Fulbright announces opposition to $400-million foreign aid bill

Washington, Oct. 31-See J.W. Fulbright, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, predicted today that Congress would approve an interim solution to keep foreign aid alive, but he indicated opposition to the formula being devised by the Nixon administration.

The Arkansas democrat, one of the leaders in the Senate's defeat of the administration's Foreign Aid Bill Friday night, pledged his personal backing for what he called "the least controversial" aspects of foreign aid, such as refugee relief and military aid to Israel.

But, affirming his well-known opposition to other American military assistance, Fulbright said he thought administration efforts to retain military aid to Cambodia, Vietnam and Laos -- as well as to Greece -- would again be defeated by the Senate, or at least produce a lengthy fight.

Administration officials said today that they hoped to push through a continuing resolution to extend economic and military programs for 90 days when the current continuing resolution expires on Nov. 15. This would continue aid at the rate of last year's expenditures --$2.64 billion a year.

In addition, officials plan to ask for a supplemental appropriation of some $400 million --$50 million for Pakistani refugee relief and $150 million for Vietnam economic programs.

Scott, Javis support bill

Approval of this package would carry the aid program into 1972 by which time the administration would have a new coordinated program to offer to the Congress, aides said.

Sen. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Senate Republican leader, and Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., have already indicated their desire to carry the administration's fight for a continuation bill.

But Fulbright, reflecting the views of the liberals who opposed the Aid Bill, largely because of vague wording in the administration's support for the Anti-Communist regimes in Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam, said he would not support such a bill.

Fulbright said that when his Foreign Relations Committee meets tomorrow morning the members will discuss the situation and try to work out any possible compromise.

"I would say -- without having talked to them at all -- that some kind of interim program will probably be devised. There are various ways of approaching it. We do not like -- the 'continuing resolution approach,'" he said.

"I am thinking generally along the lines of an interim program which would take care of those parts of the program which are the least controversial. There are such things. The Children's Program is universally applauded, the Palestinian refugees, the Pakistani refugees. No one is opposed to them. A number of things of this character can be put together," he said.

present military aid opposed

Fulbright said "The really controversial things are the use of this program for part of the military domination of other countries."

Incidentally, the assistant chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee said the fact that some $3 per cent of the $3 billion request was for military aid.

Asked if he would support a filibuster on the Senate floor if the administration introduced its continuing resolution, Fulbright said that this depended on whether the administration sought to keep things as they are now with military aid included. If it did, then he predicted "great opposition.

Incidentally, he noted, was "a special case," and should be supported.

In general, Fulbright expounded his own critical thinking about the way American Foreign Policy has developed in the postwar years, particularly his view that the defeat of the Foreign Aid Bill was something of a turning point in the country.

He said the vote was "the beginning of a new era -- a change in our basic foreign policy."

Foreign aid, he said, started out as a worthy endeavor, "but turned into a code of the cold war." He said it was a form of "welfare imperialism" by which the United States exerted influence on many countries.

"I think this is the beginning of a re-evaluation of our foreign policy. This is one aspect of it, an indication of the tide of neo-isolationism in the country -- a withdrawing from foreign commitments.

"The idea of neo-isolationism is absolutely a nuisance of language," he said.

Citing his support for the passage in the Senate recently of a $2 billion appropriation for international organizations --as distinct from bilateral aid -- he said:

"The true internationalist is the one who wants to internationalize these things like the United Nations or the International Bank." Bilateral aid, Fulbright said, was "a vehicle for imperialism, not internationalism."

He said that the Aid Bill's Military Sections were used "for the influencing and perpetuation of existing regimes."

"This has been part of the policy of preservation of the status quo, the preservation of any change in so many countries that need change. And this has, this has generally, I think, eroded the basis of the whole program," he said.

Like Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., Fulbright attributed the Foreign Aid Bill's defeat partly to "over-lobbying" by the administration in an effort to defeat amendments limiting aid to Cambodia.

In another development, George Bush, the United States Ambassador to the United Nations, appearing on the American Broadcasting Company Program, "Face the Nation," said he admitted there has been much discontent with the Foreign Aid Program, "But I think in the final analysis when calm and consideration take over, that there will be a program because people recognize there are some fundamental things being done there that affect the self-interest of everybody in our country."

Scott Barlow: letter a 'repressive fiat'

Barlow, Underman protest Hesburgh letter

by Ann McCarry

A letter released by University President Rev. Theodore Hesburgh last Thursday has induced strong responses from two '65 Notre Dame graduates, Government officials, the Observer learned last night.

St. Mary's Student Body President Kathy Barlow and Student Body Vice-President Tony Underman both expressed unequivocal disapproval of the letter, which said that the Board of Trustees had decided to determine Notre Dame parietal hours themselves.

Miss Barlow included the words "repressive fiat" in a full-page statement she released to the Observer.

"First of all," Miss Barlow said, "Father Hesburgh's letter makes a comparison of the academic situation with student life. That seems to me to be a poor analogy. The question I would ask is 'are we here to be tested and graded on our lifestyles.'"

"Also, he is talking about moving towards a better Notre Dame. It appears to me that his top priority is the institution and not the people who are here.

"In the letter, Fr. Hesburgh says, 'student life is a responsibility that the Trustees can never surrender.' It appears to me that what they're saying is that they will not 'allow' individuals here to determine their own lifestyles.

"I would be extremely disappointed if the students here accept this repressive fiat because the Trustees are not merely addressing themselves to the issue of parietal hours, but more importantly to the issue of self-determination.

"Miss Underman voiced a similar opinion in reaction to the letter and the Board of Trustees' decision.

"I read the letter with much interest. Naturally I was disappointed by the whole parietal issue not passing because I felt the Student Life Council had done enough to fight the issue and that a lot of thought had gone into the proposals."

"I was bothered," continued Missy, "by the tone of the letter, especially by the assumption of Father Hesburgh and the Board that leaving the determination of parietals up to each hall would ultimately result in open dormitories.

"I don't agree with Father Hesburgh's theory that the proposal would mean open dorms. Each hall knows its own representatives to the Board, namely, John Barkefett, Orlando Rodriguez, and Bob Weaver, as evidenced by their acceptance of the other recommendations of the SLC.

"However," she went on, "it still goes back to the same argument of where the power lies. And, in this case, since they feel ultimate responsibility in regards to parietals, they don't feel that they can accept the responsibility of relinquishing this power to students."
Communist Chinese flag to be raised at UN

Peking sent a cablegram to Secretary General Thant advising him that it wants its flag listed as "China, People's Republic of." Thus, the red flag with five gold stars will be hoisted by U.N. guards shortly after 9 a.m. together with all the other 131 flags of the member countries.

There will be no special ceremony.

The Chinese Communist flag, like the Nationalist flag before Taiwan's expulsion, will fly between those of Chile and Colombia. The flags are arranged in English alphabetical order in the United Nations Plaza.

Diplomats with close ties to the mainland government today said they expected its delegates to arrive Thursday or Friday. But today's communication from Foreign Minister Chi Peng-Fei to Thant gave no arrival date and no indication on the composition of the delegation.

Chiao Kuang-Hua, one of about six vice foreign ministers and a close confidant of Premier Chou En-Lai, is thought by informed diplomats here to be the most likely head of the delegation.

The diplomats, who specialize in Chinese affairs, said that Chiao has long been responsible for European affairs in the ministry and is regarded as perhaps the highest-ranking official in foreign affairs, after Chi.

Communist diplomats with close ties with Peking were undeterred today to have sought further assurances from Thant that all the specialized agencies related to the U.N. would follow the General Assembly's lead in admitting Peking and expelling the Nationalists.

But informed sources said that there was no suggestion that Peking might delay the dispatch of its delegation until all the agencies had acted. Unesco, the U.N. Educational Social and Cultural Organization, acted on the assembly's recommendation Frisky.

U.N. officials close to Thant today said that the Secretary General had done all he could do, namely to inform the heads of all the agencies of the assembly's decision. The officials said that they expected all the agencies to act swiftly in the same sense as Unesco, except for World Bank and the International Monetary Fund where the Nixon Administration might be able to block the expulsion of Nationalist China.

Voting in the World Bank is weighted on the basis of the country's financial contributions. The U.S. therefore controls just over 24 per cent of the vote.

George Bush, the U.S. Delegate to the U.N., hinted on a television program today that the administration might make use of its voting strength in the World Bank and the Monetary Fund to keep the Nationalists in.

Meeting of InPRIG draws less than twenty

Bill Rahner
by Gene Slason

Despite what Publicity Chairman Jerry Nagle termed a "disappointing turnout of new people" at yesterday's meeting of the consumer research group, InPRIG, organization leaders are "confident" of the six-week-old group's future.

The meeting, designed to introduce new InPRIG members to the organization and to demonstrate techniques successful at Indiana University at South Bend, drew less than twenty people, none of them new members, according to Nagle.

Campaign InPRIG director Bill Rahner said that originally the meeting was supposed to be a conference between statewide coordinator Dave Hersch and local InPRIG representatives. On Wednesday, however, ND InPRIG decided to throw the meeting open to the public and the presenters to invite Hersch to speak.

As a result of the meeting and of an earlier decision to decentralize the organization, Rahner announced that all publicity will be handled on a statewide basis. According to Nagle, six of the twenty-two on-campus halls have permanent representation.

InPRIG has planned a meeting for those representatives today at 6:30 in the Cabinet offices.

Migrant Laborers hold Texas meeting

Despite publicity & pledges few volunteers show up

by Michael Baum

A negligible turn-out of volunteers has dashed the hopes of the Student's World Concern for the Pakistan Relief Fund Collection on South Reed on Halloween night. Despite pleas from the student services, including the Deme staff, the Washington Maryland, Virginia Club, Student Government, and the Merry Franksters, as of eight p.m. Sunday night only 20 volunteers showed up. The Fund Collection has been advertised by radio and TV, with an Observer editorial and article, and with posters in "every section of every hall in the two campuses," according to executive director Tom Hamilton. "I'm really displeased," Hamilton stated. "All the student government people didn't show up, and only John Barkett showed up to say he couldn't come." Hamilton added that Barkett had contributed a check for $25.00 drawn from the student government funds. Agreeably, Hamilton offered the "interesting statistics" that out of twenty people called by him, there were 19 papers, 17 tests, 8 claims of "This week in stat," and 3 of "My parents are up." Student's World Concern has planned an additional on-campus collection for Tuesday, with volunteers going door to door. Hamilton said he hoped that the response would be somewhat better.

Hesburgh talks on rules and hall life

The following interview with Fr. Hesburgh was conducted by Assistant K. editor

Abowd: First of all, most everyone who has read this (Hesburgh's letter) has had some serious problems that have been approved, and what wasn't and what's still under consideration. I think it's important to point out the SPC proposals and find out what's been done to date. Establishing residence halls and university sanctions for larceny, assault, and the sale and distribution of drugs or alcohol is a rule that is used to deal with this. It was a serious case of some student stealing a lot of money from another student. The student would court would just give them a small amount of probabation. The thought is that this is a serious thing and he should disqualify himself from the kind of trust that you need in community life in the hall if one guy would know beat up a guy or knifed him. We've had guys beat up and kicked in the face. If a guy were to do that to a serious thing. So the word they put out was that was improbable kind of sanction if they that actually a serious thing happened that even a student court, I think it would be impossible to create a serious case.

Hesburgh: Tired of parietal question

Abowd: Are you personally tired of arguing about student life rules?

Hesburgh: I'd rather argue about building a community and coordination than say that's a life problem. I feel I suppose like some of the student leaders have said, I've written to a friend of mine recently and said I think we're doing our best to do something about it.

Abowd: What's going to be the source of evalua­tion of this new policy?

Hesburgh: I'm not sure. I don't know what you mean by that.

Abowd: What they said was that they actually followed the policy. They put it in the halls to settle what this ought to be and I think Mr. Zahm's letter as I see it or their decision as I see it was that this all goes back to the university and what the adjudication ought to be. The ways out were that this all goes back to the university and what the adjudication ought to be. The thought being improbable kind of sanction if they that actually a serious thing happened that even a student court, I think it would be improbable that a student court would look for somebody else to see whether or not the student was turned in for some reason.

Abowd: The SPC recommended that sanctions against drinking, parietal hours be established for student life.

Hesburgh: They said that this had been end­ run around, that there was a long period of time when this is the first time or test that they're going to back to that letter, and they included it in the list of things they thought serious.

Abowd: The "end-run" is a football term.

Hesburgh: Oh, yeah.

Abowd: That wasn't quite sure what you meant by that.

Hesburgh: We'll assume being turned in for reasons other than the fact of what you've said.

Abowd: By residential assistants?

Hesburgh: Anybody. You can make a serious case that some­body stealing $100 from somebody or walking down the halls and not have to wait for somebody else to see it.

Abowd: Well, for instance, if another student witnesses a parietal violation then he would be turned in?

Hesburgh: If he wants to. I'd doubt that he would.

Abowd: You're more certain than I am.

Hesburgh: This is a kind of a different sort of question. What your position do you think the most appropriate response of students to this latest action would be?

Hesburgh: Parietals a serious violation

Abowd: TMII: They (the Trustees) made a list of what they consider serious things and that one of them. There's another on page two or three of the things they thought serious. It seems to be that you take things which are really serious, dealing and assault you know they're getting drunk and tearing the walls down or being drunk or something. But then there's a list of things that are never do very any of those things. Oh, they may be in the fringe of breaking that or in a rule that's a serious thing that's been taken care of in the hall, but I think there are people who know there are relatively serious things around here, that are seriously wrong. My own rea­sonation is that it inad­ed that a few rules that put an unhappy place for the many and really just as bad says the people like the few guys around here who don't make it academically. There are relatively few guys who wouldn't do it socially. As far as living up to minimal requirements for hall life in a cloud of有限公司 like this.

Abowd: I sense in this letter a kind of transition mood by the Trustees with respect to hall drinking and parietal hours. I don't know if I get the right impression but I sense that.

Hesburgh: I don't know I think they've pretty much stated what they said early in the year. Mr. Stogman's letter.

Abowd: TMII: They weren't terribly adamant about it. Was it that we all got the wrong impression about universal rules the first time or that this is just a test that we're going to end up being put through?

Hesburgh: TMII: I think, they're fairly con­ sistent. I'd have to use that word. I think in a very general way that it's all extremely well-impressed with the consequence of the letter.

Hesburgh: Tired of parietal question

Abowd: Are you personally tired of arguing about student life rules?

Hesburgh: It's a very exciting point in history where a lot of things are at watershed. I would hope that we could get a maximum input from faculty people who know about these water­ shed sheets and I think that we will take the entrance into China, that we've got people around here who really know what the issues are and what they're likely to lead to and it would be a great thing if a hall could say that Thursday night we're going to have Dr. Kurtish over to talk about Thursday we're going to talk about the international implications of this. He's spent his whole life in diplomacy and has degrees from the best universities and has kept up and published books and... he's a very important source of information... resource information that the halls could draw on. I've told all of the administra­tors, everyone of you ought to be willing to meet guys in the halls... I'd do it if I get right and I've been to three or four halls this year.

Abowd: Who specifically did the Trustees charge with the hiring of people to do this?

Hesburgh: TMII: The Council of a professional survey, good sociology and economics department and we've got a number of people who are interested. They are sensitive people who are interested, we're just going to try to make it a good thing.

Abowd: Do you have any idea on the time lag involved here?

Hesburgh: TMII: I would hope that we would cer­ tainly get it done in the early spring.

Abowd: In time for the next Trustees meeting?

Hesburgh: TMII: Well, that would be great if we could. I don't seriously think we're going to bring it up this semester. They're not the easiest thing in the world to put together and if they're put together badly. I know you get a funny questionnarie... you get a bunch of funny answers. But I think we've got enough talent in this campus to get a group together to work on this and I assume we'll mobilize the most knowledgeable people in this field to do it.

Abowd: About the changing the agenda from financial crisis to committing money to the student center. I know that's a big...

Hesburgh: TMII: What gets the first priority Is it to do something in the individual residence halls or is it better to do something in the central place like LaPorte or is it better to try to do something in both places? I think they've got to get some priorities. It's obvious we have to start with where things are most unim­ pressive. It's better to try to do something in both places even that they'll probably have to start with where things are most unimpressive. I think it would be great for everybody. I think we could get everything to move towards a little more to China, now that China is opening up. We've got guys around here who can go to China and this is the best time to go.

Abowd: Hesburgh to other administrators: Everyone of you ought to be willing to meet guys in the halls

Hesburgh: TMII: We're going to a meeting.

Abowd: There was a meeting yesterday. I think we talked about the international implications of this. It's a very exciting point in history where a lot of things are at watershed. I would hope that we could get a maximum input from faculty people who know about these watershed sheets and I think that we will take the entrance into China, that we've got people around here who really know what the issues are and what they're likely to lead to and it would be a great thing if a hall could say that Thursday night we're going to have Dr. Kurtish over to talk about Thursday we're going to talk about the international implications of this. Abowd: Who specifically did the Trustees charge with the hiring of people to do this?

Hesburgh: TMII: Well, they asked the administration to work with the students and the faculty to mobilize the most knowledgeable people in this field. This is a kind of a different sort of question. What your position do you think the most appropriate response of students to this latest action would be?

Abowd: You're more certain than I am.

Hesburgh: This is a kind of a different sort of question. What your position do you think the most appropriate response of students to this latest action would be?

Abowd: Are you continuing to classify parietal violations as serious violations?

Hesburgh: We've got a fantastic faculty here of the widest possible experience. Well, for example, I was at an engineering staff reception and I met a fellow who had just returned from Russia and I think that would be great for everybody. I think we could get everything to move towards a little more to China now that China is opening up. We've got guys around here who can go to China and this is the best time to go.
Irish Frosh drub MSU 38-14

by Mike Pavlin

While MSU scatback Eric Allen was enjoying an NCAA record performance in Lafayette, the Spartan frosh were having much less fun back home in East Lansing.

Led by the pitch-catch team of Tom Clements to Pete Demerle, the Mutt and Jeff running combo of Eric Penick and Chuck Kelly, Notre Dame freshmen crushed MSU's Tartan Turf.

On the ground the Irish were equally impressive. There is another Di Nardo on campus, offensive tackle Gerry, who goes 6-1, 230 lbs. He and his mates on the offensive line moved the Spartans about with relative ease, allowing Irish runners to pile up 328 yards on 74 carries.

Someone had better check what kind of padding Penick is wearing because he looks a whole lot bigger than 6-1, 195 lbs. He is tough to bring down, agile, and above all--fast. He showed his best form early in the fourth quarter, scoring on runs of 11 and 15 yards while seeming to drift by defenders without effort. He also appears able to take punishment, shaking off a leg injury just before his final TD run.

Penick totalled 89 yards on 20 carries, but the diminutive Kelly was equally impressive. Standing only 5-9, Chuck bobbed and weaved for 82 yards on 17 carries. He showed great skill at hiding behind his larger blockers, darting in and out the way Mike Garrett used to do at Kansas City. For good measure, Kelly grabbed a Clements' pass good for 38 yards. Fullback Wayne Bullock added 51 yards on 11 carries.

The Irish offense shook off a leg injury just before his final TD run.

The Clements to Demerle combination clicked for seven passes on the day for an exceptional 222 yards (24.8 yds per completion). Capped by a 40-yarder to Demerle for a TD, Clements also scrambled like a Theismann, with 62 yards in 14 carries. Demerle, a 6-1, 187 lb split end from New Canaan, Conn., averaged 25 yards per reception having the kind of day Irish fans associate with a Seymour O'Neal-type.

Led by the pitch-catch team of Tom Clements to Pete Demerle, the Mutt and Jeff running combo of Eric Penick and Chuck Kelly, Notre Dame freshmen crushed MSU's Tartan Turf.

On the ground the Irish were equally impressive. There is another Di Nardo on campus, offensive tackle Gerry, who goes 6-1, 230 lbs. He and his mates on the offensive line moved the Spartans about with relative ease, allowing Irish runners to pile up 328 yards on 74 carries.

Someone had better check what kind of padding Penick is wearing because he looks a whole lot bigger than 6-1, 195 lbs. He is tough to bring down, agile, and above all--fast. He showed his best form early in the fourth quarter, scoring on runs of 11 and 15 yards while seeming to drift by defenders without effort. He also appears able to take punishment, shaking off a leg injury just before his final TD run.

Penick totalled 89 yards on 20 carries, but the diminutive Kelly was equally impressive. Standing only 5-9, Chuck bobbed and weaved for 82 yards on 17 carries. He showed great skill at hiding behind his larger blockers, darting in and out the way Mike Garrett used to do at Kansas City. For good measure, Kelly grabbed a Clements' pass good for 38 yards. Fullback Wayne Bullock added 51 yards on 11 carries.

The Irish offense shook off a leg injury just before his final TD run.

Penick to the Irish back in front with a one-yard plunge. The TD came at the 7:30 mark of the second quarter after a 12-play, 70-yard drive. But another Irish fumble proved costly. Given possession at the ND 35, Spartan qb Steve Moerdyk wasted no time in lofting a T.D. pass to Mike Jones. Clements and Demerle came right back to give the Irish a 21-14 halftime advantage. At 2:17, Clements hit his split end with a 40-yarder.

Stripe opened the second-half scoring with a 27-yard field goal; then Penick added his two scoring jaunts. The ND Defense completely shut off the Spartans who continued to hurt themselves through penalties and fumbles. In the air, MSU was a mere 2-14.

Varsity coach Duffy Daugherty need not despair, however. Morgado, another of Duffy's Hawaiian recruits, carried 21 times for 86 yards. Spartan passer Jim Glennell averaged a superb 46 yards on six punts. Jones even tried his hand at qb, showing some dazzling moves while scrambling for his life from the ND front four, picking up 17 yards on four carries.

But the day belonged to the Irish who played ball control offense at its finest. Having proven they can handle big Americans as well as small Mexicans, the Irish take on the Michigan Wolverines this Saturday morning at home. MSU topped the Wolverines 20-18 in a rainstorm earlier this season.
The game's outcome was decided in the first 30 minutes, when Minnis ran for two touchdowns and Gulyas one. While the Irish defense limited the Middles to only three yards rushing in 27 plays, the Irish offense passed for 210 yards and Gulyas cut over right tackle from the one for the score. Parker carried five times for 27 yards and Andy Huff, three times for 22 yards, in the drive.

Bob Thomas kicked the extra point to give Notre Dame a 7-0 lead with 4:40 left in the first quarter. Notre Dame missed a scoring opportunity when a fumble stopped them at the Navy 11 but the Irish put together another sustained drive midway through the second quarter to pick up their second touchdown.

Staying exclusively on the ground, the Irish went all the way on 15 plays for their first touchdown. Cliff Brown, who ran for a pair of first downs, and Gulyas, who picked up 12 yards on an end sweep, turned in the big plays to get the Irish into scoring position and Minnix picked up the final eight yards of the afternoon when he plunged over the goal line from a yard out. Thomas again converted to make it 14-0 with 6:14 left in the second half.

It didn't take long for the Irish to score again. Navy's George Berry returned the ensuing kickoff to the 29 where he was hit hard and fumbled. Ralph Stewart recovered it for Notre Dame at the Navy 36.

It took the Irish just seven running plays to score. Minnix recorded his second touchdown by darting into the end zone on a 27-yard carry and 18 play. Pease carried a couple of tackles enroute. Parker set up Minnix's score, carrying four times for 53 yards in 11 plays. Jury far from decision on Ellsberg case Boston, Oct. 31.—After nearly three months of investigation, a Federal Grand Jury looking into the unauthorized distribution and publication of the Pentagon Papers appears to be far from completing its inquiry.

By most indications, the jury has become entangled in a thicket of legal objections raised by a group of doggedly recalcitrant witnesses.

By Friday evening the proceeding had been forced to an indefinite standstill while the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit decide if the jury's efforts were violating the legal immunity of Sen. Mike Gravel of Alaska.

To none, it seemed almost superfluous to stop the inquiry, for during three days of complex legal wrangling last week the jury of 23 mostly sober, middle-aged Bostonians heard hardly a word of testimony, apart from that of one witness who gave little more than his name and occupation.

The judge has scathed a score or so of subpoenas that have touched many of the scholars, writers and journalists who have provided the intellectual underpinnings of the antiwar movement.

That these were not garden variety witnesses became apparent late Friday when the government seemed to have driven one of them, Ralph L. Stavins of the Institute for Policy Studies in Washington, into a legal corner to force his testimony.

But Stavins stode into court with four lawyers and an affidavit that stopped everything. The document was from Dr. Leonard S. Rodberg, who is himself a reluctant witness, told how he and C.B. Wallace, an electronics expert who owns the Spy Shop in Washington, had tested the phone at Stavins's office with a "relative field strength meter" and detected a sophisticated new type of tap on the line.

Then judge stayed Stavins's appearance so that the government could decide what to do. The law forbids the use of evidence gathered by unlawful wiretapping, and the government may have to confirm or deny such eavesdropping.

It was the kind of delay that has become customary to David R. Nissen and Warren P. Reese, the affable, California-based government attorneys on loan to the Internal Security Division of the Justice Department to run the investigation.

Just what the closed-door inquiry is seeking is not fully to them before they became public. All of this has caused deep concern and charges of a "fishing expedition" into the doings of the antiwar movement in the academic community, where many of the subpoenas have been served on those who have been called are: Noam Chomsky, a linguistics professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and a leading New Left spokesman; Richard Falk, a Princeton professor and frequent war critic; Stavins, co-author of "Washington Plans an Aggressive War," Samuel L. Popkin, a Vietnam expert at Harvard who is a war opponent; David Halberstam, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist who is writing a history of American involvement in Vietman; Kenneth. D. Gilford, former legislative aide to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and a friend of Ellsberg; and Rodberg, who transmitted Gravel's copy of the war study to the Beacon Press in Boston for republication.

Ellsberg has already been indicted by a grand jury for conversion in Los Angeles of classified documents. So it is widely assumed that the Boston jury, along with a similar one in Los Angeles, is aimed at persons who have access to classified documents or who had access to them while they were classified.

Most have expressed puzzlement at being summoned and have raised elaborate and often novel constitutional objections.

By Friday evening some of the most skilled civil rights lawyers in the country, they have invoked First Amendment protection against illegal search and Pith Amendment bars against self-incrimination.

The process has settled into a kind of routine. At the appointed hour, each witness takes the elevator to the 11th floor of the main Post Office Building, which houses the federal courts.

There he generally refuses to testify or to answer any questions of substance.

Then, after he goes one flight up to the wood-paneled courtroom of United States District Court Judge W. Arthur Garriety Jr., the general white-haired jurist who is supervising the grand jury. The witness's lawyers argue that the subpoena should be quashed, stayed or restricted.

What is life without love?
