Article challenges Sheedy refutation

An agreement was reached between Notre Dame and Saint Mary's trustees concerning an enrollment ratio of 3:1 according to remarks made by Rev. Charles Sheedy in Thursday's Observer where he denied such an agreement was ever made.

"Part of the agreement last year in Key Biscayne and part of what I pushed for many years was that in return for not going co-educational on its own...that is, the girls who would come to Notre Dame would be through St. Mary's...St. Mary's would agree to expand to a ratio of three to one..." Mr. Sheedy said.

Funds denied called discrimination

SBP supports charges

by Fred Schaefer

Last night Dave Kashina, Student Body President, made charges of "blatant discrimination" in the scholarship denial case of senior Jim Werner. Werner was recipient of a scholarship funded by Mr. Carl Koch. Last spring, he wrote a letter to his donor informing him of his progress at Notre Dame. In his remarks he included a list of his activities, among which was the Students Against Racism. Approximately three weeks later, the letter was returned to him by Koch with the comment "Nuts! You are probably a bum!" concerning his participation in the SAR. He also remarked that, "You are a radical and you would put your code on. If I were you, I would not accept any more money from the Koch family."

When contacted last night, Mr. Koch admitted that he had written the comments. He did say, however, that "I have at no time been in contact with the University concerning the suitability of James Werner as a recipient for my fund." He went on to say that the University, not he, administers the fund.

Werner went to Brother Kieran Ryan, then director of Financial Aid and Scholarships, and was assured that academically he was eligible for a scholarship. During the summer, he received a letter dated July 3 from Ryan stating that his scholarship was being revoked because of his failure to maintain a 3.00, one of the stipulations of the scholarship. Werner has a cumulative average of 2.548.

Werner alleges that another student on the Koch scholarship was an average similar to his, but still holds the grant. Ryan also wrote, "We also must correct the unfavorable reaction you have given to the donor of this award who is keenly concerned with the recipient's achievements."

However, in November, Father James T. Burtchael, University provost, wrote a letter to Werner's parents, stating, "Mr. Werner is an example of the people we want to have at Notre Dame. He has done an excellent job on his studies, and I think that the University is doing an excellent job in motivating him to improve his grade performance." He also said that this expansion of enrollment was also said that this expansion of enrollment would benefit no one.

Financial Aid and outlined problems he was facing and how he intended to resolve them.

In 1970, Werner did not supply an explanation after he had received the warning letter. Ryan then wrote "We do not have any information to justify the poor grade point average which you had for the Fall 1969 semester. In your case, over and above the academic requirements, the scholarship is one which is closely observed by the donor, and I do not have to..."

Annexation expected to fail

by Cliff Whinrode

Mayor Lloyd Allen's proposal to annex the properties of the University of Notre Dame, St. Mark's College, and Holy Cross Junior College will almost certainly be defeated tonight at the South Bend Common Council meeting. The University forces need only to capture one of the three straddle's votes to deny Allen's bid for annexation.

The latest count shows that three of the four Council members definitely against annexation, two definitely for annexation, and three "leaners" and fencestraddlers.

Vote are needed for passage of the measure.

One of the three "leaners" has said that he "always leans against annexation." Two weeks ago he voted in the majority against a proposal to annex a tract to Clay township. A university presentation before an informal meeting of some of the Council members yesterday afternoon, which included two of the undecideds, he was expected to be the final offensive for either side.

The battle lines between the universities and the city have been clearly drawn. Allen claims that the annexation of Notre Dame is "essential to the future growth of the city." The university says annexation would benefit no one.

Allen claims that the tax rebates the city would receive for the increased population will make annexation beneficial to the city.

The educational institutions fear that annexation will bring possible pressures from city residents to tax them for services provided and threaten their tax-exempt status.

Father Theodore M. Hesburgh has said that taxation of private educational institutions will mean the doom of such institutions.

Notre Dame has threatened court proceedings if the Common Council decides favorably on annexation.

The Council will meet on the fourth floor of the City-County building tonight at eight o'clock. 223 spectators will be allowed inside the Council chambers and 75 spectators will be allowed in the lobby inside. The limit has been set to protect the crowd in the case of a fire or other emergency.

Psych Building in Doubt

The future use of the Psychology Building is not yet decided upon, according to Rev.

Jerome J. Whalen, Vice President of Business Affairs and Rev.

James T. Burtchall, University Provost.

Administration plans call for the Biology Department to move into all its facilities except for the new Biology building, once it is completed. The Psychology Department would then be able to move into the Psychology building, which is presently occupied by the Biology Department.

When asked what will happen to the Psychology Building, Father Wilson said, “I don’t think anyone knows about that.” Father Burtchall agreed and added that many departments are in need of more space and they would like the additional room. So far, the Engineering Department has made a request for the building.

Wilson said that the new Biology building was expected to be opened in mid-April, but delays in delivery of materials such as laboratories in order to get the new building up and running the opening back until the summer or even later. Because of these delays, the Psychology Department may not move into the Wenninger-Kirsh building until September 1972.

Organ Recital

A program of classical organ music will be presented by Dr.

Arthur P. Lawrence Friday, January 29, at 8:15 p.m. in Sacred Heart Church on the Notre Dame campus. Dr. Lawrence, an assistant professor of music at Saint Mary’s College, will be joined on the program by Miss Susan Stevens, soprano, Miss Stevens is also a student of the Saint Mary’s music faculty.

For tickets, Dr. Lawrence has chosen: "Toccata in F," Bach; "Prelude in C Minor," Mendelssohn; and "Prelude based on the Lord’s Prayer," Brahms. The recital will be a service of Compline,” Allain, and a soprano-organ duet, "Gaudete" by the contemporary German organist, Anton Heiller.

Dr. Lawrence, who also serves on the faculty of the University of Notre Dame as director of choral activities, is a graduate of Davidson College. He holds a master’s degree from Stanford University and has studied at the University of California at Berkeley. Prior to joining the Saint Mary’s faculty in 1969, he taught at Florida University, Stanford, and the Center College of Kentucky and was director of church music for several churches.

Law Program Continues

The Law School’s year-around program in London, England, will continue this summer when Professor Peter W. Thornton presents a six-week session at Brunel University. Classes are open to students of all fully accredited law schools.

The distinguished faculty of British and American educators will conduct courses in British and American law and land use systems, international business transactions, trusts, federal jurisdiction, negotiable instruments, and law and technology. A student may choose up to seven hours of courses which comply with the standards of the Association of American Law Schools.

Participants in recent programs abroad have found that their educational experience in the birthplace of democracy and law and in a leading center of international and comparative law was enhanced by the daily interchange of ideas, viewpoints and experiences with students from more than 40 law schools throughout the world, Thornton said.

Total registration and tuition cost is $300. Student lodging and three daily meals will be available on the Brunel campus for $340 and round-trip air transportation is priced at $199-$299, depending on departure from Detroit or New York. Additional information may be obtained by writing to Professor Thornton, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

New Interview Policy

Mr. Richard Willemien, Director of the Placement Bureau, announced the following policy change: Students who wish to sign up for job interviews in the spring should provide a copy of his College Interview Form for each representative he intends to see. This will enable the interviewer to have a rough profile of the interviewee before meeting him.

Willemien emphasized the urgency of planning interviews in view of the current “tight” employment situation.

Future Placement Bureau will be divided into the college status of the applying students; these bulletins will be color-coded: red for Business Administration, orange for Finance, and green for Engineering.

No Asian Studies program at ND

According to Dr. George Brinkley, chairman of the department of Government and International Studies, there are no plans for an Asian Studies Program at Notre Dame, although there will be some new developments in this area by September, 1971. Though Dr. Brinkley expressed hope in starting an Asian Studies Program someday at Notre Dame, he felt there was not enough hope in starting an Asian Studies Program next few years. He said there are no evidences at this time that history courses in the department and who has long promised time in courses concerning Asia, and an essay on Asia in the new courses, Brinkley gave credit to students enrolled in the Latin studies Certificate program, not just Asia, but also such areas as the Middle East.

Another strong possibility for next year is a course in elementary Chinese. One of the leaders for the language course is Jim Thunder, a junior. He said that to get the course, 10 students are needed. He said four are already signed up for the course, but was confident that others would also sign up. Thunder announced a meeting for all those interested in taking Chinese next year will be held on Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Rathskeller.

Scholarship refusal

He then offered Werner a National Defense Student Loan and University Job, which was accepted.

Werner went to Kraush and, together they went to Father Theodore Hesburgh, University President. The case was given, by Hesburgh, to Burtchall, University Provost. On September 30, Burtchall wrote to Werner, saying that his investigation of the matter showed no evidence of discrimination on the part of the University.

Werner then wrote to Burtchall, but claimed that the scholarship was refused because of his son's social involvment. On November 30, Burtchall replied to Mr. and Mrs. Werner, and said, "It has been repeatedly alleged that the University removed James' scholarship because of his social involvements. The allegation is unfounded and, frankly,obnoxious." He maintained that academicians are the reason the scholarship was not renewed.

Werner still claims that he was discriminated against. He said last night that he knows of "at least two other Arkansas students who have maintained a 3.00, but kept their scholarships..."

"We want an honest, clear cut explanation," Kraush said. He continued, "We tried to keep from expressing this, but we have gone through the "due process". We spoke with Father Hesburgh twice. Jim and I together have spoken with Father Burtchall several times. We feel we deserve an explanation..."

The Observer's figure bears out the first statement. From Christmas to the present, 15 major employers have cancelled planned visits to the campus. From August 1, the cancellations have numbered 37, or roughly 22% of the 376 employers originally scheduled.

The situation is similar to that at all the nation's universities. It is, in the words of the Bureau's Director, Richard Willemin, "a tight employment situation..." He feels that Notre Dame is in a "fair position, comparatively speaking" since some employers have expressed special interest in obtaining its graduates. However, he added, "if the employer isn't hiring, he's not hiring anyway..."

Dr. Brinkley, to Burtchall, University Provost.

"We want an honest, clear cut explanation," Kraush said. He continued, "We tried to keep from expressing this, but we have gone through the "due process". We spoke with Father Hesburgh twice. Jim and I together have spoken with Father Burtchall several times. We feel we deserve an explanation..."
McCluskey and Sheedy--A Grim Contradiction

In his deplorable statement of support for the equally deplorable Park-Mayhew proposal, the Rev. Charles Shedly said that there was no "agreement or understanding" between Notre Dame and St. Mary's to raise the present male--female ratio to 3-1. The word came almost exactly one month after Rev. Neil McCluskey, S.J., the Dean Director for the Institute for Studies in Education at Notre Dame and a St. Mary's trustee said in a taped interview with the Observer that exactly such an agreement had been made.

That's a pretty grim contradiction.

It's a grim contradiction because it means that the University isn't going to play honest with us on the issue of coeducation. It's a grim contradiction because it indicates a certain contempt for our intelligence, and a certain secure belief that we are both alleged to exemplify.

Father Hesburgh and the Board of Trustees were as sensitive to what the present male-female ratio to 1-6. What is the Reality of the City

To speak of the idea of city is to call to mind the most universally devised form of social human living. The modern and obviously reactionary idealist associates the term with notions of abundant commerce, famed educational institutions, centers where arts and crafts can flourish, and places where wide avenues are lined by spacious parks. To suggest that anyone holds these views has his head in the past is merely to say that he is not allowing his brain to receive the impulses sent to him by his senses from right here in the present.

Without a doubt, these feelings are unpleasant: the eye knows the confusion of sign and billboard and the whirling disarray of traffic; the ear knows the disconcerting mesh of horns and engine and cash register; the hand knows the ache of concrete; our taste and olfaction know the smells.

What our senses are telling us is that the city has become a grotesque. It is a place no longer fit for man because he is a creature whose senses not only are integral parts of his personality but whose senses actually serve to integrate his personality. The information they send him determines much of what he does and is. (An elbow in the ribs for example, is not something one can usually ignore.) Thus when the senses are handled so violently in the modern city we can only conclude that there is an inward violence being done to the soul.

This question of how the city affects the human soul is not measurable in quite the same way as its effects on the body. If we wish to ask this question, though, our answer can come only by degrees of association, some perhaps subtle, others rude.

What Happens When the City is Built

Strangers to night streets, winter's city air, and traffic lights blinking red and green from dry cables, the frozen gray suggests to us that we have walked this square before, have known it before in a thousand dry impersonal places. We think we've been this place before, moved this way when passing long dead nights through deserted cities, travelling cold on gray streets, hearing weary buildings issue calls to vacant alleys and neon bulbs' cool whispers in the eysens streets. We think we've known this place before, met this strangeness with open eyes from seen the male-female ratio held in St. Mary's to raise the, what Father McCluskey said in the same interview that Father Hesburgh wants, what I want, and what most members of the board want is not simply a sharing of the classrooms, the labs, and the library, but also a sharing of the living conditions. It would be encouraging indeed if Father Hesburgh and the Board of Trustees were as sensitive to what the students want as Father McCluskey. Up to this point, there has been no indication that they are.

The possibility exists, of course, that Father McCluskey was lying when he said that the agreement had been made. If he was, the Administration should have said so, then and there.

But somebody is lying. Why?

Was there an agreement, once made and now breached, to raise the male--female ratio in lieu of legitimate coeducation? If so, why was it breached? Whatever it was, it wasn't a misunderstanding. The men were too lightly placed, and the issue too important, for it to be that. Rather it appears that it was a calculated attempt on the part of the Notre Dame Administration to play politics with this very important issue in order to satiate a growing sense of insecurity that surrounds both institutions and says little for the leadership they are both alleged to exemplify.

Father McCluskey said in the same interview that...
Dear Editor:

I am very sorry that the reviewer of Ictus in your Friday (January 22, 1971) edition could not find much that was worthwhile in our last issue. The stories and articles in Ictus 5 are more than merely one individual’s private disappointment—I would presume, as Daniel infers, that there are many on this campus with similar feelings of disgust for our “corrupt society” and our personal and collective inability to rise above its degrading and exhausting influences. I would only then like to comment to some degree on what the magazine really is, or better, what it is trying to be—to clarify a few of the points that Daniel and probably many others found so useless and repetitive.

The editors of the magazine bear no illusions of saving this society, especially through the printed word ... if we were so nefariously idealistic you can believe that we would publish more than four times a school year. We have tried to refrain from the mistakeable notion that we can transform (politically, spiritually, or otherwise) the campus “masses,” a very ugly word used in hyath. As I said, Brother Justin is very much in the frenzied midst of their rabidly good intentions. We are not “evangelists” attempting to tattoo a silver message across our reader’s ignorant cerebrum. There was a time when we sought a kind of crude philosophic thrust of understatement, non-violence, yet I am afraid that our ideological days have faded and we are now involved in the complicated process of growing and changing, sifting experience and knowledge into hopefully a handful of decisions that will shape our lives into loving vessels of suffering service to one another’s salvation. If you happen to have an affinity for “bags” and “hoots” then I guess you might shake us a bit toward non-violence, but I will insist that you not, in the witty attempt to make Ictus lightly pass us off as a myopic and frothing band of scab-bashers and raving neurotics. If the students and faculty of Notre Dame so choose to ignore us in this kind of reason then it will be their loss, just as it is their regrettable loss to have not shared in what the Scholastics express for so many weeks of the year.

Perhaps, it is the theatrical and threatening tone that repels many of our readers, but the paragraph that Daniel V. chose to quote in his review states much to the point what we see the reader’s task to be; we have no answers (i.e. “philosophy”), put and simple, to offer the reader in order to pray him lose from his own “personal torment” over life, what we do have are the reflections and expressions of a few people struggling to work through their own agonies and misgivings. There are indeed repetitive as only human life can be, and it is with these unpretentious and honest expressions that the reader must search for his own meaning. By getting into it into the suffering flesh and spirit the feeling must be. We are creative in the mournful, the contemplative spirit, and we are looking to understand what it means to live on the thread’s edge, finally deprived of the illusion, we are tragically and continually, subtly failed of our mission.

We are, at last, not seeing or demand- ing instantaneous change, individually or corporately, but an ongoing growth and drawings of our magazine. Each person must work that kind of change, himself, and expose his life to the thoughts, words, and acts that he feels will reveal some kind of subjective light to travel. The magazine simply lives in wit­ness to this kind of change, witness to a life plucked out from among thorns and stones and made to radiate the suffering love that is only ours to give until death.

A small story

Dave Lemmers

Back in the late 1940's, Notre Dame and the nation was recovering from the war. Those were the days when droves of war- weary' veterans returned to Notre Dame, where the young Father Heublein counseled the married veterans living in Vevetille, where the football team, led by Leahy, Johnny Lujack, and Leon Hart, battled its way into athletic immortality, and Brother Justin presided over the freshmen.

In those years the lights were turned out at 10:00 in the evening on weekdays, and at midnight on the weekends. Students were obliged to attend daily Mass three times on weekday mornings, and our athletic defeats were blamed on insufficient communicants. Certain areas of South Bend and Chicago were off limits, and the revered clergy patrolled the areas to insure compliance.

The freshman, during those times, were housed in the Administration Building. On one floor were the showers and sinks and toilets, on another floor were the beds, and on another floor was a study area. Brother Justin was the freshman disciplinarian and lived and slept on the same floor with the freshmen.

One winter night one of the freshmen had been engaging in a game of pool. After the game this same freshman pocketed one of the pool balls and made his way back to the Administration building. As the freshmen lay in their beds, dreaming of who knows what, this mischievous lad hustled the pool ball along the wooden floor, sending it bumping and thumping off the metal legs of the bunks. True to our gaming tradition, the weakened freshmen quickly caught on to this brauch of order, and would catch the careening pool ball as it rolled on in the floor, afresh with momentum and energy and noise and chaos and anarchy.

As I said, Brother Justin, as his name might indicate, was charged with preventing breaches of the nighttime peace. Turning on the lights, he demanded to know who had brought the ball into the sleeping area. As might be expected of those fun loving fresh, no one violated the comodely solidarity and the culprit went unnamed.

So Brother Justin, without a minute’s delay, ordered the freshmen out of bed and into the wintry night for a walk around the campus. Once assembled back in the improvised dorm, the freshmen were asked again to name the violator and once again silence prevailed. And so the boys went back to bed.

Just as sleep had returned to the minds of those Catholic rebels, Brother Justin once again turned on the lights, ordered the freshmen out of bed, and marched them through the cold and snow around the silent campus. And so the process was repeated. And as the humor of the deed turned rampant in the minds of the weared boys, the name was given out, Brother Justin’s authority was preserved, the jester was duly punished, and peaceful slumber returned to the rows of sleeping freshmen in the Administration Building.

Vacation came and I went with my family to see John Leary cop his Cub Scout Bobcat Badge. I entered the Pack meeting wearing my little blue blouses, (“Look, a Lumberjack, Ha, Ha.”) to catch the commencement—a nifty chauvinist flag fetishism presided over by pompous, pot-bellied, Khaki-clad scouts. After a homey song by the head Akela impersonator, complete with fake Indian headdress and an- nounces, it was award time. However suddenly my ears were struck by mystic pole pounding. CLACK, CLACK, CLACK. Some crazy Cub was sending metal vibrations at the solemn ceremony. I noticed that my brother John, getting his Bobcat badge, was not standing at stiffened attention, but slouching; his hand was in his pockets. Meanwhile some Den mother was silencing the pole pounder, causing him to turn and laugh and point, causing the whole sad scene to happily degenerate into a state of creative Anarchy.

THESIS: All children are born anarchists, destroyers of symbols, truth seekers, enemies of the Honko-Cossack Mindbenders. Cub Scouts, imitated in uniformed silent ceremonies, rebel against them and their absurdities. Forced toward their first taste of authoritarianism, they rebel by pounding poles; they learn to whisper in the face of the silent sign; they slouch in the teeth of allegiance; they form a secret brotherhood opposed to the mutterings of the paymasters. (I remembered my old Cub Scout days and hours of forced Cub Scout ceremonies in Pack Meeting preparation; we counterattacked, whistling atonal gorbings and reveting the cock when the scout-master-martul had his head turned. Then I recalled my Scout Days when, being the only bearded 14 year old in camp, I posed as a Scout Master and requisitioning the pack, followed by pounds of potatoes only strengthened my anarchist resolve.) VIVA, CUB BOY, CUB BOY! which only introduces the young to the tyranny of khaki fascist iron-handiness, but it lets kids have a little bit of background, an unrepentantly escape their masters, scream, rain around, and recognize wild dope plants. Irish skaters stuck at .500 mark

by Jim Donaldson
Observer Sportswriter

Jim Cordes’ goal, 31 seconds into the sudden death overtime period, gave the Notre Dame hockey team a 6-5 win over the University of North Dakota Friday night and enabled the Irish to split their two-game weekend set with the Fighting Sioux. The Sioux reversed their setback in the opening game of the series by trouncing the Irish 7-1 on Saturday night.

The Irish had to come from behind twice in their thrilling victory over the Sioux, battling back from 4-2 and 5-4 deficits to force the game into overtime. Cordes didn’t keep the crowd of 41,131 (record attendance for an NCAA hockey game) in suspense as long as he first fired the puck, past the Sioux goalie Dave Murphy after just 31 seconds had elapsed in the extra stanza.

The Irish controlled the puck well in the early portions of the first period and put good pressure on Murphy in the North Dakota nets. After making some nice saves, the Sioux' veteran goalie gave up the first goal of the game at the 11:13 mark in the period when Phil Witliff tipped an in Bill Green’s slap shot. Green had taken a hard shot from the circle to the right of the North Dakota goal and Witliff deflected the puck into the upper left hand corner of the net.

The goal seemed to fire up the Sioux and they began to take the play away from the Irish, eventually tying the score with 3:08 to go in the period. Greg Cameron, back in the puck in on the right side for the Sioux and made a pretty pass to Jim Hoene, who took a shot on goal. Witliff blocked the puck about 25 feet in front of the net and fired past Irish goalie Don Tomasoni. The period ended with the clubs deadlocked, 1-1.

Both teams came out “flying” in the second period and each had scoring opportunities in the early going but were thwarted by sturdy defense. Ian Williams looked like he might put the Irish ahead midway into the period, when he took a pass from Kevin Hoene and came in on goal, but the Sioux goalie stopped Williams’ shot.

The Irish gained a man advantage when North Dakota’s Rich Wilson was sent to the penalty box for tripping at 12:41 and it took the Irish just 33 seconds to convert their man advantage into a power play goal and go ahead 2-1.

Witliff got the crowd around the Sioux cage, passed to Gary Little and screened Murphy. Little slid the puck past Murphy from 12 feet out and the Irish had the lead once again.

It didn’t take the Sioux long to retaliate, however. With 14:30 gone in the period Cameron netted the equalizer for the Sioux, taking a pass from Bob Duncan and shooting a 10-footer past Tomasoni.

Just six seconds later Duncan gained control of the puck in the neutral zone, skated towards the Irish goal and beat Tomasoni with a sizzling, 30-foot slap shot. The Sioux upped their advantage to 4-2 with a little over two minutes left to play in the period when Cameron netted his second goal of the game, an 8-footer from slightly to the left of Tomasoni. Brian Dinsmo and Dave Bragnalo were credited with assists on the score, and the Sioux took the 4-2 lead into the locker room at the period stop.

The Irish moved to within one goal of the Sioux in the second minute of the final stanza when Eddie Rumbacco, recovered from a bout with mononucleosis, drilled home a rebound of a Ric Schafer slap shot.

The Irish kept hustling and tied the score with 3:09 gone in the period when Witliff, taking a pass from John Roselli, skated down the right side and drilled a 30-footer past Murphy.

Both clubs battled hard for the go-ahead goal and the Sioux scored it, going ahead 5-4 with 15:15 gone. The Irish were having difficulty clearing the puck from their defensive zone when Allen Henry of the Sioux took a pass from Duncan and fired a 40-foot slap shot into the net.

The Irish came battling back and knocked the score to 5-5 with 5:24 left in the final stanza as Paul Regan deflected a shot from the right side of the net by Schafer past the Sioux goalie.

Neither club made a real threat in the closing minutes of regulation play and the Irish went into their second overtime game of the season. They had lost an extra session earlier this season in Michigan Tech, in Houghton, 5-4.

The Sioux won the faceoff at the start of the sudden death stanza and dumped the puck into the Irish end of the rink. Greg Cameron, back in the puck in on the right side for the Sioux and made a pretty pass to Jim Hoene, who took a shot on goal. Witliff blocked the puck toward the Sioux goal but his shot was blocked. The puck went off of Mark’s pads and back out to Cordes who did it a second time for the game winner.

The young Irish and their coach, Lefty Smith, were very happy in the locker room after the game.

Witliff expressed the sentiments of the players, saying, “This was our best game of the year, everyone played well. This is our biggest win so far.”

Smith was “very, very pleased - both with the team and with the crowd.” “The boys skated well,” he said. “Anytime you can come back and win is most satisfying.”

Saturday night was a different story as the Irish were outplayed by the Sioux and dropped a 7-1 decision.

The Irish outshot the Sioux 38-31 but Jim Nelson was outshot by Paul Regan, 21-10, and the Irish goalie, making a number of great saves. Bob Duncan of the Sioux put on a fine offensive show, netting three goals and picking up a pair of assists.

North Dakota grabbed the lead at 7:04 of the first period when Greg Cameron took a pass from Duncan and shot the puck into the goal from 20 feet out.

The Sioux added another tally at 10:25 while Rich Robertson of Notre Dame was in the penalty box for interference. Murray Wilson was sent to the penalty box. Allen Henry came down the ice all alone after an Irish rush had failed and beat Tomasoni with a wicked shot from 12 feet out.

The second period was an especially frustrating one for the Irish because, although they outshot North Dakota 15-8, with many of their shots coming from close range, they still trailed the Sioux 4-1 at the end of the stanza.

Duncan put the Sioux ahead 4-0 in the first minute of the second period when he tipped in a deflected shot by Mike Baumgartner, fired from the right point.

Kevin Hoene spoiled Nelson’s shutout bid at the 7:20 mark, taking a pass from Paul Regan, standing at the circle to the left of the net, and poking the puck in from 10 feet.

The Sioux added the third goal in the final period to turn the game into a rout. Duncan scored second goal of the game at 5:58. Tim O’Keefe tallied at 8:24 and Duncan completed his hat trick with 14:00 left in the game, making a number of great moves, putting in a 10 foot shot.

The Irish are now 8-8-1 for the year, 4-7-1 in WCHA play. The Notre Dameiers will be in action next weekend, opposing Michigan State in East Lansing Friday and Saturday nights.
"No gimmicks...we just beat them"

by J.W. Finding

It was one of those rare days—splendid and priceless—when this school runs above the odds, runs beyond the limits. The belief to conquer a seemingly impossible foe was realized.

January 1, 1971, when this school rises above the playing field andTemples in a skinning victory over our hated rivals from California, 75-65.

The Notre Dame Fighting Irish basketball team defeated Griswold to end the 1970-71 season. The Irish defeated the Bears, 75-65, at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum on January 1, 1971.

The Irish were led by senior center Jack Henry, who scored 15 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. Junior guard Doug Gemmell added 14 points and seven assists, while junior forward Ken Wolbeck scored 13 points and grabbed 12 rebounds.

The victory was sweet for the Irish, who had lost their last two games against UCLA. The Irish had not beaten UCLA since 1969, and the game was a much-needed win for the Irish, who were struggling to stay in the NCAA Tournament picture.

The Irish defense was key to the victory, holding UCLA to just 65 points. Irish senior forward Bill Cox had 11 rebounds and three blocks, and junior guard Dan O'Brien had four assists and two steals.

The Irish bench came off the bench and sparked the team to victory. Freshman Tom O'Connor scored 10 points off the bench, and sophomore Pat O'Sullivan had six points and six rebounds.

The Irish will now turn their attention to the remaining games of the season, with a trip to The Hague, Netherlands, next on the schedule.

The victory was a sweet one for the Irish, who were able to come back from a late deficit to win. The Irish will now turn their attention to the remaining games of the season, with a trip to The Hague, Netherlands, next on the schedule.

ground information and is also on the attention of Editor-in-Chief Glen Como last night.

McCluskey’s remarks concerning coeducational living for the two schools go beyond even the Park-Mayhew report suggested.

... "what Fr. Henshaw wants very much and what I want, and I think this is the feeling of most members of the boards... is not simply sharing of classrooms, library facilities, labs, what we want is to share the living conditions. I feel very strongly that either Fuller or Grace should be turned over exclusive to girls," he said, and I think that on the other hand one of the big hall's at St. Mary's should become a men's residence hall.

"Because the two institutions have historically been single sex institutions and because students desire for new collegiate relationships between the sexes is such a potent force in the present inquiry," The report stated, "the matter of residence life and the relationships between the sexes pose a sensitive set of problems. At this time formal plan is being suggested regarding women residing on the Notre Dame campus or men on the St. Mary’s campus."

Alumni Ass'n elects directors

Five new directors have been named to the University of Notre Dame Alumni Association. Balloting of the 48,000-member organization was conducted during the last month.

Nominated to three-year terms on the board are Peter F. Flaherty, a 1951 law graduate and mayor of Pittsburgh; Joseph G. Bertrand, president of the Highland Community Bank and candidate for the treasurer’s post in Chicago; Paul J. Doyle, vice president of the Rede Company; a financial consulting firm Houston, Tex.; William K. McGowan, Jr., vice president of American Fitchner National Bank and Trust Co., Indianapolis, and Charles F. Osborn, senior partner in the Alston, Wash. law firm.

A three-year transition of Alumni Board election procedures was concluded with the current balloting. The five new members, elected from a slate of 10 will bring to 15 the number of members serving on the board and provide full geographic representation for each of the 15 regions in the U.S. for the first time.

The new members will attend their first quarterly meeting of the association on the campus Feb. 4.

Victory parties cause much damage

by Bill Carter
Observer Managing Editor

Section parties inspired by the upset victory over UCLA Sunday afternoon led to a number of incidents, the most frequent being destruction and vandalism that night in Planner Hall.

The Sunday morning wreckage included the glass front of the most often used southwest entrance, the plastic casing on the ceiling of elevator glass, one, two frames in the sandwich machine in the hall canteen, and a glass strewed floor on one of the section bathrooms resulting from a beer bottle smashing outburst.

In addition, hallways and elevators were littered with the remnants of the night’s parties and the hall fire alarm was pulled three times. A number of minor alterations and new breaches occurred over such issues as key privileges and girl-stealing.

Hall Resident, Fr. Maurtin Amem, expressed distress with the continuing weekend trouble in the town. "I really don’t know why, but it seems we attract a lot of people from outside the hall to the parties here," Fr. Amem said. He felt that much of the mischief was caused by outsiders, sighting the hall social director, who had learned the culprit was from Holy Cross Hall.

Much of Saturday night’s action centered on the seventh floor where a big party was held. Fr. Amem said he knew for a fact that at least two of the fire alarms were set off on the seventh floor. The disorder grew so extensive on this floor that Fr. Amem called in the Alcoholic Beverage Commission Police to help him clear off the section and end the party.

A number of disrupted parties spread to other floors causing a number of minor incidents. One developed into a beer-throwing argument on the ninth floor between three misplaced football fans and a floor resident assistant, Bob Prendergast, who was called in to prevent the three from crashing a section keg party. Prendergast succeeded in separating the outsiders from the section members before the situation could get out of control.

The false alarm fires did not repeat the confusion caused by a similar incident in November when teams from the local fire department arrived each of three times in answer to the false alarms. Fr. Amem said he had anticipated the trouble and disconnected the alarm from the contact to the local firehouse, relying on the night guard to alert the fire officials in case a real fire alarm was set off.

Fr. Amem said he had not yet taken any drastic measures to answer the problems of destructive vandalism that have plagued the hall. He indicated that most of the hall residents had volunteered their help.

The report stated, "the Student Union’s policies are totalitarian," claimed Walton. "They’re stifling the social atmosphere with their controls. They seem to be afraid of competition. Apparently, they feel that one activity is enough for the entire campus, doing this, they’re killing any kind of diversity."

"We’re not trying to compete with Cinema ‘71 or anything, but just take a look at last week. Rosemary’s box office, relying on the night guard or himself to alert fire officials in case a real fire alarm was set off. Fr. Amem said he had not yet taken any drastic measures to answer the problems of destructive vandalism that have plagued the hall. He indicated that most of the hall residents had volunteered their help.

At the present, all activities must be registered and approved with the Social Commission before they are scheduled. Yet, the K of C has failed to have their activities registered with the Student Union. Walton states that the Student Union has no control over the K of C. "We are not solely a student organization. About 4/5 of our membership is alumni, yet the Student Union is trying to get us under the control of Fr. Thomas E. Blantz, Vice-President of Student Union. We don’t think that is fair."

“We need diversity on this campus," Walton continued, "If Student Union keeps their tight control over activities, this will never happen. It’s time for them to employ more realistic policies. For a players university, this place has a small level of activity."

On Wednesday, Walton will meet with Bob Pohl, head of the Social Commission, to air his complaints.
