Teitel outlines aid at Quong Ngai

Mary Ellen Stoltz, a junior theology student, and Joe Hotz, a junior economics major, will become the new co-editors of Scholastic's Student Aid Program next year. According to Hotz, Money from the Student Aid Program will be put in a special fund for the Refugee Aid Program. The co-editors want to continue to collect money to support a refugee aid program. The co-editors also allow them to run color films and a staff of six Americans and forty-five Vietnamese volunteers.

Stoltz, Hotz to be editors of Scholastic; state plans

Don Badger said yesterday that the University President Father Theodore M. Hesburgh refused to make any changes to the schedule of student aid for Indochina. This resulted in a disruption of the university's schedule. Don Badger's decision was based on the University President's refusal to suspend Badger's suspension.

RAP donation disappointing

The St. Mary's Alumni Office gave their group lists of 6000 alumni and also donated the use of their addressograph machine. The co-editors are very pleased with the response from the alumni explaining the refugee aid program.

The following telegram was sent to Steve Raymoned of the Notre Dame refugee aid program:

Please allow me to express these brief words in support of Notre Dame's refugee aid program for Indochina. This constructive program in support of the millions of war victims created by the war in Indochina is an eloquent statement in protest against the senseless war that has produced such tragedy for the peoples of the area. In exercising your moral duty to speak out against policies which deify the principles for which you stand, and in offering a constructive program of relief, you place yourselves in the great company of non-violent protesters such as Thoreau and Gandi. It serves to remind us all of our responsibility to speak out against the war and work together towards peace. I am hopeful that Congress will respond this session with the funds for the programs you are supporting. May your efforts and pledge, on my part, I shall do all I can in the Senate to work for the legislation that will guarantee an end to American military involvement in Indochina. Through such programs as yours—by continuing to press for peace—we shall, I believe, still the guns that have for so long destroyed the senseless war that has produced such tragedy for the peoples of the area.

GI rebukes government

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — A young former GI who met with President Nixon earlier this week too discuss veteran's benefits said yesterday the federal government is not doing enough for returning Vietnam veterans.

"I don't think the Nixon administration is showing any special interest," said Bob Spanogle, 28, now a senior majoring in economics at Michigan State University. "Some of the programs for veterans are simply smoke screens."

Spanogle, president of the 100,000 member National Association of Vietnam Veterans, was among a group of Vietnam veterans invited to attend a White House session Monday.

At that meeting, the President unveiled a $1 million pilot project, funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity, aimed at recruiting the 350,000 unemployed Vietnam veterans through direct contact with veterans now in college under the GI bill.

Spanogle termed the project "a step in the right direction, but just not enough."

He said the biggest problem the returning veteran faces is an inadequately funded GI bill. Whereas the World War II veteran of the 1940's found his GI bill covered virtually all of his college expenses, he said, the Vietnam veteran finds he owes as much as $600 to $1,500 out of his own pocket to finish a year's study.

"We're not asking for anything more than our fathers got," Spanogle said. "Although the President supports the premise of more programs for veterans, I do not see him supporting legislation enabling them to go into schools."

He said another burden for Vietnam veterans is the fact they fought in one of the most unpopular wars in recent times.

"I think a lot of people would just as soon forget about the veterans of this war," he said. "We don't expect them to beat a drum for us, we just want enough money to go to school and get a decent job."

Crytp manager expects SU rent charge next year

John Majeta, manager of the Crypt, said yesterday that record co-op will probably be charged rent for its space in the student center next year.

When the Crypt was originally established there was 'considerable pressure' to abolish it, Majeta said. At this time the Student Union entered and invited him to move the establishment into LaFortune.

According to Majeta, the move was made so that the establishment would be "more centrally located." No discussion of rent was involved and the only stipulation was that the Student Union have control over what was sold. Expansion of services to include posters and other items would be contingent upon Union approval.

However, the entire operation is financed and managed by Majeta. He claimed that the management takes a large amount of time and effort to prevent what he estimated to be $10,000 worth of stock.

Father Thomas E. Blantz, vice president for student affairs, recently suggested that, since it is being run by a private individual, the service should be charged rental. Majeta said that no amount was mentioned, but a figure would be negotiated by next fall.

Pointing out that he has recently absorbed fifty percent of a ten cent album price increase by raising his prices only five cents, Bill McGrath, Union Director, and Fr. Blantz both said that the idea of a rental fee was a good one and that Majeta was in agreement with them. Fr. Blantz said that it was "unfair" for an individual to profit from the free use of space and that the students should "get more than just a pro rata savings out of the establish ment."

McGrath explained that the Crypt would be treated as a "concession." Each year, applications will be taken for the manager's position and the Union will choose the most qualified. The funds gleaned from the rental will then be returned to the student services commission. This commission operates mostly on a pure expenditure basis and it is only through operations such as the Crypt and Student Press that it is able to continue operation.

Texas drought spurs dust storm, fires

LUBBOCK, Texas (UPI) - A dust storm laced with 60 mile an hour winds turned the sky red, caused car wrecks, and cut visibility so low across drought crippled Texas yesterday that residents could not see across the street.

"If I had an airplane today, I could go up about 1,000 feet and homestead one of the best farms in Lubbock County," said Dean Nichols, a farmer. "On real bad days like today, crops lose up to one inch of topsoil and it takes seven years to replace that one inch.

Farmers shut down irrigation wells to prevent dust damage. Twenty-one cars, their drivers hampered by the reduced visibility piled together on an interstate highway in Amarillo, Texas, sending eight persons to a hospital.

Winds gusting up to 60 miles an hour pushed the dust southward to the Red River Valley along the Oklahoma border.

Dust warnings were posted for Wichita Falls, Texas, where tomorrow a full blooded Cherokee will conduct an Indian rain dance in an attempt to bring that area its first minute since a trace of rain on March 28.

"That's not dust blowing out there," said Jerry Coleman, a farmer, "That's just plain dirt." Farther to the south, southeastern United States is in the grip of a disastrous drought that has necessitated the Red River Valley in Texas, sending eight persons to a hospital.

"On the basis of present usage Lake Houston will dry up in about 100 days," said R.A. Thompson, director of the water division in the city's largest city.

"I made several kilometers to a water source, but if rationing was necessary the city would be the first to feel the effect of the drought." Farmer Terry said.

Visibility in downtown Lubbock was cut to three blocks, and a debris plume of dust rose to an altitude of 30,000 feet and began to drift southward across the state.

"The situation can be made worse by one more thing," said Father Chambers said. He added that this should help solve the problem. Father Chambers added that "one more thing, chairman of the hall's student council said that the room picks in his hall went quite well. He commented that the hall at present, has six to eight more people than they should have, but he felt that this could be worked out by shifting the arrangements of a few suites.

"The conflict between the actual number of rooms left in the halls and the actual room picks, and the number of rooms previously allotted for next year's freshmen should work itself out, according to Father Peter Chambers, director of student housing.

"We're checking the situation over now, and should know for sure after room deposits come in," Fr. Chambers said. He further commented that "the differences generally work out well; if a hall has extra rooms we make these available for campus wide hall including dining and residence halls, laundry and dry cleaning, the book store, the Student Union, and the Golf Shop.

"If a hall doesn't have enough rooms, the situation can be alleviated by shifting freshman allotments, and sufficient of the excess, and of the excess, are indications that the number of managers under room picks for the year.

"Fr. Chambers added that "one more thing" he said. "This should not be a very difficult thing because of the fact that there are 4 students over its assigned upper class quota.

He said, however, that this should not be a very difficult thing because of the fact that there are 4 students over its assigned upper class quota.

Clear and Present Danger

The newest and most perversive development in the continuing saga of the Great Drug Bust finds Donald Badger, who was acquitted in civil court on charges of sale of illegal drugs, sans his tuition and sans his Notre Dame education. Badger, who was denied even the courtesy of a personal interview with Father Hesburgh to appeal his drastic step now faces a wasted semester and an imperiled academic career as the price of his alleged transgression.

That Badger was suspended on an ambiguous charge (as a "clear and present danger to the University") for reasons unproven in civil court, that he was forced to prove his innocence before the Judicial Appeals Board under a vaguely-worded judicial code, that he was convicted by evidence gained from informal conversation, and that he will possibly lose his chance for an ND degree is all history. The ironic crowning blow however, is the information that Dean of Students Father James Reihle was in full knowledge of the circumstances for at least six weeks before he suspended Badger. Reihle waited, he said, until he had a chance to meet Badger before he suspended him. He might have added, until he had a chance to collect Badger's semester tuition.

Under the letter of the law, Reihle's move is certainly correct. Explicit script and precedent both show the University collecting full tuition from suspended students. But to deliberately wait until a student has paid his thousand dollars plus and then suspend him is petty and perhaps even malicious.

The pettiness is compounded and reinforced by Reihle's crude posturing. To reveal to his colleague Dean Burke that Badger would not be getting any rebate on his tuition and then to contend for the student newspaper that the issue was yet under consideration is perhaps symptomatic of the entire attitude of authoritarianism that has escorted the Administration through this whole escapade.

That attitude, we contend, is a clear and present danger to the University, and we suggest it, as well as the Judicial Code and the obnoxious charge under which Brennen, Badger, Heneman, and Holbert were suspended, be eliminated. Now.

The freshman senate, such as it is What follows may be a vicious tirade, a self-condemnation, a denial of the right of a body to existence - if one were in the habit of categorizing such things, this one would probably fall into any one of these classifications with equal facility. It was necessary to categorize what is about to be written, I think I'd most prefer it to be thrown into the drawer labeled "thoughts, concepts, and ideas" in order not to offend any body of individuals. If you don't have a drawer labeled like that, please don't start one. Just read it once and throw it away, and if it doesn't matter, nothing's lost; if it does matter to you, then you won't need to read it a second time.

I may as well warn you that I'll most probably devote a good deal of my writing to casting insults and aspersions upon several persons, some of whom may be among your friends. Oh, more of you of course - but, well, yes, friends.

Maybe I should have titled this an open letter to the combined MD-SMC freshman class officers, freshman senate, and freshmen in general. The combined freshman senate of ND and SMC had a meeting of sorts Monday night. The freshman senate has a social-activism committee - somehow, this seems to be a relevant point - whose function is supposedly to investigate matters regarding (obviously) social activities. At the senate - not social committee, an honorable group, of course - meeting, five topics were discussed rather at length: A class trip to the Warren Dunes, a proposal that the class sponsor a dating game, a picnic for the seniors, an Easter egg hunt on Easter Sunday and an Easter afternoon touch football game. Well, these are all certainly pertinent matters, and surely within the scope of the freshman senate. I'm definitely not contesting the viability of the suggestions forwarded at Monday's meeting. Yet it seems that, perhaps, we (I may say "we" - since I am also a senator) could also consider one or two other points, albeit not of such phenomenal import or impact as a Dating Game game, but that nonetheless might be deserving of our attention.

There is a lake just slightly to our north, on the campus, that is rapidly succumbing to pollutants. There is a certain minority of students among the freshman class that feels that it is being discriminated against by certain elements in the administrations, and this belief is supported by allegations from faculty of both campuses.

There are a few elements still lacking at Notre Dame, even if the co-ed goal has been ratified by the trustees. Among these are an academic atmosphere conducive to self-education; the fostering of socio-political awareness, an involvement with a plethora of major temporal issues beyond the Golden Dome and our major sequence studies. I'm not trying to deny the presence of these elements of awareness on the campus, or even among the freshman senate, although I am pointing out an insufferable lack of participants in these areas.

I also accuse student administration in general, the freshman senate included, and myself in particular for perpetrating this abhorrent condition of isolationism at the Laus and environs thereof. And I formally register, in my behalf and in the behalf of all the unbeard voices of revolution calling out for organization and direction, support and guidance; a place to the university as a whole to consider the advent of a new age, to consider the appearance of the future, to look beyond their textbooks at the real world, as it is, and to consider how it should be, and to make an effort to bring that ideal condition to reality. In short, to make the University of Notre Dame exactly that, a university, an assemblage of individuals set apart from their contemporaries by their involvement in and effects upon the future of their world, and to effect a change from our present status as "a great place to learn a lot of books."
They call Jesus Christ "Superstar" in the new and popular rock opera of that name. But to use this tag is to use a much more honest to call him "Superflop." Surely Judas is right:

You said pathetic man—see where you've brought us to.

Our ideals die around us all because of you. And I now know the saddest cut of all.

Someone has to turn you in.

Like a common criminal, like a wounded animal.

A jaded mandarin.

A jaded mandarin.

And when Superstar himself speaks, it is hardly the words of a hero. In the Garden of Gethsemane Jesus sings:

I only want to say
If there is a way
Take this cup away from me for I don't want to taste its poison

Feel it burn me, I have changed I'm not as sure

As when we started

Then I was inspired

Now I'm sad and tired

Listen surely I've exceeded expectations

Tried for three years seems like thirty

Could you ask as much from any other man?

But if I die

See the saga through and do the things you ask of me.

Let them hate me hit me hurt me nail me to their tree

I'd wanna know I'd wanna know my God

I'd wanna see I'd wanna see my God

Why do I feel so blue?

Superstar asks the question we all ask: "Why die?"

Would I be more noticed than I was ever before?

Would the things I've said and done matter any more?

I'd have to know I'd have to know my Lord

Why should I die?

Millions of readers of Love Story have been asking the same question, and the thousands who stood in block-long lines outside theaters this cold winter cried over that same question. And we might, in the style of Superstar, imagine Jennifer singing: "I'm twenty-five and alive, what's it all above when I've just begun to live? Why should I die?" This is the ancient cry, repeated every day: Why should Jennifer die? Why should David Beck die? Why should Beth Kemien die? A lovely girl who was killed in a stupid bus accident as she was travelling out here to be with her boy friend for the March 23rd.

Like Jesus Christ Superstar, we want to to confront the God who seems to allow such senseless things to happen: Why should Beth die?

Why should I die?

"Cocktail Party," says, "Every moment is a fresh beginning, and life is simply keeping on." This is what God asks of us, to be faithful to the end. Because the end is only the beginning. It's a door, not marked, not "Exit." But "Entrance." The end of the record, "Jesus Christ Superstar," is really the end of the historical record of the past. But the end of the record is the beginning of a new life of gloating, of rejoicing, of hope. If every one of us never ends at all. Jesus sings in the song, "Poor Jerusalem!"

If you know all that I knew, my poor Jerusalem You'd see the truth, you'd close your eyes.

But you close your eyes.

While you live your troubles are many, poor Jerusalem!

To conquer death you only have to die.

You only have to die.

So it's very true, as someone recently wrote, that "The pledge of a man's love is the beginning of a man's death."

Any time we pledge ourselves to be true to a commitment, to be loyal to a pledge, we have to die. But the death is a death to those things which stand between ourselves and this fidelity; the pledge of our gift of trust in the Father means a death to comfort, to convenience, to betrayal. It's a death that liberates and frees.

A couple of weeks ago I was in the home of friends and the valentines were displayed on the kitchen bulletin board. You know what valentines made by children are like. A little boy comes home from school and gives a valentine to his mother, and by any artistic standard what someone is going to write and draw it this year. This is the cup runneth over for those who have it.

The world where every day everything came up roses.

There is more apt to pen to, more liable to consider, a transcendent source of fulfillment than if he lived in a world where every day everything came up roses.

And now the only ones who can walk with him are those who are willing to do what he did: turn and open to God in trust.

As a result of reflecting on Superstar, we come to the exhilarating discovery that Jesus was right: it can be blessed and good when we are without, when we are humbly unfulfilled. The beatitudes do make sense, because if man is willing to live in the real world, and accept the human condition, it means that he will have to struggle in the midst of frustration and disappointment, the downs and the blows. That not looks for these; he doesn't have to. They come anyway. But being, as they are, an inevitable part of the human condition, they can still be opportunities for him to grow. Because in the midst of these moments of human infallibility he is more apt to pen to, more liable to consider, a transcendent source of fulfillment than if he lived in a world everywhere every day everyone comes up roses.

Never a ripple, never a disappointment, everything peaches and cream.

Imagine, if you will, this scene: A Notre Dame student wheels up in his Superport, decked out in Gilbert's finest, with St. Mary's loveliness at his side. He is Superman.

"But you can't say to him," you say to him. "Fear not, I bring you tidings of good news. There's been born for you a Savior."

You can picture the reaction: "Man, are you for real? You've got to be kidding.

You're giving me answers, but I'm not asking any questions."

"Good. Because you've never had it so good. I've got all the good news I can stand."

Well, most of us don't live in a world like that. Most of us are forced, because of the circumstances that come our way, to decide whether to turn off or to trust. To give up, to despair, to despair, or to give ourselves to God to hang on in the midst of whatever comes our way. But that's the key: life is hanging on. Julia, in T. S. Eliot's "The 3rd decade"

ND, Church change lauded

The future of the Christian church may well depend upon the success of the revolution going on in the Roman Catholic Church today, according to an Episcopalian priest who recently completed the first year of a visiting professorship at the University of Notre Dame.

Dr. Morton T. Kelsey, rector-emeritus of St. Luke’s Episcopal Church in Moravia, Calif., reported on his academic year at the University in an article, “Catholicism in Revolution: A Protestant Report from Notre Dame” in the spring issue of Religions in Life quarterly.

Much of Rev. Kelsey’s article deals with aspects of the religious revolution in the Roman Catholic Church as he saw at Notre Dame, where, he noted, students “are seeking for answers which may help spread a vitalized faith.” He taught biblical and liturgical pedagogy, theology of instruction, and the prophetic role in religious instruction.

He was impressed with the freedom with which theological and social issues were handled at the University. “The questions of compulsory celibacy for the priesthood, of birth control, of economic justice and other controversial issues are discussed in the same freedom as in a secular university, and often with a greater understanding and balance,” he commented. “In the future, there may well be more spiritual people at Notre Dame than in many state universities, where only the rational materialism of our time is presented. Here both sides of modern culture are presented and the student has a chance to make a personal choice.”

The other facets of Catholic religious life which drew praise from the Episcopalian were the variety and sincerity of the liturgical experiences, the attempt to develop a laity informed and dedicated, and the openness to new discovery of religious or spiritual realities.” Notre Dame, he said, “has taken a lead in the Catholic Church in its attitude toward the future.”

Three gala spring outings were announced last night by the newly formed Cape Cod-Toledo-Kankakee Club, in a news conference on the second floor of Breen-Phillips Hall.

Speaking in behalf of the membership were President Jack Gillis, Secretary-Treasurer, Bill Schmidt, and SMU alumnus Ann Shoemaker.

Gillis said that the club’s “spring offensive” will begin this Friday at 9:00 P.M. with a party at a location to be determined. The remainder of the spring agenda calls for a trip to the Cuba-Mets game on April 25 and a banquet, featuring club members Father Theodore M. Hesburgh, tentatively scheduled for May 11. In answer to a query concerning the purpose of the club, Gillis responded, “We hope it begins simply as an excuse for a bunch of guys to play basketball together in the club league, but it has the potential of developing into a legitimate club. We see our purpose as improving the atmosphere on the campus by providing places where girls and guys can get together without any obligations to each other.”

By establishing a policy whereby girls are required to pay, Gillis contends that the dating syndrome is broken down and the atmosphere at the club’s outings is more relaxed and informal.

Schmidt, who is chairman of the April 25 outing to Chicago, emphasized that this, as well as all other club activities, is open to all students. Schmidt noted that the club has chartered two buses and purchased 92 box seat tickets in a block, for this crucial National League contest. Included in the $1 fee for the trip will be round-trip transportation, game ticket, refreshments served aboard the bus and possibly a tour of some of Chicago’s finer establishments.

Schmidt mentioned that sign-ups will be held today in the dining halls on both campuses.

Speaking on the financial situation of the club, Schmidt said, “We aren’t interested in making a profit and because of the spring issue of the Notre Dame Law Review.

The only original member of the Commission left from the initial group appointed by President Eisenhower, Father Hesburgh emphasizes the bipartisan agency’s continuing role as a “bar in the saddle” to the President, the Congress, the federal bureaucracy and others who have the capacity to remedy civil rights denials.” He notes that the Commission continued on pg. 12.

SU appointees to focus on SMC participation

Student Union Director Bill McGrath yesterday outlined the responsibilities that his assistants Kathy Eglet and Milt Jones will undertake during the new union year.

McGrath's chief job is "to promote interest among St. Mary's students in student activities for the year." Kathy will also serve to involve students in the Student Union activities, he added. With the arrival of McGrath, Eglet noted the necessity for the Union to be constantly aware of the "upcoming environment participation for St. Mary's in Union affairs." She will see that the Union does not become "isolated." In a similar vein, Jones will "work to promote a sense of belonging that black students do not exist either in working for, or participating in Student Union activities." When asked to comment on her newly acquired duties, Miss Eglet said that she hoped to "encourage SMC girls to work on Student Union commissions," so that they might eventually gain Union affairs.

"I also would like to see more participation by the students," Miss Jones added. "Instead of having most of the work fall on the me at Notre Dame." Miss Eglet will try to stir events towards St. Mary's and she believes that will be a "Spring Weekend" at the union.

In regard to services Miss Eglet hoped to use the money from the Student Union in the SMC Student Service Organization to improve the SMC coffeehouse. The money has since been given to the Student Union.

When asked why he decided to accept his position, Jones noted that "there hadn't been a substantial number of events which blacks could take part during the past year." There weren't enough activities geared for blacks. The only attempt to make a difference was made by the Sophomore Literary Society, but it didn't even connected with the Student Union.

In order to correct this Jones will try to do three things: "Build up" trust in the Student Union. This is proper in the sense of the Student Union will be a spring board for the black student. He said that the use of the advice in an attempt to influence the most receptive committees of the Union.

Jones notes that the Student Union is much more "open" to the blacks than it has been in the past. He said that when black students really will this they will be more willing to communicate and commissions and see that black interests are on speaking dates filled.

Academics Commissioner Steve Flavin announced that many of the speaking dates have been filled for the coming semester of the fall. Flavin criticized the lack of speaking dates for the fall in September of last year.

Assisting Flavin will be Becky Minter, who, hopes as Eglet does, to arrange for more speakers to lecture at St. Mary's.

"Buckminster Fuller Day" lectures set for April 16

To promote an event for a "Buckminster Fuller Day" this Saturday, a group of ND students are staging a pet show today in front of the South Dining Hall. And are presenting a band on the main quad Friday. The group, displaying placards on which were inscribed some of the titles of architech philosopher Fuller's novels, paraded in front of the South Dining Hall Monday afternoon to advertise Saturday's activities.

Ed Suzuki, a fifth year ND architecture student, said the events to get publicity for Fuller's philosophy will be discussed in organized lectures this Saturday, April 16th. Fuller, who, among other things, invented the geodesic dome and designed St. Louis Center, has recently tried to get his land in Cytrin declared a nation by the U.S. as reported by John Holzheu in "Buckminster Fuller's Geodesic Game." His ideas will be discussed by ND professors. Kenneth Varlack, Paul Norton, Arthom Christus, Thomas Stritch, and Edward Pickard.

The main speaker will be Brenten O'Flague from Fuller's office at the World Game Center, Carbondale, Ill. Ed Suzuki will also appear in many different forums to writers on Fuller's philosophy which will be discussed in organized lectures this Saturday. April 16th.

Sometimes after dawn, the hostages were tied or handcuffed together and locked in the basement and the men of the left with Disogra in his car, leaving the third man at Baratta house. Disogra said the men took off their masks, put on dark glasses, and told him to look straight ahead.

The car had an Army sticker that got them by military police at the gate to Ft. Hamilton. When they got back, the men took off their masks and put on their new glasses and told him to look straight ahead.

ND councils’ functions defined

By Milt Jones

Although many students are aware that quite a few committees and councils exist at Notre Dame, few are familiar with the names, functions and other pertinent information about these groups. Following is a compilation of some of the committees and Councils on campus, and pertinent information about them.

The Hall Life Board, which is composed of three faculty members and three administrators, meets once a month. The board reviews the governments and constitutions of the individual halls and approves or disapproves them. Its purpose is to help the halls improve their government and judicial procedure.

Frantically seeking to be the best subjective to describe Notre Dame's baseball season thus far. The Irish were 5-5 on a ten game Spring trip but lost a couple of games because of inability to bring home the runs in key situations. Their second nine innings had been righted by a 9-8 victory over the Titans last Thursday. Joe La Rocca led off with a single and, after Charlie Horan flied out, Bob Roberts worked his way safely to second. Roberts was sacrificed for a ground field line, sending La Rocca to third. At that point the Irish trotted in their third pitcher of the day, Chet O'Leary. Chet kept the Titans grounded in a run scoring double runing single to Tom McGraw, making the score 3-3.

The Irish nine came back off of the project. An鼓舞ed by Joe Kapla's $50,000 offer to win a dance, the Ruggers decided to join the dance. The frightened manager bribed them with the beer, demanding $7 per case. The angry Ruggers offered him $5 for the damage, the Ruggers retired on the rose of the hotel bar. When that was closed at 1:30 AM, the police were waiting.

On Thursday, March 1, the Ruggers left Kennedy Airport after several hours of drinking in New York City for an overnight flight to Shannon. Their behavior was even in the Rugby Club tradition to lead the stewardess to remark upon arrival, "I hope you guys are happy. You've drunk half our beer, stolen the rest, and kept all the passengers up all night." To this the Ruggers replied, "Flattery will get you everywhere." Friday, Saturday, and Sunday were spent in relative quiet in Shannon. The Ruggers left their supermarket no good in condition, but did some punching in of doors for which they were assessed 10 pounds.

On Sunday, the Ruggers belted a City team from Abbey Feale, 26-4. Their conduct was excellent at a dinner party afterwards but the hotel still phoned ahead to Killarney as a warning.

There were no games in Killarney, merely several days of organized sight seeing. Perhaps lulled by the beautiful countryside, the Ruggers behaved themselves admirably.

Tuesday, however, they found themselves billeted in a hotel in Froartesttoo-the sea. This hotel was out in the "sticks," leaving the Ruggers little entertainment save what comes from the bottle. St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by blowing a horn game time, however, the weather worsened into a 40 mph gale replete with sleet and snow.

Furthermore, the playing field was a side of a hill.

Facing the Bandon City team, the Ruggers chose to play into the wind and up the hill for the first half. Under these conditions, they battled to a 3-3 tie. But before their strategy could pay off, the game was called off, leaving them with a "moral victory." During the break, with the Ruggers returned to their hotel. A dance was in progress so they retired to the hotel bar... When that was closed at 2:30 AM, several Ruggers decided to join the dance. The frightened manager bribed them with two cases of beer and they returned to their hotel.

The following morning, the manager promptly charged the Club for the beer, demanding $7 per case. The angry Ruggers offered him $5 for the damage, the Ruggers and he accepted. The Club then journeyed to the fabled Blarney Stone.

Thursday and Friday were quiet, sight-seeing days in Waterford. The Ruggers began to tell on the Ruggers as they dropped at 30-13 decision to the University College of Dublin on Saturday. Dublin's final five points came in the closing seconds when the Clun weakened their defense in order to try to score.

Following a dance, Sunday sight seeing, and another dance, the Club reached the Killarney Monday night. When the game was cut off at midnight, the Ruggers responded by throwing mugs against the walls and engaging in "general thashing." The management was called out of calling the police.

On Tuesday, the Ruggers reached Galway City for a party given by University College of Galway. After spending time at the American Hotel bar, the Ruggers left around 11:00 PM for a dance. On the way out, they met a group of Americans,要注意 and a bartender.

On their way to the bus-stop, there was much tossing about of the mugs. One of them went through the window of the Bank of Ireland. When the Ruggers returned at 7:00 AM, the police were waiting. Damaged windows, doors, and windows assessed.

Having endured the damage, the Ruggers retired, the rose on Wednesday for "A" and "B" contests with UGG. Really feeling the effects of the constant celebrating, the Club dropped both games.

The Irish and the Ruggers were relatively unevenful and the Ruggers felt that under normal conditions they could have held their own against their competitors.

The IRA has not been heard from. The flight back (with a different stewardess) was relatively...
Viets march on Fire Base 6

SAIGON (UPI) — Six thousand South Vietnamese troops moved on Fire Base 6 yesterday in a drive to crush North Vietnamese troops who have besieged it for two weeks. U.S. warriors supported the effort with the heaviest one day bombing campaign in South Vietnam in more than eight months.

By late afternoon, hours after the South Vietnamese task force landed by helicopter, advance elements reported pushing to within sight of Fire Base 6, a hilltop outpost on the Central Highlands near the Laotian and Cambodian frontiers.

U.S. Air Force B52 Stratofortresses, each capable of carrying 30 tons of bombs, flew six missions Tuesday in jungles around Fire Base 6, trying to smash North Vietnamese troop concentrations. Air Force transport planes dropped two more 7.5 ton "Daisy Cutter" block buster bombs in the area, adding to the destruction caused by two which were unloaded Monday.

Military sources said the Daisy Cutters were being used for the first time against Communist troops. But an official communique from American headquarters said the giant bombs, largest conventional explosive device in the U.S. arsenal, were designed to blast away foliage and create "instand" helicopter landing zones.

"There is no indication that they are being used for any other purpose," an official U.S. spokesman said.

The South Vietnamese task force, composed of 1,500 paratroopers and about 4,500 infantrymen, loaded from helicopters which had flown in Policy stated for co-ex dinner

The distribution process for the co-ed dinner tickets for Saint Mary's student has been changed. Former research and development commissioner Bob Ohlemiller announced yesterday.

Instead of having all 60 tickets given out to the lobby of LeMans Hall, only 60 will be distributed and 100 will be given out at the Cushier's office of the pay-caf in the South Dining Hall. This is for the convenience of those girls already at Notre Dame, Ohlemiller said.

The tickets may be picked up between 1 p.m. and 2 p.m. in LeMans and all day in the South Dining Hall. They are good for both the North and South Dining Halls.

The tickets are a different color for each week day and are good only for that particular day. Because there are no tickets stamped on the tickets, students are asked to pay attention to the color set up:

Sunday-yellow
Monday-pink
Tuesday-<~range
Wednesday-blue
Thursday-orange
Friday-green
