Divided Senate rejects Carswell

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A second stunning repudiation of President Nixon's efforts to restock the Supreme Court's bench. The votes of five moderate Republicans were decisive, but it was not until the roll call had neared its finish and Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, the Maine Republican, with British poetess Nathaniel Tarn and embracing the Eastern-Buddhist-Contemplative ethic. Tarn has published ten volumes of poetry. His remarks were natural conservation. Tarn also gave an initial presentation of the new myth. He has become a proper savagery, a kind of "mutual understanding" of the manner in which myth functions in society. Tarn states that "An anthropologist is often torn between his spirit to preserve what he studies and his knowledge that the clock can never turn back." A native of France, Nathaniel Tarn was educated at the Universities of Cambridge, Paris and Chicago and has done social and political research in South America and the Far East. Now teaching in the United States, he has published ten volumes of poetry. Of the first, Old Sagacity/Young Cynic, The New Republic says, "There is a proper savagery, a search for the archaic and a depth of philosophy that are as rewarding as they are rare." In his latest volume, The Beautiful Contact... (continued on page 3)

President Nixon spoke to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. When he first heard about a little more than ten seconds after the Senate had decided last November, including Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott and his assistant, Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, went along with Carswell this time. But others who supported Haynsworth refused to accept Carswell. These included Sen. Winston L. Probsty, (R. Vt.); Matthews W. Cook, (R. Ky.); and J. William Fulbright, (D. Ark.). Scattered applause — rarely heard in the Senate chamber — greeted Mrs. Smith's vote, which was considered undecided to the last. Loud applause and whistles, and some booing as well, erupted in the galleries when Vice President Spiro T. Agnew was handed the tally and said: "On this vote the ayes are 45 and the nays are 51. The nomination is not agreed to." The White House had insisted the President was confident of victory until a little more than an hour before the vote began. But Nixon himself acknowledged to a group of visitors that he thought it would be "tight, very tight." He was regarded as a "strict constructionist" of the type Nixon wanted without any of the financial inducements which had been used to block Haynsworth.

But Carswell's 1948 speech placed him at the core of the White House concept of white supremacy, his role in turning the public golf course in his home town of Tallahassee, Florida, over to a private group to avoid the need for a black assistant, Robert Scott, opened the session with a welcoming address to the delegates. Kendall cited the "mutual understanding" of the member nations of the United Nations as the means to "peace and harmony" in the world. He stressed the idea that the MUN (Model UN) should have the "goals of peace and security." He said that the resolution asked the MUN to "restore all its rights to the People's Republic of China and to recognize the representative officials of the Government as the only lawful representatives of China to the United Nations and the expulsion of the representatives of Chiang Kaishek from the place which they have occupied in the United Nations and all the organizations related to it." The full board met in Miami this week to consider the resolution of the Student Affairs Committee. The resolution asked the MUN to recognize the representatives of Nationalist China. University has cabinet structure

This is the second in a five-part series written by the Nursing for President Headquarters.

The main statement of the duties of the President of Notre Dame is found in the bylaws of the University (Sec. III, p. ii):

1) general direction of University's affairs
2) appointments (ex officio member of all committees of Board)
3) preside over meetings of Board
4) preside over meetings of Executive Committee
5) represent Notre Dame on various occasions
6) sign contracts, deeds, legal and financial instruments for University's business
7) make an annual report on general condition of University to Board of Directors

Below the President, there is a "cabinet type" of government, with each of the University's six vice-presidents charged with a particular administrative area. For a description of how this sort of university government works, we have called on Roukte and Brooks' discussion ("The Rise of Cabinet Government" in The Managerial Revolution in Higher Education by Francis Roukte and Glenn C. Brooks, Johns Hopkins Press, 1966, pp. 109-113).

The new pattern of cabinet government stands in sharp contrast to the administrative tradition of higher education. The new pattern of cabinet government is viewed as a bottleneck in the system of university communications. It seems to us that those who have structured this university government are operating in a way which makes Roukte and Brooks' theoretical discussion applicable. This is the University of Notre Dame, and one which is being studied as an example of a "cabinet form of government".

The rise of cabinet government concludes with a very important observation, made in the light of its bearing on our discussion of structural revision at Notre Dame: "However varied the duties of the vice-presidents, there are two quite different sets of individuals in each cabinet. One is the academic or educational perspective, and the other is the fiscal or housekeeping aspect of structural revision at Notre Dame, April 9, 1970

Notre Dame governed? A more extensive analysis of the decision-making structure at Notre Dame might include statements from the holders of the various high level positions addressed to "how and in what way, decisions are made at Notre Dame?", as well as other indications of the way university problems are actually decided. With this outline before us we will in the next segment turn our attention to the question of a "Chancellor-President" structural revision: we shall ask: how will Notre Dame be governed under this new administrative framework?

ISO leadership expands activities

by Dave McCarthy

A luncheon party was held yesterday between Father Daniel O'Neil, Director of the Office for International Services, and new Officials of the International Students Organization.

The newly elected officers are as follows:

Michael Maduakolam, president; Miss Elisa Schiminski, treasurer and SMC co-ordinator; Miss Hiller Sork, secretary; Bill Truax, Notre Dame co-ordinator.

Mishael, a native of Biafra, said that he wanted to see the ISO transformed into an active and influential body worthy of its name. He added that in the past the ISO had faced such problems as lack of activities, influence of National Associations, an all male atmosphere, academic pressure on members, and lack of publicity. Michael will continue upon a re-definition of the ISO as to goals and objectives together with increased enrollment in the organization.

The ISO is expanding its activities to include establishment of areas of common interest with the National Associations, activities with international bodies in neighboring universities, selection of a foreign student of the year, an ISO newsletter to circulate monthly or bimonthly. There will also be a special orientation for incoming freshmen.

The new president added emphatically that, "Foreign students here should be made to feel a sense of belonging to at least a section of this community." Michael affirmed that, "I will make time for this important assignment."

Tarn coming

Tarn's rare poetry of myths allows him to combine it with cogent ecological statements.

Anselm Hollo says that after years of formal study and the "phantasmagoria of mass media work," he still finds himself a "traveling mum", yet a household as well. He calls himself "the mobile householder as the early Navajo." There is a polarity in his poetry ("Finns and North American Indians, graphically 'opposite' ends of cultural string game") that becomes basic and makes it spark. Anselm Hollo's poetry is, simply, concerned with sex-politics, walking and ultimately, the problem of finding out if you really know how to work at all. Anselm Hollo, a native of Helsinki, Finland, was born in 1934. He considers his first apprenticeship to his father who was a writer, translator and philosopher. He is as well known for his translations as for his poetry. His numerous translations and collections include Red Can, and It is a song, Paces and Forms and The Coherence. Mr. Hollo is currently teaching at the University of Iowa at the Creative Writers School.

Mr. Tarn and Anselm Hollo will be reading in Washington Hall on Wednesday, April 15, at 7:30 PM.

Editorial: A lesson for the President

Yesterday the Senate rejected President Nixon's nominee of G. Harrold Carswell to the Supreme Court. The decision was reached after 11 hours of debate on the floor of the Senate. The decision is a rebuff to the President's promise to submit a competent individual to the bench. The decision is a victory for the judicial establishment, which has been able to resist the pressures of political maneuvering.

The Senate's decision has important implications for the future of the Supreme Court. The President's nominee, G. Harrold Carswell, was considered by many to be a controversial choice. The decision to reject him is a clear indication that the Senate is not willing to accept a nominee who is not qualified to sit on the bench.

The Senate's decision also has implications for the future of the Supreme Court. The President's promise to submit a competent individual to the bench was seen by many as a way to shore up the Court's credibility. The decision to reject Carswell is a clear indication that the Senate is not willing to accept a nominee who is not qualified to sit on the bench.

The Senate's decision is also a victory for the judicial establishment, which has been able to resist the pressures of political maneuvering. The decision is a clear indication that the Senate is not willing to accept a nominee who is not qualified to sit on the bench.

New York, New York

There are times when one has to wonder whether the Indians knew what they were doing when they sold Manhattan to the Dutch. Perhaps they were sold short in the deal, and we are merely the beneficiaries of what they have bought.

Downtown where the subways are the cite of a recent bomb explosion. There are a lot of people like them.

The country is facing a major crisis of confidence in the judicial process. Competence in the highest court is one way of stimulating a feeling of trust toward the judicial system.

Letter

Dr. Harrod Hardin's remarks, as reported in the Observer, March 24, should not pass unchallenged. He objects to theological and ethical arguments against abortion, which he says use "traps" and "logos" to replace rational discussions with ambiguous phrases. Yet his own phrasing is not just ambiguous; it is dishonest, relying as it does on distorted analogies, smoke tactics, and woolly phrases.

The original fertilized egg is merely an information bank, not a being. If we destroy the blueprints for a house you are not destroying the house. True; but if I owned a blueprint that was in the process of being drawn and I destroyed it, I could with some accuracy speak of having destroyed the house.

Now, really. If you can own a house but you cannot dream of having a hundred million children every year, you have relations with your wife. This is beyond the means of even at first glance, five outright falsehoods. Most basic seems to be Dr. Hardin's ignoring of the simple biological fact that human life develops from an egg after it has been fertilized by one sperm cell. Surely we might expect better of a biology professor.

The whole problem of abortion and life-after-life must needs much serious medical, psychological, social, ethical, and theological study. But no cause is served by the sort of obscene, simplistic tactics indulged in by Dr. Hardin. I might add that, having done some reading on the Third Reich last year, I have been a little disturbed at the many points of resemblance between Hardin's social-eugenics theories and the practice of Adolph Hitler.

The Model United Nations ran yesterday and will continue into today with the students learning first hand how difficult the art of diplomacy is. However, the UN has numerous shortcomings, the greatest being the obstinacy of the member states who comprise it. Acting in the unfamilial role of a devil's advocate I would like to advance the contention that the UN should disengage itself from the United Nations. With the advent of the hot line and satellite communications, plus the growing US-Soviet detente; the need for us as a common meeting ground has diminished. The US pays a huge amount for the upkeep of the UN but receives nothing but barbs from member nations for its troubles. I do not think it is worthwhile for us to remain in the organization.

Position papers and clarifications of points specifically for this "logos play" should be directed to Campus Editor.

Something old, something new, something borrowed, and something blue took the 1980 Academy awards by force tonight in the sometimes tear-filled Hollywood Bowl.

The Something Old was John Whine, the fat but balding sex symbol who last night accepted his first Academy award ever for his "best actor" performance in the box-office smash "Griffite." Whine, who has been acting since 1863, won his first award in an emotion-packed atmosphere. Appearing later, Whine said, "I would have cried a lot more if they had passed me up before the crowd-sober this lime- Whine, production of Sawhorse," awarded to the film because of a scene in which the fat hut murdered by a rhinocerous.

The Something New was John Whine, who has been acting since 1970 - in the movie "Gritface," the one-eyed, drunken Whine played a one-eyed drunken lawman. Whine was up for an award, but lost.

The something blue was "Best Actor" John Wayne, as he stepped up to receive his award.

The story concerns the everyday battles of two ideological romches in New York City. One of the film's songs, "Nobody's Talking," by the Silent Majority, was also up for an award, but lost.

In "Griffite," the one-eyed, drunken Whine played a one-eyed drunken Sawhorse.

The something blue was "Midnight Sawhorse," the movie that pitted the studio's controversial "OW" rating and the Academy Award as "Best Movie." The "OW" rating which admits no one under eighty-five without a pacifier, was awarded to the film because of a scene in which the heroine is brutally raped and murdered by a rhinocerous.

Formaldehyde shortage forces editorial change

Editor-in-Chief Dave Bach yesterday reluctantly announced that T.C. Treanor would become Dave Stauffer's successor as Features Editor.

"He (Stauffer) was beginning to stink," Bach reported, commenting on the three-week-old Stauffer's removal. "The Student Government people were complaining.

Treanor won the position by defeating two crippled nuns in an arm-wrestling tournament. "That last one was tough," he said, commenting on the outcome, "but we were running out of formaldehyde for Stauffer and somebody had to do something.

Stauffer will be interested in the Executive Editorship later this week. Treanor, who was interested quite some time ago, commented on the type of page he wished to develop.

"We will foster search for the truth, community, and constant ego gratification, particularly the latter. This is only the third issue." When told that "latter" implies two elements, Treanor reportedly commented, "that he'll up this year up plying "Dixie." They finally reached a point of musical agreement and played a thumping version of "God Bless America" which brought the crowd to its feet, singing loudly. The Nixon-Agnew team closed the evening with the Gridiron's traditional goodnight song "Auld Lang Syne.

All of which was the Democratic party talking about. How do you like a piano act playing "God Bless America?"
PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI)—Svetlana Alliluyeva, the daughter of Soviet dictator Josef Stalin, said yesterday her marriage to a U.S. citizen will bring her closer to American life and she hopes to become a Soviet citizen.

Miss Alliluyeva, 44, who defected from the Soviet Union in 1967, married William Wesley Peters, 57, in a private ceremony near here Tuesday. At a news conference yesterday, the couple described their meeting only three weeks ago when Miss Alliluyeva came to visit Taliesin West, the architectural school of the late Frank Lloyd Wright. Peters is chief architect for Taliesin Associated Architects, the organization which has carried on the Wright Foundation's work. He had been an associate of Wright since 1932 and was formerly married to the Wright's eldest daughter, also named Svetlana. She was killed in an auto accident in Wisconsin in 1946.

Miss Alliluyeva decided to visit Taliesin West and the Wright "family" after corresponding with another Wright daughter, Iovanna, who lives here with her mother. The Kremlin born Svetlana said she moved by the "unique quality" of Miss Wright's letters and the coincidence of the name of the sister who was killed.

Called "Miraculous!" Mrs. Frank Lloyd Wright, also a native Russian, told reporters she felt a "closeness" to Miss Alliluyeva from the moment they first met.

Peters said his decision to marry the attractive Miss Alliluyeva came about through the "almost miraculous circumstances."

He recounted her defection from her homeland in protest against lack of freedom and said it seemed more than coincidence that she had found her way to Taliesin West, which he described as "the essence of American democracy."

She said she felt it is "a hopeless dream" to try to bring her children here by her first two marriages to this country. "But I hope some day we eventually will be reunited here," she said.

The new Mrs. Peters said it will be "in God's hands" whether they have children of their own.

Goldie Hawn given Oscar

LONDON (UPI)—"My mother told me when I got the role that I was going to get an award," giggled Goldie Hawn. "Myself, I just didn't believe it at first, but now I do."

She was the "surprise" winner of the Oscar for best supporting actress as the dizzy blonde in a love triangle in her first motion picture, "Cactus Flower."

"You know, I was up against some pretty stiff competition and so forth and I went to bed, I woke up very excited and I didn't believe it."

She said she first heard the news when "Al Newman from Columbia Pictures called me as soon as he heard. That was 6 a.m."

"After thinking about it I definitely believe it now, it's pretty nice. It's very important and it's a great thing and I feel very honored," she said.

"An interesting thing is that when I got the part and told mother, she said, 'You're gonna win an award for that,' and I said, 'C'mon mother, I mean it's mother talking right. But she insisted and I said, 'Oh, I'll see' and left it at that and now look what happened."

Goldie occasionally let out her now famous "scatter brained giggle" of the "Laugh In" television show, when speaking of her Oscar:

"The husband says he's going to mount it on my car giggles, he said he's going to mount it on the hood long giggle, but he better not," she said.

When she called her parents in Tacoma Park, Md., outside Washington D.C., she said her mother told her "I can't pull daddy off the ceiling."

CAFE KENNEDY (UPI) -- Space Agency officials said Wed­nesday they were considering substituting a backup astronaut for Thomas K. Mattingly whose susceptibility to the measles threatened a one month delay in the Apollo 13 moon landing mission.

Public affairs officer Alfred Allibrando said backup command module pilot John L. Swigert was under consideration as a possible substitute for Saturday's launch.

Swigert, he said, appears immune to the measles and "is fairly well prepared" for the mission. "Whether we go with him or not, that decision has not been reached," Allibrando said.

Such a switch would mark the first time in U.S. space history that a backup pilot was called upon twofold a mission under such conditions. On one of the Gemini flights the two prime crewmen were killed several weeks before the launch in a plane crash and the backup crew flew the space mission.

Doctors, however, were continuing to make new laboratory tests to determine if Mattingly's condition has changed from tests run the day before. Doctors said the tests showed Mattingly could become ill with the measles in space if launched Saturday.

Delay Costly

If the $375 million expedition the other Apollo 13 crewmen, veteran James A. Lovell and Fred W. Haise, were found to be immune to German measles, a common children's disease. All three were exposed to the measles last week when backup astronaut Charles Duke fell ill with the disease.

Dr. Charles A. Berry, the Apollo medical director, said Monday that if tests on the astronauts' blood showed that any of the pilots were without disease fighting measles antibodies, "the odds are very high that they would get it."

"The latest analysis indicates that command module pilot Thomas K. Mattingly has no immunity to this disease," the Space Agency said in a midday statement. "This finding creates the possibility that unless there is a change in Mattingly's condition between now and launch, he could develop German measles in space."

Berry said earlier that measles "certainly could" disable a moon pilot.

UN strives for peace

The amendment resolution passed 25-14. The amended resolution was passed 25-14 amid controversy over the number of required eye votes and the quorum present and Red Chinese delegation was seated.

Kelly had originally ruled that the resolution required a two-thirds majority vote for passage, but an appeal resulted in only a simple majority needed for passage.

When Kelly announced the appeal vote as 17-14 with 3 abstentions not to hold the chair, the Israeli delegation called for a quorum check. Even though the necessary quorum of half of the member nations had not voted in the appeal Kelly ruled that the vote was legal since the quorum call had come too late. Since further business was impossible, the session adjourned.

Baseball

Clarence J. "Jake" Kline's boys will tour to Bowling Green for a two-game series on Friday and Saturday. The Irish will have a chance to keep the winning streak going.

Denny McClain was the first to make a headline mistake under Denny McLean's leadership. The pitcher was suspended for a month for a fight in the locker room.

The team record stands at 3-2.

The tennis team, fresh off of a big win over Purdue will tour to East Lansing for a try against the Big Ten foe in Northwestern. Sophomore Steve Bawya, Mike Reilly, Rob O'Malley, and freshmen Rob Schefter and Gil Thesan have a point there.
