the recent protests to the role of the Trustees in campus life.

The Senate approved the list of nominees, and the election was held immediately. After the ballots were counted, the results were announced. To the surprise of many of the candidates, Willson and Brady in the class of '93, Mike Kelly and Orla Cottrell in the class of '94, Mike Shaughnessy in the class of '95, and Charles Voelker in the class of '96, were elected as the Senate's representatives to the University Forum.

Following action on the Forum, Stay Senator John Zim­merman presented the Senate motion that the Senators meet the University to delay destruction of the Fieldhouse until the Senate can consider renovating it into a possible University Arena or Gymnasium. Zimmerman also moved that the Administration be mandated to place the position of an arts center high on the list of priorities for fund allocations, and that the Administration recognize the necessity for an adequate art center.

Speakers in favor of the motion included last year's President Tom Knoke, who cited the desire to sponsor and promote the role of Fine Arts on the campus.

John Matthews, of the English Department, declared that culture on this campus is made to seem claustraphobic, alien and remote.

"It is essential that we work towards the greater participation in the arts, and away from the idea of stupefied awe that is so often non-involvement in the arts," he said.

SU, SG meet in Poobah Bowl

by Mark Walbran

The bowl fans won’t want to miss the rousing action of the first annual Notre Dame Poobah Bowl this Sunday at 2:00 p.m. when the Student Government battles Student Union.

As of last night nobody knew exactly where the game would be held, though the field house and the stadium were possible sites. Anyhow, just follow the crowd.

Kay "the Kid" Bajo, Student Union’s coach, center, and cheerleader, explained in an exclusive Observer interview yesterday that Student Union sent Student Government a letter challenging "throw panties" to test their pickin prowess.

"We feel obliged to answer what seems to be a ludicrous challenge to our well-sounded excellence," Student Government’s reply in a letter addressed to the Student Union. "More prosaically, "continued their letter, "we will pick up the fling gauntlet and use it to beat the * out of you."

Deny Clark will call the signals for Student Union’s squad while Fred "Hondo" Bedrick will make the plays for Student Government.

"As long as John Coughlin, their captain, is mapping out their strategy," predicted John Monnisch of the Student Union, "we should have no trouble outwitting them."

"I’d rather not offer a prediction for the game," said Coughlin. "Any comments along that line now would be a direct challenge to the Student Union. And there will be enough mud-slinging next Sunday."

Clark predicted that Student Union would be victorious by at least three touchdowns.

Commenting on Student Government’s tactics, Coach Bajo said, "Considering the offensive moves they pull in the office, they should be great out on the field."

"All I can say is Student Union and Student Services better bring lot of stretchers along for after the game," warned McKenna.

Academic Commissioner Pat Dowdall warned that if the Fieldhouse is razed, the University will not have an arts center in the future. He cited the need for space for future campus bodies for Zimmerman’s motion.

Dr. Thomas Fern, Chairman of the Art Department, emphasized the importance of space for the Art Department, and observed that the Fieldhouse would fill that need. He stated that a South Bend architect had inspected the Fieldhouse and had found it to be structurally sound and capable of housing additional structures.

When questioned as to the amount of finances needed to renovate the Fieldhouse, Dr. Fern replied that costs would require no more than 1.3 million dollars, while an entirely new structure would soar to more than three times that price.

Dr. Fern also felt that he could raise money for the project with the assistance of several federal organizations interested in Arts and Humanities, and through private individuals and foundations.

Zimmerman’s motion to accept the mandate was passed by consensus.

In minor business, selection of student members of the campus judicial board created controversy between the appointment of senior Tom Mignanelli as an alternate member of the board. BFP Senator Joe White argued that Mignanelli had been dropped from appointment as a regular member of the board for reasons stemming from his attempt to seek an interview with an accounting firm during the recent protests. BFP Senator Phil Mckenna denied the charge, saying that no decisions regarding final appointments to the board had been made prior to Thursday.

Final action on the matter was delayed until the next meeting of the Senate.

The Senate concluded its evening’s work by accepting a resolution passed by consensus Tom Thraher’s amendment that seats vacated by Stay Senators during their terms would be filled by an election within the Senate to provide replacements to serve out the terms.

Surveys to determine reasons for rejection

by Jim Graif

Research and Development Commissioner John Zimmerman yesterday explained the purpose of a questionnaire which will be sent to approximately 570 Notre Dame freshmen within the next two weeks. It is intended to serve as a control factor for a study the University is conducting in an attempt to find out what type of student was sent to students in four categories.

The questionnaire was sent to students in four major categories. They include: students who had been pre­ programmed to achieve a 3.0 or better GPA at Notre Dame, a randomly selected group of students, non­

Catholic students, and black students. Zimmerman reported a

50% return from all categories except that of black students. Since the sample of black students isn’t large enough to draw any conclusions from, their results will be listed individually. The questionnaire to be sent to freshmen will be identical to the one sent this summer and will be sent to students who fit in the same four categories.

Zimmerman said that the commission hopes to have all the statistics by Dec. 1 so that they could be evaluated during Christmas vacation.

These statistics are designed to help determine which, among the reasons listed in the Admissions Department Code book, are those which discourage prospective students the most. The chief reasons listed at the present time are financial difficulties, the fact that Notre Dame is not coming to the University and his reasons for not choosing Notre Dame.

The data collected should help to determine in what areas the University is weak in the eyes of applicants.

Zimmerman felt that the commission’s report would be useful not only to the Admissions office but also to the Coeducational Coordinating Committee, the Financial Aid Committee and possibly to the board of Vice-presidents.

Letters

Despicable

Editor:

I feel that Bob Urbanic’s letter is one of the most offensive and despicable ever seen in The Observer. Urbanic offended by what he felt was an attack on the Catholic Church.

Well, I do not attack Catholicism, but rather the tastes of fashionable, maudlin morality, for which the most any well-meaning person can say is that it is not fashionable. It is the same sort ofstuff that you would find in the middle of the American literature of the 1960s.

The satirical technique used was to make it seem as if reducing the liturgical “refuse” to the hibiscus in the middle of the desert already draws dangerously near. Thus, “you take the light meal and I’ll take the dark meal, and I’ll be in heaven before you” is no more offensive than the real mass hymn “I’m in love with my god/my god in love with me/and the more I love him/the more I know/I’m in love with my god.” When the divinity of God is viewed from one of the means of fomenting theology, you are not only a step closer to heresy, which has already been half-taken, to treating God as a mere object. The song was intended to push the offensive genre of folk mass hymns to their logical and despicable end. The hymn is offensive in the sense that it is the culmination of the sin of the scribes who could not attend the Dow demonstration.

The intention of the satire was to reduce the listener to laughter or disgust - perhaps both - whenever he hears a folk mass hymn. When our par­ticular case was being played, I hoped to get the listener to hear a song in a light, a light in which they are necessarily unfathomable.

The target of parody is often misunderstood. I regret the lack of communication, and hope this clears it up. If it does not, I cannot feel obliged to apologize for what I feel is necessary criticism. Pat Clinton

Hasty Execution

Editor:

Mr. Overlan has lost all sense of reality, I’m afraid. Have you ever rationalized the murder of 3,500 a result of “panic”? For your information, the majority of those killed were bound about the wrists and ankles, with a length of rope or cord passed through all the elbows. This all happened after they (the vic­tims) had dangled in the common trash. Then the ropes were pul­led at both ends, making the people attached fall into the French. They were either shot or buried alive. Now Mr. Overlan, does this appear to you as a hasty execution?

Would you explain to me just exactly what the NFL had in mind for those former prisoners, had they not executed them immediately? I’d like to rationalize about why the VC just took common citizens, and not a few of their soldiers, and why did they take women and children, as they did? Why? Why do you imply that they would not have died if we were not present. Perhaps you should not read about Colonel Balfour’s account of the 50,000 North Vietnamese kulaks killed in 1954-55, by the peasant army built by Giap. Perhaps they would not have been killed if Eisenhower was not elected President in 1952.

Now for our fault for being there. Perhaps if we did not hasten into Germany in 1945, the concentration camp person­nel would not have tried to eliminate all evidence. Perhaps if we did not try to rescure those missionaries in the Congo, the few that were killed, would not have died. However perhaps if we had not come into Ha, as we were, perhaps more would have died, as they did at An Loc, and Buchenwald. Delay also would have scanted the fate for the others.

And for a final shot, for the “...probably” statement in your article, Mr. Overlan, I staunchly believe in a saying told to me by a前 President, “If we have the means to worship it is only the greatest symbol of communication, and hope that we do not commit a greater sin than the present one.”

Sincerely,

Francis J. McAleer

Score One for Murphy

Editor:

You’ve published the communications and actions of the CPA to be quite interesting of late - especially during the CIA-Dow chaos. A few points to consider:

The answer that Dow is “improvisatory incompetent.” I can’t help but recall how the National Young Americans for Freedom, during 1967, ran a campaign objecting to IBM’s trade with communist countries. None of those high moral CPAs do you remember, or, should I say, they are all CPAs. We, perhaps, might expect everyone to be outraged that Dow has been selling a drug that has saved the lives of our allies! Seems to be a double standard here.

2) Three of the demonstration’s leaders, all totaled, are taking on course at Notre Dame - that’s odd. I wouldn’t have thought they’d have time with all the other demonstrations that they have to attend.

3) One of the “Big Three” leaders, Sister Joanne Malone of the National Catholic Student Conference, in the phrase, “Do unto others as you would have others do unto you.” How about the anybody-poured blood on you and threw you out of a window, sitter? More more more thing. My official box score for November 18:

Arthur Pavlin - 25 (it worked and the more I love him/the more I know/my god is love/the more I love him/my god in love with me/and the more I love him/the more I know/I’m in love with my god).

Tim McCurry - no run, almost hit, one error (he didn’t stay in the box)

Brian Hillyard - sacrifice fly, sacrifice bunt, sacrifice hit, 15 minute policy - 10 (it worked and the demonstration didn’t).

Sincerely,

Tom Murphy

Unrealistic trust

It has finally happened. The safe, secluded St. Mary’s women have at last been touched by something which may even have some relevance for them when they get out into the real world.

St. Mary’s College has been the victim of an increasing number of thefts. These issues are the result of a naive and thoroughly unrealistic trust.

The time has come to look and bar all doors and to open all eyes to a very ugly truth. Girls, your friends are not as honest as they seem. They do a bit of white-laying to you, a fact you already know, but that is a woman’s prerogative, like changing her mind, isn’t it? They say a few things behind your back that aren’t exactly friendly, but “he who is without an . . . etc.” But, beyond the games that females play, it is a fact that your friends are taking what they want.

Sometime in the late night or early morning hours last Tuesday or Wednesday, a checkbook and $28 was stolen from the back of a drawer, from under some papers, from the fourth floor LeMans room while the owner was sleeping.

A tenant has had stolen for the past three years her prescription birth control pills, which only her friends know she is taking and from the hiding place only her friends knew of.

In such cases it can easily be seen that a friend is getting too close for comfort. Holy Cross Hall recently lived through a rash of pure thefts. Random wallet rifling has been going on all over campus. Fifty dollar worth of stereo tapes was stolen from a ND junior’s car outside Regina. A $350 violin was lifted from the basement of Monroe. Inaugural football tickets have disappeared. And even a dryer load of men’s socks wafted off into nowhere.

All of these were more than likely “inside jobs.” But, who? And, why? No one seems to be able to even conceive their friends’ motives, but someone’s friend is really raking in it.

Captain William Flanner of Security feels that there is nothing men can do because of the nature of the crimes. “We haven’t been able to do anything because, first of all, we’re not patrolling in those areas and can’t police those floors. Even if we could, we wouldn’t do any good because there’s too many girls. If somebody went up during dinner time, she could probably get into all of her friends’ rooms’ with little notice.”

Realistically, however, Security will never free us from nagging suspicions living in a fearful atmosphere brings. The problem exists in our no-man’s-land, and only we can solve this problem.

Trust less; as a matter of fact, trust not at all. Lock your door at all times. Cash small checks and hide, well, the money you have. And the final blow, start policing on your own.

Psychologically, there are clans as neurotic aggressors, but that doesn’t make living with them any safer. Perhaps, if one St. Mary’s girl had gotten involved, had been a little less trusting, and perhaps a bit more Christian, Miss McCauley would not have had her wheelchair stolen from outside her door and packed off in a car. And the LeMans hall council could have somehow given the $80 taken from the main desk to the halls.

One side there were cushioned bar stools by Jim E. Brogan

The booth we had chosen was narrow and every issue was a copy of the latest released disc by a new recording group called Teddy A. The Too-tough troopers. Many of us that follow the music scene have been waiting for such an offering. We knew it would only be a matter of time before Father Ted would involve himself in yet another time consuming activity, but few of us ever expected in our wildest dreams that he would make a loop for the top of the tunecast. Although perhaps we should have seen this trend coming after Everett Dirkson took to the recording studios and sold a million sides.

This baby looks like a two-sided winner all the way. Both sides have the same repetitive uyn'amite beat that has all of which I had heard somewhere before. I laughed anyway.

My two friends talked of many of the kind of acts they arc. Always one of personality and the personality of the group second. Teens) put together the kind of electricity resulting effect on their audiences. Don Brewer, drummer, feels that the audience and play to themselves. Some of the kids thought that was really great because it is the group. It only works when the audience is having as much fun as the group. He feels that it can turn boards of strangers onto a group in a matter of a few hours? It has to be the music first and the personality of the group second. And both have to be there.

Musically the group is disciplined. Not the stagnant discipline that puts a group into a pocket and keeps them there. Rather it is the kind that makes Grand Funk Railroad a living, breathing entity.

The charisma is something quite unique to the group. This single (hopefully lengthened into a longplay album someday) has a unique gimmick which sets it well apart from the run of the mill teenybop songs. Whereas the usual fare has a throbbing bass guitar and nonsensical lyrics, Father Ted has decided to leave out the bass guitar. Yes, there is no music to be found on either side, but only a two-part harmony of unrhymed lyrics, the likes of which we have heard so many times before.

This entire package really can be viewed as two songs in itself. Back in the early sixties there was a trend for follow-up songs to an original sound. These so-called answer songs, which include biggies as leader of the Laundromat (Leader of the Pack) and Queen of the House (King of the Road) inevitably sold almost as well as the original. So Father Ted has apparently decided to combine this well-selling idea into one vibrant song.

The result is a series of background questions by a mere unknown and snappy comeback answers by the lead vocalist.

Grand Funk frenzy

Why should this happen? The group hadn't had any large build up before they appeared anywhere. They haven't been members of broken super-groups, come to yet another agregate. There's nothing to them but their music, and it is this which has been doing the job for them. The music is something quite new.

In an industry that rates group's performances against other group's, Grand Funk Railroad has been likened to Cream by many writers and reviewers. This in itself is a masterful achievement, but it is not the direction of the group. They are not mimes of a past glory. They are not imitators. Inventors of a music that is as powerful and gutsy as the Cream's but a folk that doesn't belong to the past masters.

They are into their music and its resulting effect on their audiences. Don Brewer, drummer, feels that the audience is an integral part of the show. They are not mimes of a past glory. They are not imitators. Inventors of a music that is as powerful and gutsy as the Cream's but a folk that doesn't belong to the past masters.

They are into their music and its resulting effect on their audiences. Don Brewer, drummer, feels that the audience and play to themselves. Musically the group is disciplined. Not the stagnant discipline that puts a group into a pocket and keeps them there. Rather it is the kind that makes Grand Funk Railroad a living, breathing entity.

An entity that is capable of so much music that its range and appeal can at times be frightening.

We marched against death, and after we marched we walked for a while and argued for a while, and then we were cold.

An hour later I was drunk, my two friends and I laughed at them, felt strong but only a two-part harmony of unrhymed lyrics, the likes of which we have heard so many times before.

Father Ted. If this combining idea works as well as the separate original & answer songs did, Father Ted will have a smash on his hands.

Another new stroke of genius to make its first appearance anywhere is that the disc is untitled. This is interesting to the extent that the contents of the recording are so controversial. The fact that it is untitled serves a dual purpose. First, no one can really see the focal point of the recording and secondly it is impossible to discuss it because it has no easy handle by which to refer to it.

This single (hopefully lengthened into a longplay album someday) has a unique gimmick which sets it well apart from the run of the mill teenybop songs. Whereas the usual fare has a throbbing bass guitar and nonsensical lyrics, Father Ted has decided to leave out the bass guitar. Yes, there is no music to be found on either side, but only a two-part harmony of unrhymed lyrics, the likes of which we have heard so many times before.

We walked at the booth. The bar was cowoky. A waitress, friendly, polite, but otherwise an ordinary waitress came over with a smile as we came in. She asked us (she knew all along) why we had come to Washington. We told her we were tired of killing, tired of waiting for an end to the killing.

Spatto Agnew is a ... we told her. She had some sympathy for us, but no understanding. She seemed sure of herself and gripped her pad tightly. She told us that wars are a part of life, "These crimes along over ten 15-years, always have, always will." She told us that Nixon was 'doin' all he could to get us out of Vietnam, honorably, and that "the more we hell know a lot more about what's goin' on there than any of you kids knows."

I had heard it all somewhere before, I was sick of it, I did not want to argue anymore. I held my breath and kept beneath her torrent of words. When she was out of words I ordered a beer. We all bent, draft. My two friends said the waitress had a point. Another perspective, another way of looking at things, they said. I grimaced, played another Tony Bennett record, ordered my second beer. My two friends talked of many of the kind of acts they ad to the music that their range and appeal can at times be frightening.

Obviously G.F.R.'s idea of what makes up entertainment does not fall into the ego tripping bag. They are on stage to enjoy themselves. More important, they are onstage to yet controlled music of Grand Funk Railroad. It means that they're still doing for a show, not to see a collective of police. The act is almost reached out to become hysteria. Cincinnati and Los Angeles, more of the same.

The gutty, raw, moving, sexual quality of the act is a side product of the frenzied yet controlled music of Grand Funk Railroad.

Mark Farner is the group's lead guitarist, and is responsible for all the cuts on the group's first Capitol album. He and bassist Mel Schacher are heavy in the sense of their music. With drummer Don Brewer, the boys (hardly out of their teens) put together the kind of electricity that can't be measured on any scale. They exude magic, sex, fervor, tension and excitement without half trying. It's just the kind of act they are. Always together, always on top of the show and their audience, always into their music.

It's nice to note that they're still growing. Railroading whenever they play for into grabbing, gutty, Grand Funk.

Lead guitarist Mark Farner of Grand Funk

Sometimes, not too often, just once in a while, you can become transfixed. Maybe it's no exceptionally good movie. You sit there and ten minutes later you realize that your mouth's been hanging open, and you've awed by the performance.
Dallas Bowl trip details
John Monnich, Student Services Commissioner, yesterday explained the delay in finalizing plans for the Student Trip to the Cotton Bowl in Dallas on January 1.
According to Monnich, the Student Union had tentatively decided on contracting Student-Air for the flight to Dallas, but nothing was made definite with that firm.
Therefore, following preliminary announcements of the trip, several student organizations expressed an interest in contracting the trip. After considering various offers, Monnich revealed that the Student International firm, based at the University of Michigan, would coordinate the trip.
Monnich cited the lower prices of the firm, along with the high quality of service as the prime determinants in selecting Student International.
Two student flights will be chartered, leaving Chicago and New York on December 30, and returning to those points on January 2. The total costs for the trip, including plane fare, hotel accommodations at the Statler-Hilton, bus trips to and from the airport and game, and the game ticket will amount to $135 from Chicago, and $155 from New York.
Monnich emphasized that these prices are $15 cheaper per person from each point of departure for Student-Air, and the services of each are identical.
Monnich stressed that students must sign-up for the trip on this coming Sunday or Monday beginning at 6:30 P.M. in the Coke Bar of the Lafontaine Student Center. Each plane can carry 180 students apiece, and it is necessary that at least 50 students sign up from each point of departure in order for the trip to be finalized.

Rebates approved
Student Body President Phil McKenna reported last night that as of last week he had received “about 150 requests” for financial rebates from Grace Hall residents.
McKenna, who stated in an interview that the student government was working with Father Whelan to finalize details, speculated that “the figure is much higher now.”
“We plan on working it,” said McKenna, “so that it will be possible to figure out exactly how much money the students lost on a daily basis for the length of time that they were displaced. I don’t believe the top figure will exceed twenty dollars, though, and most people won’t be getting that much.”
According to McKenna, all those forced to share suites while waiting for the Tower’s completion would be eligible for rebate. The refunds are scheduled to be taken off second semester billing.

ment bureau or an undergraduate business school or an engineering department.
Demonstrations were also considered for the dedication of Grace Hall on December 8th, and for the return of a Dow interviewer on February 15.
Plans for the distribution of leaflets at the football game this weekend were made, and also for speakers to go to the halls at the beginning of next week.

Lodge quits post
PARIS (UPI) — Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge resigned yesterday as chief negotiator at the Paris peace talks because of Communist failure to negotiate. Both the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese indicated his move would not budge them from their hard bargaining position.
The White House announced in Washington that Lodge and his deputy, Lawrence E. Walsh, had resigned over the Communist refusal to negotiate.
Spokesmen for the two Communist delegations said Lodge was merely following Washington's orders and that they were looking for a change in Washington policy, not negotiations.
At yesterday's sessions the Communists accused the United States of committing monstrous war crimes in South Vietnam and again called for total withdrawal of American troops as the only means of ending the war.

apiece. The election winners considered this as a positive sign that the freshman class was not taking the election as a joke.

On the various issues, Willson said he presently opposed the complete merger between the freshman classes of ND and SMC. He did feel that a very close degree of cooperation between the two classes was a must.

Willson said that the first concrete action he wishes to see the establishment of a commission, including his opponents, which would study and draw up a class constitution.

Colgan is a chemistry concentration intent in Flanner. Greco is in Flanner and is an engineering intent.

Colgan and Greco all professed disappointment at the light freshman turn-out. Brady commented saying, "The freshman elections suffered from a publicity drought this year. They suffered from one last year. And they will continue to suffer until a concerted effort to inform, challenge and excite the voters is made. This year, nobody knew what was coming off. I think that perhaps our first duty once in office is to make sure that the freshman classes of the future will be better prepared for elections."

These committees have sponsored such projects as the Philosophic Institute for Artificial Intelligence; the Lecomte du Nouy program concerned with relationships between science, philosophy and religion; and a Latin-American exchange program.

Now this week, I’m not fooling. Air Force is good. I know I tend to pass Tulane off as potent through the air, Pitt as high-storm-tough-balanced, and Georgia Tech as great against running. They are statistically better than their opponents in running, passing, and the whole ball game. Air Force is 6-3 on the year, yet they are still fairly strong. The Falcons call upon punter Darryl Haas, who has averaged 40.1 yards on 45 punts. Even more potent is placekicker Denaizkier Dennis Leuthauser, perhaps the finest in the nation. Last year he booted a 57-yard field goal attempt and he leads the Falcons in scoring with 69 points. Another three points and he’ll be AF’s career scoring leader.

The Falcon defense suffered a crucial blow when Ed Epping was lost for the entire season before the first game. The defensive tackle was expected to be a show-stopper in All America. The Falcons can be scored upon, especially through the air. Stanford’s Jim Plankett beat them 47-34 last week and they’ve allowed 1547 yards passing. More importantly, opposing passers have a 524 completion mark against them.

The great danger tomorrow will be a preview of what they do to you. Joe Theismann, 1646 yards and 15 touchdowns. He leads the team in tackles with 60, while Phil Browne and the pair of Leimbach (also linebackers) trail him with 79 and 73 respectively.

Air Force is 6-3 on the year, but the ones haven’t been by much. Besides Stanford, power house Missouri barely scraped by 19-17 and Wyoming (before being hit by no troubles, the Rocky Mountain kingpin) registered a 29-27 win.

On the Notre Dame side, the news is Cotton Bowl and injuries. There is always the danger of a let-down by the Irish and they’ve lost several days of practice due to weather. It is possible we could turn this into a 7-0 game; good weather, and they’ll need a computer to tabulate the points.

Ohio State over Michigan–by 20. That TV game last Saturday made me a believer.

Although the college football season continues after this week, this will be my final column of “picks”. The great danger tomorrow is that of complacency for teams which have accepted bowl bids. Notre Dame over Air Force–by 14. A lousy day weather-wise could turn this into a 7-0 game; good weather, and they’ll need a computer to tabulate the points.

Ohio State over Michigan–by 20. That TV game last Saturday made me a believer.

UCLA over USE–by 10. For the past several weeks, in fact for most of the season, Southern Cal has been scraping by weak sisters. Tomorrow they’ll get theirs.

Kansas State over Colorado–by 7. Utah over BYU–by 10. Purdue over Indiana–by 10. It’s been a tough second half of the season for Johnny Unitas. The “Old Oaken Bucket” goes to Purdue once again.
