Confidence in reason needs comeback: Booth

by S. Kane

We must restore our confidence in reason, Professor Wayne Booth said yesterday, referring to the irrationality of much of the present day debating between people and groups. Prof. Booth was the guest speaker this week during the Ward-Phillips Lecture Series sponsored by the English department.

Yesterday, the fourth and final lecture in a series by the professor of English at the University of Chicago. The title of the last lecture was "The Waning of Antiquarian Thought, Action, and Fiction."

Prof. Booth developed ideas on such subjects as protest, affirma tion, negation, revolutionary thinking, traditional thinking and reason. He said protest is legitimized when, and only when, it is based on reason; and reflects the view held by most of the people affected by the protest. Too often, protesters raise issues in a reaction to their selfishness or emotions, and offer only an irrational argument, he said. With regard to the emotions and on campus...today...

Unanimous opinion

'Imminent danger' defined

The Student Life Council clarified the "imminent danger" clause of the University's Social Code today. In other action they also adopted the Hall Life Report, which proposed an end to Trustee partri cal guidelines. The SLC adopted a proposal that would guarantee a provisionally suspended student a hearing within two weeks of his suspension under the controversial clause. Prof. William McGlinn, chairman of the SLC's Drug Abuse Committee, chose the word resolution to define the unanimous opinion of the council.

After a minimal amount of discussion the SLC resolution clarifying the "imminent danger" clause have their hearing commencing within two weeks of the revision with only one dissenting vote, Fr. James Reihle C.S.C., Dean of Students.

In addition to recommending that "each hall, after consultation with the Hall Life Board" formulate its own partri cal regulations, the Hall Life Report also recommended clarification and publication of all the beverage rules; hall clarification of the "distinction of between a private room and a suite," which is "a residential room"; and a review and instruction of resident assistants.

The report also noted that 80 percent of the students do not think that visiting hours should be limited. During the discussion of this report, which occupied the greater portion of the meeting, Fr. Reihle insisted that a copy of the questions asked of students and a summary of the exact wording of the survey be included with the report.

Abortion drive sponsored by K of C

by T.J. Burke

A nationwide campaign against abortion has been initiated at Notre Dame under the sponsorship of the Knights of Columbus. It was announced yesterday at a press conference.

The Notre Dame Council is the first to announce its campaign, although similar anti-abortion movements will be undertaken by other Knights of Columbus Councils throughout the nation.

In attendance at yesterday's meeting in front of the Administration Building were Edmund P. Joyce, executive vice-president and Fr. Jerome J. Wilson, vice-president for business affairs. Both men are members of the Knights of Columbus and are supporting the campaign.

Junior Bob Walton, who is the Grand Knight of the K of C, and Shirley Kelly, K of C warden and fry day president for all the diocese of South Bend, said that the campaign originated last March at the University of Notre Dame and named the Notre Dame Student Community, Community Relations Commission of the Student's Mary's Cabinet of University. This group, which was formed under the auspices of the Notre Dame Student Government, has been working at Notre Dame.

The Notre Dame Council's goal is the development of both inter-, and intra-community relations. Contact between ND-SMC and the South Bend community is chiefly through the Catholic Student Union.

ND student appointed to SMC cabinet place

by Mike Murphy

Notre Dame student Jack Candon was appointed Community Relations Commissioner of the Student's Mary's Cabinet yesterday. The appointment was announced yesterday by Misai Underman, student body vice president.

The appointment was approved by the seven-member Judicial Review Board.

John Welte, present sophomore member Judicial Review Board, said that the appointment was made because the Board, composed of seven students, reviews cases involving violations of student regulation. and those involving the judiciary branch of the student government.

Fr. Reihle, who held the same position at ND last year, in the Krausha administration, stated that he was happy with the appointment, but knew that would have to go out and learn what the SMC students want.

He said, "I realize that I have to implement the ideas and wishes of the SMC students. Community relations is not the job of the commissioner's job involvement is essential."

Candon said that the appointment, hopefully, would be a start in the actual merger of the student governments of the two campuses. "Kathy Barlow and I, and many others, have been trying to do it for the last two years." Can did said.

Candon said that he felt that a Notre Dame student working in the SMC's cabinet would improve communications and inter-relations between the schools and felt that such an exchange should even be considered at Notre Dame.

The SMC's Cabinet of University's goal is the development of both inter-, and intra-community relations. Contact between ND-SMC and the South Bend community is chiefly through the Catholic Student Union.

Massive Crackdown!

Drug Raid Rumored Soon

by Fr. James Reihle

off campus...eight o'clock

by S. Kane

Three separate reports have been received by the Observer warning of a possible drug raid on the Notre Dame campus this weekend. All the reports were unclear as to whether the raid would be on Friday or Saturday.

An observer staff member claimed that a high university official had told him that there will be a "massive crackdown on pushers on campus this weekend."

Support this, he pointed out a classified ad which ran in the April 3rd edition of the Observer which said "Stash! Stash!! and named the prominent university official. This one member claimed that the ad was in response to reports that the official had revealed the impending raid.

Another Observer staff member revealed that he had a friend whose mother works for the local police force who read this story and gone home and jokingly asking her when the raid was to be. Reportedly, the girl's mother was startled and asked her bow she had learned of the raid. The woman allegedly went on to reveal that the South Bend Police and Federal Agents were planning to raid the campus this weekend.

Thursday morning a caller who refused to identify himself told an Observer editor that he had it on "very reliable information" that the official was going to be the object of a raid this weekend. The caller said that his sources were a South Bend Police official and an employee of the security department.

The security department employee who had told him that the South Bend police had been going through a file which ND had many suspected drug dealers and that "they had gone off many of those files."

The caller also said that his friend in the South Bend Police Department had revealed to him that there was going to be a drug raid on campus this weekend.

Six members join SMC Appeals Board

Appointments to the St. Mary's Campus Judicial, Community Relations and Appeals Boards were announced yesterday by Misai Underman, student body vice president. The appointees were approved by the seven-member Judicial Review Board.

Sur Welte, present sophomore class president, was appointed as chair man of the St. Mary's Judicial Board. The board, composed of seven students, reviews cases involving violations of student regulation, and those involving the judiciary branch of the student government.

In addition to recommending clarification of the "imminent danger" clause of the University's Social Code, the board is to implement the ideas and wishes of the SMC students. Community relations is not the job of the commissioner's job involvement is essential."

Candon said that the appointment, hopefully, would be a start in the actual merger of the student governments of the two campuses. "Kathy Barlow and I, and many others, have been trying to do it for the last two years." Can did said.

organization's Supreme Office Headquarters in New Haven, Connecticut. It was there that an anti-abortion program was presented to the various national college councils.

According to Walton, who attended the meeting, Notre Dame was chosen to kick off the campaign because of its prestige, and due to the fact that it has the oldest and largest college council in the country. Concerning the program, Walton said: "This is going to all councils, not just colleges. We are the first ones to do it. I am certain others will be following us."

"One of our big contentions is that a lot of people are concerned about the dignity of human life, and the values of life, and they complain about the shedding of life in Vietnam, Pakistan, and the highways of America." Walton said in explanation of the movement. And yet, they don't consider the loss of life here and they don't realize actually, that through abortion they are cheapening the value of human life," he added.

Walton summarized his beliefs by saying that it's a "very distressing situation." He added that the K of C is trying to make people aware of abortion and called it "an outright slaughter."

Kelly explained that as part of the campaign, the council is distributing anti-abortion bumper stickers, which may be picked up for free from their headquarters on the South Quad. The wording on the bright orange stickers is, "Abortion is murder."

The stickers are being made available on a nationwide basis to all councils at no charge by the Supreme Office.

Another part of the campaign involves the use of the media. Walton said that anti-abortion movement is planning to run some ads in future Observer editorials.

Other possibilities of reaching the public also were discussed. "There was some information sent to us, and there are two sets of billboards that are being offered to councils across the country," Walton said.

He also noted that the Notre Dame council was chosen at the New Haven meeting as the third best in the nation, on the basis of council projects.

Other officers who are directing the Knights of Columbus campaign include Fr. John P. McDiarmid, who is the council chaplain, and John Walker, the Deputy Grand Knight.

The Knights of Columbus' monthly magazine, Columbia, will cover the beginning of the anti-abortion campaign by the ND council in a future issue.

PAC denies any opposition to An Tostal festivities

by D. Rock

Dave DiBacco, a spokesman for the Notre Dame Peace Action Committee, said yesterday that it is not the plan of the P.A.C. to compete in any way with An Tostal activities.

"It's unfortunate," said DiBacco, "that An Tostal has been scheduled for this weekend, however, it's a traditional event and I hear a lot of people have fun. Our purpose is to inform interested students of the Viet­ nam War and the May Day activi­ ties in Washington. It is our intention to bring about a broader understanding of the war itself.

"We're also discussing about any sort of protests during the An Tostal activities. DiBacco said he had heard rumors about protest activities in a few cities, especially the "barbarism" supposedly involved in the inciting content.

"It seems that some people believe we are intending to organize activities in competition with An Tostal at all. Our ac­ tivities are alternate activities for students interested in non-violent action to end the War. But it must be made clear that any protest actions of An Tostal activities are not endorsed by the Refugee Aid Program or the Peace Action Committee. Protests will be outside of An Tostal, not individuals expressing their own personal sentiments," he added.

DiBacco closed the interview on a positive note, however, believing that the May Day ac­ tions in Washington will provide a positive atmosphere for the coming part of the federal govern­ ment's policy.

"There will have to be a change. The federal government cannot just sit back, without Non-Violent Civil Action while the non-violent civil disobedience to Congressmen, and lobbying the Congressmen currently takes place," DiBacco said.

"Our stress on campus this weekend lies on the acceptance and signing of the People's Peace Treaty. We have nothing to do with An Tostal protests," he concluded.

Finance Club elects officers

by Mike Murphy

Steve Flood was elected to Finance Club president at a meeting Sunday night, April 26. Also elected were Michael Margot, vice-president; Pat Wegeng, secretary; and Gerald Gable, treasurer.

The Finance Club, according to new out-going president Bruce Rieck, is a 30 member organization designed to further the business education and interests of its members. He listed some of the activities of the club in the past including field trips to major financial institutions and leading metropolitan areas.

The club manages a common stock portfolio amounting to nearly $20,000. This, Rieck said, was very helpful in learning wise investment procedures.

Flood said that he was honored to be elected and expressed enthusiasm about the coming year. He said that he hoped to improve the interest in the Mock Stock Market, and bring to the campus speakers who would be of interest to the entire student body.

Rieck announced that Cas Roy had been voted "Member of the Year" for his work with the investment fund of the Mock Stock Market. He also nominated the other out-going officers, Michael Christ, George Lawler, and Kenneth Falkner, and thanked them for their work.

The club, which last year began, said that he was very helpful in learning wise investment procedures.

Flood said that there would be a picnic on Tuesday, May 4 for those interested in joining the club. There will also be a membership drive next fall.

Nixon speaks on Chinese relations
WASHINGTON (UPI) - In a cautious but pointed bid to improve relations with Peking, President Nixon said yesterday that "I hope and I expect to visit Mainland China...at some time in my life, in some capacity." He refused to speculate what the United States might decide about the question of diplomatic recognition of Communist China or of possible admission to the United Nations.

He told a nationally broadcast news conference that such speculation would be premature in "this very sensitive area" and might destroy the recent "significant progress" in opening travel and trade ties with China. "What we have done is broken the ice," Nixon said. "Now what we have to do is tend the water to see how deep it is.

But the President went out of his way to declare "a hope, and expectation" that he would visit Communist China some day, although he had no date in mind. He said under questioning that in speaking of a visit to China, he was "not referring to any involuntary" from Mao Tse Tung. The President raised the possibility of a visit to China at his last session with newsmen on April 16, when he answered questions for an hour from an audience of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, but his remarks attracted little attention.

At that time, he said he hoped his daughters and their husbands could visit China some day, and "as a matter of fact, I hope some time I do." He added that "I am not sure that it is going to happen while I am in office."

Appearing before reporters for the second time in two weeks, the President, in a formal, televised news conference from the White House, emphasized that a North Vietnamese promise to release American prisoners would not be enough to permit a total withdrawal.

High hopes and great expectations preceded the meeting of the Student Life Council yesterday. That body was planning to vote on a clarification of the "imminent danger" clause in the judicial code; the same clause used by the administration to summarily sentence four students to a state of limbo after last December's drug raid; the same clause that may have come into use Monday if this weekend's drug raid comes off.

The SLC had a chance to act decisively yesterday. It could have passed a clarification placing the responsibility for justifying the rise of the clause on the Dean of Students. The clarification could have required him to come before the appeals board within 48 hours of his invoking the clause, with or without asking it.

It didn't.

Granted, the administration would fight any attempt to restrict the use of this clause of this clause by the Dean of Students, in cluding a comprehensive definition of what actions constitute imminent danger. Such a definition, or restriction would be clumsy and difficult to work with. Situations do arise where the Dean of Students, acting as the enforcer of university rules, has to act and act quickly. There is absolutely no reason though, why he cannot and should not be required to justify his use of the clause before the appeals board within two days.

No stupendous or tedious burden would be placed on the Dean of Students if such a rule were enacted. The imminent danger clause is rarely enacted during the course of the academic year. Before suspending a student under the clause the Dean obviously has it clear in his mind, and most likely documented, as to exactly why the student should be suspended. Therefore no difficulty would arise itself in having him draw up a rational for his action on 48 hours notice.

Essentially what the dean would be doing would be to show the appeals board exactly what evidence led him to believe the student was an imminent danger. If the board upheld him all it would be affirming is that there was sufficient evidence to justify the action, nothing more.

Clearly and logically there is no reason not to have such a requirement. No one would be asked to assume a great burden. No loophole allowing a guilty student to go free would be set up. Rather a check and review on a democratic in the normal sense of the word.

If this action will only serve to alienate the majority of people and weaken the anti-war movement. And I offer only my own interpretation of why I am on my way to the Capitol now as this is being read.

First, it is clear that the war in Indochina is genocidal in its methods, character, and intent. The visible result is a million Vietnamese civilian deaths since 1965, and six million Vietnamese have been driven from their homes and provinces into detention compounds. Civilian life is daily being destroyed by saturation bombing, 'body count' search and destroy missions, defoliation, anti-personnel bombs, and helicopter rockets.

It is most painful and disquieting to consider that we have, as citizens of this nation, been supporting what is clearly an intentional policy of genocide against those Indochinese that are caught in a most bitter civil war, and against those civilians that don't give a damn which side wins.

The evil of genocide is certainly immense. After years of peaceful and legal protest, the war goes on. The protest is now planned to be peaceful but illegal, non-violent but disruptive.

Do citizens have a right to block streets and bridges for two mornings as a protest against the continuation of this war? Many would say that personal freedom to travel and get to work is an absolute right. Disruption of traffic is not. Disruption by student members will more quickly perceive that the massive jailings. Many Americans will be permanently alienated.

We cannot help but believe that a different process might occur. Americans will be, at first, surprised, shocked, and shaken out of their relative complacency by a million prison men. Americans will be permanently alienated. Others will, I hope, observe that thousands of people are so completely outraged by the war that they are willing to risk arrest. These Americans, and I hope they are many, will see that the cost to America of continuing to wage a war of genocide is much higher a price than two days of blocked traffic at the Capitol.

We may be, at first, served to alienate the majority of people and weaken the anti-war movement. And if violence occurs in Washington on a large scale, they are certainly right. But I cannot help but believe that a different process might occur. Americans will be, at first, surprised, shocked, and shaken out of their relative complacency by mass jailings. Many Americans will be permanently alienated. Others will, I hope, observe that thousands of people are so completely outraged by the war that they are willing to risk arrest. These Americans, and I hope they are many, will see that the cost to America of continuing to wage a war of genocide is much higher a price than two days of blocked traffic at the Capitol.

Martin Luther King initiated his disruptions of the streets in Selma, Alabama under a hail of accusations that labeled him a Communist and sexual pervert. Many now regard him as an important figure in the progress of the collective humanism of this nation. I can only hope that Notre Dame students will more quickly perceive that the massive destruction in Vietnam requires a strong moral stance that includes, for some though not all, civil disobedience in Washington this Monday and Tuesday.
the breaking of the unicorn best ancient sources, a unicorn is at its happiest when it is allowed to rescue a virgin maiden from the clutches of an evil sorcerer. This practice is described in numerous ancient texts, including the Bible and the works of Greek and Roman authors.

Also at Mass today was a boy named Jim. Sometimes, when I see him in church, I think of thatyneen-year-old boy a year ago when the same face looked up at me from a bed in the Emergency Room of the St. Ann Hospital. I was able to save the bodies broken in the traffic of Notre Dame Avenue.

A few days later, a new unicorn came to live on my lawn. With him was a note: "You see, father, he was broken -- but just as it was we who broke him, so we can put him together by sharing him with each other..."

John and Mark and Jim, full of light and grace, the children of Omnipotence, framed in every fragility, sinned with sin. Jim and Mark and Hubert, the Unicorn as broken; as mended; as deliverer of innocence yet unknown. I'm not quite sure what the playings of whymere..." O God, who makes the rule for power and the glass to give light, send forth your children, mayhap and Neptune, not to face the hour of their breaking, but to share the season of mourning for a world that lies shattered like a fallen unicorn at Thy clumsy, indifferent feet.

Unicorns and whales...little figures which I have collected as symbols of the mystery and whimmy of God's Kingdom. The whales...stirred in metal, wood, or bone...heavy, ponderous substances shaped into waving-slap-fing and sea-pounding head, plantain, death-bearing man... sign power reveals the cosmic indifference of mere smithies, the unicorn, light-bearing glass...the image of the horn is heraldic rather than erotic; but Christ is traditionally described under the images of a young, non-cumulative, and undeveloped...in the Hymn of the Bridegroom's lyrics in the Song of Songs.

It is as a Christ-image, a Saviour-figure into which has been invested the roles of lover and deliverer of innocence, that I love the unicorn best. Once at the Ursuline's Mass I tried to explain Passionism as the season of the Breaking of the Unicorn. First, I showed the children a one-horned, milk-white little figure that had suffered from a fall: a leg was broken, and the horn had disappeared entirely. Then I showed them another unicorn, a twin to the first; he was whole and intact and full of beauty. On Easter, I explained, the brokenness in Christ will be healed; like the unicorn, He will be renewed in loveliness, and full of beauty also.

Unfortunately, afterwards, I left the unfallen figure on a table, out of harm's way, to remind us of the promise of Resurrection. There a child, full of wonder and love, has to bear the fragile creature too, in the moment, it too lay smashed on the floor. For it was indeed the season of the Breaking of the Unicorn.

bergman: the passion of anna - a review

This coming weekend Cinema 71 has scheduled The Passion of Anna by Ingmar Bergman at eight p.m. at Washington hall. The American distribution United Artists has given an unfortunate and misleading title to the film. First, Anna, not the protagonist (and one of the four main characters) is shown dancing in the blue light of the moon, which symbolizes the spiritual illumination. The character's name, Anna, is the title. Second, the title suggests a sexual connotation where none exists (UA titled the film this for obviously commercial and promotional reasons.

The original title of the film, A Passion, conveys the intended religious signification present throughout the entire corpus of Bergman's other films.

A film is to Bergman is created by an im­ placable and equivocal Being. Consequently, his characteristics exist in an estranged isolation within the vacuum of universal silence. Some of these characteristics destroy themselves like the young suicide in Wild Strawberries. Others exist to perpetuate a visible as the artist in Shame (take brought this year by Cinema 71), and the artist Andreas Wincelmann in Passion. Andreas (Max von Sydow) and his lover Anna (Liv Ullman) attempt to face the hour of their breaking, but to share the season of mourning for a world that lies shattered like a fallen unicorn at Thy clumsy, indifferent feet.

Vietnam: perspectives

The American way of war-overkill. The population of North Vietnam is approximately half of what it was in 1964. This is a war American style-carried on with one of the greatest land forces ever devised by man and a great American technology-polypoly. Atrocities are daily committed by American planes in our name.

This is the Vietnamese peasants view of the American democracy, which has come to save him from the War-made Communists, who had come to destroy his land.

But people of the South who are not members have a right, a recognized right, to live, to be protected, to be free, to be independent of their liberty, which is to them. They represents a government insensitive to their rights, a government callous to their status as free men. They ask for justice, and they desire it."

The reality of an artistic fabric pierces the audience by the four main actors seen the set commenting on their roles. Such realistic postlude-Entfremdung-Effekt echoes the opening of Pershah, the camera's camera's shadow in The seventh seal, the long conversations in Persona and Winter Light. This accelerative device also shows the audience as an element of the Bergmanian fantasy, that is to say, the audience is as a Christ-image, a Christ-like figure, a Christ-like image.
Germano presents criticism

by D. Rock

Professor Dante Germano, member of the Woodrow Wilson Department of Political Science and Foreign Affairs at the University of Virginia, spoke last night on "Vogelins's Radical Thought." A large crowd in the Library Auditorium listened to Professor Germano present his thesis. Dr. Ernie Vogelins, the behavioral political philosopher

Prof. Germano said that he considers Vogelins one of the "finest minds in American political thought." He said that he first became acquainted with his writings while he was at Harvard University.

According to Germano, Vogelins's radical thought can be served by the radical philosophers so that radical voices deserve a sym pathetic hearing. He does not, however, endorse radical violent tactics.

"Authentic radicalism is difficult to define. It did not really emerge until Rousseau and it includes Marx's early philosophical writings. Radicalism is both an affirmation and a negation; a negation of the existing social order for social development. It is more a crisis of the system, and in the system."

Professor Germano compared Vogelins's works with three contemporaries: Marcuse, Brown, and Chomsky.

Germano concluded that both radicalism and non-radicalism are too-categoric rather than radical humanism.

He can't be serious

Tech at Fairbanks. Everybody knows that the midwestern teams, especially in football, and apparently in track, too, get voted to the top of the poll if they can manage to win even a junior college team. And since Notre Dame boat top rank and doesn’t win, they’ll probably stay in the Top 25 if they manage to have a break-even season.

But the sports writers and editors who vote in the weekly poll aren’t too prone to be logistical. Beating one good, or even great, team doesn’t mean that much in 1971 college basketball. Probably any major college team can find itself in the country, on a good night and at home, can beat any other college team at any time, that’s how great, that’s a bad thing. Sure, UCLA has a great team, but they had an off night in South Bend when the Irish beat them, and Austin Carr, admittedly a great player, had a super-good night. Not to mention that the coleslaw was packed with wildfires and screaming at everything.

In the poll after the Great Upset, Notre Dame climbed high in the Top 10, despite the fact that they hadn’t played in any big games. And their coach was crying “Number One.”

Ridiculous.

The Irish were even rated above Judson which had an infinitely better record than Notre Dame. The reason is simple: they don’t play the most powerful teams in the country, at least they beat none of the top 25.

The field of 21 horses, the largest since 1919 and the second highest entry. Considered to be the top horse is a shell in the country. However, the action on campus this weekend is pretty good. Notre Dame will battle the Cleveland lacrosse club Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Chicago Tournament.

The “A” team will head next to compete in the Virginia Commonwealth Tournament, in which a number of the nation’s top rugby clubs will participate. While the Notre Dame “B” squad will travel to Chicago to take part in the Chicago Tournament.

Large field set for Derby

A field of 21 horses, the largest field since 1919 and the second largest in history, are expected to go to the post Saturday for the 12th running of the Kentucky Derby at Louisville’s Churchill Downs. This year there is no clear cut favorite in the Run for the Roses, hence the exceptionally large entry. Considered to be the two top candidates to cross the wire in first place are Impervious, Test the Axe, Eastern Fleet, Bold And Able, Jim French, Unconscious, Ayan, and List. Post time for the race is 5:30 p.m. Eastern Daylight Savings Time.

The Notre Dame baseball team has four games on tap this weekend, three on the road against powerful Miami of Ohio and one at home against Albion.

Wettl and the Irish had the same basic philosophy. He was a great player and had a great record. There was no question that he could play the game back in the day. They beat the Nebraska on campus this weekend as the Irish ruggers will be battling on two fronts this weekend.

Notre Dame, which has 5-2 record to date, will cross swords with University of Chicago Saturday for a dual meet with the Notre Dame golf team, regarded Northern Illinois.

Sure, UCLA has a great team, but they had an off night in South Bend when the Irish beat them, and Austin Carr, admittedly a great player, had a super-good night. Not to mention that the coleslaw was packed with wildfires and screaming at everything.

In the poll after the Great Upset, Notre Dame climbed high in the Top 10, despite the fact that they hadn’t played in any big games. And their coach was crying “Number One.”

Ridiculous.

The Irish were even rated above Judson which had an infinitely better record than Notre Dame. The reason is simple: they don’t play the most powerful teams in the country, at least they beat none of the top 25.

to "shock, without regard as to whether they will persuade. Again an irrational argument. Professor Booth said.

Another common component of an irrational defense is the reliance on an "escalation of personal attacks, which leads from one charge to another," according to Prof. Booth. In the end, debaters tend to admit to the other that the charges were true. He added. Thus, only reasonable men can engage in good argument, he said.

The professor expounded on some points regarding disputes between the "affirmers" and "negators." He declared that the distinction between the two camps often is not clear since they both tend to negate everything. This is the easy and popular way to respond. Prof. Booth said, but it only prolongs the conflict and prohibits a satisfactory solution.

He made historical references to better explain the popularity of employing a negation argument. He stated that people in the past who have elevated those who said "no." As examples Prof. Booth spoke of the high regard given to the Protestant resistance to Catholicism, the more radical artists to traditional ones and the liberal in comparison to the other; as a result, "society is groping for meaningful affirmation."

which handle specific cases, such as the late minutes appeals board and the coed traffic board.

Five members of the Campus Judicial Board were also appointed; the seventh member will be chosen from next year's freshman class. Returning to the board are Sophomores Tina Keppel and Janice Natalie and Freshman Peggy McGinnis. New members are Junior Heather Tripucka and Freshman Patty Williams. It was noted that it was the first time in the history of our institution that a full board was during the appeals board meeting.

The commission is also the body that considers disputes between students and faculty, and also to the student body.

Jean German will sit, along with the college president and one faculty member, on the Appellate Board. Cases from either the Campus Judicial Board or from the Community Relations Board may be appealed to this body. Prof. Booth said that unless we use reason and clarity as tools for persuasion, only confusion will result. He attempted to make his point with an analogy: if you have more enemies than before.

Prof. Booth concluded with "Dwecote wrote, 'I think therefore I am.' I propose that we give good reasons to each other; therefore we are."
