New Senate convenes, committees list aims

by Milton Jones

Acknowledging organization as the first consideration of the student government, SSBU held a meeting on Thursday morning.

Several points were covered by the senatorial body. The first, proposed by Senator Tom Thrasher, stated: "The first proposal, written by Professor Richard Bizot of the English Department, and Sophomore Dan O'Donnell, concerns the renovation and suggested use of buildings in the area of LaFortune Student Center. The buildings involved in their proposal are the Fieldhouse, LaFortune, and the Psychology Building.

The proposal states, "The close proximity of Washington Hall, the Fieldhouse, and the LaFortune Student Center constitutes a nucleus of facilities devoted to social and (non-academic) cultural pursuits. This nucleus could then be set aside as a dog-leg type of board which controls the Student Union, invests finances with various phases of student life, and the LaFortune Student Council."

"It's clear that the buildings would be renovated unless an entirely new art center could be built. They argued that the renovation of the field house would necessitate a great deal of necessary space for the purpose of the arts at Notre Dame. Professor Bizot contended that the construction of an entirely new art center would be necessary, and that the renovation of the Fieldhouse would serve the same purpose at a great reduction of cost. If they definitely decide to construct a new center, however, the Committee recommends preservation of the west end of the Fieldhouse for aesthetic and utilitarian purposes.

The recommendations for LaFortune are necessary, the proposals contend, because of the total lack of utilization of the center. It is claimed that the offices in the center and the Huddle serve only "clear and valuable purposes." Their ideas are listed on a floor-by-floor basis.

"For the ground floor of the center (now occupied by the student lounge), Bizot proposed that it be converted into office space for all of those organizations now occupying LaFortune.

"The establishment of an inexpensive, limited coffeehouse restaurant is in their plans for the first floor of the student center. It would be part cafeteria and part waitress-served. It would not be merely "an enlargement of the Huddle; that would simply be a magnificently current inadequacy.""

Bizot said that office space on this floor could be preserved if necessary.

The committee's next proposal concerns the student lounge on the second floor of LaFortune. They suggest that the lounge be converted into a Student Used Book Exchange and Student Co-op Craft Shop. The idea here suggested is that the students should have a shop on campus where they could sell their crafts. The shop could handle good things like hand-made projects, such as sandbags, paintings, beads, etc., all manufactured by the students. A student hostel is proposed for the top floor of the center. The committee recommends "the conversion of the entire third floor into a student hostel, providing inexpensive accommodations to campus guests who cannot afford more expensive rooms.

"All of the offices located on the third floor would then be moved to the ground floor except the publications which could be moved to the adjacent Psychology Building which is now to be vacated. The committee hopes that an academic department could also be moved to the same building where the close proximity to the publications would be kept.

"The second proposal of the committee deals with the Dining Halls. The major proposal here calls for the establishment of an inter-changeable dining pass good in either school's dining halls.

"Meeting to be held that night by conservative voters may decide to swing to another sex, is a well-known fact that the bars will be closed during the present school term."

"In order to acquaint all present with the organizational format of the meeting, Krashna outlined the pertinent points of procedure for each session.

"Before closing the meeting, Professor Sue Mullin introduced the proposals to be submitted to the Board of Trustees from the Committee for Social Understanding.

"As a watch-dog type of service the Notre Dame Community, the committee is not primarily a political organization, although it is another story. Back to politics, the committee is actively concerned with the issues that are currently debated on campus, while the Human Affairs Committee is more neutral."

"In New York, there is a four way race for Senate among: Richard Ogden, a Democrat; Thomas James Buckley, a Conservative; Charles Goodell, a Republican; and President John Agnew, who uses another word, and Christine Jorgensen, who is the only female on the ballot.

"Current trends, caused by the voters swingings in different directions, strongly indicate that Miss Jorgensen will win a write in vote by 47,767,83 from last year's funds.

"The Senate Assembly passed a motion to allocate $500 to the ABCW. It was also voted to have the ABCW's books added by Student Body Treasurer Carol Lacy.

"Carole Lacey made a financial report to the Assembly. According to Miss Lacey about $14,000 will be taken in from Student Government fees this year. The Student Assembly hopes to leave next year's student government about $4,000 in the carry over from May to October. This year's Assembly was left with only $156.83 from last year's funds.

"The Assembly also discussed the possibilities of co-education. Student Body President Ann Tracy stated that the Assembly might meet with Notre Dame student government to discuss the matter."
SMC counseling program reversed under guidance of Miss Martucci

by Sue Bary

St. Mary’s Department of Counseling is on an expansion course, with Miss Mary Martucci as director.

When Miss Martucci came to the college three years ago, there was no counseling department as such, but a number of places on campus where that type of help was available. Her job was to bring these resources together to create a central office.

"My interpretation of a counseling center is an area that handles developmental types of concerns which students this age have," Miss Martucci said. She stresses the prevention of student difficulties as well as the solution to them.

The department director developed the advise program at SMC — upper class advisors are assigned small groups of freshmen to help them in adjusting to academic and other aspects of college and community life.

"The advisor program is the key in this contemporary world," Miss Martucci said. "The society is complex and a peer group can help much more effectively... there is no deep therapy; if the need is there, the freshmen are recommended to the Notre Dame psychological services.”

Miss Martucci is the only professionally trained person in her department and a “department of one cannot do all the things that a counseling service should do.” She said that freshman year is a center of concentration for counseling help because it is the most difficult time in college life, but she is also responsible for the other three classes.

"Counseling is based on student needs. It is concerned with developmental functions, corrective and preventive — counseling can’t be an end in itself, it has to be a service.”

The director has several goals in mind for the expansion of counseling services at St. Mary’s: more professional counselors, working out of the department office, concentration of help to students other than freshmen, vocational testing for freshmen before college or during the first semester, facilities for personality appraisal and organization of groups of people with similar difficulties for their mutual benefit. She has arranged some vocational tests for freshmen next semester.

"New professionals are number one,” she said. “It isn’t only my effort. If we get more professionals, we can get more involved — we’re kind of skimming the surface.”

"The main thing is personnel... the enrichment and expansion of training to undergraduate personnel.”

Miss Martucci describes her own background as “moving from one discipline to another.”

She is currently working on her dissertation, vocational development of women, in counseling and guidance under the department of education of Notre Dame. She has a master’s degree in clinical psychology from Duquesne University in Pittsburgh, with a minor in philosophy (Duquesne’s existential psychology program).

Her bachelor’s degree is in nursing education and she served as director of the nursing program at a professional school in Pittsburgh. She was the mental health coordinator at Mount Mercy (now Carlow) College in Pittsburgh, and, at one time, worked on developing a counseling center of professionals from the five universities and colleges in that city.

She had an internship in a state mental institution there, and had a “special stint” at a veteran’s hospital, where tuberculosis was a primary medical problem. She has traveled throughout the country, working as a teacher and with professional and church-related groups.

She has also written material for nursing and mental health journals, and has worked in neuropsychiatric divisions in hospitals — "that has always been my interest.”

While visiting a friend in South Bend, she discovered that Notre Dame’s “atmosphere and environment appealed to me” and that the Notre Dame job fit her needs. She came here to complete her education and, after applying for a teaching position at St. Mary’s, was asked by that administration to establish a personnel department on the campus.

Miss Martucci observed that a teacher has more responsibility than teaching his discipline. She feels that she would like to “go the route of teaching” to help students — as an “Educator of educators.”

She said that she receives “satisfaction out of watching young people grow... they keep you honest.”

She described her “dream”: “Students can help each other with training. I’d like to have an undergraduate level preparation course — an education for personnel workers.”

She explained that this kind of program is only available on a master and doctoral level, and that an undergraduate program in the counseling field would be applicable to work with students anywhere. “I have a vision of a student development center and people of this type in there.”

Miss Martucci feels that adults have a responsibility to young people — that is the responsibility of adults and for which adults are responsible for the welfare of which “I try to use the talent I have in whatever way I can.”

MECHA meets

The Notre Dame Chicano student organization, MECHA, will meet tonight at 7 p.m. in the Urban Studies workroom in the Rockne Memorial Building. Proposals for the recruitment of “la raza” students formulated by the MECHA research committee will be presented.

The Irish Eye

The wire service polls are a great idea. They add excitement and controversy to the game of college football. Their job is to tell the public who is in the running for the National Championship.

This can be evidenced by a glance at this week's US Poll ratings. It seems that most coaches are aware of the polls and are making an effort to do well in the polls.

The problem seems to arise from which squad gets the best publicity rather than the best effort on the field.

The US Polls were started in 1948 and is the oldest existing club sport on campus. The field has approximately 50 in number and it holds the record of being one of the few sports at Notre Dame where the ladies from across the nation can participate.

The rules for sailing are quite simple. It consists of a series of races between a number of teams entered in a regatta. In the regatta there are always two divisions with each club entering a boat in the "A" or "B" division. Each boat has a skipper who guides the boat and of course is the most important member of the crew. He is aided by a crew which is one person for each two tons to maintain balance in the boat.

Sailing is done by totaling the number of finish places that each boat records. For example if there were a six team regatta there would be six races in each division. In each race the boat would finish in a certain place. After the six races the place numbers are totaled and the team with the combined lowest score wins the regatta.

Even though there is only one winner in a regatta it still is important to finish as high as possible. Team strengths are determined by comparing finish place. It is the combined effort of the club that matters, not the individual performance.

One thing it's a lot of fun to do. Take the Irish sailing team for example. They have won the National Championship two years in a row. The Irish also dominated the Midwestern Championship for the second straight year.

The Notre Dame name is often held with high esteem in major collegiate ranks.

Another fault of the polls is that sometimes it just doesn't matter what a team does on a given weekend, there is just no possible way to climb into the top slot by the standards of the rankings.

The Notre Dame name is often held with high esteem in the polls in this case, but to reach these numbers, ND must first pretty certain of making this. During the second half, the better conditioned Notre Dame team out worked their opponents. The Indy Reds held the game midway through the period. However, the Irish kicked a field goal, which kicked the Reds to the cross goal line during the whole game. The Irish "B" team was just as strong as the Reds when they won 19-0. Chris Swallinger scored a try in each half.

Manley, John Greving, and John Leitao each scored a try. Leitao also added two conversions for the "B" team.

Rugby games are never over. They are relented long into the night with beer and song. It is part of the tradition. As Bill Drummer puts it, "we beat the hell out of each other during the game, then drink and be friends after the game." Sure enough.

There was Charley Blum who was trying to convert an opponent whom he would have gladly kicked just a few minutes before. The feel of it after such a brutal game is certain to amaze. Of course, the ruggers warmly invited all the players who watched along the sidelines to their party that night. Eight kegs of Schlitz. And, why not? In rugby, in as in life, you only go around once.

Committee proposes Dining Hall alterations create an obstacle, thus hope that this can be worked out between the food services, Bistro and O’Donnell present eight de­ dicate proposals for the dining halls on the campus of Notre Dame. The committee suggested that the South Dining Hall be divided up into smaller sections to cut down on the noise and impersonality. Next, they recommended that a new form of serving be devised to cut down on the long lines. Their third idea proposed that each section of the dining hall serve different foods, thereby creating diversity for the students. They hope that tables can be reserved for certain group meetings in quiet areas for discussion. Live music in the South Dining Hall at lunch and dinner would aid in destroying the present atmos­ phase of the hall. Sixth, food service should make food available to halls for hall dinners and cook-outs.

All of the Dining Hall propo­ sals incorporate the much dis­ cussed possibility of co-educ­ ation. They have been recom­ mended with that fact in mind.

Stage two of Majors nite scheduled for Thursday

The second stage of Majors nite will be sponsored by the St. Mary’s Academic Commis­ sion Thursday night, October 29, in Madeleia Hall at 8:00 P.M.

As during the first half of majors night, students will have the chance to find out about the department of study they are interested in during the session. The participating departments explain major requirements, what the department has to offer the student, what can be done in the particular field after graduation, and the co-exchange program with Notre Dame.

The following departments already presented their pro­ grams: Chemistry, English, For­ eign Studies Program, Mathe­ matics, Modern Languages, and Speech and Drama.

On Thursday the Economics and Business, Education, His­ tory, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Religious Studies, and Sociology depart­ ment will be present to discuss their programs.
