The Board of Trustees' long awaited statement on parietal hours and hall life, released late yesterday morning, left the door open for halls to individually establish women's visitation hours throughout the week subject to regulation by a Hall Life Board.

However, the statement added that "the Board of Trustees believes strongly that there must be some limitation on visiting hours, which are not to extend beyond 2:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 11:00 p.m. on other nights."

The report continued, "We also remind the students that while some sign-in record may seem irksome at times, it is the students' only protection in the event of legal difficulty."

The decision, related in a letter by Edmund A. Stepan, Chairman of the Board to James Masey, Chairman of the SLC, emphasized that a Hall Life Board would have to show responsibility before the Hall Life Board could approve the hall's individual plan for hours.

In addition, the Trustees said that they were not going to Board an "absolute and irrevocable clause blank." "The Board of Trustees does not meet its ultimate responsibility by simply providing for a general mechanism for good order at the University," the statement continues, "If the mechanism does not, in fact, work, then the Trustees must make other provisions and they will."

The Hall Life Board, originally created in March of last year as the SLC's request, will be elevated to a separate Administrative body and will be a nine member, in-parite board consisting of three administration representatives, three faculty members and three students.

"The Hall Life Board will be appointed by the President of the University, and charged with the responsibility of evaluating the proposals of each residence hall board feels will successfully provide the best hall environment consistent with good order."

The Board will not be completely autonomous however, since the Trustees statement indicates that they feel the Board "will require some administrative guidelines to function effectively." The report says that the trustees have asked that the Vice President for Student Affairs propose such guidelines.

In concluding their reaction to the Trustee's proposal, the Trustees' statement still referred to the new system as "an experiment," "We feel that it is important that the experiment be continued for at least one more school year before final evaluation by the Trustees."

The report requested that the SLC prepare another evaluation of the "experiment" during the 1970-71 school year for consideration at the March 1971 meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees.

In response to the question of drinking on campus the report said the Trustees concurred with the Student Senate recommendation of "the serious problem created by the misunderstanding of the University's prohibition of the use of alcoholic beverages in public places and the service of such beverages to undergraduate guests." It supported the SLC's intention of notifying each student of "the serious legal consequences to which he may be liable for violation of the University's rule." It also asked the SLC to prepare a full explanation of the present rule to state clearly the University's position on the question.

The report concluded with a short commentary on the role of the Hall Life Board of the Odyssey. But they slept in Odyssey's contour couches.

Burn successfully corrects Apollo 13's course, systems go for Friday splashdown in Pacific

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) - Apollo 13 maneuvered onto a safe homeward path Wednesday night, setting up the astronauts for a splashdown in the Pacific Ocean Friday and sparing them certain death in space.

The fateful moment came at 11:32 p.m. EST when spacecraft commander James A. Lovell reached out and punched a yellow button on a control panel. That fired up the engine of the lunar lander, Aquarius, which Apollo has used for three emergency maneuvers since an explosion crippled the command ship.

Zahn Hall, presented a detailed plan for the implementation of the Forum. Winings, who spoke after Brannon, opened the meeting, presented the Administration's basic reasoning behind their proposal.

"The Senators do not speak for the hall in any coherent manner," he said. "The Student Government has long lacked a single unified voice from which to speak."

He stated that there would be three chief advantages to his system. First, Student Government would speak from one unified position. Second, he said that there would be "less party-oriented tactics"

SLC elections back to April 23; petition deadline now Saturday

by Tom Bornholdt

After a considerable degree of controversy following the Student Senate meeting Tuesday night, the Election Committee decided yesterday, LEP committee 23, as the date of the election of the student members of the Student Life Council. the committee did move the deadline for submitting nomination petitions to 10 p.m. Saturday. According to committee member Tom Thrasher, the election committee had originally decided on an election date of April 23, at it was unofficially changed at the last minute to April 30 in a confusion over powers and procedures. The election bill containing the April 30 date was then ratified by the Senate. It was only after the bill had been passed and the meeting was nearing its end that Thrasher realized good order that the date had been changed without the approval of the entire Election Committee.

The Election Committee met again last night at 8:00 p.m. and discussed the issue. Student Body President Dave Krashna and Student Body Vice President Harold荔 were present at the meeting. Senator Russ Stone, Tom Thrasher, and Fred Guiffra were present at the meeting. Winings and Stones were not overly concerned over the issue.

A group of approximately twenty students and teachers gathered at the SMC clubhouse Tuesday evening for a rep session about where the college is and where it's going. The meeting was organized by Dr. Art Hochberg, of the Psychology department, and Dr. Peter Smith, of the Math department.

Dr. Hochberg briefly outlined the purpose of the gathering as an attempt to find ways of making the community more human. He talked about the stereotypical roles that have developed at SMC and the need to have more "informal reactions, more communication to discuss relevant issues." The main goal was to discover ways in which the students and faculty can foster this attitude.

"There are a lot of old-line faculty holding little castles of power," Hochberg said. "New teachers can either take it, fight or leave. This is legitimate apathy reinforced by the older faculty that is the main problem."

He observed that on the surface, "things seem to be okay, but they are actually stagnated." Reactions to some programs within the college are generally bad. Dr. Smith agreed with these ideas and further described the gathering as an attempt to "open up" and bring honesty to discussion on campus. He mentioned the SMCCN relationship as one of the main questions to be settled.

During the course of the meeting, some disadvantages of the faculty system were discussed. It was pointed out that the faculty assembly has twenty-three committees, a structure which is not conducive to any kind of effective action. Committee members were made about members of the faculty not knowing each other and about the fact that the day ends abruptly at 5:00.

Hochberg said, "You can't stand in the parking lot at 5:00 because you'll get hit by a car. Everybody's out." He stated that the faculty have an orientation program in September to help new members feel a part of the college. Another idea was to have faculty with research projects to do their work at the college and sit in on the meetings. The program has always had a social emphasis, and it was suggested that more faculty participation might help to add more intellectual consideration. The question of orientation and help for the student's college career, will be settled during the next meeting.

Thursday, next Monday evening at 7:30, in the chabuse. The group plans to continue interested on either campus, and individuals responsible for the freshmen program will be invited.

The group hopes that these discussions will lead to some positive action in the way of improvement at SMC.

HUCCAIR CHAIRMEN HOPE ENTHUSIASM SNOWBALLS

UAC chairman hope enthusiasm snowballs

by Steve Lazar

Rob Bartlett and Maureen Meyer, the University Arts Council's new chairmen, said last night in the boxing room of the Fieldhouse that they would like to see the enthusiasm generated by February's Student Art Festival to snowball into a large community response toward the arts.

Both English majors, the two succeed senior Tom Krock who has chaired the UAC since its inception last fall.

Their plans for the UAC include a "more positively structured" program composed of an advisory board, fund raising committee, functions dealing with the arts, and a publishing venture. A new structure, they hope, will insure the continued growth and success of the Council in its second year.

"We're not a service organization in the sense of Cinema 70 or Student Government," said Miss Meyer. "We're here to set up an environment," added Bartlett.

Bartlett noted that SBP Dave Krashna's program calls for the arts to play an important part on campus. He said that his group would allow the students to do their work at the college and sit in on the meetings.

The SLC election is held with a plan that uses four election districts. Two will be the North Quad and the South Quad. Both of the Quads will elect two SLC members. A third district will be Grace and Flanner Halls. The fourth will be Off-Campus, Moreau St. Joe, Holy Cross and Carroll Halls.

Also discussed at this meeting was the assignment of student cabinet nominees to committees. The UAC's不去, "admitted" pledge, to which they are committed by the constitution. Again Krashna said that he was doing his best to comply with the constitution, and that personal grudges would not make a mockery of student government and the voting process.

Tarn, Hollo read new poetry works for SLF

Last night's session of the Sophomore Literary Festival was highlighted by the readings of Ansem Hollo and Nathaniel Tarn. Both poets used the opportunity to read unpublished works.

Tarn, a poet and anthropologist from Princeton, read from the lyric poem A Nowhere for Folly, a long free verse poem with frequent allusions to Latin American culture. Tarn described the work as a series of "poetic portraits." Hollo, a traveling poet who teaches in the creative writing department at the University of Iowa, read from the first four months of his journal- poem Year. Year is a collection of impressions which Hollo plans to assemble each month and publish at the end of the year.

Hollo also read a wide selection of short, often humorous, often anti-intellectual poems from several of his volumes. Among them was a poem "To Gary Snyder" supposedly about a bear dressed in the clothes of a Vietnamese peasant which Hollo had purchased in a head shop.

The bear, however, is really the folklore "Badger," a mythical animal with bearlike features who serves as the far Eastern equivalent of a scapegoat. "I didn't do it, the Badger did."

In stark contrast to Hollo's flippantry style, Tarn read from the recently published Beautiful Contradictions in a sharp serious tone. Beautiful Contradictions is a collection of poems written on a lake in Guatemala, a country which Tarn had visited as an anthropologist and revisited as a poet.

This afternoon's session of the SLF will feature Allen Plaza and Michael Anania, poetry editors of The Nation and The Swallow Press respectively, reading from A Night For Risting and The Color of Dust, at 3:00 in the Library Auditorium.

Mignanelli suggests SBP's removal from committees and more decision making." Third, there would be more awareness of the part of the student body he said.

The second speaker was Tom Mignanelli, Senator from Grace Hall. He noted that there was not a bill in the Senate to provide money to the halls through the Hall Presidents Council.

He also proposed that the chairmen of the HPC and at least one Stay Senator should be members of the SBP's cabinet and that another Stay Senator should be on the HPC to further the communication SBP.Krishna Fech is essential to a productive Student Government.

Mignanelli gave four reasons for the preservation of the Senate. First, he said it was valuable in research activities. Second, he noted that it was the only group on campus that could be considered a "representative legislative body." He also said that the Senate had done excellent work on this year's budget. Finally, he argued that the recently-installed committee system was productive and had even greater potential if used properly.

Mignanelli also presented four arguments against the proposed Student Forum. First, he stated that it was too small to do both the Senate's job and the HPC's. Second, he argued that the rules the Forum would be conducted under were too informal, and the Forum would get too bogged down on unimportant matters. Third, the Forum would not be a representative body, whereas the Senate was. Finally, he stated that Krishna's overwhelming landslide victory in the SBP elections was not a mandate for the Forum.

"Perhaps a referendum is the only way to do it," he said.

The third speaker was Tom Duffy, former Senator from Zahm Hall. He began by reading a letter from John Zimmerman, former Stay Senator who could not attend. Zimmerman favored the Forum because "very little of significance has come from the Senate in the three years I have known it." There is no function of the Senate which could not be done better by the proposed Senate President. He argued what you're doing by making the Hall President the Senator and the Vice-President the President if you've got a good VP." He also opposed the use of Hall Presidents on committees.

Tom Thrauster, Stay Senator from Grace Hall, and Fred Gershoff, Stay Senator from Lyons, defended the Senate because of its work on the budget and its research capabilities.

After about an hour of discussion, SBP Krishna adjourned the meeting and it was decided to meet again Wednesday, April 22.

Willis Nutting

Lately The Observer staff has been overrun by a bunch of crazy people. Everyday, they come in with their bundles of copy, smiling, passing out buttons and good cheer. The Nutting for President people are the friendliest "radicals" on campus, so it seemed worthwhile to get to know about the man that was behind all the hubbub. While information about the administrative changes the Nutting group proposes abounds, Dr. Nutting has remained quietly in the background in relative obscurity, lauded by his friends and colleagues but unknown to most of the students.

But the natural question is "What does bird watching have to do with being an administrator of Notre Dame?" Well, it seems that a man can inspire a bunch of city-slickers to get up at five-thirty in the morning to learn about birds knowing something about teaching people. And there is no doubt that Dr. Nutting is a great teacher, besides being a wise and compassionate man.

For myself, the Nutting for President gang is saying two things. First, that far all of his efforts, our present leader is not able to adequately do his job because he is not in contact with the students. This same criticism applies to the other top level administrators, who for the most part think that things are about as good as can be expected.

Secondly, the Nutting people are saying that Willa Nutting is a wise man that is being forced to retire from a job that he is a master of. He is a man that has more to say about learning than anyone on campus, and not many people are listening to him. Failure to listen is a very real force. The only two men that have expressed any interest in Dr. Nutting.

A lot of people have thought of the Nutting for President Campaign as a nice way of honoring a nice guy who has some pretty far-out ideas about education. That is a mistake, for Dr. Nutting has a lot of wise things to say to his administrators here. Possibly all the talk about Nutting as President is viewed as some sort of underground threat or coup d'etat that will go away if ignored. The administration is avoiding meeting Dr. Nutting and his ideas. This is also very bad.

May I propose a compromise? I think the administrators declare May 1 as Free City Day. On that day, classes will be canceled that off so that people can read The Free City and discuss its ideas and how they relate to Notre Dame. If half the students or faculty don't read the book or go to the public discussions planned on that day, it is defeat.

Second, let the administrators read the book and talk to Dr. Nutting and the students and if they can't leave room from the red tape for one day to do that, then we are in deep, deep trouble.

Third, let the Nutting for President people consider the idea that Dr. Nutting be made the head of the experimental college that is planned for the sophomores next year. Forcing Dr. Nutting to retire is a crime; making him President of Notre Dame is unrealistic. How about putting him as an administrator, so that he can share his ideas and his personal charm with those much maligned and overworked men, and Nutting as head of the experimental college, so that some of the students can also share his thoughts? What I am suggesting is that we should all benefit from Dr. Nutting.

Instead of continuing our present unsatisfactory and disturbing form of education, let's take a spring day to enjoy and from the wisdom of a man who has found knowledge and happiness. At least we should have the humility to admit that our present course is seriously misguided, and the hope that The Free City could be more enjoyable and educational alternative.

The Observer can run articles on Don Mooney talking to cows and if Sue Bury can talk to a meadowland, there would be no reason why Ron or Ed of the Art Tental beads talking to pigs.

The pigs featured in this article are not of the law enforcement but rather of the animal husbandry variety.

Our intrepid travelers (Ron Mastriana, photographer Bob Spaulding and myself) went along for a look at their conscientious record of class attendance. Each nobly refused to cut his late hour of class attendance they didn't commence until near the dinner hour.

North Liberty, Indiana.

"Remember last year, 3 of us went. Gene was there then, he was our pig expert. Boy, he felt right at home in that barn. He lived on a pig farm when he was little."

Proceeding along picturesque Routh 23 South, a short detour, due to lack of a map, excepting one that clearly defined the northernmost roadway system at a glance. No one knew where picturesque Route 23 was or even if it was there we wanted them finally arrived at Walkerstown, Indiana.

"Yeah, there's a guy in overalls."

The auction itself didn't start for a half hour, so we adjourned into the adjoining cafe.

Sitting at the counter, Ron moaned, "I can eat anything after smelling that barn."

"Well, we are going to see if a lady likes us at all."

"What would like?"

"Carrot, custard, mustard, and onions."

"Could I have cheese... and donuts. could you cook the onions?"

"No!"

"What's yours, Pati?"

"(hesitantly) "Could I have a cheeseburger?"

"If you pay for it."

"Well, that's what I'd like."

"What's a cheeseburger?"

"What is there?"

"Cheese, custard, mustard, and onions."

"Could I have cheese... and donuts. could you cook the onions?"

"No!

"No!"

"Well, just put a few uncooked ones on there, ok? (after she left) Why did you want the uncooked ones? we ever put cooked onions on hamburgers."

"I figured it would be more sanitary."

"What?"

"Yes, those ladies that cook and serve are the same ones that bring the pigs into the auction next door. You can never be too careful. I ended up taking off the onions anyway. They didn't even smell like onions - they smelled like pigs. Everything smelled like pigs."

The livestock commissioner walks in. He sits next to Ron. He is showing off State of Indiana arm patch, and his official Hoosier silver badge.

"Can you see from Notre Dame, huh?"

"Yes."

"What doin' in these parts?"

"We came to buy pigs for a pig's chug.

"Oh (helpfully) "It's for an annual weekend."

"What's a weekend?"

"Ann Trust All? Sounds like fun."

The conversation died there. Finishing their repast, they headed out behind the barn for a look at the merchandise. As they arrived four good size hog boys made a bid for freedom.

"Stop them pigs!"

"Sure, they weigh more than I do. I'm not going near them... they're staring at us... look at the teeth on him, he even has tusks."

The pigs escaped, but the owners finally captured them yelling "hey, hey, hey," and hitting with stonc hammers. The pigs yelled back. It sounded like so many mariachis.

The intrepid trio had had enough of the pens and headed inside for the auction itself. The barn had been converted into what resembled a small arena, cut in half. The local folk and their families were already seated. Some had brought the children, others were eating picnic lunches. The odor was noxious.

The harker started into his spell as small groups of pigs were heralded in. His lingvo was unintelligible to the novice listener. As he muttered, numbers in the crowd nodded or raised an eyebrow, or made a visible finger and the bids went higher. Underneath the language were the signs of shyness.

"Bob, don't move a muscle or you'll own a bunch of pigs."

"Buy our 3 pigs."

"Don't scratch it or you'll own 400 pigs."

"Buy our 3 cute pigs."

The city-dickers had had enough. They head back to civilization confident that the pigs that they have chosen (averaging 160 lbs.) will best the students in the annual pig chase. Who will bring home the bacon?

The Triumphal Return of Maestro Poco Piu and Madama Sotto Voce with accompaniment by Freddie Freeloader, a benefit concert in the most pommaceous manner he has lived since 18 and 19 in the Little Theatre, St. Mary's College. The enduring performance of the decade is scheduled for Thursday: 8:00 p.m. on both evenings and a donation of one dollar is requested from art patrons for the benefit of College's Contemporary Arts Collection. The wildly televised trio who have just returned from a tour in the fartest reaches of the continent have逗on their services. "We cannot possibly accept a fee for what we are doing for St. Mary's," admits the Maestro.

The Maestro, Madama Mia and Faulein are better known in Europe where they have performed for crowned crowned heads. Every European who is over twenty can remember the Maestro's debut at the Salzburg Festival of 1955, which the Austrian critics labeled "A Night to Remember."

The Maestro appeared somewhat earlier in a Covent Garden Concert in which J. Askew Ramsey of the London Times said "left the audience agape." Faulein Capella, it will be recalled, is the child prodigy who first started playing at age 2 and reached her peak at age four. Her every performance has sought to recapture that astonishing moment in the musical history of three have been together since the middle of the last decade, making music for thousands of miles and having his eye on the beef at the auction in the United States. The Maestro has also invited the People's Democratic Shakespearean Play to present one out of the great historic most unusual scenes. There will also be a special address to the audience by the director, who made her first public appearance in last year's production.

Recently the Maestro, Madama Mia and Faulein were interviewed and asked why they keep such a hectic performance schedule. The Maestro replied, "Because we want to bring more beauty into the world—the voice is capable of a sublime statement that can drive one to madness."

"The Maestro and Madama Mia nodded at the suited animated characters.

Drug conference begins tomorrow

More than 400 persons are expected to attend an area-wide conference on “The Drug Scene:

Plight of Mexican-Americans

subject of two-day conference

The plight of the Mexican-American working and living in the midwest will be the subject of a two-day conference at Notre Dame Saturday and Sunday, sponsored by the University’s Urban Studies Program. Mrs. Graciela Olivariez, a native of Denver, Colo., who in June will be the first woman to be graduated from the Notre Dame law school, is coordinator of the conference. She expects representatives of such federal agencies as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to participate in the conference, as well as scholars, nurses, housewives, migrant laborers, professionals and elected officials.

Included in the 100 participants in the conference will be Dr. George E. Sanchez, author of “The Forgotten Minority,” the book which first awakened the southwest to the plight of Mexican and other minorities. Julian Samora, professor of sociology at Notre Dame and Joseph Arrendondo, state representative from Gary, Ind.

The conference will discuss four main problems confronting Mexicanos-migrants housing, the validity of the 1970 Census as applied to migrant workers, the possibility of establishing a regional center to serve Mexicanos in the midwestern states, and the prospect of organizing a national conference of Mexicanos in the southwest, midwest and eastern states.

In addition to discussions, Mrs. Olivariez expects to display Chicano art and sculpture and publications and newspapers authored by Mexican-American youths in the midwest and southwest.

Sessions will begin at 2 p.m. and continue through a reception for visiting speakers and guests at 5:30 p.m.

Mrs. H. Parker, director of South Bend’s Drug Abuse Center, will summarize activities of this information and referral agency at the Friday evening session. Mrs. Tyler holds a degree in medical technology from the University of Tennessee, and is the wife of a design engineer at Bendix Corporation and the mother of three children.

The Drug Abuse Center is sponsored by the YWCA of St. Joseph County.

Other major speakers at the conference will include the Rev. Daniel Egan, widely known as the “junky priest” and founder of a half-way house for addicts in Greenwich Village; Dr. Ivan Pangrac, chief psychologist of South Bend’s Mental Health Center, and Sgt. Robert Zuck of the Indiana State Police.

Dr. Robert L. Devetski, director of post-graduate studies at St. Joseph’s Hospital, South Bend, and author of several articles on drug-related clinical problems, will discuss the history of the drug program, and Dr. Lillian Holdeman, coordinator of health education in the South Bend Schools, will speak on the current environment in schools.

A feature of the conference, sponsored jointly by the Junior League of South Bend and the Center for Continuing Education, will be the appearance of a panel of former drug addicts.

Baseball

The Notre Dame baseball squad is in the middle of getting started this spring. Not including yesterday's game against Michigan, the Irish season is a very poor 1-3. A huge win is needed against Michigan to help ease the headache for coach "Jake" Kline. Pitching has not been the on-field strength of the ND hurlers, but equally, however, when the mound stuff diagonally across the plate, they couldn't come up with that "big hit."

Add to this the fact that the defense hasn't been the tightest in the nation and what you find is a noticeable deficiency in the Irish force.

The Irish travel to Western Michigan tomorrow and enter- tain them at 3 p.m. Saturday on Carter Field.

Track

The track squad has had a responsively high start to its spring under way. The team is out to overcome the success this weekend in Colum- bia for the second straight year. Coach Jack Dolph has entered his runners in the Ohio State Relays and there will be a number of outstanding teams registered for this event. The team is hoping to display even stronger suits of coach Wilson's unit. They should be able to come up with a respectable showing and possibly gain some confidence for the always rugged Drake Relays which will be held next weekend.

Football

This weekend Air Force Academy moves its "boys" into the stadium for the second big home game of the year for the Irish. The Irish are still experimenting with next year's starting lineup. There may be three or five changes made with the tentative lineup used last week. It would probably occur in the defensive platoon of assistant coach George Keenhan.

Tennis

The tennis team will be looking to go up in its record this weekend as they entertain two rivies. Friday show Cincinnati appearing on the Carter Courts and Saturday will bring the Dutch Blue Devils to town in an effort to top Tom Falton's netters.

Lacrosse

Facing a similar task to the ruggers will be the lacrosse club as they host the Wester Nel Denison University. Denison's team has fallen short and they have proved "had medicine" for the Irish before this season.

The stickmen's offensive hopes will ride with hardfutul Kenny Lund. Lund has no thing short of phenomenal in the first two ND victory.

The Irish will be on the Stepan fields Saturday afternoon.

Sailing

The sailing club will split up and perform at three different regattas this weekend. The feature event will be the John F. Kennedy Memorial Cup at Annapolis, Maryland.

The two other regattas for Robert Day, the Detroit State, Ohio and Carbondale, Illinois for the Ohio State and Southern Illinois Regattas respectively.
