Commissioners issue petition

by R. Thomas Thues
Staff Reporter

In reaction to the Homecoming ticket controversy, Student Union commissioners issued a petition Thursday during a preliminary meeting of the Student Government Board of Commissioners describing a formal resignation of all Student Union staff in the event of Student Union Director Jim Rybarczyk's dismissal. The petition states that "if he (Rybarczyk) is dismissed from office, it would precipitate the resignation of the [Student Union] staff.""The policy states that "if he (Rybarczyk) is dismissed from office, it would precipitate the resignation of the [Student Union] staff.""The policy states that "if he (Rybarczyk) is dismissed from office, it would precipitate the resignation of the [Student Union] staff."

After presenting the petition, Ken Natalse, Student Union Academic Commissioner, added that "a natural result of Student Unions personnel resignation would be a cancellation of non-contract events."

The controversy flared up as a result of the 54_homecoming tickets set aside by Student Union. The 54 out of 100 available tickets were purchased by Student Union commissioners and personnel. In a subsequent statement to the Board of Commissioners Rybarczyk said, "My purpose in purchasing the tickets was to reward my staff for their extreme efforts in organizing the event."

After the preliminary meeting the nine members of the Board of Commissioners met in a half-hour closed session to discuss the ticket situation. No decision was made.

The Board recessed until Friday at 4:30 pm. Student Body President Dennis Ettiene had no comment on the discussion of the meeting, but asserted that a decision would be made at Friday's meeting.

When asked for Student Union's reason for the petition Natalase and Kip Anderson, CAC Commissioner, cited the petition's gesture of confidence in Rybarczyk's decision. "We know that no wrong has been done. This is just our way of stopping Student Government's action," said Natalase. Anderson added that, "(Rybarczyk's) actions were merely following precedent. It's excepted procedure to purchase a block of tickets for Student Union Personnel." Rybarczyk's reaction was, "I was deeply touched by the actions of my commissioners and I would do it again, given the same circumstances." Rybarczyk claimed that Student Government has "blown up the issue." He further charged, "The Board of Commissioners is not necessarily involved because they're very involved in the issue."

He hoped that "they (the Commissioners) were prepared to assume the responsibility and consequences of the issue to the students." "I have accepted the responsibility of my decision. I hope Student Government can do the same," Rybarczyk concluded.

When asked for the Board's reaction to the petition, Etienne had no comment. He said that they "wanted the evening to consider their decision."

Sassone lectures on population growth

by Jackie Simmons
Staff Reporter

The lecture on population by Robert Sassone last night resembled a heated debate between an often critical audience and Sassone. The lecture turned discussion, explored the various melodramatic statements that are used to convince people of the need to limit population growth.

While Sassone's background in organic chemistry and physics at the University of Michigan, as well as his degree in law from the Loyola University in Los Angeles, gave him a very convincing store of knowledge to draw from, it was obvious that not all of the audience was convinced.

From the start the topics included not only the major question of whether the world is big enough to provide for an increasing population, but also con-troversies of food shortages, the availability of natural resources, and the ability of technology to keep a pace of our "expanding" population. His supporting data was drawn from various sources including the National Geographic, United States Department of Agriculture, and the UN EAO Report of 1971.

In answer to the fear of many population control groups, Sassone cited the fact that over 60 per cent of the world's land mass is not productive to food, and that over 50 per cent of this productive land is occupied by farms, cities, buildings, or other direct evidence of man's existence.

Admitting that most land in the U.S. is developed Sassone pointed out that "... the U.S. is not representative of the world."

The objection was raised that it was not space but food that was the problem. In answering this Sassone reminded the audience that it was not actually a lack of food but just a matter of unequal distribution. In fact many people in the world are now eating 40 per cent more protein than they ever did before.

But quoting yields of countries such as "Fak-Bang", he attempted to prove that the trend in food production is for greater yields and that we could easily triple our present yields.

In concluding his defense or ability to meet the rise in population with a corresponding rise in food production Sassone stated "The population explosion is the biggest rip-off in history. It is used as a cop-out to prevent people from using the presently existing cures."

Another major concern of some zero population growth advocates is the amount of oxygen needed to sustain life for so many, especially with the rate at which we are polluting our air.

It was suggested that cutting down trees to make more farmland destroys one of our basic oxygen producers. This fact was quickly put down by Sassone's readily available figures once again. In the last 50 years there has been no change in the per cent of oxygen in the air.

An interesting comment from a listener was that if Sassone's interpretation of the facts and figures are so convincing why are so many people so unconvinced?

Sassone then added, "My interpretation of the figures is based on the moment. However, I have no doubt that he was totally convinced that his objectivity was based on evidence."

Throughout the lecture, references were constantly made to Dr. Paul Ehrlich's book, The Population Bomb. Obviously Ehrlich's views were completely incompatible to Sassone's and a debate between the two would have been interesting. In Ehrlich's absence however, several listeners raised the arguments in favor of controlling population.

One such argument is the belief that it is impossible for technology and industry to keep the same pace as our population which is increasing at the rate of 2 per cent per year.

Concluding this completely, Sassone not only quoted figures which showed that those countries which show the least development are those with the least population growth, but he also appealed to our experiences.

He pointed out that man's technology advances most in the cities and held that an increase in the number of people is actually an impetus to progress.

Finally the "pessimists", in Sassone's view, ask why we shouldn't attack the problem of population growth now even if it isn't a problem yet. In response, Sassone said, "Worrying about population today is as absurd as rushing to the airport to catch a plane when you think there's going to be an ice age in South Bend."

With an even more extreme view Robert Sassone said we should actually be concerned about our declining birth rate. In the last 8 years the world's birth rate has dropped 10 per cent. In the U.S. the birth rate has dropped from 19.5 in 1961 to 13.8 in 1972. The declining birth rate means that an increase in the number of non-working members of our society and puts a heavier load on the Social Security system.

In summarizing this last argument, Sassone said "You are seeing the balding and graying and the wrinkling of the face of America. We are becoming a more aged country."

Those who attended the lecture but had to leave before its conclusion missed the most illuminating part of his argument. By tying the facts together with a little more reality Sassone overcame his earlier weakness of "unfounded optimism due to the total disregard of human nature as well as sociological factors such as national politics," (in the words of one of the critics in the audience). If Sassone's whole lecture was merely an optimistic approach to the problem of population growth it was at least a very convincing optimism.
Hesburgh raps Nixon

by Michael Dewey

Staff Reporter

"The President has practically kicked the Civil Rights Commission in the head," said Hesburgh. "He hasn't appointed anybody to succeed me even though I was canned on November 17th of last year. There has been no chairman appointed since then. As a result, the Commission has been headless."

Father Theodore Hesburgh, president of the University of Notre Dame and former head of the Civil Rights Commission, appeared on WNDW's Contact, Thursday evening. On the program, which was broadcast from 10 pm to 11 pm, Father Hesburgh spoke on a number of issues.

Lately, Fr. Hesburgh has been extremely busy with campus housing regulations and the establishment of a Civil Rights Institute. He hopes that the body of concerned members will be able to fulfill the functions of the Civil Rights Commission in a private context. One of the possible aims of the Institute is the overall education of people as to where the Commission "is at today."

As a possible project for the future, Fr. Hesburgh expressed the notion that a book on Civil Rights in the 60's may be forthcoming. An examination of the decline in civil rights in the issues of human rights in the 70's would be a major topic.

When the question of impartiality in campus housing regulations arose, Hesburgh stated, "All housing should be available to any student, regardless of race, religion, creed or national origin. We've got to be perfectly clean on this; otherwise we have no right to be engaged in the broader issues." In response to the facts on discrimination in off-campus housing and unfair rent regulations, Hesburgh said, "I was involved in similar activities (prevention of discriminatory practices) after the war. In fact, the landlords were making so much money off the students that..."

How can a student get his sheets replaced if he forgets to pick them up on the regular day?

If you miss the regular sheet day, you can pick up your clean sheets and pillow cases at the Laundry Facility. It is located behind the Freshman Year Office and its hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 3:20 p.m.

Who can I register a complaint with about food quality and who does one talk to about food preparation suggestions?

For most complaints, it's best to jot them down on the blue cards which are available in the Dining Halls by the entrances. However, if the question is urgent or extensive in nature, it would be wise to get in touch with The Food Service Advisory Committee. This organization is a student operation geared to look into food problems. Its members are Mary Claire Molidor, Martha Lampkin, Mary Ellen McAndrews, Laura Dodge, Paul Clemens, Peter Clemens, and Geoffrey Thompson.

Theology profs compare Yale, Notre Dame

by Jane Thornton
Staff Reporter

What does Yale have that Notre Dame doesn’t, and why do many Notre Dame students find the campus so congenial? These and other questions were posed by a recent study of Yale and Notre Dame students by Lois Tranter, a researcher at the University of Chicago.

Tranter’s study, which surveyed 100 students at each institution, found that Yale had a more active social life, with more opportunities for extracurricular activities. Notre Dame, on the other hand, had a stronger emphasis on academics and a more structured environment.

Tranter also noted that the atmosphere at Yale was more relaxed, while Notre Dame had a more serious tone. However, both institutions had their strengths, and the choice between them ultimately came down to personal preference.

Tranter’s findings have been widely reported in the media, and her study has become a valuable resource for those considering which university to attend.

Flanner’s ‘America’ reopens
by Al Retherford

Tonight marks the reopening of “America” in the basement of Flanner Hall. The exhibit, which was closed last year due to budget constraints, has been completely updated.

The exhibit features over 100 works of art, including paintings, sculptures, and photographs. The pieces are arranged in chronological order, starting with early American art and ending with contemporary works.

“We have the best facilities on campus for this type of entertainment,” said Flanner Hall director, Professor John师范大学.

During the opening night, attendees were treated to a special performance by the university’s own student orchestra. The event was a huge success, with tickets selling out in minutes.

Flanner Hall is open to the public every Wednesday and Saturday night, and admission is free. For more information, call the Flanner Hall office at 555-1234.
Erotic Film Festival cancelled

by David Kaminski
Staff Reporter

The Erotic Film Festival, scheduled for October 9 and 10 in Washington Hall, has been cancelled for this semester, according to Student Union Academic Commissioner, Ken Natale, and Cultural Arts Commissioner, Kip Anderson.

Natale and Anderson claim that an inability to secure faculty cooperation and a lack of time to prepare, the festival were the reasons for cancellation.

The Notre Dame festival was to consist of excerpts from the "First Annual New York Erotic Film Festival." The Student Union planned to show the films and then have a panel of faculty members discuss the films' moral and artistic value. The Office of Student Affairs was cooperating in the planning of the festival, providing members of the faculty to add an academic dimension to it.

Letters were sent to all faculty members, asking if they would consider sitting on the panel for the festival. Of those eleven only one agreed to sit on the panel.

Natale and Anderson declined to name any of the faculty members contacted.

Natale and Anderson are disappointed by the faculty members' response.

"It seemed that the faculty was judging material on the films without having seen them," Natale said.

"Some of the responses we received weren't too favorable. I wouldn't want to be part of this with a 10-foot pole," Price said. The educational value would be limited.

"Hopefully, the festival wouldn't be in a context that would elicit a perverse response. I think we have a little more faith in the student body than that," Anderson said.

The Student Union had planned to offer the festival for free and to strictly limit attendance to Notre Dame and St. Mary's students, faculty, and administrators. They planned no publicity that would have gone beyond the campuses.

Natale and Anderson admit that they got a late start in planning the festival and that they should have spent more time in lining up faculty support.

The Student Union might try to bring the festival to campus at a later date. If they try again, they hope that serious, legitimate student support will help them to find cooperation among faculty members.

Food advisory committee meets to discuss dining hall service

by Pattie Cosey
Staff Reporter

The Food Advisory Committee met with Director of Food Services Edmund Price and Notre Dame dietician Mrs. Phyllis Roose last night.

Mary Claire Molitor, Research and Development Commissioner, reported that Price discussed the purpose of the committee. It is his hope that the committee will vocalize the impressions of the students concerning all the aspects of the food service, not just the menus.

Molitor also noted that Price emphasized the food service is here to serve the students and wants detailed suggestions, in addition to general reactions.

One of the major responsibilities of the committee is to handle complaints from students regarding the quality of the food, their manner of service, and other aspects of the food service.

The committee members are as follows:

"We hope that students will contact committee members with any ideas about the food service," said Molitor. "Besides comments on the menus, we would like to get feedback on the atmosphere of the dining halls. There are three representatives from each quad on the committee. The list of committee members is as follows:

Mary Claire Molitor
Martha Lumpkin
Mary Ellen McAndrews
Laura Dodge
Paul Clemens
Peter Clemons
Geoffrey Thompson

Presently the hall presidents receive the tickets at the HPC meetings and distribute them in their halls. The distribution is up to the discretion of the hall presidents. Complaints, "If there are complaints, guidelines might have to be set up," commented Molitor.

At Notre Dame, two or three dorms will split 100 tickets each night, depending on the number of people involved. At SMC, 100 tickets will be divided into 25 per dorm, each night. The tickets will be available in the hall director's office. Each girl is allowed one ticket at a first come, first served basis," explained Judy Mardian, SMC co-ordinator of co-ex dinners.

There will also be a look at the desk each girl will sign when she receives a ticket.

"There could be a problem in the future concerning ticket allotment, since there is an unequal number of girls in each hall, but we will have to wait and see what happens," noted Mardian.

Co-ex dinners start Monday, October 8.

All on the Line

Student Union put it all on the line last night. In presenting the Board of Commissioners with a petition saying that most of the union staff would resign if Director Jim Rybarczyk was dismissed, they really pulled a gutsy move. And in the move they showed their support of a man who has been under fire since his appointment as SU Director, last year.

Despite what seemed to be overwhelming odds against him, Rybarczyk came out of the Board of Commissioner's meeting in good shape. The Board originally seemed dead set against him and dismissal seemed a likely possibility. However, the petition presented to the Board could very well have been the weapon that turned the tide.

Momentum was on the side of those who pushed for dismissal last night, but now that momentum has gone. It seems unlikely that Rybarczyk will be removed from office.

This is not to condone the action that Rybarczyk took in handling the tickets. There seems to be a little explanations for Student Union personnel getting a break to buy football tickets over the regular students, precedent notwithstanding. If they had a hand in the organization of the game, that would be another story. But Student Union organized the Southern Cal football game as much as the Sailing Club did.

But the Board is presented with little alternative now. The question of principle has been turned into a question of practicality. Dismissal of Rybarczyk will not return the 34 tickets and it will also result in the closing down of Student Union for a period of time. The commissioners stated last night that they all resign then all the non-contract arrangements will be handled. This, in consequence, will freeze Student Union activities for a substantial period of time.

The students have been wronged in the method in which the tickets were sold and the preferential treatment given union members. But they will be wrong even further if the Board of Commissioners carries through the dismissal of Rybarczyk and the campuses to settle for a problem down of Student Union and its student services.

Passing Up

Moose Krause was beaming with pride after the opening football game against Northwestern two weeks ago. Moose was happy not only because of the victory, but because the students, as he reported, "had heed his request and had not run on to the field during the band's performance nor prior to the teams' entrance back on the field.

The class of the student body showed through two weeks ago and it reaped a grand result. The marching band has conceded to receive back the flag from the campus prior to the Friday night rally. And they are going through with the March without the protection of the Meat Squad, relying on the class and concern that the student's showed at the Northwestern game.

It shows that a moment of thought and a bit of cooperation pays off in the end. But it goes one step further now. It goes to the practice of "passing up." Two weeks ago, during the tribute to Elmer Layden, one section of students proceeded to pass up the pople from the lower rows. Not only did the action show disrespect, but it also placed the health of the students involved in jeopardy.

Three years ago while a student was being passed up the crowd dropped him. He hit his head on the concrete step and swallowed his tongue. The student would have died without the fast action of an usher. So, it's dangerous. Use a touch of caution and a moment's thought before you pass someone up. It could start in fun and end up in tragedy.

Miles to Go...

Control and Respect

It's an experience all of us have suffered through at one point or other in our lives. We have all crucified. We have all die. We have all spit our venom towards that helpless fool. Until that torturing moment we are humbled by the fact that we were once that fool.

Until that all too late, aging second when we are crushed by thought that our precious membership in the accepted portion of the crowd is based on weakness rather than on strength.

That is the moment of frustration. That is the moment when we find that we are beings who all to often lack the element of control. We lack the invaluable element that allows us to become human, to control. To express our humanity; we lack that ability to rise above the jungle law of "kill or be killed."

We lack that sense of respect for the person of others. We lack the ability to become somehow Christian. We lack that sense of self realization that personal deficiency has now to be the test others to be hurt. Others whom we have scarred with the faintest sense of their pain. Until it's too late.

Yet our humanity should get a boost from the extreme sense of shame that darkness the majority of men's hearts upon an occasion when they have hurt others. It points to a symptom of blindness, not ignorance, as the reason that we choose to believingly rather than respect. It points to that choice of acceptance by the crowd rather than respect of the individual's weakness, and not an incurable deficiency.

And the people whom we fully are that blindness are those who choose to insert that sense of control into their lives. They opt for looking at the faces of those whom they touch, looking for the pain, looking for the human, looking for the dignity of others to care for before it becomes hardened animalism.

And less we are exempt need the need to insert that control into our lives. Even those who are submitted beneath the canvas of this Christian university. Our venom can be just as deadly, our animalism just as hard, our blindness just as original.

We must learn to respect. Ourselves and others.

There are people here at Notre Dame crying for respect. And through our blindness, we fail to see their pain etched across their faces.

We fail to see the pain of that faceless female whose physiology has been passed from row to row, from hand to searching hand, from cheer to venemous cheer.

What all those who fail to realize is that they too have become faceless in the mind of one who no longer respects one whom they have blinded.

Those that she passes on her way upward through the maze of searching hands never see her pain, never have the opportunity to see the bruises that cover her body and her self-respect the next day.

And it is the community and those whom we have blinded whom we have scathed without the faintest sense of their pain. It seems that their faces mean so much to us. Men whom we have scathed with ease and whom we have blinded.

That tragedy becomes deeper because of the community's decision to so-well divide up the individual doses of venom used upon that helpless fool.

What all those who fail to realize is that they too have become faceless in the mind of one who no longer respects one whom they have blinded.

Let me tell you why I am angry this morning. I am angry, and in a general mood of concern. I have been in this campus a calm, ordered surface to life, where one event hustles after another in a hurried rush for a weekend of football, and there is the breath-taking beauty of fire on the campus party to the beauty of the foliage and the meadows. But under the serene surface, I have begun to see discussions on the educative processes are taking place, there is a real world where the students live, and I am angry and confused, and so private that one cannot even talk about it except in a general way.

I must be concerned with . . . an inner life at Notre Dame that no one committee, no administrator knows how to make rules for.

One goes to dinner with friends. The drinks are excellent, and the food is full of surprises as the shrimp sauce and the gravy unfold their secrets to the mouth, and the dessert seems to have been made in the kitchen of God.

As maybe from the government propaganda I was about to cross the border from my hotel to the old Jewish cemetery, an inner life at Notre Dame that no committee, no administrator knows how to deal adequately with the private confusions underlying the surface of life.

On Sunday, I shall face another birthday and another year of atonement in a quiet village rectory, where Darby Goll I will and I will live among roses the 20th of November. By a process of elimination, right now, by choice, I must be concerned as so many others with an inner life of Notre Dame that no committee, no administrator knows how to make rules for.

On Friday, October 5, 1973

Some major attention is required to the problems of drunkenness and violence. This is an anger that directed against myself as much as anyone else, because I don't think of any of us know how to deal adequately with the private confusions underlying the surface of life.

The cemetery has people buried 12 deep in the ground. I didn't have to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day. In the afternoon I arrived in the capital city of Prague and went into the city to look at Karlovy Vary, one of the oldest and most famous in Europe, I could not see anything other than the drizzle that fell. I didn't have to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

The city itself was about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, cloudy and grey, as our train pulled in to the former big beer town. My coach was stopped outside the hotel that was going to be the neighborhood at one of the city's main streets. In the rain, my feet were bare, and I could see that some cars were there, and was surprised how the rain was not completely drab the storefronts, buildings, and people. I started to think out loud something about "Sovietism" as I recall, and words were on my lips, and so I crossed the bridge. I began to experience a little apprehension at this point, and asked myself, "What am I doing?"

I arrived in the capital city of Prague about 6 o'clock, and my way to CEDOK, the Czechoslovak tourist agency, for accommodations. Securing lodging at the University of Prague, I climbed on boardroom 21 (8 cents) for the 20 minute ride to Pod Lipami and Jarov, my building.

I left my roommates at Jarov with a few words of goodbye, and walked the streets of Prague. I didn't know it was 1973, there was no way in the world to tell.

The building itself was about the size of Flanner Hall, built at the beginning of the 20th century by W. H. Flanner, but it looked like a 1900's apartment building, with no hot water. I won't mention the neighborhood at one of the city's main streets, where I found myself, as I was not cold and didn't want to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

I broke out of my cultural shock the next day. However, I met a young Canadian woman, about 20 years old, named Tina. We had an evening of conversation, and I didn't have to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

So, then, if I am angry this morning, it is because there are committees that discuss the inner lives of students. For example, is this the kind of a dilemma to the people here about the mystery of their own sexuality. I should be able to teach them a little about free expression, or the med boards are coming up, to tell this man who has come to problems without a solution. About the additional problem of sex, and of the need of loving and being loved.

The cemetery has people buried 12 deep in the ground. I didn't have to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

The charge was 25 cents for 1 hour. As rowed under the Charles Bridge, one of the oldest and most famous in Europe, I could not feel the history of this great city, and 1 tremendous beauty of it. But the night, the greatest thrill of my trip was gone.

We got on a boat that left for the island at about 10:30 in the evening, and we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

Prague has an old Jewish cemetery, an inner life of the saddest letters I have ever read. The cemetery has people buried 12 deep in the ground. I didn't have to imagine that. As we were the only ones there on that beautiful sunny day.

social action as an extension.
The liturgian emphasized that although social action is good, it is not all that Christ requires of Christians.

Willemin said.

Although the summer of '73 is barely over, the Placement Bureau is already looking forward to the summer of '74.

Mr. Richard D. Willemin, Director of Placement, said that the Bureau is now taking applications for summer work next year. The Placement Bureau sends applications to the local chapter of the Notre Dame Alumni Association. This is the second year of summer job placement and he termed the first summer as "successful."

The more applications which were received for the mailing to the N.D. clubs will result in an early search for jobs which might beat other college students to them before the semester break.
This will also give the alumni clubs a chance to contact the student before he-leaves the campus at the end of this semester," Mr.
Willemin said.

He added that all the applications will be forwarded to the various clubs on November 1.
All of the clubs know about the program and have appointed a representative to help the student secure a job.

Mr. Willemin mentioned that some students obtain jobs which they keep even after they graduate.

"Our philosophy is to help bring the alumni and students closer together, and this is one way of doing it," Mr. Willemin said.

Jim Clarke and Sean McLidden, student directors of summer placement, reiterated what Willemin said. Clarke felt that it was an especially good idea for the student to get his application in early, since last year over 600 students applied.

Clarke added, "The main goal is to get the employer to contact the student. The Bureau itself will not supply the jobs, but will arrange for the opportunities."

The Placement Bureau is located in Room 222 of the Administration Building and students may pick up an application form there.

As the informal interview drew to a close, Fr. Hesburgh offered this observation on the taxation system in America today.

"All the typical wage earners today have taxes deducted from their salaries, no matter how small.
Whereas, the President of the United States can get by without paying any taxes at all as a result of buying those bit houses with his friends' money, and that just isn't fair."

Ervin promises action against information leaks to news media

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., promised Thursday to take action against any member of the Senate Watergate Committee staff leaking information to news reporters, but rejected a request from Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., that the staff be interrogated under oath.

Buckley said he wants to find the source of leaks about testimony given in secret committee meetings. He told Ervin he was considering legislation intended to protect the rights of accused persons "in the face of the onslaught against individual rights that leaks have engendered," without violating constitutional guarantees of free speech.

Such testimony under oath, Ervin replied, "would result in great injury to the morale of the staff and would not induce any guilty staff member, if there be such, to confess his wrongdoing."

"In my experience a wrongdoer of the kind suggested never confesses to his misdeeds," Ervin said.

He also said the committee is not empowered to administer such oaths and has no power if false testimony is given while under such an oath.

Ervin said "appropriate action" would be taken against any staff member who was found leaking secret information to the media.

In a prepared Senate speech, Buckley noted U. S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman's order Wednesday giving Vice President Spiro T. Agnew's lawyers subpoena powers to question possible sources of news leaks about the Agnew investigation.

The deluge of leaks in the current investigation of charges made against the vice president is a national disgrace," Buckley told the Senate. "The judge has dramatically pointed out the gravity of the conflict between the rights of the press and the imperatives of justice."

Adding that the problem confronts legislative bodies as well as criminal investigations, Buckley read the Senate a letter he had written to Ervin.

"I am today urging that all committee staff members immediately be put under oath to discover if anyone on the staff, in direct opposition to the spirit and the letter of the committee's rules of procedure, is leaking information to the media," Buckley wrote.

He said anyone refusing to swear that he has not violated the rules should be discharged.

Airlift possible for Soviet Jews

By United Press International
An official source in Vienna said Thursday that the Austrian government is attempting to set up an airlift from Moscow for Soviet Jews emigrating to Israel to eliminate the need for the Soviet Jews who have tried to leave the country for the last 10 years. Interior Minister Otto Roesch has promised the Arabs he will close.

At the same time, the Arab guerrilla organization that claimed credit for forcing Israel to halt all emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel or face attacks on its embassies and other interests in the Middle East.

The warning brought a diavowal of the "Eagles of the Palestine Revolution" and a sharp rebuke by the Palestinian guerrilla leadership. The guerrilla news agency WAF A denounced "unknown parties" who tried to spoil relations between the Palestinians and their long time friends and allies in the Soviet Union.

The Vienna source said the new plan would requireicot approval for Jewish emigrants to travel by plane rather than train as at present.

If approved, the airlift would eliminate the need for the Soviet Jews to intercept their voyage in Vienna except to change planes.

Interior Minister Otto Roesch said in a newspaper interview earlier that the Austrian government is "now working on a program which would make it unnecessary to maintain a transit camp in Austria for the Jews."

Kriesky has said he would close the Schoenau castle transit camp to save the lives of three Soviet Jews and an Austrian held hostage by two Arabs who said they were members of the "Eagles of the Palestine Revolution."

The Schoenau castle camp remained open Thursday, receiving several other Soviet Jews who arrived by train. About 100 who arrived Wednesday flew on to Israel.

Wholesale costs fall; consumer hopes rise

Sept. levels steepest in 25 years

WASHINGTON (UPI) -- Wholesale prices fell 6.7 percent in September, falling 6 percent and raising hopes for lower prices at retail checkouts counters, the government said Thursday.

But low food prices and the 1.8 percent decline in overall wholesale prices didn't come close to offsetting the big increases of the previous month. September saw 20.2 percent higher levels.

"While wholesale food prices may not continue to decline, Kriesky's decision warned Moscow to halt all emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel or face attacks on its embassies and other interests in the Middle East."

"We anticipate that the sharp rise in wholesale food prices will continue to decline," Stein said. The wholesale food prices might not be fully reflected at the retail level, but should "contribute to a leveling out of retail food prices in the future."

by approving domestic spying, usurping Congress' war making powers and perpetuating the "operations of various federal agencies" have been mailed to every member of the House, the ACLU said.

Aryeh Neier, ACLU executive director, told a news conference in New York Thursday that the organization's board of directors recommended that the resolution at a meeting Sunday. Neier said the ACLU's Washington and state offices would lobby with congressmen to press the resolution.

A spokesman for the 205,000-member organization said at least five other chapters, those San Francisco, Chicago, Denver and Boston, also held news conferences Thursday.

Neier said that "although all administrations have violated civil liberties at one time or another, this administration has been more consistent, blatant and serious in its violations than any that come to mind."

The two and a half page resolution said that July 30, 1970, (Nixon) personally approved the Houston Plan for domestic political surveillance and espionage by such methods as burglary, wire tapping and eaves-dropping, mail covers (interception), and military spying on civilians.

Committee he hired a girl for $20 to run naked in front of Senator Edmund S. Muskie and make him shout, accused Kelly of trying to antagonize even conservative voters.

"McGovern was the desirous nominee of the convention as far as we were concerned," Kelly said.

The plans to use "dirty tricks" to influence convention delegates against McGovern's rivals were "unholy and improper, because of the Watergate press investigation of the satellite investigations that followed," he stated.

In the March primary in Florida, Kelly said, "a girl that was hungry for money" went to the conservative college town of Gainesville, Fla., disguised and run in the street in front of Muskie's hotel proclaiming her love for Muskie.

"Unfortunately she did it," the penitent Kelly said.

He said Segretti had told him Muskie "has a short fuse" and that "Kelly stood by his contention that the tricks were not aimed at influencing voters."

"I'm not denying some voters might have been influenced," Kelly replied, but the purpose really was to "upset the candidates."

Ervin cited printed advertisements and radio commercials charging that Kelly was trying to turn whites and blacks, Cubans and Jews, against Muskie.

Among other things, Kelly said, he released a bird and two white mice at a Muskie press conference. Signs attached to the tails of the mice read: "Muskie's a ratfink!"

Kelly, a round-faced former president of Florida College Republicans, wearing a brown knitted suit and short boots, was the first witness to testify before a congressional session which was not televised — and the change in atmosphere was noticeable. The hearing started 24 minutes late with three of the senators absent.

There's a world of difference between Hugh 'Duffy' Daugherty, Michigan State's recently-retired football sage, and Daugherty, the man who replaced him at the helm of the Spartans' gridiron fortune.

Daugherty, an Irishman, is upper-middle-aged and faintly patronizing. His eyes twinkle on occasion, and he will, if pressed, conceal a brilliant football mind behind a facade of mushy gab.

Daugherty, Michigan State's football fortunes are, frankly, anybody's guess. There seems to be no reason to conceal a brilliant football mind with such a facade of mushy gab.

Daugherty's been in football long enough to have been head coach at Notre Dame. From there he moved to Michigan State, where he's been since 1963. He retired last winter, and the Spartans are the third member of the scheduled-Bud Wilkinson broadcast team on the NCAA Football Game of the Week.

This year's Michigan State football team is a year older and a year more experienced. The line is stronger. The team is usually mentioned among the Big Ten. Tradition says the Irish-Spartan conflicts have been rough, and tradition has a potent hold on the Michigan State defense.

Spartan clash, the 38th meeting between the two teams, is set for 1:30 p.m.

Football picks

In a word, it was "upsets," or at least "near upsets," which caused all the turmoil in college football circles last weekend. Wisconsin nearly beat Michigan. Ohio State, by a close margin, beat Michigan State. Indiana beat Purdue. Arkansas defeated Oklahoma. The Sooners came as close as they could come to upsetting the defending national champion USC Trojans.

Tom Clements, or Spanky, as he is called by his teammates, is the key to the Michigan State defense. Clements is the key to the Michigan State defense.

Clement's last big game was against North Carolina, heads State's defense was a breeze for the Bruins, even without quarterback Charlie Baggett, a senior college transfer from North Carolina. Fineran: N.C. State.

The Spartans have no reason to think the Sooners will be any easier. They scored only three touchdowns against the Sooners last year, and are ranked eighth nationally in scoring defense. The Spartans have no reason to think the Sooners will be any easier. They scored only three touchdowns against the Sooners last year, and are ranked eighth nationally in scoring defense.

But Autumn's been as kind to MSU as Stoltz thought it would be. The Spartans were upset by Northwestern in their season opener, and needed a last minute touchdown to defeat Syracuse, 14-10, the following week.

So tomorrow, in Notre Dame Stadium, a 1-2 Michigan State team will face a 2-0 Irish squad that's unbeaten, has allowed but one touchdown in eleven games, and is ranked sixth nationally in scoring defense.

Some observers may feel that, while the Michigan State head coach is not one of them. Despite the on-paper chances between the two clubs, Stoltz is taking his usual approach of preparing Approach Charlie Baggett.

The best prepared people win, as Stoltz would say. But Autumn has been as kind to MSU as Stoltz thought it would be. The Spartans were upset by Northwestern in their season opener, and needed a last minute touchdown to defeat Syracuse, 14-10, the following week.
