Protest deems sanctions unenforceable

Rev. James T. Burchett, university provost, yesterday branded the sanctions drawn up by the Ad Hoc Committee as "unenforceable."

"Who has time in a hall to move 400 students to another place?" or receive a lady guest for two weeks," he asked. Fr. Burchett said that part of the fault of the report was that it dealt with all degrees of offenses while the Trustee, he claimed, was only interested in serious offenses.

The reason, they say, is that their search has not turned up a woman who combines the desired judicial philosophy and sufficiently distinguished legal background.

White House spokesmen have said from the first that the intercampus controversy would be to select nominees who share Nixon's conservative, strict constructionist philosophy. Thus, the failure to come up with a woman candidate indicates that those with strict constructionist records lacked the professional standing to be credible nominees.

This is borne out by a report that the two women to have been seriously considered were Judge Susan C. Gergel of the District Court for the Columbia and Patricia B. Moore of the Appellate Session on the U.S. Federal Court of the District's Criminal Division.

Both women have strong law backgrounds. Miss Bacon, a 29-year-old product of Vassar and Harvard Law School, has been on the bench only seven months and has little trial experience. Miss Rosenberg, a 63-year-old New Yorker, is not well known outside government circles, where she is highly respected.

Neither woman was on a list of 10 women suggested as qualified candidates by the National Women's Political Caucus. Seventeen of the women on the list were Democrats, and none had discernible strict constructionist leanings.

A Justice Department source confirmed today that so far the Department had asked the American Bar Association to make an independent check on the qualifications of all potential nominees. -- Rep. E. G. Votaw (R-Calif.)

The A.B.A.'s committee on the Federal Courts was recently formed and has begun to seek law school deans to get their faculty members' ideas.

Township Plan criticized by stay senator Bob Sauer

The proposed township style of reorganization of student government presented Tuesday night's Senate meeting came under fire Wednesday from Stay Senator Bob Sauer.

The Senate constitutional revision committee chairman criticized the plan, which would establish a seven man board of commissioners with each member representing a district, on five points.

According to Sauer:

- An elite group of policy makers rather than a representative group is fostered by the use of seven commissioners, six of which would control six policy making commissions (academic, hall life, coeducation, human affairs, consultation, and judicial).

- The six commissioners may not be satisfied with their mission and as a result fail to do the best possible job.

- The board chairman, elected from and by the seven commissioners, would be equivalent to the student body president, but not representative of the student body.

- The chairman's election would be unfair in that he could win by being known by more board members than another candidate.

There is no guarantee the seven could work well together.

The plan, presented by Stay Senator Fred Giuffrida, the chairman would be the board's official spokesman. He will appoint all cabinet members, with the advice and consent of the Student Senate, to run the entire board, and vote to resolve a tie among the commissioners.

In addition to heading their committees, the other members will set the budget, act as student representatives to the Student Senate, and join in the decision to establish revenue sources.

According to the Provost, at the Student Senate, the Senate only functions when it is opposed to the SLP. By uniting executive and legislative offices, Giuffrida feels there will be an "effective representation" from the student body.

After the executive and legislative branches are merged under proposal, the result should be united with the SLC to form a new superior body, which the checks and balances system is reorganized into a more centralized system of representation, Giuffrida added.

Students on SAC plan meeting

Student members of the Trustees Student Affairs Committee will meet Monday, Oct. 4 to discuss drug on campus and the parietal hours situation.

The body will meet at 6:10 p.m. to consider off-campus problems, hear a report on minority students and a preliminary report of the drug problem.

Reaction to the letter of Board of Trustees Chairman Edmund Stuphan's letter to te Student Senate, the Student Council will be discussed at an afternoon session beginning at 1:30 p.m.

The SAC will meet with the hall president at this time. Both sessions will be in the Center for Continuing Education.

Burtchaell on TV; talks of sanctions

Despite the fact that we also have the guy who feels everybody should not be satisfied with their mission and as a result fail to do the best possible job.

Very few people feel responsible for the common good, the Provost stated. But that students make very large claims that they do.

Fr. Burtchaell cited examples of candidates running for judicial board in a certain hall, whose campaign fliers implied that they would protect the students and make sure they didn't get penalized if they were elected.

"Part of the responsibility of a guy in a public position is that he will protect the people from illegal actions, not allow them," Fr. Burtchaell commented.

Fr. Burtchaell said he "had no qualms" with the check that people should not be expected to enforce rules that they had no hand in making.

"If people are unwilling to take on the responsibility for enforcing any rules that they haven't made then the hall staff and hall personnel shall have to do it," the Provost stated.

Fr. Burtchaell said he agreed with the Trustees' stand on parietals, terming the concept of having each hall set its own parietal hours "ridiculous."

The administrator claimed that it would be a realistic mess if Dillon shut down at one o'clock while Alumni didn't do so until two.

Burtchaell appeared on the six and ten o'clock news on WNDU-TV and was interviewed after his 11 p.m. Mass in Dillon.

On television he said that he believed that sanctions were necessary to maintain student behavior on campus. He termed the sanctions that were devised by the ad-hoc committee as "sometimes ludicrous."

Administrators and hall personnel felt some of the penalties were too light, the Provost claimed. He later admitted that he was "preaching this was the case."

Burtchaell said though, that any sanctions that were considered, "must be serious if we consider the rules serious."

1971 New York Times

Washington, Sept. 29—President Nixon was reported today to be "encouraged" by progress being made at the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund toward eventual revaluation of the exchange rates and reform of the world monetary system. The word came from Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House Press Secretary, after a scheduled meeting of the President with Pierre-Paul Schweitzer, Managing Director of the Monetary Fund, Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally, and Arthur F. Burns, Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Karl Klasen, President of the West German Central Bank, told a news conference he had clear "firm impression" that the U.S. would not object to a small gold price increase, and hence a devaluation of the dollar, if it comes as part of a package of currency exchange rate changes. There was a rising chorus of anguish from the less developed countries who objected not only to the gold price but also the current monetary turmoil, but also that they were not allowed a significant role in decision-making.

A group of well-known Americans, including former Secretary of the Treasury Henry M. Fowler and William McChesney Martin, Jr., former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, issued a statement saying that the "first requirement in resolving the present monetary difficulties is to assure that any new set of exchange rates that may be established be realistic." The statement, issued by the United States Branch of the Atlantic Council, said "token measures will not do." The group said that as part of the process of negotiation in the U.S. "should remove the 10 percent import surcharge as soon as possible."

Supplement to the University of Notre Dame Academic Guide, for the School Year 1962-3.

Pretty potent stuff, for only nine years ago. But similar fluids course through the veins of other handbooks, too. The 1963-64 student guide says "The true Notre Dame student observes the ordinary rules of good taste while visiting in The Morris Inn or any other hotel or restaurant in the city,..." with all the ensuing implications of what would happen to a Notre Dame Student who did not observe these "tasteful" rules. Likewise it said that "The Notre Dame Student clearly sees that it is not fitting to entertain young ladies in a men's residence hall. Neither the visitors nor the hall residents would be at perfect ease." Student government has as consequence an "excellent medium for educating students to govern themselves." The hall autonomy section said "Each rector will promulgate regulations proper to his hall and binding on the residents of that hall..." Articles and editorials in student publications must reflect the Christian character of Notre Dame.

We thought this University had moved away from all that, We thought that the last five years had finally and permanently buried all the minging patronizing paternalism that the past hundred and sixty had built up.

That's why we find it so disquieting that as high and respected a University Official as Provost James T. Burtchaell would go as far as he did to endorse the mold of paternalism the Trustees are currently sporting.

In a cameo tube appearance last night, Father Burtchaell suggested that sanctions or regulations are needed to maintain student behavior. In truth, Burtchaell has made of number of comments on the subject, and the breach of them are far more complex, comprehensive, and subtle than his brief TV comments indicated.

First off, he derided the lack of "student responsibility." Not a very original complaint, nor a particularly relevant one, but one that seemed integrally tied up with the Trustees case for sanctions. In reality, the Trustees have never allowed the students to handle enough responsibility to accurately try them. The Board of Trustees is itself studentless, and the highest student-membered board is the SLC, which has only recently come to mature years.

Nor have the Trustees allowed the student body to exercise what meager power it does possess for any extended period of time. The SLC has been with us but three full years, and it was only eight years ago that the aforementioned gibbsbath was promulgated as Holy Writ.

But the real problem seems to be an inability on the part of Fr. Burtchaell to comprehend the real meaning of the word "responsibility." To him, "responsible" does not mean to behave in a manner preordained by the Board of Trustees.

It isn't the University's job to make people "behave" in a way they would not "behave" any more. To be "responsible" means to be free men, fully aware of the consequences of their every action and fully willing to take on those consequences.

The rest of his ideas seem to be badly burdened by his first assumption, Father Burtchaell seemed particularly distressed by the fact that the Board of Appeals reversed so many of the Dean of Student's decisions. But our Provost is in hot water indeed if he contends that he, or the Dean of Students, or any single administration member is more qualified to pass judgement on students than a board drawn from all elements of the University.

The Provost said all other staff, too, for example, he said that he approved of the Trustee's stand on Parities, and thought it was ridiculous to have varying times from dorm to dorm. Don't spend too much time trying to figure it out. Under the Trustee's position, the Parities can end at different times in different dorms.

The fact that Father Burtchaell has to fantasize an invalid rationale to support the Trustee's stand underscores the arbitrariness and irrationality of that stand. Whatever its disadvantages exist under a no-partiality situation (time differential between halls, undermining of the University's moral standard, etc.) exist under the present situation. Why two o'clock?

In his interview, though, Burtchaell did say something with which we could wholeheartedly agree. He said that the sanctions drawn up by the ad hoc committee would be "unenforceable." They would be. So would any other sanctions. We hope other members of the Board of Trustees will be able to catch up to this fact.

A Play in two acts

The cast:

L. Emmet Ballantine: (his name was O'Paul, he called himself Saul, but everyone knew him as Larry), young, righteous arts and letters student, civilian.

The Colonel: (Name:classified) military career man in office in building 5 of a medium sized midwestern university.

The chorus: concerned civilians.

Scene: Mary, 1971, - exam week at the colonel's school

Chorus: Well, Larry, how's the roty course you took to show them they couldn't stop you?

LEB: Really enjoying it, it's taisty but the colonel's gonna screw me for cutting three times and he didn't even announce a cut policy.

Chorus: Yeah, but didn't they lock you out a couple of times when you were late?

LEB: The door was locked but the others could have opened it if they hadn't been at attention somehow whenever the colonel got close they all gave hot pants and jumped out of their seats. I never could figure it out.

Chorus: Let's ask the Colonel if he's gonna do anything about your grade because of those cuts. How'bout it colonel: what's happening out.

Chorus: Let's ask the Colonel if he's gonna do anything about your grade because of those cuts. How'bout it colonel? what's happening out.

Chorus: You mean all the others are in rotcy?

Chorus: No, but didn't they lock you out a couple of times when you were late?

Chorus: Only for the people inside.

Chorus: You mean all the others are in rotcy?

Chorus: Too bad, Larry. It's only castles burning.

LEB: But, damnit, Chorus, castles are important.

Act II

scene: Sept. 1971 LEB is far away but the smoke of nutrid mortar and drawbridge burning can be smell faintly in the breeze from building 5.

Chorus: We would have liked to help Larry. We even tried to sign up for As 211 to prove they couldn't do it to us but they are pretty clever.

For the first time in history there was a little checkmark after the course title just like the one they (as opposed to they) always put after the grade because of those cuts. How'bout it colonel: what's happening out.

Chorus: Let's ask the Colonel if he's gonna do anything about your grade because of those cuts. How'bout it colonel? what's happening out.

Chorus: You mean all the others are in rotcy?

Chorus: No, but we wanted to take a course.

Chorus: I'm sure that could be arranged. We had a couple of girls signed up for it but they pimped out--I mean popped out--on us. We had to settle for two freshmen civics.

Chorus: You mean all the others are in rotcy?

Chorus: Actually, all of them are civilians until they're junior year when they sign their contracts with us. You want to join?

Chorus: Are you one of the colonel's oldest?

Chorus: Yes, but I thought he had dropped the course he was gone for so many weeks.

Chorus: Ca va, Larry, Larry, so more it goes, smell the smoke?

Ghost of LEB: But dammit, Chorus, castles are important.

Chorus: The last war) Only for the people inside.
the problem is much deeper — it is the myth held by many Americans that problems can be solved only through the use of violence.

It seems that nothing can more exemplify the Notre Dame spirit than the thrill that washes away football games at the Convoy. A truly perpetual experience was witnessed last Saturday by those that made the pilgrimage to this manner.

With a great effort, Biff's father forced himself to wake up before he could drain the beer that Biff had washed down with liquor. I would like to share with you what I witnessed, what happened last Saturday.

Shortly after one, I entered the Convoy, and it was dull and drab, but that was the way it was and I couldn't stand the weather or the idea of the benefit of the doubt to the existing powers' use of violence — or are we reducing the lines of standing with the poor and oppressed who attempt to achieve some diminishment of human beings?

Together Wilka and Miss Sheehy hope to provide input into mergers of several areas of the merger, especially student affairs and hall life.

Unifying all the other merger study committees, the Institute team is headed by Bill Wilka. They have no faculty advisor or coordinator working directly with them, but remain contact with such people as Fr. James L. Riely, Dean of Students. Fr. Thomas Chambers Director of Student Affairs. Their mission is to examine Blasius, Vice-President of Student Affairs; and Dr. Mary Cannon, SMC Vice-President.

Miss Sheehy emphasized the need for studying the mergers of Student Government, the Administration and the Hall Presidents' Council.

Six Goals
At the outset of their work last spring, Wilka and Miss Sheehy announced six main goals that they hoped to accomplish. These goals included:

1. the merger of Student Government
2. the improvement of hall life.
3. a joint academic standards committee which would delegate the requirements for student and their majors, with a uniform system of accreditation for the two student bodies.
4. unified community structures which would entail such groups as SLG, HPC, and academic councils.
5. the unification of student services such as security, psychological services and the infirmary.
6. a student manual containing the rules and regulations for both student bodies.

In the next issue the Observer will explore the Coeducation Commission's situation today, especially in regards to their progress in achieving their initial goals and their plans for the future.

Longshoreman strike set for this Friday

(C) NEW YORK TIMES

New York--The International Longshoremen's Association and Stevedore interests here appear to be headed on a collision course that could result in an unprecedented shutdown of every deep water port in the nation when the union's contract with the New York Shipping Association expires at midnight Thursday.

Thomas W. Gleason, head of the I.L.A., emerged from a meeting with the union's executive committee today to declare that dockworkers would continue moving cargo through the end of the contract and the presidential wage freeze only if the terms of the agreement "remain unchanged."

Every I.L.A. contract round since the end of World War II has resulted in a strike. Gleason carefully left the door open for further talks with management tomorrow, but James J. Dickman, president of the New York Shipping Association--which represents direct employers of dockside labor here--did not hold out much hope. "You can pray for an eleventh hour miracle," he said, "but don't hold your breath."

Past I.L.A. strikes have affected a sizable portion of America's foreign trade. Its jurisdiction covers ports from Maine to Texas.

Administration economists are doubly concerned about the possibility of an I.L.A. strike this time, however, because it would tie in with a labor dispute including the unrelated International Longshoremen's Warehousemen's Union that has kept west coast ports closed down for the last 90 days.

President Nixon said last Sunday that he would "automatically" invoke the 90-day cooling-off period of the Taft-Hartley Act if the I.L.A. goes out while the West Coast longshoremen are still on strike.

There are shortages of longshoremen in some parts of the port, Dickman said. "We don't have enough people, yet we have to pay some of these people for not working."

a challenge

Editor:
The undersigned issues a challenge to the Dean of Students, The University Board of trustees, and the campus security patrol.

On Monday September 20, the Observer published an article claiming that the preceding weekend had seen no major violations of the Trustees newest proclamation on "Parties" and the consumption of Alcoholic beverages in public places on the campus. The Observer report was grossly inaccurate.

On Saturday of that weekend, during daylight hours, thousand of non-students drank intoxicating beverages in public with absolutely no response from the Notre Dame administration, security patrol, or the outside authorities the Trustees seem so concerned about.

The reason? Notre Dame tradition. The non-students were Alumni and "friends of Notre Dame", and a few parents who were lucky enough to be granted football parking passes. Despite University regulations concerning public drinking, Irish University makes no attempt to change this standard Notre Dame tradition.

By the end of the day beer cans are strewn all over campus, and overly exuberant Fighting Irish men are strewn over various parking areas. This is the great Catholic University. Worse yet is the hypocrisy of a double standard - one applied on 5 afternoons a week, and one standard of discipline for those who stick around for academics. This policy has been formalized in instructions by the Dean of Students to the Resident Assistants.

We challenge the University to attempt to enforce its own rules this Saturday, October 2. Possibly Father Chambers could give his R. A.'s a Saturday night off in order to supplement some type of Parking Lot patrol Saturday afternoon.

If no attempt at enforcement is made, the students of Notre Dame can only assume that the same attitude of benign neglect will be applied to the Hall and Lounge Parties that will soon resume on campus.

Yours in Notre Dame (du lac)
