The Observer Publisher Guy De Sapio expressed "dispointment in the editorial which appeared Friday, in The Scholastic, the official university newspaper.

The editorial commented on an alleged "plan" of publisher De Sapio to merge the two publications. It also implied that The Scholastic is "political "maneuvering" and "competitive back-biting" in its criticism of The Scholar. "I was very surprised to see the accusations of political "maneuvering" and "competitive back-biting" in the tone that it took," De Sapio said. "I was surprised because they are totally false."

The editors and staff of The Scholar, the university newspaper, who are putting in a lot of time just to get the paper out. I don't see where any of them would have the time or the desire to engage in such tactics," he said.

De Sapio said that he assumed the editorial was aimed at him and that it was the result of an "instant and cheap" accusation that he had with Steve Brion, The Scholar's editor on Friday, October 2.

It was at that time that De Sapio asked the student flower conversation that they had been last May about the possibility of The Scholar merging with The Scholastic. According to De Sapio, he had just got off the phone from talking to The Observer's printer about the cost of printing. The Scholastic on newspaper when Brion entered the office.

De Sapio stated that he felt at the time that there would be a tremendous cost saving if The Scholastic was printed on newsprint instead of on the paper upon which The Scholar had been printed. He had asked his printer and found that it would be possible to print the Scholastic for less than 10,000 dollars a year compared to the 40,000 dollars it costs now. The Scholar's density budget is over 25,000 dollars.

If adopted, the plan will in effect, abolish the student senate according to Student Government Research and Development and Development Commissioner Tim Connor.

Chilean gives political talk

Why, after six years of ter-mendous strides towards economic improvement, would a movement vote out that administration in favor of a left-wing-Christian Democratic government of Hernan Vera-Godoy, from the National University in Chile, attempted to answer this question in a lecture Sunday night titled "Political Systems in Chile."

As a member of the Executive Bureau of Reform of the Christian Democratic administration from 1964 till the present, Prof. Vera gave his first-hand impressions of the political malfunctions of the recent elections in his country.

Since 1964, according to Vera, the Chilean government increased educational opportunities, fostered agrarian and housing reforms that were unprecedented in their scope, and negotiated an agreeable nationalization of 51% of its total American investment in Chile.

Vera's main point was after a long series of economic and social reforms, the population voted out that administration, and allowed a coalition of Communists and Socialists to give 36% of the vote, and a narrow victory, to the opposing left-wing candidates.

The reasons, according to Vera, revolve around an attempt to create a majority of the population through its programmatic policies which were able to frustrate much of its impact on the people. Such attempts to each inflation, the administration defeated its purpose by simulaneously pulling people into salaries, instituting reform programs, etc.

Because of the long history of democratic government, Vera did not express concern over the election results. The newly-elected president has expressed his commitment to applying Christian Constitution, and if the past is any indication, the new administration will not have a drastic effect on any of the fundamental government policies.

Vera did, however, recognize the threat of political upheaval if the economic situation in Chile worsens in the near future.

Following the recent elections, the Chilean economy took a drastic plunge, and a repetition or intensification of that crisis might bring about the crash of the more liberal, left-wing reforms.

As a rule, Vera stressed the fact that Chile, perhaps more than any other Latin American country, can serve as a model of stable economic development, and successful economic policies.

Chile has certainly benefitted from political fusion which has plagued other South American nations. The lecture was sponsored by the Latin American Circle at Notre Dame. Many composed of students and faculty members from the two institutions. Prof.
Vera will offer another lecture tonight on Chilean Culture, at 8:00 PM in the Library Auditorium.

Police quell riots

"The Crypt," a new record shop
open on ND campus

A campus record shop with albums priced sixty cents less than their bookstore equivalent will be opened late this week or early next week.

Former Senator John Matiej
The shop, known as "The Crypt," will be located in Matiej's dormitory residence, room 416 Lyons. Matiej failed in his drive to win re-election last spring with a cooperative bookstore
among his campaign plans.

Bookstore prices are "slightly established," for a college and it's about time this service was established," said Matiej. He added that the service is provided at other colleges and named the Universities of Illinois and Michigan as examples.

Album prices will be $3.10 for a record selling at $3.75 in the bookstore and $3.00 for bookstore albums priced at $4.25. Matiej admitted that his original intent was to undersell
the only other campus source of records not in stock. He said the orders will be filled within a week.

The idea for "The Crypt" was originated last year when Matiej was frustrated because he couldn't find a dealer and there were doubts about getting University approval. Over the sumnertime, many records were purchased from a dealer in Chicago, whom he refused to name, and had little trouble obtaining approval this fall from the various authorities.

When asked about the Bookstore's reaction to "The Crypt," Matiej replied,
"They don't know about it yet."

In the meantime, Manager Brother Conor Moran, C.S.C., was unavailable for comment Friday afternoon.

may run, said Stone, but will so as a write-in.

Stone also mentioned that the number of candidates whose name was greater than the number for the last few student Senate elections. Those in the entire list of candidates, mentioned by halls, with the number of signatures elected from each hall in parental

Ho Chi Minh trail bomb

SAIGON (UPI) -- U.S. B-52 bombing guided by ground radar hit the Ho Chi Minh supply corridor between Thailand and Cambodia. The 111d putch the trail. Radar bases on in Laos.

The Cambodian government claims that only 18 feet wide, the road will remain 11 feet wide opposite the Cambodian trail. The radar bases in Laos were widened three times to give a uniform appearance and allow the operation of two flight lines. It is now 18 feet wide.

De Sapio of Chicago says that Ho Chi Minh Trail area which permitted the bombing had been recognized as a zone with no stoppage by the U.S. government.

Wilson said the University had expressed concern about the future of the Ho Chi Minh Trail area which permitted the bombing had been recognized as a zone with no stoppage by the U.S. government.

(Saigon): U.S. B-52 bombers, guided by ground radar, hit the Ho Chi Minh Trail supply corridor to Cambodia, it was revealed Tuesday. The huge explosion, the biggest since the Saigon regime, was reported down in Laos.

Saigon government spokesmen reported a total of 39 Communist soldiers killed in two operations inside Cambodia. Twenty-six were reported killed in two clashes in the area of Kon Tum, 50 miles southeast of Phnom Penh. Spokesmen said 13 more were killed four miles east of the rubber plantation town of Kreak, 85 miles northwest of Saigon.

The second occurred just 15 miles north of Saigon at Phu Cuong, capital of Binh Duong province. Spokesmen said three 107mm rockets hit the town, wounding two civilians.

Ho Chi Minh Trail was the route taken by Vietnamese soldiers in the Tet offensive. The road was widened three times to give a uniform appearance. The U.S. government has recognized the area as a zone with no stoppage.

Record enrollment for SMC

St. Mary's College experienced unusually large enrollment last fall. The history of 1,711 students registered for class during the first semester of 1970-71 academic year.

According to figures released by Registrar Donald C. Rossenthal, 1,574 students are engaged in regular, full-time studies at the College while an additional 137 students are taking course work part-time or during the summer.

Resident enrollment was also at an all-time high with 1,415 young women living on campus in the College's five residence halls. To accommodate the growing number of residence students which increased 140 over last year, the College relocated space creating new dormitory areas in Holy Cross and LeMans Halls and opened a new area, Augusta Hall, to student housing for the first time.

Freshman represent the largest class with 503 members, sophomores, 468; the junior class includes 377 students, and seniors number 235.

Of the 67 students currently enrolled in overseas programs, 54 are sophomores studying either the new Saint Mary's Rome Program, or cooperative programs with the University of Milan, Ludwig Maximillian University in Munich, France, Innsbruck, Austria and Tokyo, Japan.

It is most unfortunate that The Scholaric's editors have chosen to inflate what was essentially one afternoon conversation between two people into a "proposal" that threatens The Scholaric's integrity.

When we resumed publication there were several things we decided to ask for from the University. Among those was academic credit for the editors, and some sort of financial remuneration. We also wanted to determine what The Observer's financial relationship with the university would be in the future.

We have talked to people in the administration concerning academic credit for some members of the staff and as of this moment the issue is still unresolved.

That we have talked to have reacted favorably to the proposal.

As far as financial matters go we have mentioned various ideas to the administration, who in the absence of any definite proposals, have arranged a meeting on the paper.

It seemed obvious that The Scholaric's funds would be drastically cut, possibly to the detriment of the publication. In order to assure its continuance as a weekly journal of opinion and commentary our possibility that was raised was to have The Scholaric printed on newsprint. It was this possibility that Guy De Sapiro and Steve Bronn talked about.

The Scholaric currently receives a budget in the neighborhood of $50,000 to produce their magazine. With this money the magazine is produced and editors are paid. Our latest estimates show that The Scholaric could be printed for less than $10,000 a year, leaving the remaining money for salaries, and new equipment.

When The Scholaric editorial made the ludicrous charge of political backstabbing and bickering they seemed to imply that we were using unsavory means to take over the magazine is produced and editors are paid. As the one with the injured leg returned. The one with the injured leg seems somewhat eager.

The officer (he asked that I not use his name) said that he did not want to press the charge of "police brutality." Some of the other cops are searching the three men in question. Their coats are removed, leaving them bare to the waist. They are ordered against the wall and frisked. The guy with the cigarette in his mouth. It is removed with proper machine by a South Bend city cop.

The guy with the cigarette in his mouth. It is removed with proper uniform of cadets. The county policeman who had taken away his cigarette eyebrows the now cracklesuspect in the suspect in handcuffs.

To be sure, Mr. Pears had probably cause to believe that the uniforms were stolen. I was later informed by an officer that they had been reported missing.

"But," he added, "the name of the cop who entered" and three stamps wasn't the same stamp.

Okay, you've got three missing uniforms and three uniforms being worn by people who are obviously not cadets. And you've got this easy way of checking to see if these the kids arrested. But does it take twenty men to take three into custody? And if the three show no resistance, as I saw these three struggle and resist, why the elbow in the gut to one who is limiting and handcuffed?

I would be greatly disturbed by the truth if I called the treatment of the prisoners "police brutality." But the almost jocular manner with which the police went about their business, capped by the one officer's striking the one suspect, left a bitter taste in my mouth.

It's easy to read about such an incident and say that it's a mountaintop in molasses gomimation. But to watch it sets you thinking. Police lately have been the target of a great deal of criticism. They are Underpaid for the services they perform, but many of them are woefully undertrained as well. And as long as the populace is content to simply bitch about police without the willingness to pay them properly and train them properly, suspeti will be abated.

Fancy PR programs by community relations divisions of police forces don't solve the problem. And the nonconstructive complaining does detract from a group of men whose duties I wouldn't take on for any amount of money. We're all at fault—those of us who yell "Pigs" and worst at police, and the sometimes overzealous officers themselves who elbow prisoners under arrest.

There is no easy solution to the police vs. students problem. But a start could be made. With a little thought.
Me and my friend Chuck (Chuck has a '65 Chevy Nova II with a 327/350), we know this guy Phil who has a Vette and works nights at the Shell station on Market st. Well, he told us at Notre Dame College sometimes to see shows, but we don't go much any more 'cause most of the shows they have there now don't like too well. But Phil told us that this show was having SHA-NA-NA, who sing all the old songs that me and Chuck would remember from junior high. That sounded extremely attractive to us so we decided to go, and besides Phil said there's always lots of girls around the college.

We were surprised when we got there because they have this big gym for the dances and shows, but there was hardly any people there. So me and Chuck snuck up to the good area even though we only had tickets for the bleachers and watched the show.

SHA-NA-NA really has a lot of class. Not like some of those hippie music bands that just stood around stoned on dope playing. Instead, SHA-NA-NA has a lot of class. There was a DJ that introduced them, and they came running and dancing on the stage just like the old bands used to. Except only three of them had on their gold suits. Chuck said that was probably on account of the other guys lost theirs on the bus or something. We didn't care, however, because of the fact of the show, which was so good. Not to mention that they did two encores, instead of those stingy groups that never come back no matter how long you clap.

Most of the people there weren't hippies, so they liked the show pretty much too. First they sang "Get A Job", then one of my favorite old time songs by the Del- kings, "Cause Go With Me". And also "Silhouettes" by The Rays and "Yakety-Yak" by the Coasters and "Book Of Love" by the Monotones, which is one of my other old favorites that reminds me of when I was going steady with Shirley, who was a cheerleader. One of the best parts about SHA-NA-NA was their variety of their music. They could do fast songs not to mention slow. They had a lot of class because they could dance all around while they are singing. One neat thing they did singing "Blue Moon" by the Marains was, all during the song they had blue lights, but when they came to the part about the moon turning gold the lights turned gold. Another funny thing was when one of the singers spit on one of the guitar players. Me, I thought it was accidentally, but Chuck said they probably worked it out in one of their band practices. Anyways, it was funny and everybody got a big chuckle. Chuck liked the show too, especially because they played his very best song, "Walk Don't Run" by the Ventures. Most of all the other people there, not being hippies liked it too.

Then if you didn't have anything to do after the show, they provided you with another guy, Johnny Rivers, who also sang songs popularized by other bands. Me and Chuck didn't like him so well, on account of like Chuck said: "He sings like my old man in the shower, except the only thing is he has a good voice." We stayed and watched him for a while, however, because he was a nice guy, but pretty soon we decided to forget about the girls and go home, as I had a composition to write for Monday and on the next day I had to go to my grandmother's.

forced to set up “some sort of advisory board” as a result of the recent censorship controversy surrounding the censorship of 'Valteline' in the spring of 1969. The Observer has had an advisory board since it was established and the Valteline incident did not alter that situation nor was there any pressure at the time to alter the structure of the board that existed. The advisory board consists of faculty members who are available to give advice to the editor and who assist in selecting a new editor each year. The Scholastic reported that the board ‘was established…to augment the already existing editorial organization.’ All editors have borne full responsibility for the editorial content of the paper and continue to do so. Sixth, The Scholastic, on page 18, reported that national UPI coverage began in September of 1969 under editor Gary De Sapo. Actually national news UPI coverage began in the fall of 1968 under then editor Bill Luking.
Seventh, The Scholastic on page 18 reported that current Publisher Grade Sapo and then editor Dave Buch disagreed over the feasibility of purchasing new printing equipment this fall. Actually both were in agreement that the new equipment should indeed be purchased. Finally, The Scholastic, on page 19, in the last paragraph, reported that The Observer was launched five years ago. Actually The Observer was launched four years ago.

Graduation meets for first time

By Jim E. Brogan

Last Friday afternoon the Graduate Student Union met as a whole for the first time this year. G.S.U. President Bill Lotimer chaired the meeting which was intended to include representatives from all 26 of the graduate departments in the University; although only 13 departments had actually attended previous meetings, the attendance for the meeting was 26 as a result of the efforts of the Graduate Student Affairs Committee that was proposed by Father Butchel.

The committee as proposed would consist of administrators, faculty, and five graduate students, whose sole direction would be to amend at problem solving. This new committee would be formed in place of granting graduate students a seat on the Student Life Council, which some administrators feel is an inappropriate body for graduate students.

However, any action on this proposed graduate committee was tabled until after today’s SLC meeting, when hopefully it will be determined by that body whether or not graduate students should be granted a seat.

Miffed by the fact that they comprise such a large and integral part of the University, and yet are denied any representation on its highest legislative body, the graduate students are vigorously opposed to Bur­chel’s substitute committee. In agreement was Lotimer, who branded the Burchel proposal “another do-nothing committee with absolutely no legislative power.”

Lotimer then proceeded to read a letter which he had sent out early last week to admini­strators, department chairmen, and the Board of Trustees, reminding them that “graduate student still exists at the University of Notre Dame.”

Lotimer’s purpose in posting this reminder letter was “to ask that you include the graduate student whenever you think of the University of Notre Dame community.”

In November 1969, these forgotten men and women, I believe that you will discover, are not composed of concepts, mature, eloquent people who possess a remarkable clear-headedness and originality of thought. While we don’t claim to have any perfect answers we are eager and fully prepared to help in the search.

The GSU then delved into its future, discussing the growing interest of the Law School in sending representatives to GSU seminars and the need for rules regarding the constitu­tion of a quorum in the future.

Panel to advise doctors

WASHINGTON (UPI) The Nixon administration, uneasy about the possible misuse of amphetamines drugs to calm overactive school children, will convene a scientific panel to advise doctors of the nation’s most critical drug abuse problems.

Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D. Md., began an investigation last month into the use of such behavioral drugs on school children.

He urged Sunday that the government make a "prompt and complete review" of its role in financing such programs.

Joe Theismann follows through on one of his 19 completions. Joe now has 198 yards.

Tim Kelly led an aggressive Irish defense against the Cadets. Kelly and the other linebackers were bothered somewhat by the passing of Bernie Wall but as Army’s coach Cahill stated, “There were some awful good ‘hits’ out there.”

Darryl Dewan was the leading Irish rusher. The soph halfback racked up 65 yards in 11 carries.

This is why the defense surrendered only 16 yards on the ground. Said Tom Cahill, “They were a very physical ball club.”

Pat Steenberge did a commendable job in leading the second team offense to two touchdowns, scoring one himself.
Ara knows No. 1 means perfection

by Terry Shields
Observer Sports Editor

His team gained 574 yards total offense. It held its opponents to a meager 16 yards rushing. It scored 31 points and at the same time limited its opponent to ten. Yet Ara Parseghian was not very satisfied with the performance of his third ranked Irish.

"I was not pleased with several phases of our play today. Our kickoff coverage and our rushing game were places where some work is needed. The offense lacked consistent attack. But I feel that his team is the best and anything less than perfection just won't do."

Army coach Tom Cahill should have some worries. He was pleased that his Cadets even managed to get on the board against the vaunted Notre Dame defense. Of the Irish Cahill said, ""They are a great football team. They're very well-coached with good depth and great balance. Thiesman to Gatewood is an unstoppable passing combination.""

The quotes from both coaches serve as a measure of the game. Even the reaction in the Notre Dame cheering section reflected the opinion of the contest. It took an unusual amount of screaming and yelling by the 500 Cadets on the other side of the field to get any kind of reaction from the Irish backers. It was just one of those games that makes fans wonder why it should even play. Nothing was proven that wasn't already known. The only incident of any interest was an injury that could possibly play an important role in the remainder of the Notre Dame season. This was the injury to Larry DiNardo.

Everybody's All-American guard was kicked in the knee and a severe sprain was the result. It is not yet known whether the Irish co-captain will be ready for the Missouri game this Saturday. Other Irish injuries were minor, and people like Larry Parker, Mike Martin and Steve Buches should be ready for the Tigers.

The game itself was simply a question of how well the second team would perform once the first unit had had enough of a workout. As has become the custom, there is nothing to say except praise for the play of Joe Theismann. Minx and Gatewood both caught bombs from Theismann. Mike Creazy, who had four receptions on the day, caught a short pass for six. Besides Theismann's eight yard scamper, Pat Steenberg's closed the day scoring with a four yard second effort run. Ed Gulyas, who picked much key yardage in the early going, also scored a TD from six yards out. Darryl Dewan, the leading rusher of the afternoon with 65 yards in 11 carries, sprained through a small opening for a score from 10 yards out.

One sour note for the Irish was the end of their shutout string. ND had held opponents scoreless for 11 straight quarters up until Art Jensen booted a field goal from 42 yards away. Dewan had missed on an earlier 47 yard attempt. The score came after the Irish second team offense had fumbled the ball away at the ND 25. Wotell, the leading rusher of the afternoon with 65 yards in 11 carries, sprained through a small opening for a score from 10 yards out.

The defense finally gave up a bonafide score in the third quarter when Army drove 48 yards in seven plays mainly on the arm of quarterback Bernie Wall. Wall had a fine second half showing, completing 14 passes in this half. This was truly remarkable when one considers the tremendous pressure that he was under from the Notre Dame line. The front four, with Walt Patsalik in particular, put on a great rush. He repeatedly connected right before he was dumped by the ousting linemen.

Even though Notre Dame thoroughly dominated play, some credit should be given to the Army for their desire. They came through with some tremendous "hits" even when the game was far out of reach. Going unnoticed is a streak of successful plays from center in kicking situations. Steve Buches has made 137 consecutive passes since he was appointed this duty. Last week's films showed that it was the holder not Buches who made the extra in an extra point attempt against UCLA.

After the game Cahill was relieved that Army would now "get back in their league, playing Nebraska, Tennessee and Notre Dame back on to back Saturdays in a sort of tough." The Irish will now try to smooth out the rough spots that Parseghian mentioned in preparation for this Saturday's nationally televised game at Missouri. The atmosphere in Columbus should be a little different than that which was present at the Dome this past weekend. A coach once said, "When you're number one, everyone wants a piece of you." Mirrors definitely would like to take the chunk out of the Irish machine.

Walt Patsalik and Bob Neidert haul down Army punter Danhof for safety.
