Opens Indiana campaign

HHH: Nixon over-extending

by Jerry Laskus
and Ed Ellis

Charging the Nixon Administration with "the over-extensive use of executive privilege," Minnesota Senator Hubert Humphrey claimed yesterday that泗 no open government. It's more closed that it's ever been.

Humphrey was questioned if this could protect the country from a President who would recommit troops every 30 days. To this he answered that there is no true protection, except for "judgement and common sense of the President."

Humphrey was questioned if this could protect the players and owners agreed to start the season Saturday without making up any of the 86 missed games.

The settlement was reached in New York, games less than a full season of 162, all teams will miss at least six games and divisional championships will be decided on a straight percentage basis. They customarily are decided that way, but clubs usually made a complete full seasons despite bad weather by scheduling doubleheaders.

As a result, some teams like the Houston Astros and San Diego Padres will play nine games less than a full season of 62, all teams will miss at least six games and divisional championships will be decided on a straight percentage basis. They customarily are decided that way, but clubs usually made a complete full seasons despite bad weather by scheduling doubleheaders.

For the 60 players, whose salaries will begin Saturday instead of a week age today, the cost will be nine days pay. For those at the minimum level of $13,500, the loss will total $875; for those at the big league average of $22,500, it will be $1,600. For Henry Aaron of the Atlanta Braves, who is bearing down on babe Ruth's home-run record at nearly 300, his season average of $13,500, the loss will total $875; for those at the big league average of $22,500, it will be $1,600. For Henry Aaron of the Atlanta Braves, who is bearing down on babe Ruth's home-run record at nearly 300, his season average of $13,500, the loss will total $875; for those at the big league average of $22,500, it will be $1,600. For Henry Aaron of the Atlanta Braves, who is bearing down on babe Ruth's home-run record at nearly 300, his season average of $13,500, the loss will total $875; for those at the big league average of $22,500, it will be $1,600.
Faculty calls tenure quota guideline, not absolute rule

By Don Ruane and Mike Ruon

The two-thirds tenure quota for the philosophy department is described as a guideline rather than a rule, according to comments made by chairman H. Ernan McMullin, who is also the philosophy and sociology-anthropology department chairman. Sociology- anthropology and philosophy, which is now approximately six percent tenured, expects to have a position open for two years, just in time for the next faculty member to reach his six percent. Currently, 46 percent of the philosophy department and 25 percent of the sociology- anthropology department is tenured.

Sociologist McMullin views the quota as "more of a challenge than anything," and not "a mathematical absolute, but an expectation." "I think it is a difficult human situation," he said. "It is a challenge because it is the responsibility of a department chairman to avoid unethical tenure practices which result in an imbalanced department, and because it is a difficult human situation."

"I see it as a difficult human situation. Selectivity is hard on people, but its not going to be that much different than before. There will be no sharp discontinuity with past practices," Fr. McMullin said.

Sociologist William T. Liu appears to agree with this assessment, noting that rumors the quota create insecurity among the new staff, which he feels is mostly "psychological scare." He explained the evils of impaction, but also evokes the memory of how good you are that department and that college have in mind. This week what is happening at Yale. If you think morale is bad here, you should spend a week at Yale.

At Yale, according to Fr. McMullin, some departments have had to close their tenure doors for the next five years. "If you go five years without any younger people coming in, you stagnate. The problem is how to maintain a certain level of young people," he was quoted as saying. The philosophy department expects to have a position open for two years, just in time for the next faculty member to reach his six percent. Currently, 46 percent of the philosophy department and 25 percent of the sociology- anthropology department is tenured.

Sociologist McMullin views the quota as "more of a challenge than anything," and not "a mathematical absolute, but an expectation." "I think it is a difficult human situation," he said. "It is a challenge because it is the responsibility of a department chairman to avoid unethical tenure practices which result in an imbalanced department, and because it is a difficult human situation."

"I see it as a difficult human situation. Selectivity is hard on people, but its not going to be that much different than before. There will be no sharp discontinuity with past practices," Fr. McMullin said.

Sociologist William T. Liu appears to agree with this assessment, noting that rumors the quota create insecurity among the new staff, which he feels is mostly "psychological scare." He explained the evils of impaction, but also evokes the memory of how good you are that department and that college have in mind. This week what is happening at Yale. If you think morale is bad here, you should spend a week at Yale.

At Yale, according to Fr. McMullin, some departments have had to close their tenure doors for the next five years. "If you go five years without any younger people coming in, you stagnate. The problem is how to maintain a certain level of young people," he was quoted as saying. The philosophy department expects to have a position open for two years, just in time for the next faculty member to reach his six percent. Currently, 46 percent of the philosophy department and 25 percent of the sociology- anthropology department is tenured.

Sociologist McMullin views the quota as "more of a challenge than anything," and not "a mathematical absolute, but an expectation." "I think it is a difficult human situation," he said. "It is a challenge because it is the responsibility of a department chairman to avoid unethical tenure practices which result in an imbalanced department, and because it is a difficult human situation."

"I see it as a difficult human situation. Selectivity is hard on people, but its not going to be that much different than before. There will be no sharp discontinuity with past practices," Fr. McMullin said.

Sociologist William T. Liu appears to agree with this assessment, noting that rumors the quota create insecurity among the new staff, which he feels is mostly "psychological scare." He explained the evils of impaction, but also evokes the memory of how good you are that department and that college have in mind. This week what is happening at Yale. If you think morale is bad here, you should spend a week at Yale.

At Yale, according to Fr. McMullin, some departments have had to close their tenure doors for the next five years. "If you go five years without any younger people coming in, you stagnate. The problem is how to maintain a certain level of young people," he was quoted as saying. The philosophy department expects to have a position open for two years, just in time for the next faculty member to reach his six percent. Currently, 46 percent of the philosophy department and 25 percent of the sociology- anthropology department is tenured.

Sociologist McMullin views the quota as "more of a challenge than anything," and not "a mathematical absolute, but an expected. He argued that philosophy is a difficult human situation because it is the responsibility of a department chairman to avoid unethical tenure practices which result in an imbalanced department, and because it is a difficult human situation.

"I see it as a difficult human situation. Selectivity is hard on people, but its not going to be that much different than before. There will be no sharp discontinuity with past practices," Fr. McMullin said.

Sociologist William T. Liu appears to agree with this assessment, noting that rumors the quota create insecurity among the new staff, which he feels is mostly "psychological scare." He explained the evils of impaction, but also evokes the memory of how good you are that department and that college have in mind. This week what is happening at Yale. If you think morale is bad here, you should spend a week at Yale.

At Yale, according to Fr. McMullin, some departments have had to close their tenure doors for the next five years. "If you go five years without any younger people coming in, you stagnate. The problem is how to maintain a certain level of young people," he was quoted as saying. The philosophy department expects to have a position open for two years, just in time for the next faculty member to reach his six percent. Currently, 46 percent of the philosophy department and 25 percent of the sociology- anthropology department is tenured.

Sociologist McMullin views the quota as "more of a challenge than anything," and not "a mathematical absolute, but an expected. He argued that philosophy is a difficult human situation because it is the responsibility of a department chairman to avoid unethical tenure practices which result in an imbalanced department, and because it is a difficult human situation.

"I see it as a difficult human situation. Selectivity is hard on people, but its not going to be that much different than before. There will be no sharp discontinuity with past practices," Fr. McMullin said.

Sociologist William T. Liu appears to agree with this assessment, noting that rumors the quota create insecurity among the new staff, which he feels is mostly "psychological scare." He explained the evils of impaction, but also evokes the memory of how good you are that department and that college have in mind. This week what is happening at Yale. If you think morale is bad here, you should spend a week at Yale.
'Force' may be used to prevent renewed Cuban harassment

by Benjamin Welles

Washington, April 13—Senior officials disclosed here today that United States naval ships in the Caribbean have been ordered by President Nixon to prevent—by force if necessary—Cuban vessels from seizing the merchant vessels of countries "friendly" to the U.S.

The new secret instructions, which were issued in late February, stem from the seizure by Cuban patrol boats in December of two merchantmen operating out of Miami under Panamanian registration.

The Lyla Express, which was seized off the Cuban coast Dec. 5, and the Johnny Express, which was taken after an armed fight Dec. 15 near 100 miles away in the Bahamas, belong to the Bahama Lines of Miami, which owns six freighters, belongs to four Babun Brothers, Cuban refugees of Lebanese origin.

The Cuban regime headed by Premier Fidel Castro has claimed that the two ships were involved in Central Intelligence Agency activities in Cuban waters.

This was denied in Miami by Teofil Babun, one of the brothers, and by Robert J. McCloskey, State Department spokesman. McCloskey asserted in response to questions that the two vessels had been on "...innocent passage and in no way were connected to the U.S. Government."

Disclosure of the Presidential orders to the Navy at this time appeared to be acutely embarrassing to administration officials in view of the current meeting here of the General Assembly of the organization of American States. Delegations representing 23 member nations of the hemisphere organization are meeting here until April 21 discussing a wide variety of political, economic, social, juridical and administrative matters.

Yesterday Secretary of State William P. Rogers told the O.A.S. that Cuba's "continuing interventionist behavior, its support for revolution and its close military ties with the Soviet Union" still constituted a "threat" to the hemisphere.

At the same time he pledged that "if changes in Cuba's policies and actions" should justify lifting the 1960 O.A.S. sanctions against Cuba — the U.S. would act in concert with its fellow members of O.A.S. and, presumably, would not oppose such a step.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the house foreign affairs subcommittee on Latin America, said that the Presidential order appeared to be a "reversal of the Nixon administration's low-profile policy."

"We seem to be going back to the U.S. as the 'policeman of the world', concept," Fascell said. "I know of no pending request for such protection by and third countries. This policy should be discussed here with the foreign ministers of the O.A.S."

Jerry W. Friedheim, a Pentagon spokesman, confirmed that the Navy had been given "special authority," but declined to elucidate. He referred queries to the State department.

(continued on page 4)

Kleindienst hopes for cabinet post now in jeopardy

by Robert Walters

Washington, April 13—For the first time since the Senate Judiciary Committee reopened public hearings on President Nixon's selection of Richard G. Kleindienst to become Attorney General, the nomination appears to be in serious trouble.

The previously favorable prospects for Senate confirmation have been seriously diminished by the likelihood of a bitter floor debate and the growing possibility of a full-scale filibuster by both Northern and Southern Democrats.

"It's very clear that we're now talking about 67 votes on the floor instead of 51 votes," said one Senate source close to the growing controversy, referring to the two-thirds vote needed to halt a filibuster versus the simple majority necessary for confirmation.

The status of the Kleindienst nomination has been transformed from virtually certain to very uncertain only within the last 48 hours. This is principally because of an issue only peripherally related to the central questions aired during the committee's six-week-long public inquiry into allegations of improprieties in the relationship between the Administration and the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation.

That issue is "Executive Privilege" — the protective legal cloak drawn around members of the White House staff and Executive Branch to prevent them from being called to testify before congressional committees on questions pertaining to their confidential relationship with the President.

The Nixon aide directly involved in the I.T.T. dispute is Peter M. Flanigan, formerly Nixon's principal liaison man to the country's business community and now the President's advice on International Economic Affairs.

Members of the illiterate rabble enjoyed the festivities at last weekend's Inaugural Ball.

Students take every opportunity to enjoy spring at Notre Dame—how long will it last?
By Nicholas Gage

New York, April 13 - Two men connected to the Mafia family reportedly hunted by Joseph A. Colombo Sr. are being sought by police as suspects in the killing of Joseph Gallo, according to sources close to the investigation.

One of the men fits the description of a Gallo's killer as given to police by eyewitness to the murder. The other is suspected of being the driver of the getaway car.

The men sought for the actual killing is listed in police files as a 5-foot-8, white male about 35 years of age, dark hair and eyes.

"The two men have been described as members of Joseph Profaci's crew," said the source, who asked not to be identified. "They are said to be associated with the Colombo family, which had a close relationship with Profaci's crew.

The two men were reportedly seen together in the Colombo family's New York headquarters.

"We have been given no information about their whereabouts," said the source. "But we believe they are in the vicinity of the Colombo family's New York headquarters.

The source said the police have not released any information about the identities of the two men or the circumstances of their arrest.

The Police Department has been investigating the murder of Joseph Gallo, who was shot dead inside a restaurant on the corner of 23rd Street and 6th Avenue in Manhattan.

A bullet was found in the restaurant and a bloodstain on the floor was visible.

"The investigation is ongoing," said the source. "We believe we have strong evidence linking the two men to the murder of Joseph Gallo."
Humphrey evaluates primaries

(continued from page 1)

... ideologies between Wallace and all the other Democratic candidates.

"But I want to say this, if this Democratic Party wants to attract the attention of the American people in November it better make sure that Governor Wallace is not the voter in those races. It's one thing when you have 13 candidates or 12 candidates, but when it gets down to two or three then we better make up our minds as Democrats about who we're going to be for." Humphrey noted the necessity for unity within the Party to battle Wallace and be particularly reached out to Muske for her run in Indiana. The candidate characterized the primary, approximately, but noted that Governor Wallace has a certain amount of showmanship.

"He articulates many of the concerns that people have and doesn't burden himself with the solutions." When a reporter estimated Humphrey's delegate total at 23, the candidate, inquired, "Oh, we think we're doing much better than that. We deted our of 17, they do. Hopefully, many delegates tucked away around the country in non-primary states."

Humphrey noted a recent survey method the top three confidiants for the Democratic nomination within seven delegates of each other. He placed an estimate of delegate strength at "a couple a hundred or more."

Turning to the education question, Humphrey talked of his ideas of quality education. He feels that quality education requires top grade teachers, small classes, and equal funding of education. Financing, he said, is one of the tools that need to be used for when a child is in a poor school and needs to go to a rich school.

"The whole purpose of having should be toward improving the whole educational experience. I also believe that integrated schools are better than segregated schools. And I believe that it's good for our children to learn to study together and learn together so that later in life they can learn to live together."

The Senator also talked about the new Vietnam offense and claimed that it is a good test of Vietnameseization. Nonetheless, he noted that the US is again deeply involved in the war.

Humphrey stressed that the United States should withdraw their forces from Vietnam and requested President Nixon to go to the Security Council of the United Nations and ask for a ceasefire. Humphrey came to South Bend after afternoon stops in Washington D.C., Williamsport, Pennsylvania, and Cleveland.

ISLI sessions set

The International Student Leadership Institute (ISLI) of the University of Notre Dame has announced plans to sponsor a one-week training session during July for underclassmen in the United States high schools. Both men and women will attend the sessions opening on Sundays and closing the following Saturday.

Inaugurated by Rev. Thomas Chambert, C.S.C., of Notre Dame in 1969, the ISLI sponsors a national conference on the campus each year and weekend weekend conferences from Vancouver to Boston during the academic year. The 1972 summer session will be the first in-depth training program for junior and senior-to-be students operating from an idea, "Leadership is not a destination, it is a journey." students will select summer session courses that include "Role of Media in Leadership," "Psychology of Leadership," and "Leadership and Education."

Recent Institute sessions, including a trip by 10 Notre Dame students to Boston schools during the Easter vacation, have emphasized the various group projects, tasks, and process exercises which are aimed at the development of personal in- volvement by the student in the ideas and thoughts of others.

Women's Political Caucus

Sizemore talks at dinner

Barbara Sizemore, educator from the University of Chicago and member of the Black Caucus, will be the featured speaker at an Indiana Women's Political Caucus sponsored by the South Bend - Mishawaka Women's Political Caucus Friday, April 14, at 6 p.m. in the First Unitarian Church, 101 E. North St. Dr. Dinner tickets, obtainable at the door, are $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children. Tickets for Miss Sizemore's talk at 6 p.m. are $1 and will be sold at the door. The program is invited.

Carrels of state and local offices will be introduced along with eight women from the Caucus who recently filed for public office.

Miss Sizemore, a doctoral candidate in educational administra- tion at the University of Chicago, has extensive experience as a high school principal, a college professor, and a consultant in school evaluation. She is a member of the Black Caucus of the University of Dayton, the Diocese of Pittsburgh's Project Understanding, and the Governor's Office of Human Resources, State of Ohio.

In 1965, Miss Sizemore was awarded a Danforth Fellowship, and in 1965-67 a Chicago Board Fellowship. She is the author of numerous articles and a book, "The Struggle to be Great." Her latest book, "The Struggle to be Great," was reviewed in the Los Angeles Times.

Ombudsman gives aid to "72 women's orientation"

The Ombudsman Service is coordinating the effort to organize the Women's Orientation program on campus. According to Paul Deitzel, head of the Ombudsman Service, student government was approached by the University of Dayton, the Diocese for coordination of the program for fall of the women.

Deitzel emphasized that no leadership has been established to run the program, and that the Ombudsman would merely coordinate organizational efforts.

instances, the orientation committee if established, will select its own leadership and formulate the orientation program. The com- mittee will need many workers and full-time volunteers who want to get involved are welcome. Persons interested should contact the Ombudsman at 718.

Annie B. Bausch, director of the Ombudsman service, hopes that the orientation program will "show women what Notre Dame is like." By this meant "not just physically show them around the campus, but offer them advice about what college and being a student college is like."

Deitzel suggested that an essential problem of the program would be integration in the "orientation, involving seminars and group discussions of problems that are important to our college students."

Donahue award to ND grad student

Mrs. Cordelia Ann Candelaria, a doctoral degree candidate at the University of Notre Dame, is the recipient of a Kent Fellowship awarded by the Donahue Founda- tion for "research in scholarship and unusual promise as a teacher."

Miss Candelaria, a recent ap- pointee to the South Bend Human Relations Commission, is one of four graduate students at midwest universities that have received the prestigious award. Previously, two undergraduate students at Notre Dame were among 97 in the nation to receive Donahue Fellowships for ad- vanced study.

The Fellowships provide financial support for amaximum of three years of graduate study and are designed to identify and en- courage graduate students who are working for teaching or ad- ministration.

Mrs. Candelaria will receive her doctoral degree in American Literature at the May, 1972 commencement. A native of Atch, N.M., she received her master of arts degree in English at Fort Lewis College, Durango, Colo.

"Hello, Liberty Foundry?!?
The bell you sent us just cracked!

More and more companies are publishing long distance telephone numbers for customers to report manufacturing defects. They know it's the easiest way to iron out problems.

More economical, too. For example, you can call Philadelphia, Pa., for less than $1.00 when you dial direct after 5:00 p.m. Not only do you want faster action on any problem, get it the easy, economical way. Dial direct.
A major study of continuing education that has entered its second phase with the appointment of a new coordinator to examine key areas.

The task forces, which grew out of a national conference on continuing education at the Kellogg Foundation at the University of Notre Dame last year, were announced by Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of Notre Dame and chairman of the study's steering committee.

Indiana Third District Congressman John Brademas heads the task force on continuing education in Europe; Howard L. Neville, executive vice president for administration at the University of Nebraska, chairs the task force on continuing education and the arts; Dr. H. E. Dekker, vice president of the Institute for Services to Education in Washington; and Alexander M. Schmidt, dean of the University of Illinois Medical School in Chicago, is chairman of the study panel on new knowledge and the professions.

The task force is charged with answering the question of how education in their areas and coming up with specific recommendations.

In a statement summarizing reasons for the study, Father Hesburgh noted that "continuing education has expanded at geometric proportions over the last 20 years, it has not yet begun to reach the universal level of participation needed by all of us.

We consistently structure programs for the people who need continuing education the least. Where are the programs for the new students — the mature student, worker, minority group members, the migrant laborer, the prisoner, the high school graduate not interested in a four-year degree?"

"We have also been preoccupied with programs focused upon highly specialized vocational professional interests at the expense of offerings in the arts, humanities and cultural affairs.

And we have failed to use the technology in the task force. As one participant said, 'We have remained committed to the traditional academic pattern, and De are not quite sure where to place the community college.'"
A Review of: The Godfather

He looked like a man who got the short end of a head-on collision with a bulldozer. His nose was flattened and his cheeks bulged as if stuffed with cotton. The face was old, weary, and pockmarked with eyes that were dark and sunken. The gray hair was sparse and balding and a skinny gray moustache crossed his lip.

The audience noticeably gasped when three minutes into the movie, you realized that was The Godfather. He spoke out of the side of his mouth with a wheeze. The voice was slow and marked with age. He sat at his desk with a red rose on his lapel and gently stroking the cat that had settled in his lap.

The famous face that had highlighted the screen in "On the Waterfront" and "Viva Zapata" was largely unrecognizable. It was Brando as one had ever seen him before. Brando played the Godfather—Don Vito Corleone—with the air of a clock winding down. Corleone had built his empire to greatest and then watched as people around him slowly tore it down. His mind had slowed and he was approaching senility.

Brando gives a tremendous sensitivity to a role that might have been ruined by a hard guy approach. He played the role as a benevolent grandfather and a concerned observer. But despite Brando’s sensitive approach to the character, the movie is a frightening and chilling look at the underworld. The violence is shocking and incredible. The corpses pile up throughout the movie, all of the killings being graphic gangland murder, and chilling look at the underworld. You just can’t escape it. Throughout Michael emphasizes that he doesn’t want his children involved just as he didn’t want to become involved in his father’s business. Yet, despite his early protestations, Michael moves in behind his father. He, too, becomes a violent murderer. Michael is important because his portrayal seems to indicate something about the underworld. You just can’t escape it. Throughout Michael emphasizes that he doesn’t want his children involved just as he didn’t want to become involved. You realize that no matter what he says, his children are sentenced to follow in the role of the man’s lungs. He is a killer that can be turned on, used, and then turned off again.

It is portraits of men like Clemenza that seems offensive to his nature. He is large, jovial, and friendly, but he kills more and often more violently than any other Corleone.

Castellano’s role is more frightening and chilling than any other part in the movie. The others kill within the context of their characters. Sonny has a temper and kills when he is mad. Michael becomes a violent man with the development of his character. Luca Brasi is a paid killer. But in all of these roles the violence is part of the character. It has developed in the person until it is a major portion of the character. Yet, it is different with Clemenza. The violence in him can be turned on and then turned off. Clemenza laughingly brews up a batch of spaghetti for the Family and then in the next instant he puts a garrott around the neck of a man and draws the last breath out of the man’s lungs. He is a killer that can be turned on, used, and then turned off again.

It is portraits of men like Clemenza that make "The Godfather" such a frightening movie because for all we know Clemenza is your fat, happy uncle or the friendly man next door.

For all its violence and all of its terror, "The Godfather" is not a movie, you like this form of filmmaking. For me, however, it was not entertainment, just the spectacle of fine performances from Brando and Castellano. Perhaps "The Godfather" struck too near the terror that exists within me, the terror that people are not as good as I hope they may be. And when I leave a theatre of people applauding a violent and graphic murder, I find that terror becoming more and more horrible. No longer is it just on the fantasy screen of films, but the terror has spread to the people that surround me.

And The Blood Flows Free

Jerry Lutkus

The audience more disturbing than the picture.

Michael Corleone, the Don’s son, sets out to revenge his father’s near-death and he brutally murders two men while eating dinner. The shootings are violence, bloody, and incredibly graphic and the audience responded with applause and cheers. To say that the people were more shocking than the movie is perhaps having a tremendous sense of the obvious.

Three of the other actors in the film—Al Pacino, James Caan, and Richard Castellano—further the violent end of this movie. Al Pacino is Michael Corleone, the new Godfather. Pacino is very good in his portrayal of Michael, the college boy, and war hero who didn’t want to become involved in his father’s business. Yet, despite his early protestations, Michael moves in behind his father. He, too, becomes a violent murderer.

Michael is important because his portrayal seems to indicate something about the underworld. You just can’t escape it. Throughout Michael emphasizes that he doesn’t want his children involved just as he didn’t want to become involved. You realize that no matter what he says, his children are sentenced to follow in the role of the man’s lungs. He is a killer that can be turned on, used, and then turned off again.

It is portraits of men like Clemenza that seems offensive to his nature. He is large, jovial, and friendly, but he kills more and often more violently than any other Corleone.

Castellano’s role is more frightening and chilling than any other part in the movie. The others kill within the context of their characters. Sonny has a temper and kills when he is mad. Michael becomes a violent man with the development of his character. Luca Brasi is a paid killer. But in all of these roles the violence is part of the character. It has developed in the person until it is a major portion of the character. Yet, it is different with Clemenza. The violence in him can be turned on and then turned off. Clemenza laughingly brews up a batch of spaghetti for the Family and then in the next instant he puts a garrott around the neck of a man and draws the last breath out of the man’s lungs. He is a killer that can be turned on, used, and then turned off again.

It is portraits of men like Clemenza that make "The Godfather" such a frightening movie because for all we know Clemenza is your fat, happy uncle or the friendly man next door.

For all its violence and all of its terror, "The Godfather" is not a movie, you like this form of filmmaking. For me, however, it was not entertainment, just the spectacle of fine performances from Brando and Castellano. Perhaps "The Godfather" struck too near the terror that exists within me, the terror that people are not as good as I hope they may be. And when I leave a theatre of people applauding a violent and graphic murder, I find that terror becoming more and more horrible. No longer is it just on the fantasy screen of films, but the terror has spread to the people that surround me.

CAC's Performing Arts Series presents

YELLOW SUBMARINE

Friday, April 14 8 & 10 pm
Engineering Auditorium

Admission $1.00
PAS patrons free
Observer insight

Student protests continue

By Don Ruane

Observers of student movements; left, right and up the middle across the United States have heralded their decline since the days of the Cambodian invasion, but the strikes and protests, with their direction turned in towards the institutions where they are born, continue today.

There are still a few groups who pocket the local industry with the Defense Department contract, but targets now include minority rights, tuition hikes, harassment, discrimination against students, and student representation on trustee boards.

Michigan State, perhaps, is the best example of the variety of protest types in the midwest. Among the activities at East Lansing are:

- A delayed law suit filed by the Association of Students against MSU, which is pending the outcome of a regional hearing by the All University Traffic Committee concerning the graduated parking fine system. Negotiations are slated for April 21.
- Under the system, the fine for a student's first violation is two dollars, but it is increased for each violation thereafter until the end of the term. The system begins again each term. All non-student fines are two dollars.

Accountancy dept. presents awards

Four juniors in the Accountancy Department of the Notre Dame College of Business Administration received achievement awards at the annual department dinner on April 12. The presentations were made by Ray M. Powell, accountancy chairman.

Buena J. Bastedo, Southtown, N.Y., received the Dow Chemical Scholarship of $100 for achievement in industrial accounting.

He has maintained a straight A average in his major field and a 3.7 average out of a possible 4.0 in all subjects. Bastedo serves as a sports announcer for the student radio station at Notre Dame.

Recipient of the Ernst and Ernst cash award of $500 for achievement in accounting was Jerry D. Plouched, Idaho Springs, Colo. Married and the father of a child, he has achieved a 2.8 cumulative average.

A second Ernst and Ernst cash prize of $100 was awarded to Clifford W. Lesh, Falls Church, Va., for achievement in accounting.

With an average of 3.9 he is in the top 1 per cent of the junior class. He, David Bergonia, Spring Valley, Ill., received the $50 I.B. McCluggage award for academic excellence. Bergonia has been on the Dean's List for 7 hours of "A" and an hour of "A minus" since coming to Notre Dame.

The suit alleges that the system discriminates against students by charging extra with each violation. As MSU attorney Kenneth Smith has said the system itself is not discriminatory, but charging students more than others is an act of illegal discrimination.

"This should be an interesting case," Smith said after the suit was filed. "We are exposed to all kinds of discrimination against students. It would be good if we won this one."

A leader of the Black Coalition Council last Sunday that he planned to file a formal complaint with the Office of Equal Opportunity Programs against the MSU Department of Public Safety charging police harassment of black students.

The leader, Sam Riddle of Flint, said his arrest last week, following an incident with police after he was stopped for a minor traffic offense, was only one of many incidents of police harassment against blacks.

"When you're in the business of brightening contradictions these guys will deal with you in a political manner," Riddle said. He added, "It's going to look quite personal, but it's not. I'm interested in dealing with the institution."

Riddle said he has received several complaints about harassment from other black students, and added that he will meet with other black student leaders and document the harassment. Riddle was arrested in January 1971 for assaulting an MSU policeman at a concert.

- Several students are getting a right into the thick of things by seeking offices, in which if they don't succeed, they could become the targets of protest.

Donna O'Donnor, 23, a former student leader now turned graduate student, is seeking a nomination for election to MSU's Board of Trustee. If elected she will be the youngest person to sit on such a board in Michigan. Her platform is based on improving education opportunities for the less fortunate, educational and economically oppressed.

"Two students, Jerry DeGreck and Nancy Wesscher, both 22, won seats in the recent Ann Arbor City council elections. Running on the newly formed Human Rights Party Ticket, they secured strong female and minority support. Despite the success for either the Democrats or the Republicans from achieving a majority on the council.

MSU is not the only current protest center. Duceppe students were up in arms last month when tuition and fees were raised $240 for 1972-73. A poll taken two weeks before the announcement, when speculation was abundant, revealed that when the results of 1,386 responses were projected to include the entire 3,902 member student body, 67 percent would be willing to strike if the raise was inevitable.

Cut Class

At Harvard, teaching fellows and graduate students took a day off class March 28 to protest graduate tuition increases and a cutback in teaching fellowships. Tuition rose $250 to about $3,500, and the teaching fellowships have been stopped and allocated to various departments for their use. The strike was virtually 100 percent effective, and was supported, in part, by some undergraduates who also cut classes.

PIRG groups are rapidly becoming the most popular channel for students to hit the more unfair practices of the establishment. In addition to the formation of PIPRG, other groups are organizing in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Michigan, and Minnesota.

In Michigan, the PIRG group at the University of Michigan has already set its feet by providing weekly lists of grocery prices in nearby markets. The project is being done in cooperation with members of an economics course.

TONE1 TE People and Song

Cindy Corsaro Tex Petry
Butch Ward
Randy Sartan and Dan Koehler
Coffeehouse Alumni Hall Lounge
9-2 am Refreshments
Everyone Welcome

Main Church
Sunday Masses

5:15 p.m. Sat. Fr. Bob Griffin, C.S.C.
8:30 p.m. Sun. Fr. Tom McNally, C.S.C.
10:45 a.m. Sun. Fr. Aidan Kavanagh, O.S.B.
12:15 p.m. Sun. Fr. Bill Toobey, C.S.C.

Vespers: 4:30 p.m. - Our Lady's Chapel

JETHRO TULL

with Wild Turkey

THIS TUESDAY, APRIL 18 at 8 pm

TICKETS: $5.50, 4.50, 2.75

SOME GOOD SEATS STILL AVAILABLE AT THE STUDENT UNION TICKET OFFICE

Presented by the Student Union Social Commission

NEW AD DEADLINE

All ads must be in by 1:00

the day before publication

New office hours 10:am - 5:pm M-T
10:am - 2:30 pm Friday
Some results of the study on the Criminal Justice Systems in Indiana—a volume report recently completed by the University of Notre Dame, School of Law and College of Engineering—will be presented at the Third Annual Pittsburgh Conference on Modeling and Simulation April 26-28.

Chairman of the conference is Dennis Dugan, chairman of the Economics Department.

He has served on the policy planning council of the Department of Justice and is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, as a trustee of Amnesty International and of the editorial board of Foreign Policy magazine. Recent books of his include "Between Two Ages: America's Role in the Post-Teletype Era" and "Tideman's Change in Soviet Politics."

Opening session of the symposium at 9:30 a.m. April 14 will feature talks by the following Notre Dame faculty: John Roos, government; Dr. Kenneth Jamieson, economics; and Dr. Richard Lamana, sociology. Dr. Joseph Scott, black studies; Dennis Dugan, chairman of the Economics Department, will serve as chairman and discussants will include Dr. M. A. Fitzsimmons, professor of history, and John Battie, former student body president.

A session on "Philosophy, Science and Technology" beginning at 4 p.m. April 14 will feature talks by Dr. Cornelius Delaney, philosopher; Dr. Julian Pleasants, microbiology; Dr. Thomas Mullal, collegiate seminar; Dr. Michael Crowe, general program; and Dr. William Davison, economics.

Brian Walsh, director of the computing center, will serve as chairman, and discussants will include Dr. Richard Crum, professor of political science and Dr. Frank Healy of the Student Computer Commission.

Morning sessions on April 15 will deal with religion and will include papers by Dr. Philip Gleason, history; Dr. Thomas Werge, English; and Dr. Stanley Hauerwas, theology. Prof. George Brinkley, chairman of the Government Department, will serve as chairman, and five discussants will include Rev. Maurice Amos of the Non-Violence Program and Steve Plavin of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The final session at 2 p.m. April 15, "Arts and Media," will be featured by Prof. Thomas Stritch, communication arts; Prof. Donald Collins, English; Dr. Thomas Fern, art; and Dr. Ronald Weber, chairman of American Studies. Dr. James Robinson, chairman of the English Department, will serve as chairman and discussants will include John Hurley of the Copley News Service, Philip Barkett, former student body president and Dr. Fred Syburg, speech and drama.

The South Bend Police Department and Notre Dame security combined forces yesterday in the successful recovery of a stolen car.

The vehicle, a 1962 heige Chevrolet, was found yesterday morning at 6:00 a.m. on South Bend's west side by a city patrol car on routine duty. Damage to the car is reported to be negligible.

The car is owned by Greg Potts, a Notre Dame student. Potts first reported the vehicle missing from student parking lot E-2 on Tuesday evening at 11:00 p.m. After a fruitless search of the campus for the car, Notre Dame Security Chief Arthur Pears referred the student to the South Bend Police Department.

Potts had reportedly leased the car to a friend, who parked the car "somewhere near the Senior Bar" at approximately 3:00 a.m. Monday morning. That was the last time the car was seen.

The theft is the latest in a series of acts of vandalism to cars in campus parking lots. Within the past month, three cars have been broken into or otherwise noticeably damaged. All cars involved were 1962 or 1963 Chevrolets. The car recovered yesterday had previously been vandalized in a student parking lot on March 19.

Security Chief Pears cautioned against analyzing such incidents as an "increasing wave of vandalism." He reported that only five cars have been actually "stolen" from student parking lots since September 1971.

Some research has been done on the success rate of police departments in recovering stolen cars. A study done by the University of Notre Dame shows that in South Bend, Indiana, "the success rate is good."

A year ago, the University of Notre Dame had reported that 97 per cent of its lost cars were recovered. Last year, the success rate was 98 per cent. This year, the success rate is expected to be even higher.

The study was done by a team of Notre Dame students, under the guidance of Dr. Robert J. B. Gondolf, associate professor of sociology.

The study showed that police departments are able to recover about 90 per cent of all stolen cars. However, the studies also showed that police departments are not able to recover all of the abandoned cars.

The study also showed that police departments are able to recover about 80 per cent of all stolen cars. However, the studies also showed that police departments are not able to recover all of the abandoned cars.

The study also showed that police departments are able to recover about 80 per cent of all stolen cars. However, the studies also showed that police departments are not able to recover all of the abandoned cars.
Hubert H. Humphrey is a "regular Democrat" and thinks that the "regular Democratic" organization still has enough strength in the country to win the Democratic presidential nomination for him in Miami.

This, at least, was the substance of "political" side of the Minnesota Senator's downtown press conference yesterday. Humphrey unhesitatingly called himself the frontrunner, in a direct challenge to South Dakota Senator George McGovern's claims to the same position, as the campaign moves into a crucial six-week period.

When one reporter quoted Humphrey as having 25 delegates to the 90 controlled by McGovern and Maine Senator Edmund Muskie, the 1968 Democratic nominee smiled like a poker player who had been raised $100 when he was holding four aces.

"Well, we think we're doing much better than that." After a moment's pause, he continued, "We have, hopefully, many delegates tucked away around the country in the non-primary states."

He then quoted a survey that indicated his delegate strength as "a couple hundred or more." An Appeal in Indiana

Senator Humphrey made an interesting appeal to Indiana Democrats. It's well known that the fight in this state on May 2 will be between Humphrey, the representative of the party's "regular, progressive," wing and Alabama Governor George C. Wallace, who carries the banner of the right wing. Except for his characterization of Wallace as a showman who plays on people's protests but "doesn't burden himself with the solutions," Humphrey told the party not to vote for him as the party could win in November, implying that only HHH could win if nominated.

The Minnesota Senator appealed to Muskie supporters to back him in Indiana, since Muskie is not entered. He noted affinities between himself and Muskie, and called for a coalition of "regular Democrats" to beat Wallace.

Humphrey noted that most convention delegates will be chosen within the next six weeks. Pennsylvania, he noted, was at the "balance point" of the series of 26 primaries. Humphrey is lined up against the former frontrunner, Edmund Muskie of Maine, in that primary, and early indications are that he will win. This would be important because it would almost certainly end Muskie's bid for the nomination, and would leave Humphrey as the sole resident of the middle of the party.

Pennsylvania: "Balance Point"

Humphrey expects to beat Muskie in Pennsylvania, draw considerable support, including perhaps Muskie's, in the remaining primaries, and let his political associates in the "non-primary states" pick up enough to carry him to the nomination. In Indiana he hopes for Muskie support and he will play on the idea that Wallace cannot win, regardless of his stance on issues.
Irish squads invade Ohio

Three of Notre Dame's spring sports teams will head to Ohio this weekend, seeking to improve on their winning records.
The Irish golfers will make their regular season debut today and Saturday in the annual Robert Kepler Invitational at Ohio State. The 54-hole event will attract between 15 and 20 schools, including most of the Big Ten teams and leading independents in the Midwest.
The baseball team, 6-6 after losing its home opener to Notre Dame last April, travels to Athens, Ohio, for a Friday-Saturday series with 15th-ranked Ohio University, the defending Mid-American Conference champions.
Notre Dame's track team, snowed out of a home meet last Saturday with Army, visits Miami (OH) at Oxford Saturday after a scoreless tie. The Irish captured an 87-41 victory indoors over the Redhawks.
The Irish netters, 4-1 following a loss to Michigan and a victory over Miami State earlier in the season, will face Southern Illinois, Cincinnati and host Indiana State in Terre Haute Friday and Saturday. Notre Dame escaped with a 5-4 win over Indiana State last year during a 26-5 campaign and also defeated Cincinnati, 9-1.
ND's golfers, under the direction of Mike Durnin for the 11th season, returned from a week of exhibition matches at Lancaster C.C. with an unofficial 14-1-1 record. The Irish were 14th at OU last year.

"Unleashed!" The Harlem Globetrotters' famed Clown Prince, Meadowlark Lemon, taunts his opponent. The Globies will display their basketball talents Friday night in the ACC.

Globetrotters here Friday

The, famed, fun-making Harlem Globetrotters are coming to the Athletic and Convocation Center on Friday, April 18th, to put on their incredible basketball entertainment program that's been witnessed by 60,000,000 fans in 87 countries during the past 46 years.

The Magicians of Basketball will be comprised of the Family Globetrotters, including most of the Big Ten teams and leading independents in the Midwest.

The feature of a giant-sized program Globetrotters bring along for the entertainment program that's been witnessed by 60,000,000 fans in 87 countries during the past 46 years.

For those of you who missed the first ND-SMC Parachute classes Hurrah! We are now starting our third set of classes.

For more information phone S.B. 291-6565

Stickmen to battle Buckeye 'ers

The N. D. Lacrosse team, puts its 4 game win streak under fire, but has defeated the Ohio State Buckeyes on Saturday, and Ashland College on Sunday.

The Buckeyes are a "hot" team this year, and the Irish expect to have their hands full with All-America attackman Skip Van Bourgondien, who scored 30 goals last year.

For more information phone S.B. 291-6565

Mike Fanning, who set an ND record for most pins in a season with 20, was named MVP for the 71-72 squad last night.

Fanning, Ryan honored

Departing captain Ken Ryan and freshman heavyweight Mike Fanning led the parade of those cited for awards last night at the annual Wrestling Banquet.

Coach Terry Mather, at the dinner, told the team that he was "very pleased" with their 11-4 record, the best in school history, and that the "past season was just the beginning. We still have a long way to go."

Fanning, who set Notre Dame records for the fastest pin (19 seconds), most pins in a season (20), and most dual meets wins in a season (14), took Most Valuable Wrestler honors.

Ryan, whose Notre Dame record of 50 career wins will be marked with a plaque on the wrestling room doors, received a new award, the "Man" award, presented to the wrestler who best exemplifies the all-around qualities of manhood.

Another new honor, the "Heart" award, went to versatile Mike Kemp, who has wrestled weight classes ranging from 142 to 190 pounds over the past two seasons.

Mike Moylan and Fritz Bryning, both of whom are headed for Europe next season, won plaques as Most Improved Wrestlers. Moylan's eleven wins this season were all by pins.

Mather decorated seven wrestlers with "Wrestler of the Week" plaques. These awards, whose recipients were decided by the team, went to Ryan and Fanning, along with Mike Kemp, Al Roece, Steve Moylan, Mike Martin, and Rich Esposito.

"They brought over 40 rookies into our training camp this season and I've never seen such outstanding talent," Gillet said. "The 48th edition team is the finest in years."

Going into the 1971-1972 season, the Trotters have played a total of 10,066 games - 7,666 of these in North America, the other 3,400 overseas. They have won 10,333 and lost 323.

We brought over 40 rookies into our training camp this season and I've never seen such outstanding talent," Gillet said. "The 48th edition team is the finest in years."

physically, the Irish are sound, saving injured defender Fred Morrison, but hustling Ernie Bergkessel has done the job defensively in Fred's absence.

Coach Rich O'Leary has been platooning the goalies and it looks like Jumper Fanning will get the nod Saturday.

Offensively, the Irish are hot, especially attackman Ed Hoban. "A lot of scoring pressure is on them," said O'Leary.

"Fanning has been the best defender in the country," O'Leary said. "He's the best in the country."

Sunday's game with Ashland will feature two of the Midwest Club league's high scorers, Rich Ferrar and Gary Marino.
North Vietnamese capture Anloc

By Craig R. Whittley

Communist troops took Saigon, Friday, April 14—North Vietnamese troops, attacking with a force of more than 40 light and heavy tanks, took control Thursday of half of the Province Capital of Anloc, 50 miles north of Saigon, but soldiers of the 25th Division and 55 miles north of Saigon, but soldiers of the 25th Division and Fifth Division still held the other half after heavy fighting all during the day.

According to official reports received by American and South Vietnamese military commanders in Saigon, the heavy communist assault on Anloc, capital of Hinhong Province, began just after dawn Thursday. At the same time a South Vietnamese beleaguered force, drawn from the 25th Infantry Division and airborne troops, failed again to make much progress in their drive north on Highway 13, from Chinhcong toward Anloc, to relieve the encircled fifth division.

The South Vietnamese command asserted that 36 enemy tracked vehicles were destroyed or destroyed in the fighting that began at 6 a.m. Military officers said that seven of the vehicles were Soviet-made T-54 tanks but could not identify the others.

Airmark fighters all fire at Anloc, a small rubber plantation town near the demilitarized zone, was less major: two-week-old offensive was less major: two-week-old offensive had begun at 6:45 a.m. Military officers said that seven of the vehicles were Soviet-made T-54 tanks but could not identify the others.

The air campaign against the North could expand greatly once the weather improves. About 49 more F-4 Phantom jets were brought to Vietnam today to add to the roughly 400 fighter-bombers already in the country and the 100 B-52's in Thailand and Guam.

Air operations, including B-52's, began in early in the campaign along Highway 12 to relieve the besieged South Vietnamese defenders in Anloc. American jet fighter-bombers, most of them from the aircraft carrier Constellation, flew 112 air strikes against South Vietnamese troops as the battle around Anloc heated up early Thursday.

B-52's bombarded targets three missions and dropped hundreds of tons of bombs just miles west of the city between noon Wednesday and noon Thursday, according to the United States Command.

Military officers here said that the enemy breakthrough at Anloc, which has been under attack since North Vietnamese units began moving south on Highway 13 on April 3, began early in the morning when troops were seen marching down the highway toward Anloc. Tanks—about 20 at first—came in on the city from its short airstrip to the northeast.

But enemy antiaircraft fire, including 33-caliber machine guns and 17 mm. artillery, was held all around Anloc, the officers said, and kept the U.S. Navy Jets from striking as heavily at the tanks as they planned.

By noon, communist troops were reported in control of the northern part of the town and two tanks were inside it, the officers said. South Vietnamese troops in Anloc, the South Vietnamese defenders appeared to be regaining control of the city.

The new Jethro Full album

The new Jethro Full album

Dawn raid

Early Thursday morning, the command announced that B-52's had hit targets in North Vietnam before dawn in the first such raid since the North Vietnamese offensive began in the first week of April. The command did not say what the targets were, but informed officers said they were made on the government defense positions in the south. The B-52's came under attack from 10 to 20 surface-to-air missiles, the officers said.

The air campaign against the North could expand greatly once the weather improves. About 49 more F-4 Phantom jets were brought to Vietnam today to add to the roughly 400 fighter-bombers already in the country and the 100 B-52's in Thailand and Guam.

Air operations, including B-52's, began in early in the campaign along Highway 12 to relieve the besieged South Vietnamese defenders in Anloc. American jet fighter-bombers, most of them from the aircraft carrier Constellation, flew 112 air strikes against South Vietnamese troops as the battle around Anloc heated up early Thursday.

B-52's bombarded targets three missions and dropped hundreds of tons of bombs just miles west of the city between noon Wednesday and noon Thursday, according to the United States Command.

Military officers here said that the enemy breakthrough at Anloc, which has been under attack since North Vietnamese units began moving south on Highway 13 on April 3, began early in the morning when troops were seen marching down the highway toward Anloc. Tanks—about 20 at first—came in on the city from its short airstrip to the northeast.

But enemy antiaircraft fire, including 33-caliber machine guns and 17 mm. artillery, was held all around Anloc, the officers said, and kept the U.S. Navy Jets from striking as heavily at the tanks as they planned.

By noon, communist troops were reported in control of the northern part of the town and two tanks were inside it, the officers said. South Vietnamese troops in Anloc, the South Vietnamese defenders appeared to be regaining control of the city.