Henry begins shuffle in SMC administration

by Ann Thoreen Davis
Campus Editor

Three SMC administrators have new blocks on the organization chart today after newly-appointed president Edward Henry's first administrative shuffle. To alleviate any problems occurring between the new head's bivocational visits here (from Minnesota), Henry has appointed Dr. William Hickey as special assistant to the president.

Reorganizing financial areas, the present St. John University Center for Financial Direction will be directed by Dr. Basil Anthony O'Flynn as vice-president for finance. "With a candidate in mind," Henry will not fill her vacancy as vice-president for finance until July 1.

The new president also announced formation of a search committee for an academic affairs vice-president-provost. Dr. Jack Detzer, three-year veteran in the post, will carry an increased teaching load in the history department and a new assignment.

Faculty reacts to Dr. Henry

Chairman of the Board of Trustees Mr. James Riordan appeared at the faculty meeting Thursday night to draw up a statement in response to the letter. Riordan's first priority was that O'Flynn, who sponsored it, ranged from disillusionment over the Ad Hoc committee's administrative decision to the immediate and constructive reconciliation of administration-faculty differences.

All of the professors interviewed limited their criticisms to within four main areas—lack of faculty participation in administration decisions, the quota on tenured professors, course evaluations, and the added teaching load for the full semesters in the fall. A number of them expressed hoped optimism that administration and faculty could work out their problems together. Mr. Peter Walsh, an Assistant Professor of Economics and one of the letter's signers, expressed hoped optimism that administration and faculty could work out their problems together.

"will spark debate"

He was "convinced," that the report of the Committee on Faculty Concerns, to be released today, "will spark constructive debate." He added, "I would expect that the Provost would welcome the opportunity to generate constructive dialogue."

In reasserting a statement made in the letter, Joseph Tihen, an assistant professor and member of the Board of Trustees, stated, "That the crucial issue was the administration's refusal to allow faculty to participate in decision making."

The new administration is definitely more inclined to be made without discussion with department faculties. The faculty is certainly qualified to discuss academic problems with the administration in their decisions."

"I plan to meet with either Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh university president, or Rev. James C. Dineen, provost on his next campus visit."

Although Henry, a political science professor, believes every administrator should teach one class to maintain student contact, the Board of Trustees has advised him to do no instruction next semester. He added to the administration his first semester for getting my feet on the ground," he confirmed. "I plan to work with the chairman of the political science department to form an administrative task force member."

Henry served as St. John University's political science department chairman for 16 years.

In the interview, Henry also clarified his first personal goal as president, incorporation of the college.

"Separate incorporation would be expanded to include more laymen, students and faculty."
Students react warily to selection of Henry

by Beth Hall

The selection of Dr. Edward Henry as the new St. Mary's president has been hailed as a favorable response from the SMC student body, although many students have taken a "wait & see" attitude toward the selection.

Sophomore Mary Orr was "really impressed" by Dr. Henry. "His direction is clear, he is honest, dynamic, and innovative," she said.

Kathy Riles, a junior psychology major, was more cautious. Miss Riles commented, "His plans are good, but we will have to wait and see what he will actually do to rebuild communications and the community.

When asked whether Dr. Henry could make St. Mary's a place for students, Miss Riles expressed satisfaction with his past experience. "He is involved in politics and the outside community. He will not be easily intimidated," she said.

Deborah Ley, a sophomore majoring in biology, also felt confident about the new president. "He was involved in another merger attempt and he seems to be willing to cooperate with Notre Dame," Miss Ley noted.

Hall Presidents-

new fines unjust

by Tom Prendergast

Calling the proposed increases in refrigerator and television fines unfair to the Notre Dame hall presidents contend that all students should share the cost of rewiring the halls.

Alumni hall president Butch Ward wrote in Brother Kieran Ryan, assistant Vice-President for Business Affairs last week, suggesting that the University charge all on-campus students $1 more for room and board instead of raising the fines.

According to Ward, this would provide approximately $39,000 per year which would be here when the halls need rewiring.

William comments, "Present students should not be taxed simply because they happen to be here when the halls need rewiring."

Wald president Dave Fromm also recommended abolishing the new fines of $3 per semester for refrigerators and $10 per semester for televisions.

"All students should share the cost of rewiring halls since all students benefit from rewiring in the form of more electrical outlets, improved lighting, and greater safety," Fromm wrote to Brother Ryan.

Ward described the fines, designed by Brother Ryan to discourage the use of refrigerators and television, as paying for "ancillary" with the University's methods of paying for other types of maintenance.

He also commented that since refrigerators and televisions are no longer luxuries, it is unfair to deprive students of them.

While admitting the "hot plates, large Salvation Army type refrigerators, and other wasteful appliances" should be banned, Fromm argued that there is no reason to discourage refrigerators under 6 cubic capacity and televisions which are relatively low wattage appliances.

He suggested a refrigerator and television permit fee to cover "only the co- of electricity which these appliances consume.

The most common reaction to the selection is satisfaction in the choice of a layman. Many felt that an "outside" one, without connection to the Holy Cross Order, can be objective.

Freshman Mary Rejent was "glad the presidency is out of the hands of the monks." She added, "He won't always be concerned with the Holy Cross Order."}

Tipping varied on Dr. Henry's prediction of a small college renaissance. Dr. Henry feels that a small college can provide a better community atmosphere.

Mary Rejent noted that most people don't want to be mass produced. "Agreeing with Dr. Henry, Miss Rejent continued, "Small colleges have their problems, but they can provide personalized education."

"I believe the trend is toward experimental education, less structured, with student interests in mind. Dr. Henry is aware that creativity needs a small environment," Mary Orr noted.

Kathy Hutter, a freshman, echoed Miss Fraser's comment but added, "I do like the idea of getting out of the shadow of Notre Dame." Students expressed interest in the President's plans of forming a consortium with other South Bend colleges and universities, aware of the opportunities available. The students felt that "the time had come to work together," and St. Mary's should not ignore the facilities of other South Bend institutions.

Several underclassmen believed that the plans of Dr. Henry will not be here when the halls need rewiring.

Kathy Hutter feared that she would not be here to see the changes occur. "In five years the school may be really bad. Unfortunately we will have graduated one year."

Miss Hutter continued, "Maybe someone more holy could move things faster."

Another freshman, Janet Krier, agreed that it will take time for St. Mary's potential to be "let loose." She doubts that Dr. Henry's plans are feasible in the near future.

Anne Fraser summed up the sentiments of most Saint Mary's women. "At least they finally decided on somebody."

Academic Council will reconsider calendar

by Mike Rosen

The Academic Council will reconvene next week to consider the question of the University Academic calendar, according to University Provost James T. Hurchalla. The meeting will be held on Wednesday, March 22.

The action to reconvene the Council was taken after 10 members of the Council petition requesting it. Prof. Ed­ ward Vasta of the Academic Department explained the action.

"The faculty manual states that the academic council meets at the call of the president, but that he must call a meeting at the petition of ten.

Fr. Ferdinand Brown, Associate Provost and Secretary of the Council, noted that the "Council agenda which was requested by some members of the Academic Council to discuss the new calendar event was added to the notice that had been mailed to Council members yesterday afternoon."

No alternative calendar has yet been submitted for the agenda. Prof. Vasta commented "the students certainly ought to bring their credit hours at Notre Dame."

Goldrick added that the students is June 15. Major student transfer students is June 15. Major student transfer students is June 15.

The application deadline for all transfer students is June 15. SMG students who apply before this date can expect notification on the regular timetable.

A total of 200 female transfer students will be accepted. The quota last year was increased from 200.

Female transfer students must live on the Notre Dame campus. Some expect to be living with immediate families in South Bend. Those living with families are still counted in the 200 quota." Goldrick said.

ND usually requires that transfering students take at least half their credit hours at Notre Dame. This requirement is waived for present SMG students.

"Students who are presently at St. Mary's are eligible for transfer to Notre Dame during the end of their junior year."

Although the admissions office makes the final decision, the requirements usually are the same. The college does for recommendation of approval or denial of acceptance acceptance will be sent out then by the admissions office.

Twenty-six business administration students at St. Mary's will be allowed to complete their degrees as SMG students. If they wish to transfer they will be given "the highest priority," according to a March 1 University release.

The other as SMG students pursuing programs "not offered or fully staffed at St. Mary's" will qualify for 1972 Notre Dame degrees but will be considered for transfer on an equal basis," Goldrick said.

Transfers from SMC to receive word soon

by John Abowd

St. Mary's students who apply to Notre Dame by April 3 can expect to hear from the admissions office within ten days after their files are complete, according to John Goldrick, director of admissions.

Applications will be either "accept, rejected, or told that decision can be made until this semester's grades are available," he said.

The completed application and a college transcript constitute a complete file. In addition, high school transcript and college board scores are requested from transferring freshmen.

Goldrick picked the April 3 deadline "to allow further the discussion with parents over Easter vacation."

Almost all SMC students can expect a final decision by July 31. The application deadline for all transfer students is June 15. SMG students who apply before this date can expect notification on the regular timetable. A total of 200 female transfer students will be accepted. The quota last year was increased from 200.

Joint Statement

Thirty-one faculty members of the Notre Dame academic community, and at large, may be severely jeopardized by this University's decision-making process. Rather than taking a cosmic look at the process, a microscopic view of the way a tenure is decided will pinpoint the problem.

The tenure process

Individual departments vary somewhat in their approach but typically this is how a professor gets tenured:

- The departmental Committee on Appointments and Promotions meets to nominate candidates and collect credentials. One member of the department is asked to evaluate each candidate's publications. Each candidate's publications are also evaluated by an outside authority.
- After the next committee meeting all the evaluations are read and discussed. Discussions usually center around a candidate's scholarship, teaching ability and contribution to the department. When evaluating teaching ability, the committee gathers teacher evaluations that are usually secret. Until last year, these votes were usually secret, now each vote is required by the Provost's office to sign a ballot.
- The chairman of the department then writes his own independent evaluation and recommendation which is forwarded, along with the committee's decision, to the Dean of the College.
- The dean writes his own evaluation which is forwarded with the other information to the Office of the Provost.
- The Provost, then, makes the final decision which is returned to the department chairman in the form letter stating only whether the candidate was accepted or rejected for tenure or promotion. As a rule no explanation accompanies the decision.

The aftermath

After all the individual work by faculty members only the Office of the Provost can make a final decision. This is the lack of significant faculty input that contributes to the distrust which filled yesterday's statement.

It is a distrust fueled by the absence of accountablility from the Provost. It is a distrust further fueled by the arbitrariness of the one-half to two-thirds tenure limit newly imposed on the departments. It is a distrust that must end.

But the problem is incredibly complex and by no means one-sided. It is the fact that faculty and students are left holding the ashes after a decision has been made in which they had no concrete input—no input which could politically influence the decision—that is so deplorable now.

Our community, if it ever existed as a community, is collapsing on a bed of patersufflum. Dialogue has collapsed and apparent arbitrariness abounds. And it is this problem that yesterday's statement pinpointed. Now, it is this problem that we, as an academic community, must confront. Immediately.

The editorial board

There is a crisis at Notre Dame. The 31 faculty members who signed yesterday's statement "The future at Notre Dame" provide the best testimony to this crisis that has yet emerged. The names read like a "Who's Who" of respected professors who honestly believe that their future, both within the Notre Dame academic community and at large, may be severely jeopardized by this University's decision-making process. Whether this is true or not the fact that so many prominent teachers could feel this way is symptomatic of an incredible disease lurking under the skin of "The future at Notre Dame."

At the crux of the problem is the University's decision-making process. Rather than taking a cosmic look at this process, a microscopic view of the way a tenure decision is made provides a better insight.

Reflections on Mardi Gras... and more

Greg Stepcic

Now that the bills have been paid and Mr. Way of Bethel Park, Pa. and our own Lee Monaghan have happily driven their cars away it's time to divvy up the profits of Mardi Gras '72—almost $11,000. There is usually little trouble in finding organizations who need the money—Sr. Marita, Cila and many others will once again undoubtedly apply for a small share—but unfortunately there are many who will not even get a small share.

In our present economy a profit of any kind often makes the one who is responsible for it a financial wizard. I cannot claim this but I can claim having a handful of people as my staff who were willing to work very hard to help benefit some of our local charities. Many did their part. But was it a success? Certainly not.

The entire Mardi Gras program was begun many years ago and has prospered and developed into a tradition at Notre Dame. The only reason it has been able to withstand the fate of time is because inherent in the program is not only the spirit of charity but also the true Notre Dame spirit. Certainly not the kind that emanates from the establishment pre­ molded image of the institution but the spirit that makes Notre Dame special—that spirit which makes Notre Dame very meaningful to some of us—the people of Notre Dame—the students—all of us. In a serious at­ tempt to be unique and perhaps a little corny I can truly say I love Notre Dame— I've come to appreciate the special education I've received from some very special people.

But still, Mardi Gras '72 failed. If everyone we reached through the social activities had done their part those that will shortly distribute the profits would have to turn around. Instead of a bank account of $11,000, we'd have one which would say $6,000. My conclusion?

We should all reflect a little on our lives here—what does an education mean to us? Merely a degree? This is what many say. No longer is everyone willing to do their share. Apathy is commonplace in our university. The tedious term community. Instead of trying to build and unite to affect change many spend leisure hours in an attempt to tear down and discredit others special work. Personalities are constantly being attacked. No longer do we offer suggestions but we still expect results. No longer do we hear—let's do something—but instead, what has it ever been to fill the blank?—done for us this year? What has somebody done for us? Or what can WE DO FOR OURSELVES?

It's nonsense to expect something for nothing and unless everyone is willing to do his own share—to do something positive—no one, whether student, faculty or administrator will ever be able to do a thing "for us."

The effects that this seemingly prevailing attitude can have on education is alarming. Involvement and development are necessary if one is to claim to be educated—uplift, degradation and a constant tearing down may eventually lead to an inferior or at least lower quality education for all of us. If this be the case, someday we may not have to worry about overcoming the term community for it may forever be exiled from our often times redundant and meaningless vocabulary.

What may emerge, however, is the third major state university in this great state of Indiana. To some I guess this won't matter.
Editor: I would like to make a suggestion concerning the latest burning issue on campus, the new calendar. This seems to be the last of a series of matters raised for the first time this year which are of vital importance to quality education at Notre Dame. First, the newspaper allowed students to drink and sleep with their friends in the dorm rooms. Then the editors got upset because St. Mary's girls are not getting to meet Notre Dame diploma. Next, an editorial urged the students not to elect a cat for student body vice-president. Finally, the issue is whether students will have to quit their summer jobs on August 29 or September 4. With a campus constantly in turmoil over such far-reaching and important problems, it is no wonder people make statements like those of Tony O'Mara (OBSERVER, March 13, John Hickey (OBSERVER, March 6 and 9), and Sr. Joseph Mary (ERASMUS, March 16).

Although the previous problems are not without importance and complicated for an undergraduate like me to solve, I do have a simple proposal for an alternative solution.

Stay off grass
Editor: Upon reflecting on the nature of the cable-threaded, silver-quoted, concrete-embellished pegs which line a portion of the surfaced paths of this campus, I came to the rather obvious realization that someone, years ago, acknowledged that many of the campus grounds people spend their time on are manifestly pine and cactus, in short, upon surveying the terrestrial damage to the campus' given areas, it is clear that the cable serves a necessary, though oft-times frustrated, purpose. A short jump from "bustin' out all over" on the other hand, to the likelihood of snowfall is steadily increasing. In light of this, then the local landscapers, the grassy areas will become increasingly obvious if, like the local swine and bovine, they find our cross country cutters and the hobbled bustards in the golf carts continue to leave their treaded scars in the wet sod. To wit: the most flagrant violation of the campus grounds people's time, including the "6-2-7" times which have been the largest crowd pullers, is that they leave the doors of the library, their appeal, therefore, is directed to the university's domesticated stock and to those concerned themselves with the maintenance of the university's grounds; to these, the following comments are directed:

1. It would be a shame to have cable-off the flora surrounding the library.

2. I suggest, however, that the grounds people consider some steps to place cable barriers in the essential places, hopefully in black or at least green, the current traversing in the foot worn areas about campus; and implement re-seeding as soon as the last frost danger has passed.

3. I wish that the "people' who manage the daily trekks in the ever-widening previous would observe and heed the warnings of the above-mentioned barriers, i.e., walk on the sidewalks.

4. In sum, fellows, give the grass a chance; impose upon your friends to keep off the grass, at least until it is stronger and fall

Walshe, Houck discuss Faculty statement

by Mike Baum

Ant. Prof. Peter Walshe of the Economics Department yesterday commented on the pending removal of the Faculty letter and called for a "shift of the negative to the positive" in the debate.

"Making all of us signed the letter in substance, in other words there are important issues in there we are concerned about. The point is agreement in substance." He then went on to say, "I signed it in parenthesis with the following statement: 'In the expectation of dialogue on the basis of the report of the Committee on Faculty Ethics.'" The same statement was added by Prof. E.A. Geurin of Government.

SMC Major's Night to outline new programs

by Ann Therese Darin

SMC academic departments will host "Major's Night," this evening, 7:30 pm. Unlike previous major's nights, which merely served to inform SMC's students about requirements of majors, tonight's session will be the first time department chairmen can concretely specify the requirements for majors to be retained. They will also elaborate on new academic programs.

At this stage, according to academic sources on one can determine how strong or how diverse a department will become. This day depends on the number of major intents.

Meetings to simultaneously take place in Madeleva and Science Hall classrooms, are open to both freshmen and sophomores. According to Dr. William Hickey, special assistant to President Edward Henry, "Major's night will be the first substantial and authoritative information since the college distributed information on an academic co-exchange with Notre Dame for next year."

"Students who don't feel that they understand St. Mary's present situation or who have difficulties should come by to see them," he said. "I would like to see that letter (the Faculty letter) arouse interest in a positive on-going discussion on the issues raised by the Committee on Faculty Ethics."

Walshe emphasized that he hoped to ask the question of length preferably with the provost, Fr. James T. Burchaill, playing a part. "My suggestion," he offered, "would be that the debate be shifted from the negative to the positive and this document could do the trick."

The report of the Sub-committee on Faculty Ethics to which Prof. Walshe alluded was explained by the Faculty Manual, which is a minisum. The report discusses the university as a "community of scholars" and deals with rights and duties arising from this concept and "certain duties of communal government" according to Prof. Houck. "The area is important and in extremely important," he said.

Whether or not the report will be published as is is not yet decided, according to Houck. It is being considered as part of the deliberations on the revised Faculty Manual in the Faculty Committee under Prof. James Robinson of the English Department. Whether or not the report itself is published will be decided by Prof. Houck's committee.

Houck: language inconsistencies being removed

Prof. John Houck of the Business College, who is chairman of the subcommittee, "The state of the (the report) right now is that it's being worked on removing some language inconsistencies and improving the style," he explained.

Houck said that the report is being prepared under the Committee on the Faculty Manual. "We're in the process of redrafting the faculty constitution. We call it the Faculty Manual, which is a minisum."

Amtrak lapses into debt

by Stephen Aug

Amtrak ran out of cash today and is unable to meet a $12 million monthly payment to the 13 railroads that operate its nationwide system of passenger trains, officials confirmed. None of the railroads, however, has indicated any intention to stop operating the trains.

Hardest hit financially by the shortage will be the bankrupt Penn Central Transportation Co., which had been expecting a monthly payment of about $2.1 million. Penn Central runs about 40 percent of Amtrak's service.

Penn President, William Moore, said the railroad this year is "fortunate . . . we have the cash and we can stand it."

Although the bill due today total about $12 million, the railroads pay Amtrak about $6 million a month as their fee of joining the corporation, the difference about $7 million is the cash Amtrak actually pays out to the railroads each month.

Final match card by scoring a TKO at 1:15 in the first round of their fight. Bob Pyle, defeated his opponent for much of the match, but Barry won it when he nailed Grimm with a winning right hook to the head.

Norm Barry steps away from fallen Charlie Grimm and into the title match of the 165-lb. weight class.

Larry Semerad began the semifinals by scoring a TKO at one minute of the 1st round against Harry Buss. His opponent in the 165-lb. class. Semerad made effective use of his mobility and a strong left-hand attack to stagger his opponent for the final second of the round.

In the opening match of the 165-lb. class, Pat Cavanaugh earned a final-round berth by scoring a unanimous win over Rich Arenberger. Scoring in place of the injured Jim Egan. Matt Egan earned the other 123-lb. spot by defeating Tom Hudes.

Cavanaugh clinched late in the third round by landing several solid punches to Hudes’ head and upper body.

Gary Canori, last year's titlist in the 165-lb. class, survived an encounter with roundhouse boxer Charlie Morrison. Canori avoided most of Morrison’s best punches, and the fight was considered by many to be a shutout. But while Canori continued a winner, Mike Sanders, last year’s titlist in the 155-lb. division, did not.

Semerad, competing this year in the 165-lb. class, was surprised in a unanimous decision by Tom Hanlon. Canori avoided a good many of his opponent for most of the match, but Hanlon caught him twice in the corner just before the end of the opening round, and with an effective flurry midway through the second round, “arrested” the oncoming judges.

Mike Sanders claimed the other final-round spot in the 160-lb. class when he scored a unanimous decision over Tommy Bowers. Both fighters scored well in that match, but Sanders’ use of his left hand gave him the advantage.

Kevin Kerrigan and Ken McCandless fought a fairly even fight in the opening bout of the 165-lb. division. The two fighters spent most of the opening round feeling each other out, but Kerrigan took the fight to McCandless in the corner and earned a unanimous win.

Gary Finneran, who kayoed Roger Varela in Monday night’s action, kept his title chances alive by notching a TKO against Bob Bennett. Finneran, who made good use of his left hand-especially on jabs and occasional hooks—finished Bennett at 26 seconds of the second round.

The other half-light heavyweight event saw Pat Semmerad capture a split decision over Tom Kain. Kain had Steenberge on several times, but Semmerad escaped often enough to gain the victory.

The heavyweight class featured the night’s last TKO—a vicious Barry by Mike Webb, who had Brian Joseph nearly defenseless at 1:10 in the second round. Webb’s opponent in the final heavyweight bout will be a big favorite. Barry and Joseph gained a hard-fought split decision over the lightweights.

Friday’s action will be held at the 3 S. arena, and will get underway at 8:00.

ND golf team heads South for spring

by Joe Passistri

The 1973 Notre Dame golf team went into action with a Spring trip to the University of South Carolina beginning March 22 and concluding April 3rd. Veteran coach Fr. Clarence Durbin emphasized to his team before the trip that they would be looked upon as a type of Spring training for the team since they had no opportunity to practice thus far for this season.

They call this tournament the shoot-out in the South and there will be close to 40 different schools participating in the various tournaments held down there. We’re going down with a lot of ideas of getting ready for our regular season. Our first real competition will be the Ohio Northern Invitational on April 14 and 15th.

Coach Durbin appraised this year’s team as follows: "This year, we have a team that is about as strong behind them as last year’s team. In fact, we have a team that is superior to last year, but I feel the underclassmen and freshmen we have this year are an improvement over those three.

Returning juniors from last year’s team include captain Mike LaFrance, winner of the 1972 Notre Dame tournament; Chuck Voeller, and Marty Best. Phil this trip South with the team that the sophomores who figure prominently in Coach Durbin’s plans and Mike Kristrner and Jeff Barta are our finest freshmen.

When asked what he would consider a successful season from the point of view of Coach Durbin replied, “Any time we finish a season with a record of having beaten more teams than we have beaten us in the various tournaments we play in, and if we, then we’ve had a successful season.

The golf team will host its own Notre Dame Invitational on April 29 at the Burke Memorial course. The tournament will include five different schools and will be a 36 hole. The fact that the tournament will be played on the Irish golfers’ home course should make a serious contender for the championship.

In summarizing his feelings on the upcoming season coach Durbin said, "I’m expecting some pretty good things. I was impressed by some people in the Fall tournament and we’ll find out with this spring trip who will be playing in the regular season tournaments. Just because a boy doesn’t make the cut this year he will not mean he will not be playing in tournaments for Notre Dame this season."
S M C plans "celebration"

by Ann McCurry

In response to an expressed concern of a lack of awareness and participation in the SMC community, an independent student group, the SMC HOTC, announced plans for a four-day "Celebration of Self" on the SMC campus in mid-April. Originators of the event, Ann Dunn and Father Roger Cormier, hope that this celebration will provide an opportunity for students to "come to know the spiritual life of the community and to stimulate a reawakening of religious values."

"On the whole, we don't deal with each other as persons," Ms. Dunn said. "Therefore, Saint Mary's takes on the appearance of a non-human college, one in which students are suffering in mutual isolation."

"If the collective community has a weak concept of self," she continued, "it can't have a strong image. Accordingly, the focus of the celebration will be upon women. The activities will be aimed at raising the personal levels of awareness among the SMC community and provide discussion of issues related to the liberation of women."

"What we are aiming for," Father Cormier stated, "is to raise issues both personally and publicly concerning the need to shatter social and vocational stereotypes."

The "Celebration of Self" is still in the planning stages. Although present, organizers plan to begin with a fair consisting of various booths and displays allowing students to 'manifest' and share in the expression of hidden talents.

The independent student project is supported by St. Mary's Office of Military Science, noted that the HOTC is a "topped concern of a lack of awareness of the SMC student body and the SMC community." The student body is a huge community with each other as individuals. The HOTC is an independent concern of a lack of awareness among the SMC community, and we have been interested in participating, organizing or just taking, should the opportunity occur," Ms. Dunn said.

The HOTC has taken the initiative in shattering stereotypes. "It is important to the whole. we don't have our personal image."
