Expansion confirmed for Law school

by Chris Sullivan

Law School Dean Thomas Shaffer officially announced the law school's planned $1.6 million expansion and renovation at a law meeting Tuesday morning in Washington Hall. The decision, which had received tentative cost estimates during the summer, will be done during the summer. Schaeffer said the law school had received tentative cost estimates under $1.5 million. It is unlikely that the cost will exceed the $1.6 million budget set by the university, Schaeffer said.

The "relatively small saving of a $200,000 grant, is not the primary reason for proceeding immediately," as the "immediate need for "library and administrative space," he said.

Whatever possible changes there could be in tuition would reflect the university's plan to equate law school and undergraduate tuitions, Schaeffer said. They would not be affected by the decrease in the student body of the law school.

Schaeffer said the law school would like to offer a new program to help fund the expansion. Plans for a graduate law program and a program of distinguished visiting lecturers are unaffected by the proposal, according to the Dean. He saw no negative impact of the proposal on faculty recruitment.

The decision, Schaeffer said, is not consistent with what he called the law school's "commitment to excellence." "The University administration will borrow $1 million for the improvement because of the law school's priority at ND."

"My own vision," Shaffer said, "is a small and good law school." "Like "Duke, Cornell, Stanford, Yale," the SBA President rhapsodized.

"My own vision," Shaffer said, "is a small and good law school." "Like "Duke, Cornell, Stanford, Yale.""

In 1966, he said, the American Bar Association warned the ND Law school that its library was "adequate." In 1965, the ADA threatened to revoke the school's accreditation if additional volumes were not purchased. An immediate "pumping in" of books by then Dean Lawless gained the law school a reprieve, noted Schaeffer, by due to the lack of sufficient library space. The new books were stored "all over" the law building.

In his Oct. 6th address, he also said that the proposal was not consistent with the SBA's eight-point plan to solve the "a new approach to the delivery of social services, to solve the education crisis, to solve the energy crisis, to solve the environmental crisis, to solve the unemployment crisis, to solve the drug crisis, to solve the energy crisis, and to solve the educational problem."

"My own vision," Shaffer said, "is a small and good law school." "Like "Duke, Cornell, Stanford, Yale.""
Alma's resignation draws comment

by Mike Baum

Reaction to the recently announced resignation of Sr. Alma Peter from her post as Acting President of St. Mary's College has been cautious and wary of speculation as of last night. University Provost Fr. James T. Burtchael remarked that "Sister Alma has presided over St. Mary's College during troubled days. Recent negotiations with the College have enhanced our respect for her. It will be difficult at this point to find a capable successor."

St. Mary's English Department and Faculty Council Chairman Dr. Paul Messbarger remarked: "I don't know what it means. I know she is terribly pressed and probably has something to do with it. In a sense all of our administrators have been lame ducks."

Dr. Messbarger commented that he felt the decision was justified in view of what he saw as Sister Alma's inability to act with full authority "I think all of us understood her credentials to be limited and while she might have been, and surely was, a candidate for the presidency, none of us thought of her in those terms. That's been her difficulty to try to conduct an institution over a period of time and a half with limited credentials, so I approve of it in that sense."

Messbarger contended that the search for a President for St. Mary's would be hampered by the upcoming merger negotiations and added that he felt the choice would have to come from without the institution. "Because of the difficulties of the merger...you can't find anybody, faculty or administration, who is not carrying all kinds of special burdens. I think we have to go outside."

SMC Student Body President Kathy Barlow declined to comment directly upon the resignation, saying: "As far as what effect it would have on me, it doesn't have an effect on me personally, because I'll still be working with Sr. Alma for the rest of the year...and I won't be here next year."

Asked to comment on Sr. Alma's statement that she was "personally very optimistic" concerning the recently resumed merger negotiations, interviewees were uniformly pessimistic. Said Messbarger, "I like to think she's right, but it's difficult for me to find any hard evidence that there has been any yielding on either side, but then we have never been told what was to be yielded."

Dr. Don Miller, Assistant Professor of the Mathematics Department and also on the Faculty Council, noted, "From everything we've heard, Notre Dame's demands for the negotiations were the same as before, and those demands apparently were not acceptable before. I would see no cause for optimism unless both sides changed their minds somewhat."

Agreed Kathy Barlow, "I would be optimistic too, if Notre Dame had said they were committed to a deadline."

Barlow answers charges

Saint Mary's Student Body President Kathy Barlow yesterday called the loss of her Vice-President, Missy Underman, "unfortunate," but reduced to make further official comment on the matter.

Miss Barlow also said that the office of the Vice-Presidency would be filled through a special election sometime in the near future.

The vacancy in the office of the Student Body President, Dr. Kathy Barlow, will be filled through a special election sometime in the near future.

The Observer is published daily during the college semester except vacations by the students of the University of Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for 50 per semester from The Observer, Box Q, Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid. Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

MARDI GRAS

Why not sell a raffle book this weekend?

THEY SHOOT HORSES, DON'T THEY?

GIG YOUNG BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR JANE FONDA BEST ACTRESS OF THE YEAR

NEW YORK FILM CRITICS

BEST PICTURE OF THE YEAR

National Board of Review

STARRING
JANE FONDA • MICHAEL SARRAZIN • SUSANNAH YORK

GIG YOUNG • BONNIE BEDELIA AND RED BUTTONS

A PALMIRA PICTURES • A CHARTOFF WINKLER/POLLOCK PRODUCTION • SCREENPLAY BY JAMES JOX AND ROBERT E. THOMPSON • BASED ON THE NOVEL BY HORACE MCCARTY • ASSOCIATE PRODUCER—MUSIC JOHN GREEN • EXECUTIVE PRODUCER THEODOROS E. SALIS • PRODUCED BY IRWIN WINKLER AND ROBERT CHARTOFF • DIRECTED BY SIDNEY POLLACK

PRESENTED BY THE CULTURAL ARTS COMMISSION

SATURDAY, JANUARY 23, 1976
8:00 & 10:00

Sunday, Jan. 24
Engineering Aud.

Admission: $1.00 • Fund Raising Film Patrons Free

MADAM SATAN

Identification of Age Always Required
WASHINGTON—Well placed administration sources said Thursday that the United States and Israel are close to an agreement under which 18 more American jets would be delivered to Israel in return for an Israeli agreement to participate in indirect talks with Egypt aimed at a partial withdrawal of Israeli troops from the Sinai peninsula and the reopening of the Suez Canal.

Ottawa—A four-day-old air traffic controllers strike in Canada that has virtually closed Canadian airports began to be felt in that nation's hotels, travel agencies and taxis. Mail delivery was slowed as postal officials shifted to using buses, trains and trucks. And hospitals were relying on small chartered planes for emergency supplies.

Salisbury, Rhodesia—Mob violence, unexpectedly strong black opposition and tensions between the Rhodesian government and a Bizhish fact-finding team combined to place in jeopardy the proposed settlement of Rhodesia's rebellion against Britain. Eight persons were reported injured in the latest rioting.

Washington—One of the new proposals was a program of using technology to "improve our everyday lives." Administration sources said the program will include recommendations for development of an automated four-to-six passenger vehicle to travel on special transit guideways, for radical improvement of fire-fighting systems and for development of an electronic mail system.

Washington—Treasury Secretary Connally told an audience of businessmen that the budget deficit this fiscal year would approach $40 billion, but he indicated that there was no alternative at a time when there are five million persons unemployed. He chastised the businessmen for not expanding more quickly their capital investments following reinstatement of the 7 per cent investment tax credit.

New York—Although they continued to emphasize that they believed that their material was authentic, McGraw-Hill and Life Magazine said they were deferring publication of a purported autobiography of Howard R. Hughes pending investigation into the Swiss bank account into which their checks for Hughes were deposited.
The Ideal Plan

Whether or not the Law School gets a new building, or a considerably larger building sometime in the near future, will make little difference in its quality. Madeleva Hall, or the proposed $6 million law center is not going to make Notre Dame the Harvard of the midwest, in fact won’t even make it the Plattsburgh of the midwest unless the quality of the student and faculty is sharply upgraded.

That’s what makes the plan presented by Dean Thomas Sheaffer so attractive. That plan, which is being attacked by the President of the Student Bar Association, takes the $1.6 million the law school was able to raise and puts it toward an addition and modernization of the present building. Coupled with that move is a move to reduce the enrollment by one fifth, from 500 students to 400.

This plan is radical from almost every aspect. The school has $1.6 million, much of which it raised only after considerable effort, and it doesn’t have any prospects for receiving a whole lot more in the near future. The school also has a $200 thousand grant, a grant which is going to expire in June of this year.

Thus, when in this financial year it must every aspect. The school has $1.6 million, much of which it raised only after considerable effort, and it doesn’t have any prospects for receiving a whole lot more in the near future. The school also has a $200 thousand grant, a grant which is going to expire in June of this year.

That reputation, a reputation for excellence, can come only through the raising of standards, and is worth more than all the buildings on both campuses combined. That reputation for excellence is worth the noise of building during the school year and certainly worth a slightly increased tuition.

Dean Sheaffer’s plan is a good one and serves the best interest of all those in law school.

Goodbye, Sister Alma

As strangely and as spectacularly as she appeared on the scene, Sr. Alma Peter, C.S.C. and onetime Acting President of the onetime St. Mary’s College, has chosen to check out. The unexpected demise of Fr. John McGrath ushered her into her post; the more welcome death of the incipient go-it-alone lunatic decision to stop the merger.

The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended. The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended.

The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended. The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended.

The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended. The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended.

The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended. The first round of the Battle for the Soul of Notre Dame has ended.
Reflections on Home

George got up with the sun that Thursday, which was not unusual, not because there was something unusual about Thursday but rather because there was something unusual about the sun; and that was because it was shining right into his face, searing his eyes and drying out his lips. He instinctively and skillfully fell out of bed to avoid the harsh onslaught of sun beams, cursing fluently at the darn little things that caused him to fall out of bed and hurt his elbow among other less printable anatomic structures. So he climbed his less majestic than his elbows (as well as the other less printable anatomic structures), tugging to figure out what strange freak of nature had caused him to be disturbed at this ungodly hour. Just look at the clock. It was before noon! He looked over where his roommate lay sleeping in the shadow of his window and knew what the problem was. Henry had forgotten to close the shades when he went to bed last night. Stupid jerk! He had a good mind to kick Henry in the head. And he might well have been able to find where he had left his boots the night before, but everything seemed strange, kind of unfamiliar-like he knew about everything but couldn't remember what it was that he knew. At any rate, forced to go without his shoes he crept over to where his roommate lay and gently rammed his good elbow into Henry's face.

With one of the most soul-rending yelps George had ever heard, his roommate jumped out of bed, knocked himself unconscious on the ceiling and fell limply to the floor. George was just smiling satisfactorily and wiping the blood from his elbow when he stopped in alarm. The battered face of the limp body on the floor was not Henry's! He had inadvertantly mangled a complete stranger! He collapsed on the bed, horrified by his deed, wringing his hands and grasping his teeth, not knowing what to do.

Finally, after what seemed like hours (was it hours?), the fellow regained consciousness. George, trying to show there were no hard feelings, spoke first.

"Hi there! What's your major? What do you think about this week's game? Sorry about your face. I bet your mother was sorry about your face too—ha, a—ha little brother! Do you have any comment about straightening your nose, or maybe it would be better to see a specialist about straightening your head...ha, ha...."

Nothing George had used his best lines and they hadn't eased the situation.

"But... what about your grades?"

Nobody had nothing to say, just lay there staring at him, which made George very uncomfortable. Merely by trying to mention the situation he had just collided with caused George to be horridly uncomfortable. Manchester was not his strong point. George had to try more

"Well uh... Nice weather we've been having..."

It actually occurred to George that he wanted to know who this person was. He got off the defensive and began the attack.

"Who are you anyhow?"

The look of surprise that shot out at effective participle. George finally realized the strange thing.

"What do you mean at the end of his sophomore year? The year doesn't end for another six months. (Commute! You couldn't be a roommate unless you lived here; there's no such thing as a commuting rector.)"

"My, my, young man, the end of your sophomore year was six months ago. If I wish it so there is such a thing. According to the new rules of the university I can do anything I want so long as I really and truly believe it is right for me?" returned Father Neegey.

"Oh, had I said George. You're trying to confuse me. I'm only a sophomore when I went to bed last night and I'm a sophomore now: what do you mean? The university would never adopt rules like that.

"Of course the university would, in light of the recent relaxed morality set down by the Pope. Everyone must decide what is good for himself, and any attempts at establishing an objective morality will be met by excommunication."

"I can see talking to you isn't getting me anywhere," sneered George at not-so-Father Neegey. "I'm gonna kick that guy outta my room, and nobody's gonna stop me. (All this overnight!)"

"Whatever you wish," smiled Mr. Neegey. "Treason is am instant, have you been?

Completely flabbergasted George reached for the door.

"One more thing," interjected the nice guy. "Are your parents coming up for graduation?"

"Why?" asked George suspiciously.

"Well because it is tomorrow and I have to make arrangements for them if they will be here."

"You're crazy," George screamed. You stairs yelling that someone had broken in.

"My wife! Young man, it is extremely indiscreet of you to mention this. My wife and I have been divorced for several months now—he took everything: the house in Elkhart, the volkswagen, the little old lady.

George ran from the room fuming—boiling mad—he really felt like belling somebody. He bounded up to the third floor and went to his room. He opened the door. The place was full of strange old ladies playing bingo. They turned and stared at him; he blushed for a long minute, then jerked back into the hall slamming the door shut. He ran down the stairs yelling that someone had broken into his room, had stolen his room right from under his nose. He careened into the lobby and ran right into... his parents!

"Mom, Dad, what...?"

"Congratulations son, we were so proud of you."

"What? Who? Where?..."

"Son, what are you going to do with your life? You've decided on a career of course. By the way, your aunts are here—Aunt Matilda, Aunt Jenima, Aunt Emily etc etc."

"But... Oh George, I hope you've thought about settling down with a nice girl and raising a family... four children is good..."

"No! No!" cried George slapping his hands over his ears and clinging his eyes. "Stop! Go away!! I'm not ready for all this yet!!"

"That's okay, we'll get you ready," said the man with the crest who had come up behind him, as he handed George a rifle and flashed his sergeant's stripes, "We'll get you good and ready..."
PIRG: Solving problems

by Bob Higgins

Part 1 of 2 parts

The Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) is originally a brainchild of Ralph Nader, created to answer to student queries as to how they might effectively work to solve problems facing all citizens and work in research for the betterment of the public interest. The idea is simple. Students in state are asked to assess themselves. $1.50 a semester and thus generate about $300,000 to $500,000 for an annual budget. The money is used to hire a professional staff (controlled by a statewide representation of students comprised of lawyers, environmental and social scientists and the like) who would direct students in research projects. The projects will deal with matters of pollution, consumerism, racism and sexism, occupational health and safety. Students will receive academic credit for their off work in the field, and the professionals will carry out the work through vacations, exams and other periods when student activism is usually low.

The PIRG idea was first put into practice in Oregon and Minnesota in September of 1970. Following a Nader speech at the Minneapolis campus, the students of the University of Minnesota petitioned their fellow students, requesting permission to institute a $3.00 per year tax to help fund a PIRG. Within two weeks 28,000 of the 44,000 students had signed the petitions and the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group (MPIRG) was born. MPIRG who, according to one Notre Dame MPIRG coordinator, is "about a year ahead of Indiana," has now hired a staff of professionals and has begun to work on projects.

Ralph Nader, the one who started it all.

Indiana's Public Interest Research Group (InPIRG) had its beginning at the University of Indiana in Bloomington. Brad Baker and Bruce Cole, both students in a "Naderum for Every Man" course discovered the idea and began to study the Minnesota and Oregon models. A convention held by Minnesota's group introduced the PIRG concept to Notre Dame. Hundreds of midwestern students were invited to meet in Minneapolis in September to learn and set up contacts in individual dorms. Eighteen of the twenty Notre Dame residence halls currently have representatives and many of them are further organized on a floor basis. Three dorms at St. Mary's are presently represented. Other PIRG activities in the first semester included speaking tours, which Bachman noted, "were well received in several dorms, solicitation of assistance and donations from interested faculty, and a benefit folk concert which netted $30. The Notre Dame chapter of InPIRG has also been very active on the state level. Beside helping Indiana University of South Bend with its organizational problems, Bachman pointed out that "Our people have attended numerous state meetings regarding organization and were instrumental in preparing the Statewide Petitioner's Manual." Part two will be printed Monday and will go into the InPIRG petition and fund drives.

\[ \text{PIRG: Solving problems} \]

\[ \text{by Bob Higgins} \]

\[ \text{Part 1 of 2 parts} \]

The Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) is originally a brainchild of Ralph Nader, created to answer to student queries as to how they might effectively work to solve problems facing all citizens and work in research for the betterment of the public interest. The idea is simple. Students in state are asked to assess themselves. $1.50 a semester and thus generate about $300,000 to $500,000 for an annual budget. The money is used to hire a professional staff (controlled by a statewide representation of students comprised of lawyers, environmental and social scientists and the like) who would direct students in research projects. The projects will deal with matters of pollution, consumerism, racism and sexism, occupational health and safety. Students will receive academic credit for their off work in the field, and the professionals will carry out the work through vacations, exams and other periods when student activism is usually low.

The PIRG idea was first put into practice in Oregon and Minnesota in September of 1970. Following a Nader speech at the Minneapolis campus, the students of the University of Minnesota petitioned their fellow students, requesting permission to institute a $3.00 per year tax to help fund a PIRG. Within two weeks 28,000 of the 44,000 students had signed the petitions and the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group (MPIRG) was born. MPIRG who, according to one Notre Dame MPIRG coordinator, is "about a year ahead of Indiana," has now hired a staff of professionals and has begun to work on projects.

Ralph Nader, the one who started it all.

Indiana's Public Interest Research Group (InPIRG) had its beginning at the University of Indiana in Bloomington. Brad Baker and Bruce Cole, both students in a "Naderum for Every Man" course discovered the idea and began to study the Minnesota and Oregon models. A convention held by Minnesota's group introduced the PIRG concept to Notre Dame. Hundreds of midwestern students were invited to meet in Minneapolis in September to learn and set up contacts in individual dorms. Eighteen of the twenty Notre Dame residence halls currently have representatives and many of them are further organized on a floor basis. Three dorms at St. Mary's are presently represented. Other PIRG activities in the first semester included speaking tours, which Bachman noted, "were well received in several dorms, solicitation of assistance and donations from interested faculty, and a benefit folk concert which netted $30. The Notre Dame chapter of InPIRG has also been very active on the state level. Beside helping Indiana University of South Bend with its organizational problems, Bachman pointed out that "Our people have attended numerous state meetings regarding organization and were instrumental in preparing the Statewide Petitioner's Manual." Part two will be printed Monday and will go into the InPIRG petition and fund drives.

\[ \text{PIRG: Solving problems} \]

\[ \text{by Bob Higgins} \]

\[ \text{Part 1 of 2 parts} \]

The Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) is originally a brainchild of Ralph Nader, created to answer to student queries as to how they might effectively work to solve problems facing all citizens and work in research for the betterment of the public interest. The idea is simple. Students in state are asked to assess themselves. $1.50 a semester and thus generate about $300,000 to $500,000 for an annual budget. The money is used to hire a professional staff (controlled by a statewide representation of students comprised of lawyers, environmental and social scientists and the like) who would direct students in research projects. The projects will deal with matters of pollution, consumerism, racism and sexism, occupational health and safety. Students will receive academic credit for their off work in the field, and the professionals will carry out the work through vacations, exams and other periods when student activism is usually low.

The PIRG idea was first put into practice in Oregon and Minnesota in September of 1970. Following a Nader speech at the Minneapolis campus, the students of the University of Minnesota petitioned their fellow students, requesting permission to institute a $3.00 per year tax to help fund a PIRG. Within two weeks 28,000 of the 44,000 students had signed the petitions and the Minnesota Public Interest Research Group (MPIRG) was born. MPIRG who, according to one Notre Dame MPIRG coordinator, is "about a year ahead of Indiana," has now hired a staff of professionals and has begun to work on projects.

Ralph Nader, the one who started it all.

Indiana's Public Interest Research Group (InPIRG) had its beginning at the University of Indiana in Bloomington. Brad Baker and Bruce Cole, both students in a "Naderum for Every Man" course discovered the idea and began to study the Minnesota and Oregon models. A convention held by Minnesota's group introduced the PIRG concept to Notre Dame. Hundreds of midwestern students were invited to meet in Minneapolis in September to learn and set up contacts in individual dorms. Eighteen of the twenty Notre Dame residence halls currently have representatives and many of them are further organized on a floor basis. Three dorms at St. Mary's are presently represented. Other PIRG activities in the first semester included speaking tours, which Bachman noted, "were well received in several dorms, solicitation of assistance and donations from interested faculty, and a benefit folk concert which netted $30. The Notre Dame chapter of InPIRG has also been very active on the state level. Beside helping Indiana University of South Bend with its organizational problems, Bachman pointed out that "Our people have attended numerous state meetings regarding organization and were instrumental in preparing the Statewide Petitioner's Manual." Part two will be printed Monday and will go into the InPIRG petition and fund drives.
The Irish Eye

Ice Chips

To say that the Irish hockey team's two-game series with Minnesota this weekend is important is like saying that it gets cold in South Bend in the winter time. Friday and Saturday's games with the Gophers, four points in the WCHA standings, are big ones for Notre Dame.

"The Minnesota series is externally important to us," coach "Lefty" Smith commented yesterday. "It could be the most important game of the season." But, although the Irish would hardly speak highly of traveling, Smith believes that the two-game series will help the young club because they haven't learned to look at things in the proper perspective.

The Irish, 5-7 in the WCHA and 9-9 overall, have won just one of their last six league games away from home. The Gophers, worth four points in the WCHA standings, are BIG ones for the Irish to match with a pair of victories over the Gophers.

The Irish didn't have that kind of work ethic this season, said Smith. "We've done a fine job, with the exception of coming off the ice in the first period," said Smith. "We're not doing enough, usually we're too fatigued and don't have enough gas in the tank." The Irish have played their last half dozen league games away from home and in the WCHA, as in most hockey circuits, highly vocal partisan crowds have a way of inspiring their heroes and influencing the outcome of the game.

But, although the Irish would hardly speak highly of traveling, their major problem this season is an overabundance of road games. The Gophers, in most hockey circuits, high school, college, and professional, have never been known to take a team lightly. Their team caught at least 40 points in the WCHA standings, are big games for Notre Dame.

"Lack of consistency is very much a problem with us," Smith remarked. "We have to start recognizing the importance of every game. It's not an easy chore. We can't afford a letdown. This is a must thing with a young club because they haven't learned to look at things in the proper perspective yet. We've got to get ourselves back into reality. We've got to realize that everybody in this league is playing for big things." Smith emphasized that Notre Dame's problem has been an overabundance of road games. "Because we play so many games on the road, we've had to adjust our game from that. It's not an easy thing to do. We have to start doing it now," Smith commented.

Lefty Smith is going to try a new psychological gimmick with his Notre Dame team and try to convince them they're going "home" for the weekend.

The Irish irons actually travel with the team to Western Collegiate Hockey Association games and the WCHA standings are big ones for Notre Dame.

WCHA standings

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>WCHA</th>
<th>Points</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>WCHA</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Denver</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NOTRE DAME</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Omaha</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado College</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Denver</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Denver</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colorado</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Michigan Tech</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Western Michigan</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Minnesota State</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>North Dakota</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Irish scored first in the first game of the two-game series with Minnesota and 5-4 losses on Saturday in Minneapolis. The Irish will try to take the series when they face the Gophers again on Sunday.

The Gophers -- like the Irish -- would like to sweep the series. Minnesota occupies the WCHA basement with a 3-1-1 record and Notre Dame is 7-2-2 in the WCHA.

Minor sports slate full

Notre Dame's swimming, wrestling and fencing teams will be active on this weekend's slate.

The Irish wrestlers, with a record five straight victories, will face Electric City Northwestern, 5-13, tonight in the Convocation Center.

Four Notre Dame freshmen, 2-1 overall following a win at Western Michigan (57-56) and a loss at Northwestern (78-55) last weekend, face Kings College Saturday at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The Irish fencers, idle for the past five weeks, meet Cornell and Tri-State College at Angola, Indiana, Friday.
Happenings

Full shuttle bus service will resume on Monday, January 24, according to Tim Poley, coordinator of the service. The current delays in the shuttle service has been caused by temporary scheduling difficulties, Poley explained.

Starting Monday, four buses will be used on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, and three buses on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The express bus system employed last semester will be retained.

According to Poley, the buses will make the travel between the two campuses in ten minutes, down from the fifteen minutes allowed last semester. He said that the change was made after studies and timings of the buses in operation last semester. Poley added that, "The Christmases will find this way a little bit better."

This was disputed by one of the drivers on the run. He alleged that the ten-minute run would be impossible. According to the driver, Highway crossing and slow-leading students would make the new timing unrealistic.

Film Studies offered

The University of Notre Dame will offer a selection of new courses in film studies during the summer session beginning June 26 and ending August 28, according to Tim Poley, coordinator of the service. The current delays in the shuttle service has been caused by temporary scheduling difficulties, Poley explained.

According to Tim Poley, the University of Notre Dame will offer a selection of new courses in film studies during the summer session beginning June 26 and ending August 28, according to Tim Poley, coordinator of the service. The current delays in the shuttle service has been caused by temporary scheduling difficulties, Poley explained.

This was disputed by one of the drivers on the run. He alleged that the ten-minute run would be impossible. According to the driver, Highway crossing and slow-leading students would make the new timing unrealistic.

Dr. Donald Costello discussing the techniques of Fellini, Antonioni, Bergman and Pansa. Frederic W. Sybong, a director with the North Dame-Saint Mary's Theater, will present Films From Plays, an examination of productions that have been on both stage and screen, including "Long Day's Journey Into Night," "Hamlet," "Miss Julie," and "Death of a Salesman."

Three production courses to be offered during the summer session include Film Making by James Baxter, Educational Television by Reginald Bain, and Still Photography by Richard Stevens.

Courses from last summer that will be repeated include Verbal Communications, Elizabeth Christianity, Personal Communication, Edward Fischer, and Modern Fiction, James Walton.

Film Studies offered...

People & Song

this Friday presents Alumni Lounge Chris and Jim Butch Ward

Refreshments plus more 9-2 am 25 admission Everyone Welcome

Take a Refresher Course in LOVE Kidstyle as a HEAD START Volunteer

Call Tom Patton 2836984

A Service of the Student Govt.