WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, in high spirits after his grueling European tour, announced yesterday he will address the nation at 9 p.m. EDT today and make a major speech from the White House, radio and television broadcast from the White House, timed less than a month before the November 4 election.

President Nixon announced yesterday he will appear at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., where he will address the nation at 9 p.m. today, followed by a brief to the press, according to a White House aide.

President Nixon said yesterday was "prepared only after it was thoroughly considered" and covered all issues involved in the Paris talks. He refused to comment further saying only that he expected speculation to continue, and to return to his office without taking any questions from newsmen.

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese government order to obtain haircuts. All Vietnamese are required to carry identity cards. The old one gets negative reaction.

Mr. Cronin has been tabled at the Academic Affairs Council meeting.

The students, who returned to Washington Friday night from his 12,000 mile trip to five nations, including Communist Yugoslavia, bounced unexpectedly into the White House press room late in the morning.

"It will be the most comprehensive statement ever made by the President on the war and will cover all the major issues in the Southeast Asia area," he said, speaking without notes.

"We do not consider this to be a propaganda gimmick," he added. "We are not just saying it as a speech."

Before Today's speech, Senator John D. (Jay) Rockefeller, Jr., introduced the proposed constitution. The old one is being impounded by the police. There is no legislative branch. There is no executive branch. There is no court. In this country, "People are going to get their haircuts."

"We had decided not to invite visitors with long hair cuts to our country," Nguyen Ngoc Huyen, director of the National Press Center told a newsmen.

"I don't think the proposed constitution is any better than our present one. It's just the same thing with few people," said Senator Russell B. (Bob) Dole of Kansas Administration's proposed Stu­dent Government Constitution.

"It's not as good as it could be. It has many of the flaws of the old constitution. For example, take the Board of Directors of the Student Assembly. You have the SBP, the SBVP, the Student Government Treasurer, the Student Union Director and a faculty member elected by the board. The only truly independ­ent member is the Vice President for Student Affairs."

Regarding the elimination of the Senate, and establishing a President's Council instead, he claimed that "The President's Council has no power. It can only suggest measures. Last year for the new Southern Count Bill which is now being considered by the Student Life Council. The President's Council could only suggest that..."

He claims that the elimination of a legislative branch is not good. Senator stated, "The Student Life Council is subordinate to the executive branch (in the constitution). Dave did it deliber­ately so he can be the top dog." He went on to explain, "I can't say if he did it for himself personally, or on a more abstract plane."

Fred Giuffrida, another Senator said that the proposed constitution "ignores the problem of a weak Senate. I agree that the Senate is weak and ineffectual, but the problem is not the placing of power in the hands of the executive branch. There is no legislative power in the whole thing, which is a conspicuous absence."

"The President's Council is a worse body than the Senate. It's less representative and undemo­cratic. The half presidents are overburdened, they have impor­tant work to do in the halls."

"When Krashna was running last year, he and his followers were saying, 'power to the people' and I don't see any power to the people, I see power in one man. It's unrepre­sentative and undemocratic."

"I'm disappointed in the proposed constitution. The old one has to be changed, but I think this new version could be im­proved."

"I'm surprised Senator Tom Thrasher commented, 'It's not as good as it could be. It's substantially inferior to what they could have come out with."

Pat Weher, the other Senator said he does not think that "the proposed constitution is as good as the present one."

"The major point against it he feels is the replacement of the Senate with the President's Council. He says that "It is not necessary that the work of the Senate is being done by fewer people. The Hall Presi­dent doesn't have time."

"I see nothing wrong with the Senate. We have to get people interested in it, we have to be willing to put out for Student Government. They can't expect everything to be handed to them."

Chairman of the Hall Presi­dent's Council, John Birkett, says that "It's a pretty good constitution. However, I'm not too enthusiastic about the role the Senate has to play. I think they have enough to do on their own. But if this is the way it goes through, it can be done."

He only voiced two reservations concerning the pro­posed charter. He's "Not sure" the SLC chair would chair the Council and doesn't think the student SLC member should vote on the budget.

But Imhoff, President of Benedict, says he has some reserva­tion about the President's Coun­cil. "My primary reservation is the idea of the President assum­ing the role of handling the budget. That kind of scares me. It's taking the hall president from the halls, which is where he should be. I feel the Hall President job is more internal."

Princeton Plan discussed: A Postmortem

By Dennis McCoy

Last Friday Notre Dame went to the polls to decisively register its rejection of the controversial Princeton Plan. Scarcity by its absence was fifty-two percent of the student body. Much has been said by many concerning the plan and the vote.

What happened Friday has caused a great deal of discussion on the political atmosphere current at Notre Dame. Analysis of the event and its implication has been heard. In order to shed light on the situation, the Observer interviewed two political scientists: Prof. Richard Bohan of the St. Mary's Political Science department and Prof. John Kromkowski of Notre Dame's Government department.

Each educator had a different viewpoint as to what happened Friday. Mr. Bohan cited two basic reasons for the defeat and the bad voter turn out. He shared with many, including SBP David Kraksin, the opinion that the proposal was dead before it ever came to vote. Bohan cited the separation of the faculty and students in voting the requirement of an absolute majority, and the method of time makeup as conscious moves by the administration to insure the defeat of the proposal.

"It was like using heavy artillery to swat a fly," commented Bohan. He speculated that these precautions were not even necessary because the plan would have probably failed on its own merits due to the second factor: student apathy.

Mr. Kromkowski, while admitting that the conditions of the referendum might have kept people away thought they should not have. He referred to this as a "defeatist attitude" on the part of the students. Although he did not want to go into a detailed analysis of the vote, he suggested that the poor showing might be explained by the fact that "the vast majority of students were not in favor."

But the specific case of Friday's referendum has caused many to conclude university, Bohan argued, citing the fact that many of the participating students may have been "nurtured in an atmosphere of apathy or apoliticality on this campus that many find deplorable.

Both gentlemen suggested ways of examining the problem. Prof. Bohan observed that the phenomenon of apathy is present among any large group of people. He opined that this apathy has always been stronger at Notre Dame due to the fact that it is situated "just near the edge of a large city but not close enough to be involved.

This isolation from the larger community was blamed by Mr. Bohan for much of the lack of interest. He expressed the belief that this situation makes it possible for a party raid to draw a crowd of 2,900 who the peace rally at St. Mary's attracted only half that total. Part of the blame was laid to the administration which "should have encouraged apathy."

In the past, "the football team was the only thing to interest you." But he added that things are "definitely different now."

But the reasons for not voting at Notre Dame are different from outside the university, Bohan argued, citing the fact that ninety percent of graduate students do vote.

Mr. Kromkowski took a different view of the matter. He agreed that Notre Dame might not be as active politically as other campuses but did not see it as a problem.

"I don't see that as a bad sign. Perhaps students are forming a basis of opinion rather than experimenting with power."

Placement Bureau plans open house

Those considering a career with the State Department may have a difficult time obtaining the necessary information. Many students who continue on at Notre Dame have no idea of the job openings available to them. By the time the students graduate, they will be faced with a vacuum of information.

The State Department, in conjunction with the Placement Bureau and the Student Affairs Office, is planning an open house for the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. The open house will be held on October 12 and 13.

The Bureau will present a lecture, "The State Department," on Tuesday, October 12, from 4 to 5 p.m. Thursday, October 8, from 2 to 3 p.m.

Many students are not aware of the extent of the opportunities available to them.

The Placement Bureau has arranged for Mr. James Barnes, a career officer in the U.S. Foreign Service Department of State, to speak to students interested in that branch of government service on October 12 and 13. His interest is directed primarily at Arts and Letters, Business, Economics, and students, especially those with a background in public administration.

Directories coming soon

The 1970-71 Notre Dame and St. Mary's Directories will be distributed in approximately three weeks.

Students have two month lag between school's start and the arrival of the directories is a necessary delay according to Student Union director Bob Pohl. Pohl said the administration needed four weeks to correct the original computer listing once all the data on campus addresses became final, and it takes another four weeks for the amended version to be sent off and printed.

Every year the directory is distributed free to the doors of all students at Notre Dame and St. Mary's. The expenses are met by advertisements. The book contains the names, addresses, phone numbers and home addresses of all the students on both campuses, and information on faculty members and administration. The directory is being printed by Plains Publishers of Lubbock Texas.
