Off-Campus Commissioner Bob Sauer said today that his office along with the Student Housing office makes available a list of off-campus housing for Notre Dame students.

Sauer said that extensive off-campus housing is available and gave his suggestions as to what students should look for.

varied selection

According to Sauer, "There is a wide selection of houses and single rooms throughout the campus housing for Notre Dame students. Bend area." is available and gave his suggestions as to what

R1udents

Housing office makes available a list of off Notre Dame Avenue and the area just off Eddy Street heading south. Sauer continued by saying that houses available farther from campus, such as on Western Avenue, are lower in price but include the problem of transportation.

Sauer reported that "a good house runs between fifty and sixty dollars per month per student and includes utilities, and that single rooms run between twenty-five and forty dollars a month. Sauer could give no price range on apartments but hold close to thirty dollars a month. living available to the off-campus students are the more expensive Notre Dame Apartments.

off-campus lists

Sauer said that both his office and LaFortune and Fr. Reihle's Office of Student Housing in the Administration building have a list of landlords

---

The ex-Notre Dame bowling alleys

BY Tom Mirabito
Staff Reporter

Research often leads to discoveries of great importance accidentally through a process known as serendipity. This phenomenon, not to be confused with a Walt Disney movie, is what led to the discovery of the construction and destruction of the Great, Ten, Harrower, Automatic Pin Setting, Notre Dame Bowling Alleys.

Once located in the basement of the Hammes bookstore, the bowling alleys were installed in the original "new student shopping center," in 1953. The $55,000 dollar bookstore, one of the largest and most modern collegiate installations at the time, was dedicated in that year along with the Gilbert's campus shop.

During their eleven-year existence, the bowling alleys suffered continuously from lack of revenue. "As close as I can remember," said Brother Conan Moran, director of the bookstore, "the only thing that kept going was the faculty and the clubs, especially the priests."

In June of 1966 the decision was made to cancel the rental of the automatic pinsetters and sell the alleys. According to Fr. Wilson, President for business affairs they simply were unable to pay for themselves.

"The total income of the alleys during 1966 was only $12,000, with our expenses totaling $20,000," recalled Fr. Wilson. "The bowling alleys were subsequently cut in half and sold to a businessman in Michigan. All we wanted was whatever we could get out of them," said Wilson.

problems

Fr. Wilson and Br. Conan both recall that the main problem was that the student leagues were inconsistent. According to Wilson, leagues are a financial necessity in successful bowling alleys. "The students, would not pay if they didn't show at a league game" said Wilson, "you have to agree to pay each week, that's the original idea."

Wilson stated that bowling alleys are unable to exist with people dropping in whenever they like. "The Notre Dame student with the choice of this or that on his bowling night would do this or that and not show," he said.

A secondary problem was the bookstore's need for more storage space. This, said Wilson, was not the main concern. The bowling alleys just weren't paying for themselves.

patrons

The best supporters of the bowling alleys were the priests. "The Priests", in fact was one of the leading teams on campus. Br. Conan recalls that he would often see priests and brothers patronizing the bowling alleys. Accordingly, he noted a few excellent bowlers among the priests.

odds and ends

Wilson also remembers the short-lived Notre Dame Bowling Team. "As a matter of fact, it was one of the better teams in the area," he said. But the interhall leagues were the key in the enthusiasm and interest and response was "few and far between."

"We just lost too much money on them," said Wilson.

---

The ex-Notre Dame bowling alleys

The ten, hardwood floors were hand laid at the cost of fifty thousand dollars. At first the pin-setters were semi-automatic calling for student assistance. They were soon replaced with leased, Brunswick automatic pin-setters.

The going rate for a game was 25 cents with shoe and ball rental available. In their second last year of existence, the alleys claimed $23,000 in such fees. The priests, who were not afforded a discount, were responsible for $10,000 of that.

When told of a possible revival or interest in bowling alleys on campus, both Conan Wilson were skeptical. Wilson remarked, "It was unsuccessful back then and bowling was red hot in those days."
world

briefs

Washington--The United States and North Vietnam announced an agreement to establish a joint economic commission to channel American aid to Vietnam. But whether there will be any aid to channel remained in doubt. Several congressmen have expressed strong objections to such a program.

The Paul Winter Consort Saturday Feb. 24 at 8:00 O'Laughlin Auditorium

TICKETS: $2.50 advance $3.00 door
Tickets available NOW at the Student Union Ticket Office and Thursday night in the Dining Halls

The Northern Indiana Drug Abuse Services (NIDAS) project is interested in two kinds of Notre Dame students: Those with drug abuse problems and "straight" who want to work in its emergency outreach teams. NIDAS (pronounced NEED US) has been providing St. Joseph County with interim services since it officially opened its doors October 1, at 257 West Colfax. The project, which is operated under the auspices of the Mental Health Center, will realize its purpose as a comprehensive treatment program if revenue sharing funds can be obtained. It is presently considering expanding its facilities to a house at 115 North Main.

The interim services include a drug treatment center open to users of all drugs. "We're trying to treat every highly motivated person who comes to us," said Gene Williams, who co-ordinates the project's drug education program.

With the added revenue, the project will shift from day treatment efforts to an integrated therapeutic staff, which will "treat the drug abuse problem. Complemented by a "hot line," a detoxification center, three walk-in and out-reach services, the project will also work with communities, a mental health outpatient clinic and an adolescent treatment center. In addition, NIDAS will treat addicts.

NIDAS to treat addicts

by Greg Riewinski

St. Joseph County United Services (NIDAS) project is interested in two kinds of Notre Dame students: Those with drug abuse problems and "straight" who want to work in its emergency outreach teams. NIDAS (pronounced NEED US) has been providing St. Joseph County with interim services since it officially opened its doors October 1, at 257 West Colfax. The project, which is operated under the auspices of the Mental Health Center, will realize its purpose as a comprehensive treatment program if revenue sharing funds can be obtained. It is presently considering expanding its facilities to a house at 115 North Main.

The interim services include a drug treatment center open to users of all drugs. "We're trying to treat every highly motivated person who comes to us," said Gene Williams, who co-ordinates the project's drug education program.

With the added revenue, the project will shift from day treatment efforts to an integrated therapeutic staff, which will "treat the drug abuse problem. Complemented by a "hot line," a detoxification center, three walk-in and out-reach services, the project will also work with communities, a mental health outpatient clinic and an adolescent treatment center. In addition, NIDAS will treat addicts.

NIDAS Methods

NIDAS applicants undergo a strenuous interview to determine their degree of motivation. "The prospect must express a commitment to give up his drug habit," said Williams. "The user doesn't use the shape as a problem until he sees it as an illness. Until he is truly motivated, he cannot be reached by pressure from the outside."

The group does not go out and coerce the users into seeking treatment. Instead, it can be provided by pending court orders. If accepted, the prospect then goes through an intensive program of status rebuilding. The project uses counseling in an in-depth manner in which staff members who themselves kicked the habit play the devil's advocate, encounter groups, help the prospects learn to control their emotions, and to learn how to avoid triggering those which prospect cope with stress and express himself; and social environment to help them decide whether or not to seek status determination.

After four to six weeks, the prospect attains member status and helps the group to cope with the program's goal: creating drug use, counselling, continuing education, maintaining an adequate level of self-esteem, and obtaining a socially acceptable lifestyle.

NIDAS has five treatment services. The first is emergency outreach. A 24-hour emergency line is available (234-0091), contacting the victim of a drug abuse crisis with "para-professionals" and DART (Drug Abuse Rescue Team). The para-professionals are addiction specialists. They can determine the extent of danger in the crisis and also the legitimacy of the crisis. These experts can tell the user if the victim is ready to get methadone, according to Williams.

They are also called on by the courts to determine if criminals are addicts. Their evaluation can lead to treatment, rather than imprisonment for violators, under public law 222.

The DART teams are composed of a pair of volunteers who can determine if medical aid is required and can provide counseling for the user and his family. Chuck Romanowski, a Stanford University student, is a DART member. The project is interested in NIDAS students as volunteers.

The second service is detoxification. NIDAS emphasizes detoxification without drugs, relying rather on counseling and NIDAS community influence. Because of the quality of drugs in the area, the physical damage done by the abuse is often less than the victim imagines, according to Williams.

The third service is individual counselling. A personal counsellor provided for each member, and the fourth service is dealing with "bitch sessions."

The fifth service is education and vocational counselling. An "almost full-time" counsellor is assigned to the staff. A number of NIDAS alumni are enrolled in St. Joseph Junior College.

Williams is in charge of the project's Speakers Bureau, which has already arranged talks for 1046 people.

All information the group gains is confidential. The project deals solely with the treatment and of drug abuse, Williams said.

Labor organizer to speak on evils of capitalism

Black labor organizer Thomas Chronhaw will speak on the students' "fight against monopoly capitalism" in the Library Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. today.

Chronhaw is president of the Black Labor Council in St. Louis, a factory workers' organization and a noted peace activist. In 1969 he travelled to Paris to confer with Madame Binh about stopping the war.

Chronhaw has also worked in draft counselling and in the Labor for Peace movement.

The objective is provided for each member, and the fourth service is dealing with "bitch sessions."

The fifth service is education and vocational counselling. An "almost full-time" counsellor is assigned to the staff. A number of NIDAS alumni are enrolled in St. Joseph Junior College.

Williams is in charge of the project's Speakers Bureau, which has already arranged talks for 1046 people.

All information the group gains is confidential. The project deals solely with the treatment and of drug abuse, Williams said.

Labor organizer to speak on evils of capitalism

Black labor organizer Thomas Chronhaw will speak on the students' "fight against monopoly capitalism" in the Library Auditorium at 7:00 p.m. today.

Chronhaw is president of the Black Labor Council in St. Louis, a factory workers' organization and a noted peace activist. In 1969 he travelled to Paris to confer with Madame Binh about stopping the war.

Chronhaw has also worked in draft counselling and in the Labor for Peace movement.

The Observer is published daily during the college semester except Mondays by the Notre Dame and St. Mary's College. Subscriptions may be purchased for the per semester ($1 per year) from The Observer, four Q Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. Second class postage paid, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556.

Feel ‘Jumpin’ Jack Flash’ run through your blood on Superelex Stereophones.

For an incredible physical experience, try this experiment. Place a pair of Superelex Feather-Fones on your head, and turn on the music. You'll feel voices rush through your veins, a bell ringing over your right eyebrow, or a drum roll up and down your spine. Chances are, you'll get up and dance. So the Superelex Feather-Fone has a 15 foot cord. And it's lightweight, at just 8 ounces, that you may forget you're wearing it. However, the performance is heavyweight. Superelex guarantees it for one year.

This experiment will cost you $24.95. At that price, and for that performance, you'll see why the Superelex Feather-Fone is the best sound investment around.

Superelex Stereophones

Feel what you hear

For Free Literature Write Superelex Electronics Corp. Dept. F, 110 Ludlow St., Yonkers, N.Y. 10705.

in Canada, Superelex Electronics Inc., Montreal.

Observer News Staff Meeting

Regular, short business meeting
Tonight 7:00 pm
La Fortune 2-D
Budget cuts threaten Sr. Marita

by Marlene Zloza
Staff Reporter

Due to President’s Nixon’s recent refusal to fund some Congressionally-approved social programs, one of Notre Dame’s favorite charities may soon be in financial straits.

Primary Day School, run by Sr. Marita and Sr. Evodine, was notified Monday by one of their benefactors, the Model Cities program, that they must cut 35 percent off their current budget allotment.

The Dau School, which teaches reading and arithmetic to children in grades one through three, has been receiving funds from Model Cities for several areas of operation. This year’s original budget was $14,000—allocated for faculty salaries, teaching assistants, books and supplies, and travel expenses for the children.

“This was the minimum operating cost,” explained Professor Nicholas Fiore, a member of the school’s board. President Nixon’s budget cuts are the major problem now facing the school.

“The President has refused to spend money for certain social welfare activities that Congress has already allocated,” said Fiore. “And that’s the reason for the current government battle.”

Model Cities is one of the programs directly involved in the cutback.

Ironically, the Director of the school, Sr. Evodine, recently received word from Model Cities that the school had an extra bonus of $2,500. When it was proposed, Sr. Evodine said that the new $2,500 bonus was food and travel expenses for the teachers.

Sr. Marita and I are planning to attend the International Reading Conference in Denver this spring and if we get funds that will be very nice,” said Sr. Evodine. “But if not we will squeeze the money out of our current salaries.”

Sr. Evodine outlined some of the other “options” that the school has been pursuing simultaneously.

“We are working on four possibilities, a co-op program with the education departments at IUSB and at SMC, working through the United Fund, and ‘begging’ as we’ve done in past years,” he said. “You could say we have fire horns in the fire at once.”

On the ND campus, Rick Ullinger has been working with the school and helping raise funds. “We get some money from the library, donations at mass, campus collections and Marita Cross,” Ullinger detailed.

Sr. Evodine also praised the work of ND student volunteers who do work at the school on an individual and steady basis. “Some of them have been with us two or three years and we know how helpful they are to us,” she said.

“I first looked into the possibility of Congress’ approval of our request, but Congress was not interested in spending money on programs that were not related to the educational system,” explained Fiore, “This is called the stretch-out plan.”

“If they can spend at all the original planned level and the funds will last until the fall, which is the burn-out plan,” continued Fiore.

It is not exactly clear yet how drastically the Day School will suffer.

“Sr. Marita’s school may have to operate with one half the funds that supply salaries and supplies, curtail their activities severely or try to get money from other sources,” said Fiore. “The school could also get eighteen months of full-scale operation or get cut off completely.

If there is cutting to be done after the final decision is made, Sr. Evodine will still face more questions and problems.

“If it is unclear whether we were asked to cut salaries or just supply travel funds,” she stated. “There was some idea that if we had already committed money for salaries, they would pay for it.”

“We are having a board meeting Thursday,” continued Sr. Evodine, “and we will probably take some action and write to our congressman.”
Letters...

Escort Service
Editor:

Who is escorting whom when campus security guards volunteer to travel, not with, but among, walkers most in need of company, but with relatively safe groups of three or more?

Sincerely,
John M. Wykle
114 Lewis Hall

Prickly Heat
Editor:

I think we owe these men our support and encouragement. I'm referring, of course, to the prickly heat residents assistants. This would be a social service program whose existence seems to be evidence of the need for such a program. The need is for an activity for the social service-minded or even for those with no social conscience who would benefit from the experience of being in a social service project. With the super party supply we have at the Notre Dame Party Centers, we could provide the necessary financial basis.

Yours,
Stephen Pettit

No Abortion
Editor:

Following the decision of the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of laws permitting abortion, there has been a great outpouring of the opinions of religious faiths concerning millions of people of all political and religious beliefs. The outpouring of the opinions of the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of laws permitting abortion, there has been a great outpouring of the opinions of religious faiths concerning millions of people of all political and religious beliefs. The outpouring of the opinions of religious faiths concerning millions of people of all political and religious beliefs. The outpouring of the opinions of religious faiths concerning millions of people of all political and religious beliefs. The outpouring of the opinions of religious faiths concerning millions of people of all political and religious beliefs.

Capt. Denton

At any stage of pregnancy. The bishops pledged their continued efforts to uphold the right to life of the unborn and to make available viable alternatives to abortion and to maintain an effective respect for the dignity of all human life.

In a comment on the joint statement Bishop Leo A. Pusley of Fort Wayne and Bishop Daniel B. Ward of Cleveland, noted that the bishops "asserted that the right to life without the right to the life of the mother is self-contradictory. "How the same body of work," he declared, "could revoke the death penalty for convicted criminals and, in effect, impose that sentence upon innocent human beings is beyond all understanding."

The clear, well-reasoned statement of the bishops deserves the support of all people who believe in the sanctity of human life and the right of the child in the mother's womb to be born. The affirmation of these great moral principles, which lie at the heart of our Constitution, makes the statement an historic one.

Rect. John A. O'Brien Ph.D.

Prickly Heat
Editor:

It has come to our attention that the SLC at the request of Dr. Philip Faccenda will investigate several proposals introduced at the February 5 SLC session. We of the Notre Dame Prickly Heat Society find this state of affairs somewhat surprising in that time and again our suggestions for long overdue reform have fallen on deaf ears. Perhaps with the printing of this letter, the students and faculty at Notre Dame will become more aware of the problems which beset our small but tightly knit community and raise our concerns in our attempt to make us consider what we should be the first steps toward a workable solution.

1. That all students at Notre Dame be required to take a personal heat experience course to acquaint them with the social stigma of this dreaded condition.

2. To have a full-time prickly heat specialist at the infirmary.

3. The prickly heat student aid program needs to be on a more secure financial basis.

4. That the university provide a fully air-conditioned prickly heat house. This would be a social service project for prickly heat residents assistants.

5. To have an increase in prickly heat resident assistants.

6. That the lack of cultural events for prickly heaters be investigated by the student government vice president. The question must be asked, "Why are we not giving evidence to prickly heaters in the area of cultural activity?"

R. Maggi
364 Cavanaugh

Members of the Notre Dame Prickly Heat Society

(Signatures withheld on request)

In Loco Parentis
Editor:

I was highly disappointed by Mr. Kogovsek's column of February 15th. In fact, the title of the column seems to adequately state the writer's attitude and approach. Father Burtchaell's “In Loco Parentis” article is obviously a product of long, serious thought which seeks to give thoughts and ideas for consideration and response. On the whole, Father Burtchaell's emphasis on the relationship between the university and the character of its students is good though perhaps his own articulation of this needs further thought and clarification. Having myself attempted to further such a conversation, I found Mr. Kogovsek's article repulsive, "vulgar" and not very funny. It is all too easy to take "cheap shots" at men who are in positions where they must make difficult decisions. hive does nothing to further conversation and understanding. Too many articles such as Mr. Kogovsek's would seem to prove the major concern of Father Burtchaell's position, a position which needs clarification, but on the whole appears to be sorely needed.

If Mr. Kogovsek has nothing to add to a serious conversation about "In Loco Parentis" he would do well to have another beer and stay on the beach hiding behind his own Foster Grants. He might even profitably take a dictionary along.

Sincerely,
Melody

Detroit MI

BEER SPECIAL on
MILLERS SCHLITZ HAMMS
POPOV VODKA    $0.06
Bacardi light or dark Rum $0.98
CORBY'S RESERVE fifth $4.49
Boone's Farm Apple & Strawberry $1.03
Chivas Regal fifth $9.75
BARCLAY'S GIN fifth $3.98

SUPER!!

SUPER PARTY
With the super party supply stores, Town & Country and River Park Liquors --and their super prices!!!

RETAIL
10% Discount by the Case

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Fogg's Jewelers</th>
<th>Fox's Jewelers</th>
<th>Bridal</th>
<th>Imported</th>
<th>fox's</th>
<th>bridal</th>
<th>foxx</th>
<th>bridal</th>
<th>foxx</th>
<th>bridal</th>
<th>foxx</th>
<th>bridal</th>
<th>foxx</th>
<th>bridal</th>
<th>Foxx's Jewelers Since 1917</th>
<th>Fox's Jewelers</th>
<th>Bridal</th>
<th>Imported</th>
<th>Fox's Jewelers</th>
<th>Bridal</th>
<th>Imported</th>
<th>Fox's Jewelers</th>
<th>Bridal</th>
<th>Imported</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TOWN &amp; COUNTRY</td>
<td>RIVER PARK</td>
<td>LIQUOR</td>
<td>T&amp;C Shopping Center</td>
<td>The Notre Dame Party Centers</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
...I found the handbag under a chair on the floor of my office. It had been there for more than a week; and a few minutes ago, I finally decided to empty it to find out who the owner is. I am sitting here now, with the contents of that handbag spread beside me on the desk. There is a hairbrush, an open pack of Vix's medicated cough drops, a small comb, a black nail file, a pack of chewing gum, a pair of scissors, and a key. There were only these odds and ends to he health and beauty—purse to the sleek, gush-mouth, cough drops as a therapy to the season's, pink points for the trimming of blouses. Suddenly I am touched by the innocence of it all, and I am in a mood close to crying. I don't even know who owns the purse, but doesn't she realize that as the winter deepens and the night shadows fall, a girl needs something more protective than an assortment of cosmetics in her bag of tricks? Because she is too trusting and loving, and pitiful, so unsuspecting of meeting snakes on the road. She is too trusting to know who owns the purse, but doesn't she want to believe that the slender girl who tried too hard to be popular. There is, in love with an innocence I am helpless to defend.

Thus, the ridiculous dilemma of a middle-aged fat man over-reacting to the ambiguous evidence of an anonymous purse. In the end I will probably learn that the handbag was a lethal weapon used for assassinations by drug traffickers. Over the weekend, one of the Old Grads stopped by for me to bless his bank book. His final words, flung back at me as an exit line, were: "There's a real world out there. Griff. The implication of, course, was that Notre Dame, as a grove of academia, is a suburb of Fantasyland. My impulse was to send D.O.'s ripping at his heels. If, by the real world, he meant the places of pain where, in daily life, suffering is the price of survival, Notre Dame is an authentic Calvary as a pit stop in the rat race to death, an unworld world.

A boy comes to see you at midnight; and for reasons now, his mind has been mixed up with flashbacks from the drugs he played with last summer. Now, already terrified by the fear of madness, he learns that his girl is pregnant. I would be afraid to tell him that his hardships are not real enough to count as part of the passageways of the world.

It is possible that all of us here at Notre Dame are citizens of an unreal world. It is possible that it is from the rhythms of our social scene that the stereotypes of collegial living are formed, moving as we do from the football Saturdays in the stadium in October and November, to the ski slopes of Aspen in January, to the beaches of Fort Lauderdale in April, to the summer nights spent smoking pot in Amsterdam until morning only to change our T-shirts. It is time to begin the school year again on the sand dunes of Lake Michigan. But somewhere on the plateau of time between Aspen and Lauderdale, the is a freshman caught between the pressures of study and loneliness, who is on the edge of suicide. There is the diurnal in a girl who tried too hard to be popular. There is the student who has sacrificed everything he might have enjoyed out of the hope of getting into mod school, and he knows he is not going to college. There is the search for absolutes by a boy whose father died in the boy's first month at college. The boy has never heard of a God who is able to believe in God, yet he is frightened to live a life without religion. The girl who was student who was operated on for cancer in high school. There is the boy she is cured; but at night, fear comes anyway as the unwelcome guest of sleep.

Only one world.

I have lived in the real world of the City in rectories that were remote from the violence of the streets. I have lived in the unreal world of the University, in dormitories where I have been descried by the needs of students unable to cope with their sufferings. I am prepared to say that in the Lonely Kingdom of the God who also suffers, there is no world more or less real than any other. There is the dome world shaped in love, formed in pain. There are only points on different points of a great curve. Different passageways we travel to those points, sometimes in sunshine, sometimes in darkness.

In the sunshine and darkness together that we find the shadows of the face of the Lonely God.

For a number of years, I have listened to discussions on the problems of life at Notre Dame; the drinking, the misuse of sex and drugs, the damage to property and I have felt that some of the problems were symptoms of the human condition; others are the special burdens of those of us who are members of the Notre Dame community. You have to be able to distinguish between the symptoms of the human condition and the special burdens before you can do much about either.

lost childhood of innocence.

In the meantime, you have the chance to examine the content's of a girl's handbag, and the gush-mouth, cough drops, the purse, and the colors are real enough to touch the senses. You wonder about the girl is Notre Dame, for a world of romance and makebelieve? Is she ever struck with the sadness of seeing two girls sitting by themselves on a Friday night in a room watching television, simply because they don't know what else to do? After a little while, out of boredom, they will get drunk. Is the aware of the tragedy in drink and drugs that is perhaps occurring in the room next to her own? Will she someday become part of one of these tragedies?

Anonymous pursues tell no tales, except perhaps the tales of innocence. Innocence, you see, is the mood of children at play on summer days in Eden. But even in the forms of Notre Dame, there courses that growth of awareness of goodness and sadness in life that results in the lost childhood of innocence.

A.E. Houseman wrote:}

In ancient shadows and twilight
The world's great sorrows were borne
And its heroes were made
Christ was betrayed.

Ride The Music

neil young

pat small

Bothered by my conscience, enhanced by my father's financial generosity, and goaded on by Kevin Dockrell ("You may never get another chance.") I broke down and bought a ticket to the Neil Young concert in Indianapolis last Thursday night. I am certainly thankful that I did, because Young was playing a fire-hose of rock that was some of the best I have ever seen.

Approximately a half-hour wait between sets (Linda Ronstadt was the first act), Neilstride on looking pretty good and rather a pleasure. His concert, which ended with "Like a Woman," best I have ever seen.

It is possible that all of us here at Notre Dame are citizens of an unreal world. It is possible that it is from the rhythms of our social scene that the stereotypes of collegial living are formed, moving as we do from the football Saturdays in the stadium in October and November, to the ski slopes of Aspen in January, to the beaches of Fort Lauderdale in April, to the summer nights spent smoking pot in Amsterdam until morning only to change our T-shirts. It is time to begin the school year again on the sand dunes of Lake Michigan. But somewhere on the plateau of time between Aspen and Lauderdale, the is a freshman caught between the pressures of study and loneliness, who is on the edge of suicide. There is the diurnal in a girl who tried too hard to be popular. There is the student who has sacrificed everything he might have enjoyed out of the hope of getting into mod school, and he knows he is not going to college. There is the search for absolutes by a boy whose father died in the boy's first month at college. The boy has never heard of a God who is able to believe in God, yet he is frightened to live a life without religion. The girl who was student who was operated on for cancer in high school. There is the boy she is cured; but at night, fear comes anyway as the unwelcome guest of sleep.

Only one world.

I have lived in the real world of the City in rectories that were remote from the violence of the streets. I have lived in the unreal world of the University, in dormitories where I have been descried by the needs of students unable to cope with their sufferings. I am prepared to say that in the Lonely Kingdom of the God who also suffers, there is no world more or less real than any other. There is the dome world shaped in love, formed in pain. There are only points on different points of a great curve. Different passageways we travel to those points, sometimes in sunshine, sometimes in darkness.

In the sunshine and darkness together that we find the shadows of the face of the Lonely God.

For a number of years, I have listened to discussions on the problems of life at Notre Dame; the drinking, the misuse of sex and drugs, the damage to property and I have felt that some of the problems were symptoms of the human condition; others are the special burdens of those of us who are members of the Notre Dame community. You have to be able to distinguish between the symptoms of the human condition and the special burdens before you can do much about either.

lost childhood of innocence.

In the meantime, you have the chance to examine the content's of a girl's handbag, and the gush-mouth, cough drops, the purse, and the colors are real enough to touch the senses. You wonder about the girl is Notre Dame, for a world of romance and makebelieve? Is she ever struck with the sadness of seeing two girls sitting by themselves on a Friday night in a room watching television, simply because they don't know what else to do? After a little while, out of boredom, they will get drunk. Is the aware of the tragedy in drink and drugs that is perhaps occurring in the room next to her own? Will she someday become part of one of these tragedies?

Anonymous pursues tell no tales, except perhaps the tales of innocence. Innocence, you see, is the mood of children at play on summer days in Eden. But even in the forms of Notre Dame, there courses that growth of awareness of goodness and sadness in life that results in the lost childhood of innocence.

A.E. Houseman wrote:
a car show: more than just a fancy parking lot

Below, people and motors make up a car show, each's individuality sometimes rivaling the others. Right, not everyone can take those crowds and horsepower, though.

Photos and design by Joseph Abell
Special thanks to Steve Flanagan
Recruiters ousted from campus

by John Rumbach
Observer Reporter

Southwestern Corporation recruiters were asked to leave campus yesterday after Ombudsman McLean filed complaint with Security claiming the company did not follow guidelines set by the Placement Bureau and that they were misrepresentative.

McLean is a representative in two areas.

In an interview Wednesday, McLean said the company was misrepresentative. First, they promised high salaries, but did not emphasize that living expenses were to be provided by the salesman. Second, they did not completely explain the details of sales operations.

"Some students are not cut out for the type of door-to-door sales that the corporation does," McLean said.

McLean, following up on a student complaint, attended a Southwestern recruiting meeting held in Freddies-Publishing Sunday.

After hearing the opening sales pitch, McLean identified himself and warned students present of possible misrepresentation.

The Ombudsman left the meeting to file complaint with Fr. James Shults, Director of Student Services, but was unable to contact him. McLean then complained to Security and requested that they accompany him back to the room.

With William Hale of Security, McLean registered the complaint with the Southwestern representatives at the meeting. Everyone was cooperative and the meeting was disbanded, McLean reported.

Security has sent a copy of McLean's complaint to Richard Willemin, Director of the Placement Bureau. Willemin informed the Observer Wednesday that two years ago Southwestern Corporation was asked to follow Placement Bureau procedures.

"The groundrules for companies recruiting on campus are that they register with the Placement Bureau. They must tell us of their purposes for recruiting, and the times they will be on campus," Willemin stated.

Investigating unregistered advertising for summer employment two years ago, Willemin attended a Southwestern Corporation recruiting meeting.

"I checked out the company with the Better Business Bureau and the Don and Bradstreet rating and found them to be OK," Willemin said.

Southwestern has sent semiannual letters about their company to the Placement Bureau. McLean said: "I asked them to follow our procedures, and they agreed," he explained.

"We want students to know that we are trying to protect them. We don't make any judgments about companies, but we do check them out with the Better Business Bureau and the Don and Bradstreet rating," Willemin said.

He added that if the Southwestern Corporation registers with the Placement Bureau, it must tell the company of all the risks involved with their selling operations.

"When I talked to the sales manager, he admitted that their sales pitch did not hit the door-to-door selling aspect immediately," the Placement Bureau director said.

"Southwestern is a legitimate company, but we want them, if they are going to recruit on campus, to inform the student completely," he stated.

Ombudsman McLean said that there were other companies on campus who advertise without registering with the Placement Bureau. "If a student runs into any problems with them, he should contact the Placement Bureau," he said.

Plane delays
Giovanni talk

by Bill Sehlm
Staff Reporter

Nikki Giovanni, black poetess, nailed to appear on time for her lecture Tuesday night because of a delayed flight at O'Hare International Airport, according to Jim Novic, Academic Commission.

Giovanni was scheduled to give a talk at 8 p.m. in the Library Auditorium. She did arrive in South Bend until about 9 p.m., because she had been caught in a holding pattern over Chicago and she returned on the connecting flight to South Bend.

According to Novic, there was a standstill in campus traffic since about 100 people waiting to see her. When the plane finally did arrive an hour late, there were still about 50 people, who were waiting with the student completely.

McLean予以辞退的招聘者是来自西南学院的。McLean表示，该公司的代表夸大了他们提供的报酬，包括他们没有强调销售者将得到的差旅费用。麦金尼说，如果学生们知道这些情况，他们就不会被吸引到该公司的销售活动中。

麦金尼说，该公司在两年前来访时，已经要求他们遵守南卫理公会的准则。

麦金尼解释说，公司必须告诉他们其招聘的目的，并指定在校园内招聘的时间。

"如果我与销售经理交谈，他承认他们的销售策略未能直接达到门到户的销售目标,"麦金尼说。麦金尼表示，如果该公司注册成为南卫理公会的成员，他们必须告诉公司有关所有可能的风险。

吴阿文表示，公司还必须告诉学生有关所有可能的风险。吴阿文说，如果学生在与他们打交道时遇到任何问题，他们应该联系南卫理公会。

当星期二晚上，乔安尼的飞机被延误了，直到星期三早上九点才抵达。

乔安尼在讲演时，由于飞机延误，错过了预定的晚上八点的讲座。

乔安尼的讲座被推迟到晚上九点。学生们在讲堂等候了两个小时，终于在九点时，乔安尼抵达。

乔安尼的讲座被推迟到晚上九点。学生们在讲堂等候了两个小时，终于在九点时，乔安尼抵达。
Irish meet Rams in the Garden

by Vic Dor

Two years ago, Notre Dame's basketball team played Fordham in Madison Square Garden. Both clubs were national powers that year, and both ended the season with invitations to the NIT tournament.

Tonight, the Irish will return to the Garden for their annual scrap with the Rams. But this evening's meeting (at 7:00 EST from the 1971 encounter)—a game Fordham won, 94-88—will no longer have the aura of a 1971-72 finals, or a 1970-71 finals, or a 1969-70 finals, or a 1968-69 finals. Fordham, meanwhile, has been struggling, and the Rams' most recent outing was a 79-75 loss to St. John's.

But tonight's game is an important one, particularly on NIT implications. Earlier in the week, the Irish coach and Fordham assistant coach made some comments. "We could possibly end up playing Fordham again in the NIT," said coach Terry Mather. "I don't know how we do in our next six games. I think we might take with us the experience of playing Fordham.

Phipps has had his club playing on a high note the past two weeks, and last Saturday the Irish primed for their clash with the Rams by beating LaSalle, 87-71. "That was an important victory for us," admitted Phipps, "and perhaps the most important factor is that it enables players the same sense of winning—against a real tough team—over the Fordham does. I hope we learned a few things that will help us when we play in Madison Square Garden.

"Fordham has a great deal of speed and quickness," continued, "and we'll have to try to control the tempo of the game. They gave a great St. John's team a lot of trouble last Saturday so we know how tough they can be." Despite the disappointments that accompanied them, Phipps and Fordham know that the Rams are a capable team. They have eight lettermen and three starters back from last year's 19-8 club, and included the returning is All-East guard Charles, a 6-3 senior. Charles averaged 21.2 points a game last year for Maroon, and his return has helped the Rams get off to a 6-2 start. But Fordham is not without its problems. Mike Cornwall, Mike DeCicco, and Mike Truesdell each have replaceable.

Now will the tournament picture be the Irish for the 1973 season. Another club that has been struggling, and the Rams' potential, has been selected. This game could make or break the Rams in the Tournament. For the winner.

Above all, though, we cannot spend too much time looking into the future, because each of our remaining games is important. We can't afford to overlook anyone. We need at least two or three key victories, and then—hopefully—we can make plans to play a few more teams after the regular season ends.

Don Silinski

What's next?

The Notre Dame basketball team is very much in the running for post-season tournament bid. But the invitation won't come easy. Fordham, in an NIT, is important, the Irish win in good showings in New York against Fordham and St. John's, because the New York sportswriters have a lot to say about who goes to the tournaments—especially a second place finish. The game against the Rams will greatly strengthen our position for a bid. This game could break or bend our NIT chances, and help us get a win for whatever the remainder of the season.

Against Fordham, the Irish go down to North Carolina to play Duke. We'll have only one day of practice to prepare for the Blue Devils, but a win over Duke would give us a boost of confidence and with momentum. This game will end our five-day trip and will hopefully produce two victories—including the all-important one in New York.

We're home for two days or practice, and then it's on the road again— to Western Michigan for the second meeting of the teams, but we can't let because the Mountainners have the potential to play with us in the East.

After this game we head for New York, to play St. John's on regional TV. Here is another crucial contest for deciding that post-season tournament bid. A win against Fordham and one against St. John's would almost guarantee a bid to the NIT, and depending on the outcome of our other games, we could possibly be the number one team in the country.

If we can get by Fordham, we'll have to end the season by playing against a nationally ranked team—is a game against Western Michigan a very tough team, and should realize how this match-up will be played.

An important factor in this game will be whether the tournament bids will have any effect on the points race. West Michigan is a good team, and the added incentive of playing ND should make for a good contest. If we can come out with a win, we will be in the number two position in the Big East, but we can't overlook the Rams. A victory will give us an added edge at selection time. We have also beaten two Philadelphia teams, LaSalle and Villanova, who are in the running for the East.

Tonight fans can see three former Irish stars in the Garden. Senior Don Silinski has led the Irish careers twice to Fordham. The third game will be a far cry from the young coach who led them to a national championship last year. and both ended the season with invitations to the NIT tournament.

Tonight, the Irish will return to the Garden for their annual scrap with the Rams. But this evening's meeting (at 7:00 EST from the 1971 encounter)—a game Fordham won, 94-88—will no longer have the aura of a 1971-72 finals, or a 1970-71 finals, or a 1969-70 finals, or a 1968-69 finals. Fordham, meanwhile, has been struggling, and the Rams' most recent outing was a 79-75 loss to St. John's.

But tonight's game is an important one, particularly on NIT implications. Earlier in the week, the Irish coach and Fordham assistant coach made some comments. "We could possibly end up playing Fordham again in the NIT," said coach Terry Mather. "I don't know how we do in our next six games. I think we might take with us the experience of playing Fordham.

Phipps has had his club playing on a high note the past two weeks, and last Saturday the Irish primed for their clash with the Rams by beating LaSalle, 87-71. "That was an important victory for us," admitted Phipps, "and perhaps the most important factor is that it enables players the same sense of winning—against a real tough team—over the Fordham does. I hope we learned a few things that will help us when we play in Madison Square Garden.

"Fordham has a great deal of speed and quickness," continued, "and we'll have to try to control the tempo of the game. They gave a great St. John's team a lot of trouble last Saturday so we know how tough they can be." Despite the disappointments that accompanied them, Phipps and Fordham know that the Rams are a capable team. They have eight lettermen and three starters back from last year's 19-8 club, and included the returning is All-East guard Charles, a 6-3 senior. Charles averaged 21.2 points a game last year for Maroon, and his return has helped the Rams get off to a 6-2 start. But Fordham is not without its problems. Mike Cornwall, Mike DeCicco, and Mike Truesdell each have replaceable.

Now will the tournament picture be the Irish for the 1973 season. Another club that has been struggling, and the Rams' potential, has been selected. This game could make or break the Rams in the Tournament. For the winner.

Above all, though, we cannot spend too much time looking into the future, because each of our remaining games is important. We can't afford to overlook anyone. We need at least two or three key victories, and then—hopefully—we can make plans to play a few more teams after the regular season ends.