Moynihan tabbed

Brademas hints at appointment

By Ann Therese Darin
Campus News Editor

U.S. Congressman John Brademas (D-Ind, 3rd) hinted Friday evening that Daniel Moynihan, former domestic counselor to President Nixon, will be appointed as director of the newly created National Institute of Education (NIE).

In a speech which kicked off the third season of American Scene lectures sponsored by the St. Mary's Education Department, Brademas highlighted education-oriented legislation passed by the 91st Congress.

As chairman of the House Sub-Committee on Education, the seven-term congressman has sponsored legislation on child care, the National Education Act, and the Higher Education Bill. He spent a majority of his 45-minute speech explaining the mechanics of the proposed laws to an audience estimated at 300.

Sandwiched in his remarks on NIE, proposed by President Nixon in 1970 as a "vehicle for supporting research and development on every level of education," according to the Sub-Committee Chairman, was the reference to Moynihan.

"NIE": Moynihan's idea

"It is significant because this was his (Moynihan's) idea when he was a White House Advisor," Brademas said.

According to Brademas, the Institute could close the gap between money allocated to defense research and educational research. The newly-designated regent of St. Mary's college, quoted statistics which showed that ten percent of the Defense Department's budget is spent on health research.

Brademas also revealed that NIE will negotiate contracts and grants which universities and colleges do to research for the Institute.

Child Care Endorsed

Endorsed by the Democratic and GOP National Conventions earlier this year, the Child Care Law, another recently-presented education-oriented law which Brademas singled out, will be open to children on all socioeconomic levels. In Brademas's estimation, the proposed Child Care Centers will be "family-centered, locally-controlled" units. These centers are important, stressed Brademas, since there are 6 million pre-schoolers whose mothers work.

The Higher Education Bill, which Brademas claimed would benefit St. Mary's and neighboring Notre Dame, substantially will give aid to college students and colleges and universities on the financial level.

Students First

"The Federal Government is definitely committed to a policy of students for higher education funding," contended the Harvard graduate and Rhodes scholar. Specifics for legislation: the Basic Educational Opportunity Grants Program and the National Student Loan Corp., are still in the debate stage. In his remarks, Brademas noted that private colleges and universities educate 26.4 per cent of the national college student population.

After the speech, Brademas was questioned by a student on whether there are any provisions for graduate students in the Higher Education Bill. Brademas replied that there has been no change in present graduate student allocations.

Asked about what the government is doing to insure that college graduates will have suitable employment after graduation, Brademas responded that the matter was still under consideration in the congress.

Straddled Parochial

He straddled the parochial issue by remarking that "the parochial issue isn't being treated as an education matter, but rather as a tax issue."

Brademas isolated the single drawback to all parochial proposals as the Constitution. "We've got to figure out assistance that's constitutional," he said. In Indiana, this year, parochial schools are receiving textbooks and

(continued on page 7)

Woodcock opposes new welfare system

by Art Ferranti

United Auto Workers International Union President Leonard Woodcock voiced his disapproval over the new welfare proposal of the Nixon administration in a brief press conference last Saturday.

Terming the proposal to eliminate welfare in exchange for a job at $2.00 per hour as "regressive," Woodcock said that "grave social problems" were involved since this would force women with small dependent children to work. The implications of this action, said Woodcock, would be carried onto the next generation.

Adding that there is enough work in the country to get those on welfare who can work employed, Woodcock said that if the "private sector can't do it, then the government as the employer of last resort should."

Woodcock was touring Indiana speaking with U.A.W. members concerning the reasons behind his endorsement of the McGovern-Shriver ticket. Said Woodcock: "We've turned the corner. I think it's coming along. We still have problems. The facts are beginning to register with the working people. We're moving."

Rising non-support concerning McGovern on the fact that the presidential candidate "is an unknown quantity" to the working people. Woodcock said McGovern has clarified his policies, particularly those concerning taxation, full-employment, and income support for welfare recipients due to the allegations of his shifting positions and fence straddling, and due to the misinformation about him.

Woodcock held the conference at the Albert Pick Motor Inn in South Bend between speaking engagements at two U.A.W. halls in the South Bend - Elkhart area.

Register that bike!...details on page 6
Walsh elects executive board

by Bill McGinn
Observer Staff Reporter

Since elections for section leaders and intrahall, university-wise is the custom, the executive board decided that their democratic principles be followed. Since elections for section leaders are today, votes for the first Wednesday. All members are today, votes for the first Chairman will not be cast until Wednesday. All members of the Hall Council. Such topics as regulation of parietal hours, the establishment of an foundation for the realization of potential. Board members stated that communication is the number one priority of the Walsh Board. Sue Anderson declared that the board's first priority is the establishment of communication within Walsh Hall. She stated that this could be done by section meetings and inter-section parties.

Walsh Hall President and Vice President, Terry Skeehan, Kathy Cahill, Sue Anderson, Peggy Pollara. Walsh votes also selected Lynn Larkin and Chris Burger for the customary positions of Secretary and Treasurer.

Declaring a commitment to democratic principles, the executive board decided that their Chairwoman should be chosen by the members of the Hall Council. Since elections for section leaders are today, votes for the first Chairman will not be cast until Wednesday. All members of the new executive board will attend the HPC meetings, with the voting power being limited to the Chairwoman.

At present the newly elected executive board has no definite programs or explicit plans to implement. Instead, the board, according to Sue Anderson, will present their many ideas to the residents of Walsh Hall for their final deliberation by referendum. The board elected consisted of Sue Anderson, Peggy Pollara, Kathy Cahill, and Terry Skeehan. The women of Walsh Hall opted to implement. Instead, the board, according to Sue Anderson, will present their many ideas to the residents of Walsh Hall for their final deliberation by referendum. The board elected consisted of Sue Anderson, Peggy Pollara, Kathy Cahill, and Terry Skeehan. The women of Walsh Hall opted to implement. Instead, the board, according to Sue Anderson, will present their many ideas to the residents of Walsh Hall for their final deliberation by referendum.

She then hopes that communication between Walsh and Radcl could be improved. She suggested that each hall exchange representatives at their Hall Council meetings in an effort to achieve this goal. Executive board members also advocated an expanding role for Notre Dame women. They thought this could be best achieved by encouraging their fellow female students to join existing campus organizations. They indicated that their priorities lie first with Walsh Hall, and then with the other organizations. The board members thought that their potential could be best achieved by starting with hall government and then expanding outward to campus and community activities.
Saigon—President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam has come out of the 1972 Communist offensive more powerfully in control of the Saigon Government than ever before. Most American Vietnamese observers of the Thieu government believe that he has left no room for an effective non-communist opposition.

New York—Voter preference for President Nixon grew so much in the last month of summer that he took the lead over George McGovern even among registered Democrats, according to a 16-state electoral vote survey of the New York Times. The survey, conducted throughout the month, found that Nixon moved to a 39-point margin of 62 to 23 per cent. A parallel survey a month earlier found a 28-point Nixon margin of 58 to 30 per cent.

New York-College graduates are likely to find the job market tighter than in recent decades, according to a federal labor of- ficial. The job-hunting college graduate whose studies have been most relevant to the requirements of the labor market, he believes, should have “less difficulty in job adjustment” in the years immediately after graduation than the graduate whose academic work has been less relevant.

Poll shows Nixon's popularity increasing among Catholics, 36 points among independents, 43 points among middle-income voters, 67 points among Italian-Americans, 51 points among Protestants and 54 points in the South.

Shriver campaign changes

by Jack Rosenthal

(c) 1972 New York Times

New York, Sept. 24—Voter preference for President Nixon grew so much in the last month of summer that he took the lead over Sen. George S. McGovern even among registered Democrats, according to a 16-state electoral vote survey of the New York Times. The survey, conducted throughout the month, found that Nixon moved to a 39-point margin of 62 to 23 per cent. A parallel survey a month earlier found a 28-point Nixon margin of 58 to 30 per cent.

The surveys are among a series conducted by Daniel Yankelovich, Inc., a major survey research company, for the New York Times. They differ from other political polls because they are subdivided by state, permitting appraisal of the potential electoral vote as well as the popular vote.

In some states Nixon widened his popularity even more dramatically than in the entire sample. In Texas, the spread was 31 points—71 percent for Nixon, 18 percent for McGovern, and 11 percent undecided.

Even in New York, which traditionally votes Democratic in presidential elections, the new survey found a Nixon lead of 36 points. This 31-point margin compared with a 17-point Nixon lead in the first survey. In New Jersey, the Nixon spread increased from 30 points to 34, and in Connecticut from 20 points to 29.

There was an indication in the survey that McGovern may have narrowed the Nixon margin during early September. But McGovern's shift was so small that it could be explained by sampling error.

The over-all verdict of the new survey was that, if the election had just been held, Nixon would have won by a landslide among virtually all ages, social classes, income levels, nationalities and regions. The President led by 34 points among Catholics, 36 points among independents, 43 points among middle-income voters, 67 points among Italian-Americans, 51 points among Protestants and 54 points in the South.

Shriver’s traveling staff was surprised by the new fervor and suddenly became a totally new cheering Democrats gathered at the studentcenter of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas late Saturday afternoon.

Pounding the lectern for emphasis, Shriver attacked the man he hoped to replace, Vice President Agnew.

“I resent the whole idea a man can live all his life, he’s 57 now, be Governor of a state, and then go to Washington as Vice President and suddenly become a totally new

(continued on page 7)

New York—Staff preference for President Nixon grew so much in the last month of summer that he took the lead over Sen. George McGovern even among registered Democrats, according to a 16-state electoral vote survey of the New York Times. The survey, conducted throughout the month, found that Nixon moved to a 39-point margin of 62 to 23 per cent. A parallel survey a month earlier found a 28-point Nixon margin of 58 to 30 per cent.

Shriver’s traveling staff was surprised by the new fervor and suddenly became a totally new cheering Democrats gathered at the studentcenter of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas late Saturday afternoon.

Pounding the lectern for emphasis, Shriver attacked the man he hoped to replace, Vice President Agnew.

“I resent the whole idea a man can live all his life, he’s 57 now, be Governor of a state, and then go to Washington as Vice President and suddenly become a totally new

(continued on page 7)

New York—Staff preference for President Nixon grew so much in the last month of summer that he took the lead over Sen. George McGovern even among registered Democrats, according to a 16-state electoral vote survey of the New York Times. The survey, conducted throughout the month, found that Nixon moved to a 39-point margin of 62 to 23 per cent. A parallel survey a month earlier found a 28-point Nixon margin of 58 to 30 per cent.

Shriver’s traveling staff was surprised by the new fervor and suddenly became a totally new cheering Democrats gathered at the studentcenter of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas late Saturday afternoon.

Pounding the lectern for emphasis, Shriver attacked the man he hoped to replace, Vice President Agnew.

“I resent the whole idea a man can live all his life, he’s 57 now, be Governor of a state, and then go to Washington as Vice President and suddenly become a totally new

(continued on page 7)
The Observer
AN INDEPENDENT STUDENT NEWSPAPER

John Abell
Editor in chief
Don Ruane
Executive Editor

Dan Thornton
Business Manager
Joe Butler
Advertising Manager

Editorials printed in The Observer reflect the opinion of the writer, on behalf of the editorial board. Columns reflect the opinion of the individual writer; they are not to be taken as editorial comment.

THE OBSERVER

Monday, September 25, 1972

Register----Your Bikes

The scene: a rare, beautiful afternoon on the campus of Notre Dame. Students are languidly strolling along the byways, the buses are generously polluting the air, the clock on Sacred Heart tolls the half-hour. Classes are assembled on various patches of grass and line upon line of bicycles are at attention along the wire fences.

Enter the villain: a calm, confident youth with a small pair of wire cutters palmed in his right hand. He bends over an obviously expensive bike and fiddles with the lock as he expertly snips the chain. Wrapping the remains of the chair naturally around his neck, he mounts and cheerfully rides off, satisfied that his bank account will rise about $75.00 today.

A common scene, with the campus having developed a great interest in bike riding in the last few years, one that is becoming more common than a lot of people want it too, like the victims of bike theft.

Fact: There are more bikes on campus this year than ever before.

Fact: Most of the bikes now on campus are the more expensive kind, reflecting the status of most Notre Dame students and the needs of the serious cyclist.

Fact: There have been over 20 bikes stolen from the campus already this fall.

That the third fact can almost be taken as a conclusion of the first two is alarming. Obviously, some measures have to be taken to protect what have become major investments of students.

Arthur Pears had the right idea when he described added security measures to be taken last week in an Observer news story: plans for new racks and better lighting around all the racks. But the responsibility doesn't lie solely on the shoulders of the Security Department; the owners themselves must take an active part in protecting their property.

They'll get a chance to do just that this week. On the first floor of LaFortune from 3:30 to 7:00 every day this week, bike owners can register their bikes both with local campus security and South Bend authorities, and with a national company who make it their business to cut down on bike thefts. The service will cost $.75 for local registration and $1.75 for national.

Taking over a job that security started, the Farley Cyclers and the Security Department, it's really pretty cheap. Register your bike.

Joseph Abell

---

The art of the panty raid is dying fast on college campuses across the nation and if it is not revived here this year, pride for the not-so-lucky.

The push (of strength comparable to a fall from the second floor fire escape at Holy Cross) was enough to exclude the newcomer from any further participation this year.

The year's new opponents (Klein and Walsh) were little more than pushovers for the raiders. Strengthened by the ease of entry into these halls they carried their momentum to a new and different front, Morrissey Hall. Apparently mistaking this residence for Lewis, they stormed up and down the corridors leaving nothing in its wake but a torn and battered carpet. The raid came to a close.

Several rookies were outstanding in their first intercollegiate action, drawing praise from all corners, even the seasoned veterans. However, the raid was not without mishap, as one strong freshman prospect was 'pushed down' and had to be placed on the disabled list.

The push (of strength comparable to a fall from the second floor fire escape at Holy Cross) was enough to exclude the newcomer from any further participation this year.

The year's new opponents (Klein and Walsh) were little more than pushovers for the raiders. Strengthened by the ease of entry into these halls they carried their momentum to a new and different front, Morrissey Hall. Apparently mistaking this residence for Lewis, they stormed up and down the corridors leaving nothing in its wake but a torn and battered carpet. The raid came to a close.

Withdrawal was orderly and without incident, permitting those fortunate enough to obtain booty, the opportunity to display it with pride for the not-so-lucky.

It would seem from the general tone of the raid that the response of the new Notre Dame women was less than adequate. Perhaps the future will bring about the needed adaptations.

A veteran of many such a raid at St. Mary's, who wishes to remain anonymous, volunteered some useful advice to the inexperienced Notre Dame co-eds. She suggests you remain as calm as possible while acting very frightened and shocked. If time permits, setting the hair will give all appearances of being totally unprepared. 'Offer resistance,' she explained, 'but not too much or they're liable to pass over your underwear. Imagine the embarrassment of being the only girl on the floor who didn't get something ripped off.'

Although it is early in the season, the next raid could give strong indications of what is to come. With the proper amount of cooperation from the ladies, I am fully confident that our boys will do a fine job.

The art of the panty raid is dying fast on college campuses across the nation and if it is not revived here this year, it is in danger of being totally swept away in the future by such pastimes as co-ed housing and adulthood.

Nite Editor: Marlene Zizzo (with a lot of help from friends)
Asst. Nite Editor: Chris Sullivan
Day Editor: Tom Bornsbadt
Controller: Dave Rust

Dave Rust

Happy Birthday ed
For the past ten years, the Beach Boys have been the most influential American music group. They began to release records before the Beatles had released a single. The English beat group wave, made the transition underground, and with the release of "Surf's Up" they remain one of the most influential groups in the world. However, with the next release of "Smile," serious questions can be raised about how much longer they can survive. It is evident that the Beach Boys will go as far as their leader-Brian Wilson-will take them. The amount of work he put into "Pet Sounds" contrasts greatly to the amount of work he did to put "Smiley Smile" and "Smiley Smile" (which in turn was pointed out by comparing these two albums in this newly released two record set.

Chronologically speaking, "Pet Sounds" was released about seven years ago and its sister album, "Smiley Smile," was not until the same fate of Roger McGuinn of the Byrds-at least not until the recent re-release is due to Warner-Reprise, who is repackaging most of the Beach Boys old albums. This album was supposed to be the anti-climactic step to the Beach Boys' greatness-the preview of the much raved about but never released "Smiley album." Instead, an aborted version of "Smiley Smile" was released and was a major disappoint-ment to many. It was not until the release of "Surf's Up" that the Beach Boys started to ascend in popularity once again. However, all of the broken promises exhibitied on "Smiley Smile," takes nothing away from "Pet Sounds." This album is the ultimate in Beach Boys music in es-sence being one of the better albums released in the past decade. It is a very quiet, moody and intimate album and it serves as a showcase for Brian Wilson's ability as a composer, writer, and arranger.

"God (Only Knows)": begins with a majestic French horn introduction that is followed up by light organ, strings, and solid percussion. Carl Wilson's lead vocal is excellent and the harmony at the end is perfectly interwoven around his voice. Carl also shines on the somber, reflective love track, "Here Comes the Night," which typifies the great vocalizing of Carl Wilson. Carl's voice, which was released about seven years ago and its sister album, "Smiley Smile," was not until the same fate of Roger McGuinn of the Byrds-at least not until the recent re-release is due to Warner-Reprise, who is repackaging most of the Beach Boys old albums. This album was supposed to be the anti-climactic step to the Beach Boys' greatness-the preview of the much raved about but never released "Smiley album." Instead, an aborted version of "Smiley Smile," was released and was a major disappoint-ment to many. It was not until the release of "Surf's Up" that the Beach Boys started to ascend in popularity once again. However, all of the broken promises exhibitied on "Smiley Smile," takes nothing away from "Pet Sounds." This album is the ultimate in Beach Boys music in essence being one of the better albums released in the past decade. It is a very quiet, moody and intimate album and it serves as a showcase for Brian Wilson's ability as a composer, writer, and arranger.

"God (Only Knows)": begins with a majestic French horn introduction that is followed up by light organ, strings, and solid percussion. Carl Wilson's lead vocal is excellent and the harmony at the end is perfectly interwoven around his voice. Carl also shines on the somber, reflective love track, "Here Comes the Night," which typifies the great vocalizing of Carl Wilson. Carl's voice, which was released about seven years ago and its sister album, "Smiley Smile," was not until the same fate of Roger McGuinn of the Byrds-at least not until the recent re-release is due to Warner-Reprise, who is repackaging most of the Beach Boys old albums. This album was supposed to be the anti-climactic step to the Beach Boys' greatness-the preview of the much raved about but never released "Smiley album." Instead, an aborted version of "Smiley Smile," was released and was a major disappoint-ment to many. It was not until the release of "Surf's Up" that the Beach Boys started to ascend in popularity once again. However, all of the broken promises exhibitied on "Smiley Smile," takes nothing away from "Pet Sounds." This album is the ultimate in Beach Boys music in essence being one of the better albums released in the past decade. It is a very quiet, moody and intimate album and it serves as a showcase for Brian Wilson. The two instrumentals on the album, "Let's Go Away For Adventure" and the title cut, "Pet Sounds," emphasize Brian's flair for instrumentation and orchestration. "Let's Go Away for Adventure" is a meditative piece featuring string, saxes, a French horn and vibes as well as the traditional rhythm section. "Pet Sounds" is a guitar song with a coke bottle sax and steel guitar effects by Carl which is backed by a strong horn section and a jungle-favored per- cussion, if you will. The album also contains the classic "Wouldn't It Be Nice," featuring a strong vocal by Brian Wilson, and the ever-popular "Good John B," which typifies the great vocalizing of Carl Wilson. Carl's voice, which was released about seven years ago and its sister album, "Smiley Smile," was not until the same fate of Roger McGuinn of the Byrds-at least not until the recent re-release is due to Warner-Reprise, who is repackaging most of the Beach Boys old albums. This album was supposed to be the anti-climactic step to the Beach Boys' greatness-the preview of the much raved about but never released "Smiley album." Instead, an aborted version of "Smiley Smile," was released and was a major disappoint-ment to many. It was not until the release of "Surf's Up" that the Beach Boys started to ascend in popularity once again. However, all of the broken promises exhibitied on "Smiley Smile," takes nothing away from "Pet Sounds." This album is the ultimate in Beach Boys music in essence being one of the better albums released in the past decade. It is a very quiet, moody and intimate album and it serves as a showcase for Brian Wilson's ability as a composer, writer, and arranger.

"Good John B," which was written by Brian and noodle Jack Ray and is a sold Beach Boy single containing the familiar harmony and musicanship which typifies the Beach Boys. The other odd was written by Rickie Fataar and Blondie Chaplin, the new South African additions to the group. It's called, "Here Comes the Night," and it's definitely not Typical Beach Boy material. It contains good vocalizing and an alternating change in rhythm similar to Neil Young's "Southern Man," and a competent vocal by Fataar. It's just a good, danceable, listenable song. The rest of the album runs from fair to pathetic. Depuis Wilson, who had played drums in two years, shows he had a long way to go as a singer and composer on "Make It Good" and "Cuddle Up." Fataar and Chaplin bomb with "Hold On Dear Brother" and Carl is horrid on "All This Is That." The remaining two songs are sort of an attempt at soul and gospel which comes off like a poor imitation of the Rascals at best. Aside from most of the material on "So Tough" being just plain garbage, there are other fairly evident reasons for the downfall of this album.

First of all, it was a general group break­down. All of the efficient work on "Surf's Up," especially by Carl, Mike, and AL, seems to have gone to their heads because the music on "So Tough" is definitely second rate. The Beach Boys must realize that even their die-hard fans, like myself, will not purchase or listen to something that doesn't even approach their former stan-dards.

Secondly, the Beach Boys must be The Beach Boys. They are not a soul group, or a gospel group, or a hard rock group-they are The Beach Boys! The harmonies, melodies, material, and musicanship which made them famous are surely missed on "So Tough." Finally, Brian Wilson must re-emerge as the chief composer and arranger and should sing much more often than he has been lately. This last album proves that he must consider himself a member of the group rather than Godfather. If he lets his "obsession" take over, and if he lets the same fate of Roger McGuinn of the Byrds—what he is trying to descend into—then he is the only hope for the group and their next album should prove that one way or another. In the meantime, all one can do is enjoy "Pet Sounds" and the rest of their treasure and hope for better things to come.

The last part of the article focuses on the Beach Boys' history and influence. It discusses their role in the development of rock music, particularly in terms of their harmony, instrumentation, and songwriting. The text highlights the Beach Boys' influence on other artists and groups, as well as their impact on popular culture. The article also touches on the challenges the Beach Boys faced as a group, including changes in lineup and internal conflicts. Throughout, the text provides a comprehensive overview of the Beach Boys' legacy and their lasting impact on the music industry.
Food committee tastes problems

by David Rust

At its first meeting last Thursday, the Student Government Food Committee tasted new foods prepared by one of Notre Dame’s principal distributors. Student Government and Development Commissioner Jim Clarke organized the Committee, and dietitian Phyllis Boote is chairman.

Other members are: Steve Jesufink, HPC member; Judy Oller, SMC Trippe representative; living in Walsh Hall; Kathy Kelly, a transfer student from Villanova; Tom Burgardt, Grace Hall senior; Joe Cari, dining hall worker; and Mike Lilienthal, who complained to President King Kinston about the food and wound up with Committee membership.

The term of the Committee is last term’s year—and student survey, which indicated a desire for some kind of channel through which student input could be transmitted to the food service committee—naturally those of Food Director Edmund Price and the dining hall manager.

“Mr. Price and his food services people have expressed willingness in the past to have some contact with the students concerning the food,” explains Commissioner Clarke, “but there never was an outlet before.”

What kind of problems are going to have to be met? Some are small but significant irritants: lack of courtesy behind the lines, seemingly foot-dragging in refilling meat trays in line, salad serving bowls and condiments containers in the dining hall proper remaining empty too long after the first emptying of their contents.

Many of the complaints about the food services arise from the long lines—bad balance, wait, the whole concept of lines itself.

Price has hinted at having a plan to eliminate the cafeteria line system as it is presently run, but wants the student input to hammer out a new workable replacement.

“Naturally other problems are going to come up in the course of the year,” says Committee member Burgardt, and he hopes the Committee, meeting biweekly, will be able to receive reports on the difficulties and discuss them with the food services people.

The Observer committee looks forward to being able to help plan menus sometime in the future. Clarke emphasizes that both Price and the Committee are very willing to hear suggestions and comments from student diners.

I’m optimistic about the Committee personnel and their enthusiasm,” says Clarke, “but it’s bital that we hear from the students regularly.”

The best way for students to be heard is to call the Student Government offices at 766, or to drop comments into one of the suggestion boxes located inside the dining halls.

Bike registration today

by Joseph Abel

Managing Editor

Campus wide bicycle registration will begin today on the first floor of LaFortune, announced Chris Singleton, Honorary Chairman of the Farley Cyclers, the group sponsoring the project.

Between the hours of 9:30 and 7:30 Monday through Friday this week, members of the Farley Cyclers will offer two forms of bike registration, a campus registration and a national registration.

The campus registration, sponsored jointly by the Cyclers and the security department, will consist of serial number registration. The bike owner receives a football-shaped decal to place on the bike indicating that the bike is registered. The registration and decal fee is $1.75.

The service is open to both Notre Dame and St. Mary’s students. Singleton mentioned that if anyone wanted to register a bike, they could not do so during the hours set up in LaFortune, they could register at the LaFortune desk at any time.

This program has nothing to do with hall projects of using electro pencils to mark the owner’s name or social security number on any possessions, not just bicycles.

“Security is losing pencils to the individual halls for that purpose,” he said, adding that that

Singleton: “Important to get as many bikes as possible registered.”

The Farley Cyclers are a pencils to mark the owner’s name or social security number on any possessions, not just bicycles.

Singleton: “Important to get as many bikes as possible registered.”

The project will begin later in the semester.

“The Farley Cyclers were asked to take over the project from Security because it’s a new club, oriented toward bikes, that wants to help out the students,” Singleton commented. “We intend to go further for cyclists by sponsoring safety seminars and tips on how to protect your bike from the South Bend police later on.”

The Farley Cyclers are an organization for bicyclists from both campuses who are interested in meeting other cyclists and participating in cycling events. It is an outgrowth of the Farley Striders club begun two years ago.

The grand opening of President Nixon’s re-election headquarters in St. Joseph County will be held Monday, September 25 at 7:00 pm.

President Nixon, who will also house campaign activities in the material, will be attended by Otto Bowen and congressional candidate Don Newman, is located in the Wyman’s building on Michigan Street.

The Grand opening will include remarks by Lloyd Allen, former South Bend mayor and a member of President Nixon’s White House staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities, and Don Newman, the Republican congressional candidate for Indiana’s third district.

The ceremonies, which are open to the public, will be commenced by an official ribbon cutting.

Current plans call for the headquarters to be open from 9:00am to 9:00pm six days a week.

South Bend mayor and chairman of the St. Joseph County for the Re-election of the President. Also speaking will be Andy Nickle, a member of President Nixon’s national committee and a former member of President Kennedy’s staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities.

“I’m optimistic about the Committee personnel and their enthusiasm,” says Clarke, “but it’s bital that we hear from the students regularly.”

The best way for students to be heard is to call the Student Government offices at 766, or to drop comments into one of the suggestion boxes located inside the dining halls.

Nixon headquarters to open in St. Joe County

The grand opening of President Nixon’s re-election headquarters in St. Joseph County will be held Monday, September 25 at 7:00 pm.

President Nixon, who will also house campaign activities in the material, will be attended by Otto Bowen and congressional candidate Don Newman, is located in the Wyman’s building on Michigan Street.

The Grand opening will include remarks by Lloyd Allen, former South Bend mayor and a member of President Nixon’s White House staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities, and Don Newman, the Republican congressional candidate for Indiana’s third district.

The ceremonies, which are open to the public, will be commenced by an official ribbon cutting.

Current plans call for the headquarters to be open from 9:00am to 9:00pm six days a week.

South Bend mayor and chairman of the St. Joseph County for the Re-election of the President. Also speaking will be Andy Nickle, a member of President Nixon’s national committee and a former member of President Kennedy’s staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities, and Don Newman, the Republican congressional candidate for Indiana’s third district.

The ceremonies, which are open to the public, will be commenced by an official ribbon cutting.

Current plans call for the headquarters to be open from 9:00am to 9:00pm six days a week.

The grand opening will include remarks by Lloyd Allen, former South Bend mayor and chairman of the St. Joseph County for the Re-election of the President. Also speaking will be Andy Nickle, a member of President Nixon’s national committee and a former member of President Kennedy’s staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities, and Don Newman, the Republican congressional candidate for Indiana’s third district.

The ceremonies, which are open to the public, will be commenced by an official ribbon cutting.

Current plans call for the headquarters to be open from 9:00am to 9:00pm six days a week.

The grand opening will include remarks by Lloyd Allen, former South Bend mayor and chairman of the St. Joseph County for the Re-election of the President. Also speaking will be Andy Nickle, a member of President Nixon’s national committee and a former member of President Kennedy’s staff, who is currently directing local young voters for President Nixon activities, and Don Newman, the Republican congressional candidate for Indiana’s third district.

The ceremonies, which are open to the public, will be commenced by an official ribbon cutting.

Current plans call for the headquarters to be open from 9:00pm to 9:00pm six days a week.
ND graduate fasts to protest bombing

by J. Peter Berry

North Vietnam’s coast as a drilling permitted area for the nation’s food supply. In addition they would be in a position to demand a military solution that has turned the negotiations muddled.

Said one of the “two bowls of Asia” into an area forced to import rice from abroad. The group strongly opposes the re-election of President Nixon, “as a symbol of death and famine to the children of Southeast Asia.”

The seven have instigated five similar fasts across the nation. On the subject of whether the group encourages fasting, Paul Myer, 21, said, “I have no real answer to that. It would say no, we’re not en-couraging fasting. We simply want people to become aware of the situation.”

They cite the US blockade of education and urban policies at the University of Notre Dame, Harvard University, and as assistant for urban affairs to President Nixon.

Brademas suggests appointee

(continued from page 1)

and library books on loan from public libraries. So far, Brademas suggests, this exchange hasn’t been challenged.

Indiana - Not Many Pickings

When asked whether Sen. George McGovern, Democratic presidential nominee, would appoint him to any visits on the Indiana a third Congressional District this fall, Brademas replied that he would not consent.

Union considers Ticketron outlet

by Greg Aiello

Tickets to a wide range of cultural activities in Chicago could become available to Notre Dame students if Student Union is successful in acquiring a Ticketron outlet this year.

Past efforts to secure this service have proved fruitless because the Ticketron company has not felt the Student Union could justify an outlet.

When asked whether Sen. George McGovern, Democratic presidential nominee, would appoint him to any visits on the Indiana a third Congressional District this fall, Brademas replied that he would not consent.

Union considers Ticketron outlet

by Greg Aiello

Tickets to a wide range of cultural activities in Chicago could become available to Notre Dame students if Student Union is successful in acquiring a Ticketron outlet this year.

Past efforts to secure this service have proved fruitless because the Ticketron company has not felt the Student Union could justify an outlet.

When asked whether Sen. George McGovern, Democratic presidential nominee, would appoint him to any visits on the Indiana a third Congressional District this fall, Brademas replied that he would not consent.
The Irish Eye

What an opening! What a show!

Notre Dame's annual football production opened on the road Saturday in Evanston, Ill., and the performance of the Fighting Irish brought waves of applause from an appreciative audience and wide critical acclaim.

Produced by Ara Parseghian and directed by Tom Clements, Notre Dame's show was most impressive and, after smashing the Wildcats 37-0, the Irish were the toast of Chicago.

The script had called for a close contest but Notre Dame's first-year players acted like veteran troupers and did some ad-libbing. The result was that the Wildcats looked like bit players in summer stock.

It would be difficult to single out one Notre Dame player as the star of the show. The performances of the entire company brought individuals into the spotlight during various parts of the game.

The offensive line of Dave Drew, Frank Pomarico, Gerry DiNardo, John Dampeer, Dave Casper and Mike Creaney did its job with Rockette-precision and set the scene for the crowd-pleasing antics of Darryl Dewan, who ran for 100 yards, Eric Penicik, John Cieszkowski and Andy Huff.

Notre Dame's youthful defensive contingent, which Parseghian had felt might be adversely affected by stage fright, proved such fears groundless with a flawless effort-zero points.

The Irish offense, which had drawn rave notices while rehearsing for the Dyche Stadium opener, displayed its numerous talents. Combining a well-executed cry of counters, sweeps, plunges, reverses and an occasional passing play, the Irish danced to scores the first five times they appeared on stage.

Many of the 55,150 people present expected to see a suspenseful drama since Northwestern had been only narrowly upstaged by Michigan the previous weekend in Ann Arbor and the Irish were relying so heavily on youth.

Instead, Notre Dame's technically proficient troupe turned the event into a well-played comedy, with the largely pro-Irish audience laughing frequently at its skits befuddling the Wildcats.

Notre Dame's headliners racked up 30 half points and a touchdown on their first possession after intermission before yielding to their understudies. Theirs was a difficult act to follow--touchdown drives of 55 and 82 yards the first unit put together were pure artistry--and the show dragged somewhat when the reserves did their bit.

Ara Parseghian, a genius in the field of football productions who is beginning his ninth year at Notre Dame, said afterwards, "I was a little apprehensive prior to the game, but several key breaks and good field position enabled us to jump out front quickly.

"Tom (Clements) did a nice job of handling the ball club," he continued.

"He had one unluckily pass interception and one poor judgement decision trying to throw the ball into a crowd in the end zone... But otherwise, he had a great game."

Commenting on his Notre Dame debut, Clements remarked, "I was satisfied for my first game, but my play wasn't as good as it could have been. But the team played well--the line really did a job blocking and the backs executed.

Clements, and Notre Dame, did not put on a perfect performance Saturday. But it was a damn good show, one definitely worth seeing next weekend in South Bend. Consider it highly recommended.