At Washington Hall

George Plimpton speaks at ND

by Terry Keene
Staff Reporter

George Plimpton shared his experiences as an amateur in a professional world with a capacity audience in Washington Hall last night. The noted author and editor of the Paris Review, who has impressed athletes, musicians, actors, and comedians emphasized the dream of every man to be a hero.

"James Thurber once said that 93 percent of the males in this country fell asleep at night thinking of the New York Yankee line-up," Plimpton explained. He believes that every man wants to feel "that smug sense of satisfaction of being involved in someone else's profession."

"My editor for Sports Illustrated went to bed each night beside his wife, sinking 60-foot puts," said Plimpton. "He never told her why he was doing all the body English."

Beginnings

Plimpton began his career as a participatory journalist during his college days on the staff of the Harvard Lampoon. As part of his initiation rites to join the staff, Plimpton had to run in the Boston Marathon. He entered the race—just behind the leader about one half-mile from the finish line.

"All of a sudden this guy who had been leading for miles heard the pounding of my sneakers," Plimpton described. "He looked over his shoulder and there was..."

Since graduating from college, Plimpton has assumed the roles of sports figures to give readers an idea of what it is like to be an athlete. His book PaperBoy described. "He looked over his shoulder and there was..."

He explained that he had written to all the teams in the National Football League to ask if they would accept him as a last-string quarterback; the Lions were the only team to respond.

Plimpton complained about his difficulties as a quarterback. He was too slow to accomplish hand-offs, too clumsy to avoid his own blockers and too confused to master "the strange coupling relationship" between the quarterback and his center.

"If you've never done that before (taken a snap from the center), you don't know where to put your hand. It's not one of those things you want to go wrong."

Plimpton once pitched in an all-star baseball game at Yankee Stadium and forced Richie Ashburn and Willie Mays to hit pop-outs. "Of course," Plimpton admitted, "it is true that Willie Mays' pop-out was caught in center field."

Plimpton's career as a Boston Celtic lasted but one game. Sent into the game by Celtic coach Bill Russell to replace Jack Havlicek, the Celtics were trailing the Atlanta Hawks by 15 points. Although his role in the situation was nil, the Celts came within 8 points of their opponents. When Havlicek replaced Plimpton, the Celts went on to lose. As a reporter going to Russell in the locker room and told him that I thought he made a tactical error. Russell didn't speak to me for about a week."

Plimpton the Musician

His most agonizing role according to Plimpton was not played in a sports arena, but in a concert hall as a percussionist for the New York Philharmonic and Leonard Bernstein. As a musician he was more conscious of his mistakes.

"If you made a mistake, what you did was destroy a work of art," Plimpton observed. "Mistakes are an inherent part of sports."

"To match the Philharmonic in pure terror was something I did with the circus," Plimpton continued. As an aerialist for the Cirque du Soleil, he went from one trapeze to the other by a trapeze. Although his stunt found him in the protective net, Plimpton's efforts earned him the nickname "Flying Telephone Pole" after his six-foot-four-inch frame.

Future Plans

George Plimpton's future plans include dabbling in boxing as a goalie for the Boston Bruins. He also hopes to accept Hugh Hefner's invitation to photograph some of the world's most famous men for Playboy magazine. Commented Plimpton, "It is the only invitation I have accepted with some alacrity."

When asked if he hoped to enter politics as an amateur, Plimpton recalled an offer President John Kennedy once made to him. "President Kennedy asked me if I wanted to run the country for a day. I said, 'Certainly, Mr. President.' So he picked the day and it was February 30th."

Facenda addresses HPC on party rules

by Kit Baron
Staff Reporter

Vice-President H Student Affairs Dr. Phillip Facenda clarified and summarized the guidelines for party rules at last night's HPC meeting, which convened at 6 p.m. in St. Edward's Chapel.

Student Affairs has drafted guidelines distinguishing three types of parties. The first type of party is the private party that is contained inside the private room.

The second type is a party larger than a hall party but smaller than a hall party. A large hall party involving the hall staff and residents is the third type of party.

Since the old policy was inconsistent with the Student Affairs situation, a new philosophy gives impetus to a policy of reasonable rules. The SLC has passed these guidelines and they are presently in effect before the President of the university to be signed.

Speaking for 20 minutes and answering questions for over a half hour, Dr. Facenda emphasized the great amount of corporate risk that the university is taking. Open recognition that students drink now has never occurred in the past. But Facenda feels that it's better to plan events with the hall staff "than to clothesline our minds to what is obvious" and have events get out of control.

More responsibility will be placed on the hall staff to decide what type of event will be held in hall. The hall rectors will play a large role in setting ground rules for hall events.

"We want to help students and not control them," emphasized the vice-president of Student Affairs. "We're taking risks and we want to get involved. We'll sink or swim together."

Tracing the history of the guidelines back three years, Dr. Facenda stated that prior to that time the university banned alcohol altogether. At the time, mindful of Indiana's 21 year old drinking law, the Students Affairs Committee felt there was no way to authorize drinking on campus.

The decision derived from a case in Alabama added a new perspective to the severe rule. This court decision maintained that a university was not required to ascertain what the students chose to do in their private rooms, providing that their actions would not bring undue attention to that room.

Subsequently, many N.D. residents criticized the "late night beer after a hard day's study." Granting that requests, the university permitted possession of alcoholic beverages in the private rooms. Then parties emerged and mushroomed to the extent that last year nearly every hall on campus violated the letter and spirit of the alcoholic rule. Thus, the necessity for the Student Affairs Committee to restate the rules. In the process of rewriting the rules, the committee hoped to establish a uniform policy to which the students would abide and rewrite the alcoholic rule in view of present campus activities.

When asked about Facenda's discussion, HPC President Fred Baranowski stated, "I was satisfied that Dr. Facenda cleared up any questions that the hall residents might have had. The hall presidents should now understand their responsibilities to the hall."

Facenda stated that prior to that meeting he was working with the Student Government and the HPC. "I have no problems keeping within the guidelines."

In other news it was announced that the recently announced program with St. Mary's will re-establish starting Monday, October 8. Tickets will be allocated to the various halls on a regular basis using the same system that was employed last year by Student Government and the HPC.

Several hall presidents expressed discontent with present laundry service. Tardy laundry return and missing items were reported to be the biggest problems. The HPC will attempt to question a representative of the laundry service at next week's meeting.

New presidents introduced at the meeting last night included Tom Porter from Grace Hall and Rich O'Conner from Panghorn Hall.

Presidents were asked to submit lists of officers for the Catholic Union in order to facilitate communication between resident students and their officers.

Climaxing the meeting, President Phil Byrne from Alumni Hall suggested that future meetings begin at 6:15 to permit interested students to attend.
Washington—President Nixon ordered rationing of wholesale home heating oil and propane gas Tuesday to make sure expected short supplies this winter are evenly distributed to homes, hospitals, farmers and other priority users. "This program will in no way generate a greater supply," said Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton, who will administer it. "It is to spread discomfort out, and we think we can spread it out so thinly it will not have a significant effect on the economy or life style."

Vieques—Chancellor Bruno Kreisky told Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir Tuesday he will stick to his decision to close the transit camp for Soviet Jews on route to Israel unless it is placed under protection of the United Nations.

United Nations—China, deriding the U.S.-Soviet detente, charged Tuesday the two superpowers are engaged in a fierce scramble involving aggression and subversion to dominate the world. In a 10-minute address to the General Assembly, Chinese Vice-Foreign Minister Chiao Kuanghau scoffed at talk of a global easing of tensions.

Houston—The Skylab 2 astronauts said Tuesday they had several spots aboard their earth orbiting station and one of the spacemen said he was too busy to take a shower the entire two months. But they said they had no psychological problems during man's longest space voyage.

Christianssted, St. Croix, V.I.—Three more whites have been murdered on this racially tense Caribbean island, it was announced Tuesday on the eve of the US National Conference of Lieutenant Governors.

A black alien was charged with two of the killings of a pair of 22-year-old schoolteachers. "I think this is the observer's first murder of a white person on St. Croix, it was announced Tuesday on the eve of the US National Conference of Lieutenant Governors.

The fall schedule for this year's Placement Bureau interview sessions begins this Monday. The Placement Bureau is set up to provide job interviews for seniors and graduate students with representatives of well-known companies and universities. Anyone wishing to get involved in this program should first complete a profile form which is available in the Placement Bureau office, room 222, of the Administration Building. This should be done before October eight. Sign-ups for interviews are in room 306 of the Administration Building, the week preceding the interview. The specifications of the employer should be met before signing up. Interviews will begin October eighth, 8:30 a.m. in room 216.

They will schedule extensions to December five. Each week the observer will publish a list of the companies to be represented a week in advance. Interviews for week of October 8

Ticket scandal

Prove homecoming sales

by Ken Bradford
Staff Reporter

A Thursday meeting of the Board of Commissioners will look into the controversy surrounding the Monday sale of Homcoming Ticket packages.

The Main controversy stems from twenty ticket packages left unaccounted for after the public sale.

A total of five hundred general admission tickets were made available to the Student Union in two hundred fifty packages for the sale on Monday.

Two hundred twenty ticket packages were sold to students on a first-come, first-serve basis. An additional ten packages were raffled to members of the Student Goverment, according to Joe Russo, manager of the Student Union Ticket Office.

The whereabouts of the remaining twenty ticket packages is unknown. Student Union Director Jim Rybacek, was unavailable for comment all day Tuesday.

The Assistant Director, Ken Muth, stated that no comment would come from the Student Union Office.

The ticket sale is a part of the on-going controversy over the Student Government's sale of tickets. Russo explained the method by which the ten ticket packets allotted to the Student Goverment were dispersed.

"Everyone from Student Government who wanted tickets had their names placed in a hat and ten names were selected at random," he added.

"We couldn't give everyone in Student Goverment the opportunity to buy special tickets or there would be none available for the students," Russo explained.

Burglary

at Lyons

by Jeanne Murphy
Staff Reporter

A thief broke into Lyons Hall Monday night and got away with over $600 in merchandise ranging from appliances to clothing.

Director of Security Arthur Pears suspects a black youth twelve to fourteen years of age.

Pears anticipates that the crime was committed approximately at 7:15 p.m. The youth was seen by another resident of Lyons roaming the halls around 7:30. When he was asked what he was doing, the suspect said "nothing" and was ushered outside the dorm by the resident.

Shortly afterwards, the same resident heard a whistle which seemed like it could have been a signal to an accomplice.

The boy who was wearing a brown leather jacket was not seen the last line for six extra hours is "seven to the thirty-five minute, while a six foot line is made for the ninety minute, " Russo added. The ticket sale at the time officially announced would have resulted in "seven hours of pushing and shoving."

"To make 270 people stand in line for six extra hours is ridiculous," Russo said.

Russo also explained the method of the ticket sale.

Power failure

by Rick Scharf

A power failure hit portions of the South Quad Tuesday morning, leaving many buildings without electricity for most of the day.

A cable malfunction in an underground power vault north of the Bookstore tripped a generator at the Notre Dame Power Plant causing the problem at 9:20 a.m.

The buildings without power were: Sacred Heart Church, at the Notre Dame Power Plant, the Main Quad hall, the Administration Building. They try to keep an up-to-date listing on available housing and are usually very helpful in setting you straight as to the housing department for Student Affairs.

Come Clean SU

The Notre Dame Student Union is finding the going rougher and rougher for them this week. First, a controversy erupted over the selling of tickets for the Southern Cal football game. Now the Union is embroiled in a further controversy over the "disappearance" of approximately 40 of the 500 football tickets delivered to their hands.

The Observer refuses to charge the Union with mismanagement of these missing tickets at this time. But the failure of Jim Rybarczyk, Union Director, and Ken Muth, Assistant Director, to comment on the situation merely casts a pall of secrecy and suspicion over it. An open and honest account of where the tickets went can only better serve the student's interest in the Union.

If the tickets went to union workers after a general union procedure, then that should be admitted. It is a defensible position if the Union cares to stand up and defend it. If the tickets were involved in some form of mismanagement or behind the back deals then it is time for the Union to admit it and face the bale. It is time for the Union to come clean.

Good Start AC

While one part of the Student Union finds itself tied up in a scandal, another section of it—the Academic Commission—gave note to the student body last night that they intend to do great things. They brought the talented and witty author and impostor George Plimpton to campus.

Notre Dame has come to expect from the section of it—the Academic Commission—from the quote originates Notre Dame endeavors to present a collegiate education that is truly geared to modern society, giving the student newspaper. These organizations, however, are very significant. Another excerpt from "This is Notre Dame" reads, "It is popular now for people to 'seek identity' and to engage in activities to 'find themselves'. The limited activities at Notre Dame, specifically the repugnance of parties, prevents a student from expanding his social experience. What are you going to do in the future? Will the 7:2 balance of Notre Dame one realizes that University life is an important facet of education. On this campus right now there are probably dozens of sick people who are receiving no medical treatment whatever and probably don't even realize they are ill. Most will die even without knowing.

They are victims of a disease which can permanently damage most bodily organs and shorten a person's life span to 15 years. Often it is fatal. The disease is widespread among young adults. One out of every six patients in veterans hospitals is afflicted with it.

The disease, of course, is alcoholism.

Wild exaggeration? I don't think so. At a recent conference on alcoholism held in the Center for Continuing Education, experts pointed out that one out of every 10 to 15 drinkers in the United States is an alcoholic. An agency in South Bend estimates that there are 14,000 alcoholics in the county. If these statistics are even remotely close to reality, there are dozens of alcoholics at Notre Dame among students, faculty and administrators.

Said Mrs. Rosemary Lough, director of the Alcoholism Council of St. Joseph County: "With a student population at an institution like Notre Dame, it's certainly true that one out of 10 if drinkers is in some stage of alcoholism. In fact, it might be even higher than that. Comparing the student population with the population at large, the one real difference is that the alcoholics at Notre Dame are in earlier stages of the disease."

That's why she stresses the need for drinkers to recognize the early signs that they are in trouble.

High tolerance: This student can keep on drinking after his friends have disappeared under the table. His companions marvel at his capacity to hold his liquor. But experts regard it as a sign that the student may be facing the problem of alcoholism.

Blacksouts: This student can't remember what he did during all or part of the time he was drinking. His friends may tell him he acted quite sober during that time. (A blackout of this type does not mean loss of consciousness.) "This almost never happens to normal drinkers," says Mrs. Lough.

Acholic is a focal point of his life. He drinks is he passes a test, he drinks if he fails it, he drinks if the professor or the professor's secretary showed up to give the test. Any reason to drink is good enough for him.

Jekyll and Hydrate: Dollars are spent trying to quench the thirst that is unsatisfied. The student is basically a binge drinker.

SMC scholarship fete a success

by Melissa A. Byrne
Staff Reporter

"An Evening at St. Mary’s" was the theme of a formal dinner hosted by President and Mrs. Edward L. Henry on campus Tuesday, October 2, 1973. Guests paid $10 per couple to provide scholarships for Michiana area high school students interested in attending SMC. Approximately 150 people attended, including SMC Alumnae and business and community leaders from the South Bend area.

Richard B. M. Bloomberg's script is both funny and tragic. The atmosphere is informal, with the opening of an Appalachian hollow. The attempt, recorded from suspence, reveals the present permit and Kanser was unaware of the need to have it on Halloween they held a pumpkin carving contest. On specia occasions, like birthdays, Pop Farley's was held weekly on (a). The film will be aired on television screens. There will be no cable of 4 pumpkin.

The Music Department highlighted this first annual event. A documentary film featuring the SMC-ND Chorus in concert throughout Europe was presented. The film will be aired on television later this fall. "It is anticipated other departments will be featured during the summer to plan the event. The general co-chairmen were Mrs. J. R. Rimer, Mrs. W. Kuehner, Mrs. S. Kebler, Mrs. Kay Cooper, Mrs. J. Farley, Sister M. Basil Anthony, C.S.C., Mrs. G. Weber, Mr. S. Gilbert, Mr. Richard Horst, Mrs. Philip Kerrigan, Mr. J. Kearns, Mrs. M. Nicholson and Sister Ellen Dolores Lynch, C.S.C.

The event was designed to enhance relations between SMC and the Michiana community. "We are trying to make certain that students who might be attending SMC can be interested in attending," said Henry.

"An Evening at St. Mary’s" began with a reception in Stapleton Lounge, followed by a gourmet dinner in the college dining hall.

Eaubacher on existentialism at St. Mary's

The department of modern languages at Saint Mary's is sponsoring a lecture by Joseph P. Kerrigan, professor of French at Saint John's University, Collegeville, Minnesota, will speak on "Existentialism: A Christian Ascetic."

Prior to joining Saint John's University, Professor Eaubacher taught French at Xavier University, sponsored a lecture at the College of the Sacred Heart, Newton, Massachusetts. He has developed a seven-volume programmed reading series for the French language, published by Harcourt-Brace.

The lecture, which will be delivered in English, should be of particular interest to students of philosophy and psychology, as well as to students of the modern literature of France, Spain, England, and the United States, according to Sr. M. Anna Teresa Sayhoute, C.S.C., chairperson of the modern languages department.

The Library raises after Health dept. forces close

by Judy Rassenhorst
Staff Reporter

The Library Bar-Restaurant reopened Monday after being closed by the County Health Department since last Wednesday. Dr. Speyrer's, County Health Officer, said the only problem was the Library owner, Rick Kanser, did not take time to get the necessary license to operate.

"According to State and City ord- inances," continued Speyrer's, "an establishment must pass certain requirements to be eligible for a Health Permit to get a license." Speyrer's concluded that any deficiencies The Library had been met have. The Library is now re-open for business.

Observer staff to hear Powers

by David Kaminski

Staff Reporter

John J. Powers, managing editor of the South Bend Tribune, will speak at the regular reporters' meeting of the Observer staff on Thursday night, October 4. The meeting will take place at 7 p.m. in room 2-D of the LaFortune Student Center.

Powers is a native of Long Island, New York. After paratrooper service in World War II, he entered the university of Notre Dame in 1948.

He worked in one of the original summer programs at the Wall Street Journal. During his senior year at Notre Dame, he was editor of the Scholastic.

The day after he graduated from Notre Dame, he went to work for the South Bend Tribune, where he has been ever since. He worked as a reporter and later as an editorial writer until June of 1974, when he was promoted to managing editor.

The Thursday night reporters' meetings of the Observer staff are open to the public.

Departing from Purdue Sunday morning, Duncheon and Hegarty finally reached their beds in Kendall Hall, where they enjoyed a few early-o'clock Monday morning. They reported two significant events from their trip.

First, when their flashlights had gone dead, they stopped at a farmhouse in Rochester to see if they could purchase another. The farmers, a Mr. Don Snipes, not one to loan them a flashlight (trust them to mail it back!), but also offered to drive them the remaining forty miles to Notre Dame.

Secondly, Hegarty and Duncheon got lost, for the first time, in nearby Mishawaka. It was not until they accosted a popular local theater that they knew for certain the remainder of their route.

Although Hegarty emphasized the importance of peanuts and beef jerky to their diet, Duncheon reported they were predominately "spiritus-powered."

Both cyclists rode ten-speed bicycles round-trip — Hegarty riding a Schwinn Continental and Duncheon a Ross Euro-Sport. Asked if he had been bothered by reports in the press about parting with his possessions, Hegarty summed up his intentions in one word, "Sleep."
Buckeyes take over first; Irish, Trojans drop down

There were a couple of surprises last week on college gridirons across the nation, and the weekly AP and UPI football polls reflect them.

Woody Hayes' Ohio State Buckeyes capitalized two spots into the number-one position as a result of their crushing of Tuskegee and national champions of a year ago, Southern Cal, after being tied by underdog Oklahoma, 7-7 in Los Angeles, dropped all the way to second in the AP.

Nevada barely defeated their Big Red rival from the North, Wisconsin, 20-16, but remained in the number-two spot in both polls. Alabama, which defeated Vanderbilt last weekend, climbed to third in the AP poll and was fourth in the UPI.

Michigan, which should give the Buckeyes a real challenge for Big Ten title, placed fifth in both polls, followed by the surprising Boomers in sixth.

Penn State, which easily defeated Iowa ranked seventh and zoomed up on the two polls differ.

The UPI, compiled from a vote of the top coaches in the nation, lists Tennessee, a surprising victor over Auburn, eighth, Notre Dame ninth and LSU tenth.

The AP, known as the writers' poll, lists the Irish eighth, the Sooners ninth and the Bayou Tigers tenth.

Saturday's schedule featured four exciting games involving members of the top ten: Miami of Florida, which upset Texas earlier this year, travels to Oklahoma; Penn State meets Air Force in the Rockies; the Irish entertain traditional rival Michigan State; and Florida takes on LSU.

UPI Ratings

For the first time, John Thornton and Mike O'Driscoll. Jafar looked much better in the P-C battle. His defense is improved and he is working much harder all around. Fresh Thornton played a good game at halfback and got one of the scores. The other half of the freshman scoring duo is O'Driscoll who—one point came on a lot of hustle. Mike and John are among freshmen who could break into coach Arno Zoske's lineup.

Discussing the team and its development, Zoske states, "We're a very young team." Only three starters return from last year's squad which ended with eight straight wins. Attempting to explain the lack of victories, Arno Zoske says, "We fail apart late in the game because we're not as strong condition-wise as our opponents. We must play more aggressively and stick to our game plan for the entire ninety minutes."

Those Notre Dame students' sign expresses their opinion of the ranking of the Irish, but the AP and UPI had others.
