Bangkok quiet after military coup d'etat

Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn (c) reports that Thailand's first day under martial law is quiet.

That troops sound strategic points in the city. The people and the Civil Service have heeded the new orders to remain at their posts. Streets were crowded with shoppers and shoppers in the unusually cool weather that Southeast Asia has enjoyed for the past two days.

There have been no arrests connected with the coup. A group of intellectuals from Bangkok's Literary and Journalistic World expressed dismay today over the coup which ended three years of constitutional democracy under Thailand's young monarch but admitted that few people shared their dismay.

The people are greeting the whole thing with a big yawn," a student said. "They are bored with the whole thing."

Thanom, who had been Premier since 1963, has not publicly specified the dangers which prompted him to stage his power grab. But it is known here that he and his close military associates have been dismayed at demands from Parliament members of their own party for more public works money appropriations in the Parliament, at the expense of military allocations.

But privately some members of the ministry staff conceded that the coup would further embarrass Washington's efforts to oppose Communism in Asia with viable democracies.

They noted that the coup comes within a month of an almost identical dissolution of the Cambodian Parliament and Constitution by Prime Minister Lon Nol in Phnom Penh, as well as not long after South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu's unopposed Presidential referendum.

Since United States aid to Thailand was begun in 1946, the U.S. has spent over $700 million here in military assistance and $475.8 million in economic aid.

Faculty views varied on pullout

by Mike Bawm

Faculty reaction to the president's announcement withdrawal ranged from cautious approval to fears that the move would overshadow continuing deaths and suffering in the war.

The President's office announced on the 15th that Gen. Abrams would be "tentatively" reduced his force by 30,000 to 155,000 by next June. This would reduce the American forces in South Vietnam to approximately 55,000.

Professor Gerhart Niemeyer remarked that the move simply followed long announced plans and needed no particular comment. He observed that the troop pullout was necessary since the country cannot continue in a war "without any possible prospect of winning and without even the permission to win on the part of the Congress."

"They (the President and Secretary of Defense) have to take us out with as much honor as we can garner from the occasion," he said. "If he felt the move was justified, Professor Niemeyer replied, "I'm not sure of how that ultimately if you go way back to '64 this is a kind of outcome isn't justified, and if this was to be the outcome, then the war wasn't justified."

The reactions of Professor Gerhart Niemeyer of the History Department were similar. He observed that the troop withdrawal was "Going well according to plan," and observed that it was an attempt to disguise national unwillingness to continue." He feels that the fact that there is a hell of a lot of killing going on is not terribly remedied by the fact that there is not so many American boys being killed."

He observed that the government had "burned this into a beautiful push button thing."

Asked if he saw any alternative to the President's program, Fr. Toohey replied, "I would see an alternative in the immediate cessation of all bombing, and the immediate or as rapid as possible removal of American troops and the continuation of the incredibly hypocritical and really tragic support of a totally corrupt South Vietnam government."

Concerning Prof. Niemeyer's view that the reductions are handled with an eye to saving national honour, Fr. Toohey remarked that he would rather see an honest admission of our mistakes, and an attempt to do something about "burning the wounds instead of going into a high pressure PR campaign to change all the jargon."

"I shrink from the possibility of it being a damn whitewash of the whole thing," he commented.

Fra. Toohey said he was "not terribly impressed" with the move, remarking, "The thing that really bothers me about this is that it seems again to be a bit of a cover for what has been simply a mechanism, or mechanismizing the war so it won't be fought by American soldiers, so that maybe not so many of our guys will be getting killed...but there still are approximately 300 or so people dying every day." He feels that "the fact that there is a hell of a lot of killing going on is not terribly remedied by the fact that there is not so many American boys being killed."

Nixon: Pullout to be completed by June 30th, reduces forces

The Notre Dame basketball team and Student Government need your help this coming Tuesday afternoon. 50 students with their cars are needed to deliver Thanksgiving baskets to families in South Bend. It will only take about an hour of your time. Students without cars are also needed to drive trucks and assist drivers, without the cars, though, we can't deliver the baskets. If you have a car, please come to the Student Government Office by 9 a.m. today to register, and then come to Gate 10 of the ACC between 1:30 and 2:30 on Tuesday afternoon.

CNV plans drive for 72 elections

Plains are underway to involve the Notre Dame student body in what the local coordinate of Emergency Committee for New Voters describes as "the most significant political challenge since the strike." Pat Coyle and Joe Myers, who organized this year's voter registration drive, and Ombudsman Paul Dziadzic announced plans to organize a delegation from South Bend to attend the December 4 Senate battle in Chicago. The conference is intended to "educate politically minded students in working their way.

Planners for the nationwide conference have arranged for housing at Loyola and Mundelein Universities. The conference intends to charge no registration fee, Dziadzic said. According to the Ombudsman, the local organization is planning to use car caravans for transportation.

Stage set for Senate battle

Washington, Nov. 18--The Senate appropriations committee cut $3.3 billion from the defense budget today but refused to impose a Vietnam troop withdrawal policy upon the administration.

By a 14-10 vote, the committee rejected an amendment to the defense appropriations bill specifying that the President could use defense funds only to withdraw troops from Indochina.

At the same time, the committee, by a 14:13 vote, adopted an amendment requiring the withdrawal of 40,000 American troops from western Europe by next June.

The two committee votes set the stage for renewed battles on the Vietnam and Atlantic alliance troop withdrawal amendments. But it was also apparent that the administration would have difficulty restoring any funds to the defense budget, which has been pared down by the Senate committee below administration wishes.

Delegates from South Bend will be able to participate in a variety of sessions aimed at introducing them to the Democratic candidates and techniques involved in the selection of delegates to the Democratic nominating convention.

According to Coyle, "the convention will concentrate on the democratic party because it offers the best chance for the sentiments of the young to be incorporated in partisan politics."

The convention is scheduled to open with a forum of major candidates for the democratic presidential nomination, including Minkie and McGovern. The conference has set up workshops and seminars for the weekend to deal with details on delegate selection procedures in each state, voter registration techniques, and delegate selection by primaries.

The conference, Dziadzic said, will also give attention to the organization of "a nation-wide youth caucus" that would work with Black and women caucuses and in formation on lobbying efforts, court action and challenging state delegations to national conventions.

"Party leaders are going to have to realize they can't ignore our ideas any longer because we have been authenticated by the vote, but they must also come to understand that we don't intend to wait until November 2. Major battles must be fought before then," Dziadzic said.

Coyle, Myers and Dziadzic hope to provide anyone interested in the conference with transportation and accommodations. The three will attempt to establish a car shuttle service so that students would be able to attend a part of the conference if not the entire thing, Dziadzic said.

"This is not only an exciting possibility on the national scene but it is an invaluable opportunity for Notre Dame and St. Mary's students to investigate a facet of politics we won't get in the classroom, "according to Coyle.

"The Strike is now two years removed but the problems of insensitive government are not. If we concede that the battle can not be won we have lost without trying. If we refuse to stop trying we have at least won the battle for political integrity," Coyle said.

"I put a lot of bread into a down payment on my new car. And I'm not going to blow it."

You worked hard for that new car of yours. Now all you have to do is take care of it. Part of it is using the right gasoline. Amoco. The type most new car owner manuals recommend.

Amoco is specially formulated for your new car's anti-pollution engine. Made to help it run better, longer. And Amoco can double the life of your tail pipe and muffler compared to fully leaded gasolines; spark plugs last longer, too.

That's why more new car buyers use Standard gasolines than any other brand. When it comes to high-quality gasolines, you can depend on Amoco and the other gasolines at Standard. All the time.

So now that you've got that new car, use the gasoline you can count on.

You've got a new car. We've got a new car gasoline.
China runs first nuclear test in over a year

Washington, Nov 18--China set off its first nuclear bomb test in over a year today, the 12th dating back to the initial atomic blast on the mainland seven years ago, the Atomic Energy Commission announced here.

The A.E.C. estimated the yield of today's test at about 20,000 tons of TNT, the same as the first Chinese test blast in 1964. As with the original and eight subsequent blasts, the test was held at the nuclear proving ground at Lop Nor in Northwestern China.

A.E.C. officials deferred comment on the purpose of the test pending an examination of the reports of their world-wide monitoring network. Today's detonation, which occurred in the atmosphere at 1 a.m. EST was substantially smaller than the last Chinese test on October 14, 1970, which was the equivalent of 3 million tons of TNT.

The blast occurred only three days after China was seated at the United Nations. Observers of mainland China had been speculating for much of this year that the Chinese were intensionally deferring testing until the question of its admission to the U.N. was settled.

Federal armaments specialists have stated privately for several years that China has been vigorously pushing a program to develop nuclear weapons that could be carried by planes, and more importantly missiles.

The apparent aim, according to these officials, is that Peking believes the weapons are necessary as a deterrent to possible military moves by Moscow along the Sin-Soviet border where there has been tension since the late 1960's.

Dr. John S. Foster Jr., Director of Washington and Engineering at the defense department, said in an address here last month that the Chinese would soon be developing an intercontinental ballistic missile.

The Chinese are known to have performed and deployed medium range ballistic missiles, one of which was believed to have been fired five years ago as a test of its nuclear warhead. The yield of that test was equal to that of today's, and also was similar to that of the first atomic bomb that the United States dropped on Hiroshima.

China also is believed to be developing an intermediate range ballistic missile having a range of about 1,000 miles. It is possible that today's detonation was a test of a warhead for either the short of medium range missiles or perhaps even that of an aircraft weapons system.

Today's 12 Chinese tests, which has been conducted at the missile range at Huang-Ch'ing-Ira in North central China, and all but one have been held in the atmosphere. Neither China nor France has signed the limited test ban agreement which prohibits tests other than those underground.

At least three of the Chinese tests, which had yield of about 3 million tons of TNT, are believed to have been hydrogen bombs. The apparent long-range of Chinese defense planners is the development and deployment of Intercontinental ballistic missiles with hydrogen warheads in the megaton range which would give China parity in arms development with the Soviet Union and the U.S.

Kent State petition sent to justice dept

Washington, Nov 19--A petition to the President from 10,390 Kent State University students, calling for a federal grand jury investigation of the shooting of four students by national guardsmen in May, 1970, has been referred for consideration to the department of justice, the White House said today.

The petition, delivered to the White House three weeks ago, was in effect asked for a reversal of a decision not to call a federal grand jury. This decision was announced last August by attorney general John N. Mitchell. A White House spokesman said today the petition had been brought to the President's attention and that there would be a response to it. He left unclear whether it would come from the White House or the Justice department.

At the department, a spokesman said that the petition has been taken under advisement. Another knowledgeable official said, rare occasion
It is indeed a rare occasion to see
Fr. Hesburgh actually emerge from his golden tower.

Mitchell's decision in August was in view of the exhaustive investigation and analysis done previously. He said, "it would appear double jeopardy would be charged, absent some new information.

The petition urged the President to consider the possibility of federal law violations in the shooting of the four Kent State students by national guardsmen. The incident occurred on the Ohio campus in the wake of the Kent State shootings in 1970.

If the possible violation raised was of a federal statute forbidding police and law enforcement brutality. The second was a conspiracy to obstruct justice.

The latter referred to allegations that some guardsmen jointly agreed to tell a "false story" about the shooting to investigators.

The petition was carried to the White House three weeks ago by Dr. Glenn A. Oles, the new Kent State president and a former adviser to Nixon, and two student originators of the petition.

Meanwhile, the administration, even before the vote to reduce the American troop level in Europe, asserted that such a unilateral move would take away a bargaining point in possible talks with the Soviet Union on mutual force reductions in Europe. The administration statement followed a surprise subcommittee vote Wednesday for the cutback.

Southern industries ordered to cut pollution

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 18--A federal judge ordered 25 area industries in the area to halt production today after the air pollution levels hit twice the level at which a danger alert would have been declared.

The order was the first injunctive action that police have made under the emergency provisions of the clean air act of 1970. It was sought by the environmental protection agency after the industries, repeatedly appealed to by local health agencies to shut down voluntarily.

A stagnant air mass over most of the eastern seaboard brought advisories to halt air pollution sources, including New York. An E.P.A. official singled out United Steel Corp., in Birmingham for its alleged refusal to cooperate during the emergency. "U.S. Steel did nothing, although they have the major plants involved and contribute 35 per cent of the particulate emissions," the spokesman said.

The company, which employs 11,000 workers at three plants, said that several steps had been taken to reduce the problem. But a local health official contended that the efforts were token "housekeeping" measures and that the smog had reached unacceptably high levels.

Asked at a news conference if he believed that U.S. Steel had acted in the public interest during the crisis, Hardy responded: "I would say certainly not."

A U.S. Steel spokesman challenged the allegation and said that the company was taking every open health threat and that it was determined to make sure that no one was exposed.

The state of Alabama this year has seen a prolonged shutdown.

"We are certainly concerned with public health and we are doing our part to eliminate this problem," he declared.

It appeared during the day that little state or federal legal action existed to supervise strict compliance with the court order.

The state of Alabama this year has had its air pollution law, with high marks from national experts. But Gov. George C. Wallace took no action to appoint a State Commission that would enforce its provisions if either the United States or Alabama was challenging the enforcement.

"I think there's enough here to indicate that either the United States or Alabama is assuming a 'wait and see' approach," said Oppegard.

"I believe that the public opposition to the war is larger than it has ever been before, this opposition has not been vocal. The intensity of the late," continued Oppegard. "I think that the Americans are assuming a 'wait and see' attitude concerning the war, hoping that either the United States or People's Republic of China summit meeting or the 1972 Presidential election will bring the end to the war."

"I think that the Americans are assuming a 'wait and see' attitude concerning the war, hoping that either the United States or People's Republic of China summit meeting or the 1972 Presidential election will bring the end to the war."

The protestors, according to Oppegard, feel there are no speculations about the future, which "can justify allowing the war to go on one day longer," The Planters plan to lay the deaths "at the President's doorstep" to dramatize their beliefs.

Letters to the Editor

Jean writes about what she sees at Notre Dame. Here is a flagrant and shocking injustice that the Pentagon must speedily rectify if it is to command and appointed atrocity. But Franklin ignored it, claiming it was mere imagination.

Herbert reported seven other atrocities, but Franklin took no action. For a time, personnel and students had been prepared to support Franklin, and Herbert was appointed assistant in charge of students and military affairs. Herbert was named chief of staff. The Pentagon ignored him, and the matter was never investigated. But Franklin claimed it was mere imagination.

The Fight Isn't Over Yet

There is an all school convocation at St. Mary's today—an all school convocation in which the students will be able to say what future action should be taken on the hall parietals proposal in particular and how much they say they should have in determining their own lives in general.

Sister Alma's arbitrary veto of the Hall Parietals proposal in this week's Student Affairs Council meeting has sparked the action.

Sister Alma really didn't have any good reasons for striking the measure down—she mumbled something about parental opposition and about the bill not having a chance of passing the board of Trustees—but the real reason "in loco parentis" and will only abandon it gradually under pressure.

That's one and possibly the only thing that the convocation can produce—pressure. It can give the SMC Student Government the backing it needs to go to the administration and push for a change in policy.

The convocation won't produce much of anything though if only a fraction of the students show up. A couple of hundred people protesting Sr. Alma's veto isn't going to move her or anyone else in the administration to take the students seriously.

When the ad hoc committee of the SLC brought forth its grotesque report on sanctions over 600 hundred students mobbed the SLC meeting. Those same six hundred saw the SLC respond to the pressure and put the report back into another committee—that committee brought out a report favorable to the students view.

If six hundred St. Mary's students show up at the convolution tomorrow and move for Kathy Barlow to resubmit the proposal to the Student Affairs Council and then those same six hundred students attend the Council meeting that considers the proposal the result will be different.

We think that Sr. Alma—no matter how strongly she is against the bill—will find it very hard to veto it if she has six hundred students glaring at her.

The Trustees might veto the bill anyway. They meet behind closed doors through.

Go to the Convocation, vote for the proposal to be resubmitted and then go to the SAC meeting—you really can't afford not to.

Bloody Hands

The crowd was hooting and jeering. A couple of rocks and lots of obscenities were tossed at the troopers. They were nervous and fatigued. The students seemed to be closing in and there was no help in sight. Virtually as a group they turned—some knelt and the others remained on their feet. They brought their rifles to the shoulders and squeezed the triggers. When the smoke cleared and the noise subsided four people lay dead at Kent State.

Complaints were phoned into the Jackson police station that students were tossing rocks at passing automobiles. The Mississippi State Highway Patrol, those paragons of decency, virtue and the American way, came on to the Jackson State campus. In response to what was termed "sniper fire" the police fired a fusillade of shots at a women's dormitory. The slugs killed a young man and a high school student.

No one has ever been indicted, much less brought to trial, for these six murders. Local grand juries couldn't find enough evidence to return charges against any of the officers involved.

Kent State students have presented a petition to President Nixon calling for a federal grand jury investigation of the four murders. Thus far Nixon has ignored similar requests. The President can easily order the impanneling of grand juries in both cases.

Unless it is done, the blood of the six victims that is now staining the hands of their murderers will spread to the President's.

the last supper of the church

They were gathered in a basement room that had survived the fire-bombing of the city. Outside, Jerusalem, home of the prophets, had been reduced to the rubble of a dust camp. It was impossible, amidst the destruction, to say where the holy place was—but in a spot there would be imagined the Wailing Wall to have been, an ancient Jew, perhaps the last of the rabbis, mourning as a Jeremiah of the latter times: “Oh, lonely she sits, the city nigh thronged with people, as if suddenly widowed. She passes her night weeping, the tears run down her cheeks. Not one of her lovers remains to comfort her.”

In the basement room, thirteen men sat gathered around a table, assembled for the Eucharist. Twelve of them had come from distant cities as ruined as the Jerusalem of the rabbi’s lament—places like Johannesburg, New Delhi, Canberra, Kiev, New York—in search of one man who now shared the table of the Disciples of the Passion with a servant of the sect known as Christian; he had been a Christian bishop in the times before the war began. The bishopric had been a prestigious office in the years before the first great bomb fell on New York City.

A bishop ruled over each bishop with authority and pomp; and on the solemn feast days, he led them in the celebration of the Liturgy in cathedrals more magnificent than the Byzantine palaces. Unfortunately, under the pages of worship and learning, the Bishop of Jerusalem had compromised too much with the spirit of Antichrist, the enemies of Christ. He had probed in their neglect of the poor, arms races between nations ineffectively opposed. The Church itself was too much involved with its temporal prerogatives to take upon its conscience the conviction of witnessing to the general darkness of the world. The church had compromised too much with the spirit of Antichrist, the enemies of Christ. It was not until the Church was learned in the mission of witness to the Church was unrebuked in their tax on the Church. The Church had compromised too much with the Spirit of Antichrist; governments unrebuked in their tax on the Church. Byrnes: Trend towards Anti-Americanism

Byrnes prefaced his remarks with the comment that "protest is hazardous and even foolish;" but added there is "considerable evidence from developments in recent years that changes even more significant than those which occurred in the 1960's and in the 1980's are likely to occur in the 1990's.

Pre-Law Newsletter
The Pre-Law Society has resumed publication of its monthly newsletter. Intended to provide general information for the law oriented student, the newsletter was published twice this year. In the first semester, the letter concentrated its information to the seniors planning to attend law school. Employment outlooks, law board dates, and information about the law school application is included.

More general news about law at the University is featured in the second semester. This information is aimed primarily at underclassmen.

Funding for the newsletter is provided by the dues of the membership fee. The organization sponsors visits by speakers and schedules representatives from various law schools to meet with interested students.

Officers for the society are: president Jim Petelle, vice-president Bob Wobh and Joel Cassini, and secretary-treasurer Gary O'Connor.

Pre-registration
Pre-registration for the spring semester will start December 2, but the course selection schedule books are not expected to be available until December 1.

In an attempt to alleviate this problem, Student Government Academic Commissioner Fred Giuffreda and Associate Dean Devere Plusquelte of the College of Arts and Letters have arranged to have the individual depart- ments make their lists available prior to December 2.

The lists will be posted outside the department offices, mostly on the third floor of O'Hagany Hall.

Despite the expected late arrival of the books, there is no definite plans in the Colleges of Science or Engineering to post their schedules.

The College of Business Administration will be leaving the course posting schedules to the separate departments.

ND players have mixed emotions about bowl vote

by Vic Iler

When the members of the Fighting Irish football team voted Wednesday night to forego any bowl activity, they knew that their decision could have far-reaching effects.

And the "no bowl" stand has done just that. If nothing else, the players' decision was surprising, and it left Irish football fans everywhere in something of a turmoil.

They knew that their decision was made after a lot of sleepless nights in the spare time we'd lose because of practice. of course we weren't sure just what we would vote on or what we would get out of the game.

But defensive back Clarence Ellis probably echoed most of the ballplayers' feelings on the subject when he said: "It's even with us. A lot of us voted 'yes' and a lot of us voted 'no.' It's all out in the open now, and as far as I'm concerned it's over with. We turned down the bowls and, a lot of people will try to blow this up and make a big thing out of it. But it's not a big thing at all."

While the ND players may have taken sides briefly during the actual voting, they were all agreed on another issue—that of the very poor timing of the bowl selection committee.

"This is really a bad time to start selecting bowl teams," said senior running back Ed Gulyas.

There are still a couple of weeks left in the season, and the committee should wait 'til then to make their choices. That way, they would be sure of getting teams with the best possible records. The way it's going now, at least two of the top five unbeaten teams are going to lose before the end of the year, and it's possible that one of them might lose twice. So there's no real reason to making the selections until the teams are through with their schedules.

Eric Patton agreed with this.

"This is a poor time to be making bowl picks," he said. "All of this bowl talk interrupts preparation for regular games, especially when a spur-of-the-moment decision has to be made. The NCAA ought to do something about it."

"I don't know," said Ellis. "I really don't think it'll affect us that much. It can help us more than anything. The LSU game will be the last one for all of the seniors now, and we'll try to get on a real show down there."

This bowl refusal is Notre Dame's first in three years, and there will always be some questions about it. But there can be no question about motives, at least as far as the seniors are concerned.

"There were no selfish motives involved here," said Eric Patton. "A lot of people have been saying that the seniors didn't want to go because they could go to senior bowl games, and come out with financial benefits from them. But this just isn't so. We had no selfish motives," he repeated.
Icers take on some Tigers, too

by Jim Donaldson
Sports Editor

Notre Dame's 1970-71 hockey team will have their second season and WCHA debut a week from tonight at 7:45pm. The two clubs will meet Colorado College, in the opener of a two-game series.

Bill Baldrica, Mike Bertsch, Guy Hildebrand and Doug Palazzari provide the experience in the front line that coach Sauer talked about.

O'Connor, a senior center and co-captain of the Tigers, was runner-up to Culyard in scoring last year, picking up 34 points on 13 goals and 21 assists.

Baldrica, Bertsch, Hildebrand and Palazzari, all wings, each scored more than 20 points last season. Baldrica was the top goal-getter, banging in 16.

"We don't have a lot of size but we do have skating and scoring ability in our balanced lines," Sauer says.

On defense, Colorado has only one player with much league experience, All-America candidate Bob Winograd, who recorded 13 goals and 16 assists last season. Coach Sauer looks to Winograd to steady a young defensive crew.

Considering the inexperience of the Tigers' defensemen, Colorado goalie Doug Schum may be in for a busy night against the hard shooting, high-scoring Irish.

Bumbacco accounted for four of the Notre Dame markers, two each night. Williams tallied three, and Campbell added one. John Noble, who will sit out this weekend's games with a badly bruised ankle, and Bill Green scored the other Irish goals against the Sioux.

"Our defense coach Lefty Smith remarked after the North Dakota series, "We found out that our defensemen can handle the puck and we're also a team that's going to score a lot of goals. Now we also realize that just because you win one night in the WCHA, it doesn't mean you're going to win the next."

In an attempt to come up with a more balanced scoring attack this weekend, coach Smith has made a couple of line changes. Paul Regan is back at center for the Colorado series, between Delorenzi and Mark Steinhorn, and freshman Tom Lindsey, subbing for Noble, will center for Larry Israelson and Jim Cordes.

Defensively, the Irish will go with the combinations of Green and Ric Schafer and Bill Nyrop and Steve Curry. Les Larson will be a fifth, or "swing" defensemen this weekend, and D'Arcy Keating, now skating at forward, will be on the ice for the Irish in power play situations. Keating, a freshman, possesses a devastating slap shot from the point.

Senior Dick Tomasoni, who made 58 saves but yielded 10 goals in the North Dakota series, will start in goal for the Irish tonight. Smith has decided to try either sophomore Mark Kronholm or junior Chris Cathcart in the nets in Saturday's game.

Notre Dame and Colorado will play four times this season so each of the games this weekend is worth two points in the WCHA standings.

The Irish hold a 4-2-0 edge over the Tigers in the overall series. The clubs split a two game set in Colorado last season.

Each WCHA team will play every other club in the league this year but they will meet some teams four times and others, only twice. There will be eight points available in each series, a total of 72 in a season. When one club plays another only twice, each game is worth four points. When teams meet four times, each game is worth just two points.

McKown convention set for next April
by Marlene Ziza

Delegates, campaign managers, committees and organizers will swarm the ND this April as part of the mock Democratic National Convention sponsored by the Student Union.

Chairmaned by R. Andrus with assistance from Ophelimer and Joe Brehler, the convention convenes in the Alumni Center on April 24th and ends on the Monday through Thursday.

The reason for choosing the Democratic National Convention is the "obviously more interesting and wide-open race."

The Republican convention in the 1972 election of Senator Mark Hatfield and generated nationwide interest in the event. Created by government professor and faculty advisor Paul Barman, the convention is planned as an "exact replica of the regular national convention,"

Chairman R. Andrus.

A member of the official Democratic National Committee will be on the campus to advise students on all phases and details of the assembly. All delegates and other officials will leave.

If enough people get interested, alternate arrangements might be arranged, providing the opportunity to participate one evening instead of the four.

Funds okayed for Soviet factory
(C) 1971 New York Times
Washington, Nov. 18--The Commerce Department today approved the licensing of a further half billion dollars worth of heavy equipment for possible sale by United States companies to the Soviet Union for construction of a mammoth truck factory.

It makes a total of a billion dollars in licenses granted in recent months for machine tools and other goods for the truck factory to be built at the Kama River, some 600 miles east of Moscow.

Granting of the license, however, is not tantamount to a sale of business, according to Commerce department officials in Washington. There was no way of knowing how many of the licenses will actually be translated into transactions.

Soviet authorities, anxious to begin production of the Andru ski factory, which will turn out 150,000 heavy trucks and 250,000 diesel engines yearly, have approached many western firms here, in western Europe and Japan.

The immediate effect of today's licensing action will enable United States business to compete with foreign suppliers for the Soviet market, the commerce department
