Important Watergate tapes lost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tapes of the two Watergate-related break-ins recorded for the White House now says were not recorded might have proved or disproved President Nixon's innocence in the bugging scandal.

Apparently lost to history is vital recorded evidence that could have settled whether two key figures in the case — John W. Dean and Edward G. Charles — were involved in the break-ins.

The tapes of the two break-ins could have settled whether two key figures in the case — John W. Dean and Edward G. Charles — were involved in the break-ins.

Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., chairman of the Senate Watergate Committee, called it a "curious" development. "If I was called on to produce the tapes, I would have reported that I didn't have them if I didn't have them," he said.

Sen. Lowell P. Weicker, R-Conn., said it was "obvious that it's pretty important stuff that's missing." Outside the courtroom, reporters asked Bushardt:

"Do you think the public will believe that?"

"I don't know," he replied, "but if he has paid as he said he did, there is a waiting White House lawsuit.

Court testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee last week, suggested that during the April 15 meeting with the President, Dean was believed to have provided a "detailed version of the alleged cover-up." Cox said he is not sure the tapes knew anything about their condition. "I feel pretty certain they did not know," he said.

Dean himself testified in June he suspected the April 15 meeting was taped because Nixon had him at the White House about the tapes.

Dean himself testified in June he suspected the April 15 meeting was taped because Nixon had him at the White House about the tapes.

"I felt these facts and circumstances should be believed as a matter of public record as soon as possible," Sirica said.

Sirica released the four-hour-long hearing during Thursday morning, Bushardt told reporters it had been discovered only recently — he could not say exactly when — but the two tapes did not exist.

During questioning at his Senate hearing, Cox said he had no prior knowledge about the missing tapes, but recalled a telephone conversation with the U.S. attorney handling the Watergate prosecution in New York City in which Mitchell and Fahmi told him of a conversation between Siddick and the Attorney General Bennett.

"There is concern that if girls do not major in the three smaller colleges, they may be in danger because of low enrollment," said Bushardt.

"Giving preference to those applicants intending to major in science or engineering would not solve the situation because so many change majors after arrival.

"Reactions to the current problems in Washington, Hesburgh stated, "If you have the confidence of the people. No one can govern a town if he is not respected."

Hesburgh added he knows no reason why women cannot become priests or ministers. There is no rule that prevents women from becoming priests.

In regards to the victory over Southern Cal, Hesburgh called it "a great game."

"The students and future faculty members feel the录取 of young men shall be the solution because so many change majors after arrival.

Arabs seeking naval blockade

By JOSEPH W. GRIEG

LONDON (UPI) - Western sources said Wednesday the Arabs are seeking to impose a naval blockade on the Red Sea to prevent strategic supplies from reaching the Israeli-controlled territories.

The diplomatic and defense sources speculated this might be one reason why the United States has ordered the aircraft carrier Hancock and six other ships to the Indian Ocean.

The blockade, the sources said, apparently is designed to prevent oil and other supplies reaching the southern part of the Sinai, closed to all Israeli-bound ships, including oil tankers.

In Cairo, the Middle East News Agency was reported here to have said, "Israel faces a sea blockade which is causing her great economic and political losses."

Diplomatic sources here said Israeli is unlikely to accept such a blockage following the Middle East cease-fire on other fronts.

Israel also has said any ultimate Middle East peace settlement must include provision for complete freedom of navigation on international waters.

Watergate tapes missing

doen times, and that the number remained at one time varied from one tape to as many as 15 or 20. The longest time any was gone, he said, was "under a week."

Ziegler did not know which individuals might have had access to them, although he said Haldeman had listened to one of them in his presence. He said he had not seen the log since the Secret Service lost possession of the tapes last July.

Former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman has testified that he listened to two tapes—one recorded Sept. 15, 1972, and the other of a March 1973 meeting—both held after he resigned from the post as White House aide.

Sen. James L. Buckley, R-N.Y., said disclosure of the missing tapes "dramatically shifted the burden of proof" to the President. "As of this moment, President Nixon has no clear burden of satisfying the American people that he has been speaking the truth," he said.

Halloween spirits alive at SMC

by David Lee

Staff Reporter

Amid all the decor of demons and witches and goblins, there were happy spirits at the SMC dining hall this past Halloween evening. According to Tom Novak, an SMC food service manager, St. Mary's student government and dining hall co-sponsored Halloween dinner activities.

In addition to the customary Halloween decorations, there was a popcorn machine, a costume contest, and an auction for the United Fund. Novak stated that the auction grossed over $150 for the United Fund.

Donations that had been collected from around town and school were being auctioned off in the center of the dining hall, he said. The students were really responding generously, Novak added.

Another highlight of the evening was the costume contest. Four categories were given for the best costumes, which ranged from a scarecrow to a scarecrow to hell's angels.

First place was awarded to Margie Fuchs, a junior psychology major, who dressed up as a combination Igor, Hunchback of Notre Dame and werewolf.

While accepting the prize, Ms. Fuchs reacted to the crowd's cheers by appropriately acting out the part of the monster. When asked several times why her participation in the contest, she responded that she did it all in the spirit of Halloween.

The Nixon Tragedy
Editor: Mr. Napoleon's column, "Impeachment on Suspicion," which appears in today's issue of the Observer, misunderstands the mechanics of the process of impeachment. Rhetorically listing a number of issues which have raised serious doubts about Mr. Nixon's conduct, and using the heavy club of irony to beat down straw men whom he identifies as "impeachers," Mr. Napoleon likens the impeachment movement to a witch hunt.

Furthermore, the President himself said, "If, in the best of his ability, a President does an act where he sincerely thought he was acting within the bounds of his constitutional authority, and it turns out that he was not, I think that is the best of a President's performance of his office into its bestremains for the adversary dialectic of the trial to determine guilt or innocence.

Sylllogists invented by Mr. Napoleon are needed to find sufficient grounds for impeachment. What is in question is Mr. Nixon's Constitutional obligation to "take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed," and his oath "to do the best of my Ability, to preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution of the United States." The Cambodian bombing, the ITT case, the Hughes affair, the Watergate affair and its cover-up, and the reluctance with which Mr. Nixon cooperated in the judicial process of these matters cause some doubt about his determination to execute the law to the best of his ability. Since such execution is his Constitutional function, these doubts bring the performance of his office into question and provide the basis for the initiation of impeachment proceedings.

Other alternatives are possible, specifically, a vigorous prosecution of the laws by the Executive. Mr. God's demise is a catalyst for the impeachment movement precisely because it seems to suggest that the President will not pursue the alternatives which are not in itself for impeachment, but it leaves the Congress with few, if any, other choices. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" decision, or any, other choice. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" in the "due process of Law," I suppose that the President can both abstract that appointment and interfere endlessly with the Executive investigation. If so, the obstruction of justice also falls within the definition of "high Crimes and Misdemeanors."

Generally speaking, the impeachment of a President or a person with few, if any, other choices. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" decision, or any other. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" in the "due process of Law," I suppose that the President can both abstract that appointment and interfere endlessly with the Executive investigation. If so, the obstruction of justice also falls within the definition of "high Crimes and Misdemeanors."

I agree with Mr. Napoleon that "our republic needs neither" of those. The whole sorry affair is a tragedy, whose repercussions will be felt throughout the subsequent history of this nation. I hope Mr. Nixon will be able to admit the one unequivocal form of legal discipline provided by the Constitution, and that the subsequent trial before the Senate will vindicate him. But I fear one thing more than I fear the torturer of an impeachment: that and one thing: executive government by a man who has placed himself above the law.

Sincerely,
Bob Kerby
Avoid Impeachment
Dear Editor:
Since more moderate tones are so seldom heard in this daily press, I would like to make one further attempt to clarify the importance of avoiding impeachment of the President based on suspicion.

The impeachment of a President is not a simple analogue of the impeachment of an officer of the House of Representatives, to initiate trial proceedings. In this sense, every judicial proceeding involving the criminal law begins not with an accusation of guilt. It implies only that there is suspicion, which includes the possibility of self-incrimination.

"Suspicion," which includes the possibility of self-incrimination, if it is not in itself for impeachment, but it leaves the Congress with few, if any, other choices. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" decision, or any other. The "may by Law vest the Appointment" in the "due process of Law," I suppose that the President can both abstract that appointment and interfere endlessly with the Executive investigation. If so, the obstruction of justice also falls within the definition of "high Crimes and Misdemeanors."

An Insidious Danger
Editor:
Impeachment of a President is a very serious business. I feel, especially the day after the consideration, that for impeachment far exceed any, other choices. Down from the mountains of Thrace came the followers of the great god Dionysus. The wine swillers, drunk and laughing, danced in the glittering light. Garbed in goat skin, they surged in the rhythm. Across the nation they surged Saturday from 10:00 p.m. to 3:00 a.m. immediately following the Paul Simon concert.

The Paul Simon you’ll see Saturday night is not the same Paul Simon who wrote the brooding “Sounds of Silence,” “I am a Rock,” and other biggies of the ’60s, more than he is the same Paul Simon who wrote “Hey, Schoolgirl.” Musically he has grown up, cut the apron strings of a 14-year partnership, and junked the flowery embellishment the two were heading toward in Bookends. Those unfamiliar with the solo albums, who identify him with the easy listening of Silhouettes, “The Boxer,” “Peaches in Regalia,” “The Grand Hotel,” and “The Supermarket Stony.” A highlight of last year’s Ball was the 1.94am distribution of hamburgers to the much needed participants of the bacchanal.

The Junior Architecture students currently in Rome held their own Beaux Arts Ball last Friday. The location was the Hotel Paradiso, and theme was naturally, “Inferno of Decadence.” Unfortunately, there was a restaurant located under the room where the affair was held and the owner was forced to complain about the plaster falling from ceiling, caused by the frenzy spilled.

The Architecture Building at Notre Dame offers a unique setting for this type of gala event with its balconies and galleries surrounding the open dance floor. Gene Aiello who is in charge of decorations for “A Garden of Earthly Delights” says that, “earthly, leafy, growey, viney things, and fruits will abound.” Music for the ball will be provided by the Mark Bloom Band. Tickets are $2.50 per person, and $4.50 per couple, and they will be on sale at the Architecture Library or at the door. The event is open to the entire Notre Dame community.

The name Beaux Arts Ball comes from L’Ecole de Beaux Arts in Paris, France, which began the tradition of a yearly costume ball. According to Francesco Montana, Director of the Architecture Department’s Rome Studies Program, who studied at L’Ecole de Beaux Arts, the Ball in the United States is only a minute replica of what it used to be in Paris. L’Ecole de Beaux Arts was started in the Napoleonic Era when a school was needed to maintain the various arts. The ball was actually called the “Ball of the Four Arts,” representing Architecture, Sculpture, Music and Painting. During his student days, Professor Montana attended one of these balls. The theme was, “Francois Premier,” and Mr. Montana said, “The students went all out in their costumes. They were either very elaborate or as brief as possible without creating scandal.”

The fact that Simon’s lyrics always did—and still do—appear on the album jackets indicates the importance he attaches to them, but lately he seems more occupied with experimentation in different musical forms (reggae, gospel, etc.) than in conscious poetry. The most recent lyrics (about half of the Bridge album and the two solo albums) have been a literary disappointment—trite, simple, innocuous—call them what you will. The wry humor that has always been Simon’s is there, but the introspection of the ’60s is gone.

In clarification of yesterday’s editorial concerning the Paul Simon concert, Concert Coordinator Richard Donovan released the following statement:

Patriots arriving after the performance has begun will be admitted to the concert, but only at an appropriate break in the show to be decided by Student Union and ACC officials, and the artist’s representative. In the interim, latecomers will be required to wait in the foyer.

In the dark mystical dimensions of man there has been a continuous attempt to escape from one physical dimension to another by the assumption of the physical attributes of a foreign being or object. The Beaux Arts Ball provides a twice yearly opportunity for this type of escape into the unreal with the themes of these costumed events traditionally leaning in this direction. In recent years themes have been, “The Age of Decadence,” “R’Reality in Regalia,” “Peaches in Regalia,” “The Grand Hotel,” and “The Supermarket Stony.” A highlight of last year’s Ball was the 1.94am distribution of hamburgers to the much needed participants of the bacchanal.

Golda Meir consults with Nixon

Joy United Press International

Israeli Premier Golda Meir arrived in Washington Wednesday to ask President Nixon not to give in to Arab and Soviet pressure to withdraw from the border in Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Meir said the United States was a "close friend of Israel but not the enemy of Arab states."

As Mrs. Meir flew to the United States, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt said his army was ready to wipe out Israeli forces on the west bank of the Suez Canal if the east bank did not withdraw to positions held before the Oct. 22 cease-fire.

Egypt has demanded an Israeli pullback before any exchange of war prisoners. Larry O'Brien withdrawal would free the 20,000 Egyptian troops that Israeli forces have trapped on the east bank.

"I have come to Washington," Mrs. Meir testified Wednesday, "to consult with a friendly country and a friendly president," Mrs. Meir said on arrival.

She said the United States has been a close friend of Israel and "has demonstrated it more than once. At the same time, no one can say the United States is the enemy of Arab states.

"It is one big power that is really interested in peace in the area."

"There are naturally from time to time problems for which we seek answers and clarifications," she said.

Israeli government sources said Mrs. Meir would ask Nixon to support her country's demand for an immediate and unconditional prisoner exchange-one not contingent on Israeli pullback before any Oct. 22 cease-fire.

Mrs. Meir was expected to give top priority to the deadlocked prisoner of war issue in her discussions with Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during their four-day visit. She was to meet with Nixon Thursday.

Kissinger, who will visit four Arab capitals along with Iran and Pakistan next week, said "we believe we are making progress" in efforts to negotiate peace in the Middle East.

After Mrs. Meir's departure from Israel, a military spokesman reaffirmed the nation's stand that the agreement with Egypt to exchange wounded prisoners of war did not call for Israeli troops to withdraw to the positions held Oct. 22 when the United Nations cease-fire officially took effect.

Man charged with murder after mercy killing of paralyzed brother

FREEHOLD, N.J. (UPI)—Lester Zygmaniak stood beside the hospital bed of his paralyzed brother, George, Wednesday and testified, "I had shot him.

His brother nodded, "The next thing I knew," Lester Zygmaniak testified Wednesday, "I had shot him again.

George Zygmaniak, 26, was paralyzed from the neck down in a June 17 motorcycle accident at the family home in Perrineville, N.J. On June 26, he was shot to death in his hospital bed. His 23-year-old brother was charged with murder.

George's widow, Jeannette, testified that on the fatal night George told her: "I am here to end your pain," he said. "I won't let me live. Promise you won't interfere, swear to God for me that you won't interfere."

Then, she said, the three joined hands and prayed together. Lester testified he went to his room and sawed down a shotgun. He said he took some shotgun shells, dropped melted candle wax over them to keep the shot from scattering, then went to the hospital.

"I walked over to the room, looked in and saw my brother. I asked him if he was in pain, a lot of pain. He nodded, 'yes.'

"I am here to end your pain," he told George. After he fired, he said, he put his hand on his brother's chest and said "God bless you, George. I'm sorry it had to happen like this."

Third time for financier

Grand jury indicts Vesco again

NEW YORK (UPI)—Fugitive financier Robert I. Vesco has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Manhattan for the third time in the continuing effort to have him extradited from Costa Rica or the Bahamas.

The sealed indictment which was filed Wednesday and opened Wednesday charged that Vesco defrauded $50,000 from the International Companys Corp. of Fairfield, N.J., which he once controlled.

The previous indictments alleged attempted fraud. This charge was ruled out by a Costa Rica court as an extraditable offense and Bahamas court as one of which are considered extraditable offenses.

The new indictment centers on charges of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury—one of which are considered extraditable offenses.

The defendants are Harry Sears, a prominent New York lawyer and former director of the Compagnie de Banque et d'Investimente in Geneva, Switzerland, and Mitchell are being held in New York City's Downtown Private Club as an extradition offense and Bahama court as one of which are considered extraditable offenses.

The latest indictment charges actual fraud. Vesco was indicted last May with former Attorney General John Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans on charges of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury—one of which are considered extraditable offenses.

The indictment alleged that Vesco used $50,000 in ICC funds as part payment for stock in Investors Overseas S.A., a Swiss financial complex. Vesco allegedly had asked Mitchell and Stans to influence a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of his alleged looting of $224 million from 105.

The new indictment centers on the transfer of the $50,000 in ICC funds to C. Henry Buhl, 3d, a former director of IOS-managed fund that he told George. After he fired, he said, he put his hand on his brother's chest and said "God bless you, George. I'm sorry it had to happen like this."

Protestant extremists border in Northern Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—The Protestant Ulster Defense Association (UDA) marauded uniformed patrols at the border crossings between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic at midnight in past prisoner of war exchange, but police said traffic moved through principal crossings unmolested.

The extremist UDA wanted to increase the violence of the militant provisional wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA). It had threatened a blockade to the canal's east bank.

Rebozo clarifies contribution

MIAMI (UPI) - Presidential candidate Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo said Wednesday that if the Internal Revenue Service had not begun investigating a $100,000 campaign contribution from Howard Hughes, it would have been used for congressional campaigns in 1974.

Rebozo, in a copyrighted, exclusive interview with the Miami Herald and Blackwall, said he never told Watergate prosecutor, it was only after he was asked about it later.

Reached by telephone at his residence Thursday, Rebozo said he never had anything to do with the fact that a federal charter was refused to him if he did not return the money within 90 days after the IRS investigation began.

Rebozo said if the IRS had not become involved, it would have been used for Hughes contributions, "the money would have been used in the '74 congressional campaign."

The Herald said that in an interview with two of its editors and reporters, Rebozo also said:

"...it is 'totally false' that Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox was discredited for beginning an investigation of the $100,000 Hughes contribution.

"I know I had to tell him and I knew that Rose hadn't told him, Rebozo said. "I didn't sit there forever with this money without at least telling him about it.

"He said he decided to leave the money in the safe deposit box - 'I thought I'd just sit tight and see if all this blew over'- saying he didn't know that internal battle developed within the Hughes empire.

"Rebozo put the money in a safe deposit box in his bank because he said there was no campaign finance chairman at the time."

Rebozo said he told the President's personal secretary, Rose Mary Woods, about the contribution "shortly after" he received the money. But he said he didn't tell the President about it until after the 1972 election, "on one of his visits" to Key Biscayne.

"Rebozo said he had not begun investigating a residential island where Nixon was a vacation home next to another bank application up there," Rebozo said.

"He indicated that he was in the bank because he cannot remember how much money in the safe deposit box in 1970, half in San Clemente and the other half at his Key Biscayne home. He said both times the money was brought by Richard Danner, a Hughes aide. He said there was no campaign finance chairman at the time.

"Rebozo said he was in Washington Wednesday but did not meet with Nixon.

"He said he was working on the basis of fulfilling patriotic duty."
Kleindienst denies contradiction

Washington UPI - Former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, who had threatened to resign in 1971, forcing President Nixon to permit him to appeal an antitrust case involving the International Telephone and Telegraph Co., denied Tuesday that he was about to resign.

But Kleindienst denied he had committed perjury when he told the Senate Judiciary Committee during his confirmation hearing in the spring of 1972 that no one in the White House had pressured him over the ITT matter. Kleindienst said committing perjury was "anathema to me," but acknowledged he had privately told Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., and some of their staff members about his conversations with Kleindienst.

Kleindienst, in a statement issued through his attorney, Herbert J. Miller, said former White House domestic advisor John D. Ehrlichman had called him on April 19, 1971, "and stated that the President directed me not to file the appeal in the Grinnell case." At the time, the Justice Department was challenging ITT's proposed acquisition of the Grinnell Crop, a plumbing equipment company.

"That was the last day in which that appeal could be taken," Kleindienst said. "I informed him that we had determined to take that appeal, and that he should so inform the President. Minutes later, the President called me and, without any discussion ordered me to drop the appeal."

"Immediately thereafter," he went on, "I sent word to the President that if he persisted in that direction I would not submit my resignation.

SMC to vote on lettuce boycott

by Melissa Byrne

SMC students will vote next week on a proposed change in SMC dining hall lettuce purchasing policy. The change involves buying lettuce picked by United Farm Workers rather than the Teamster Union lettuce currently used.

If students approve, SMC will sign a "sweetheart" contract made between the union and the grower without the laborer's consent.

By boycotting grapes and lettuce last year, UFW supporters have attempted to pressure the growers and the Teamsters into recognizing the rights of the farm worker. Last spring, as UFW contracts were being deliberated, the Teamsters negotiated new contracts with the growers. This is known as a "sweetheart" contract made between the union and the grower without the laborer's consent.

Connally calls for confirmation

NEW YORK (UPI) - Former President Lyndon B. Johnson called Tuesday for speedy confirmation of Gerald Ford, White House domestic advisor, to replace the resigned Richard G. Kleindienst as secretary of the interior.

Speaking at the 75th anniversary dinner of the Naval League Tuesday, Connally said some congressmen tried to "make a hostage of Ford while new attacks against the President were being deliberated."

Connally, who was once considered a possibility for vice-president, said Congress should investigate the background of Ford, the House Minority leader, as soon as possible and if they find "pertinent reasons" to reject him, then "take that action."

"But," Connally said, "if this is not the case, and I'm confident that it is not, then it is incumbent upon every responsible leader in Congress to speed the confirmation proceedings and begin restoring some stability to this government."

"There is an element of hatred in this controversy, the smell of a vendetta," he said, "and if wiser and cooler heads of both political parties don't take control, we are in for a much greater trauma than we have yet experienced.

""The Texas Republican said he did not think President Nixon would be implicated and added that the basic problem was "a conflict between the executive and legislative branches of government."

"He said the conflict was not uncommon and could be found in any level of government-state, federal or local. "And," he said, "in 99.9 times out of a hundred, it can be worked out."

"In other remarks, Connally said the United States in order to remain number one in economic and military power it had to keep its military position strong. "This means our weapons system must be upgraded consistently," he said.

Saxbe ‘relatively sure’ about selection as Attorney General

by EUGENE V. RISHER

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Sen. William B. Saxbe of Ohio, one of the administration’s sharpest critics of President Nixon, met with President Nixon for an hour Wednesday and emerged to say he was “relatively sure” he would be named attorney general.

Saxbe is returning from the Senate at the end of his first term next January, told reporters in the White House driveway that he had received assurances during the meeting that Nixon’s relating to the Watergate scandal “were proper.” He added that only routine background checks remained before the Senate’s nomination to succeed Elliot L. Richardson, who resigned along with Deputy Attorney General William D. Ruckelshaus on Oct. 21 when both refused to obey Nixon’s order to fire special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

“Saxbe relative sure,” said Saxbe, asked if he was getting job. He added: “I don’t want to be presumptuous and say I’ve got it in the bag.”

Saxbe once said of the President’s statements on Watergate: “He is like the man who plays piano in a house of ill-repute and says he doesn’t know what’s going on upstairs.” And of Nixon’s order to bomb North Vietnam in 1972, he said the President “must have taken leave of his senses.”

Saxbe told reporters these and other tart remarks of his were mentioned during the meeting with Nixon, which the senator described as open and “honest.

“I’m an outspoken guy,” he said. “I told him, ‘you’ll have to take me your way as to what you want to do.’

Returning to his office later, Saxbe said: “Some of my so-called friends brought those things to his attention. The doubts I expressed about Nixon’s actions were doubts expressed by a lot of people. But he said he did not believe it would prevent his appointment. Saxbe said he had no candidate in mind for Cox’ successor as special prosecutor, as that Acting Attorney General H. R. Haldeman is supposed to announce this week.

As for the new prosecutor’s independence, Saxbe said: “I’m satisfied any necessary information will be made available from presidential tapes and documents.”

Saxbe said he questioned in Nixon’s reply why the “woodenheaded situation” surrounding the Cox firing had arisen, and that Nixon replied that “things moved fast and it just happened that way.”

Saxbe said he asked Nixon about allegations of presidential involvement in the Watergate scandal, and was fully satisfied with the President’s answers. “I think I have a pretty good feeling for these things,” he said, and “I believe him.”

“Two went right to the basics of the Watergate matter,” Saxbe said. “I’m convinced he was not a party to the monkey business.”

Saxbe said Nixon assured him of independence should he take the job, and that he looked forward to the challenge of restoring morale at the Justice Department.

“It’s a choosing challenge I would like—personally, a challenge—because of the chance I have to serve two terms as attorney general of Ohio before he had to choose between Cox or me in 1966. He previously had served in the state House of Representatives from the age of 28, becoming majority leader and then speaker.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1973
The Notre Dame-Southern California game Saturday was cliché, but not so with the game played at the University of the Pacific. "Here We RISH, HERE COME THE RISH!" and "GO IRISH, BEAT ROJANS" rang throughout the house that Rockne built.

One new cheer, however, began in the stands in offensive linebacker Luther Bradley. He was chanted hysterically several more times during the course of the game. Instead of chanting "DEFENSE, DEFENSE", the fans were screaming "LUTHER, LUTHER, LUTHER."

Of course, LUTHER is none other than Notre Dame's outstanding freshman, Luther Bradley. The chant may have been new to Notre Dame students since it was composed by the Irish fans, but recognition is anything but new to "young" Luther. At Muncie Northside High School Luther was Mr. Everything expectedly for the football team.

"In high school, I played quarterback for a year, and last year I played defensive end and offensive backfield." His All-state honors attracted many a recruiter's country. "I was quarterback for a year, and then last year both offensive and defensive backs.

"Luther was Mr. Everything, aonors attracted many a recruiter's country. "I was quarterback for a year, and then last year both offensive and defensive backs. Luther says, "I'm adjusting to it, it's hard life, you don't realize how tough it would be. This summer I worked out pretty hard with the weights and didn't do a lot of running. You need," be added, "more speed, quickness, and strength to play college football."

If adjusting only slowly to life here, Bradley surely didn't waste any time adjusting to the fans. "I knew it would be tough. This summer I worked out pretty hard with the weights and did a lot of running. You need," be added, "more speed, quickness, and strength to play college football."

Luther Bradley

It seems that the 6-3, 195 pound Bradley knew exactly the right cut. It was one of the finest, if not the finest, freshman in Notre Dame history. He was the first freshman to start at fullback in the opening game of the season, when Notre Dame and Southern California met in Los Angeles. This was the first game of the season for Notre Dame and Southern California.

"Luther Bradley has been a super star in every game he has played. He has been impressing the officials, and the fans with his speed, quickness, and strength. He is noted for his ability to break away from defenders and score touchdowns."

The Notre Dame rugby team's game against the Michigan State team was a hard-fought battle. The Fighting Irish gave the Spartans a tough game, but in the end, the Spartans were victorious. The final score of the game was 20-13 in favor of the Spartans.

"The party was a gala event. For it was a festive occasion. Notre Dame had just beaten Southern California, and the Irish fans, in such fashion as they were used to, celebrated the victory. The cheers resounded, and the night seemed to last forever."

As big a thrill as it was, beating old nemesis Southern Cal and halting the nation's longest unbeaten string at 41 games, Luther insists the encounter with Purdue at Rose-Ade Stadium was even more of a thrill. "It was the first time playing on national T.V. and it was really exciting."

On opening day, however, Bradley experienced a different type of emotion. "Excited!" he says, "I was so nervous and so scared that I didn't want to come out of the game. This year playing on national T.V. and I was really excited."

"LUTHER, LUTHER, LUTHER," was really nice to the tradition.

"I'm thinking along different lines. A lot of times during the course of the game I think about what Seymour said and what pictures to show. The Irish are noted especially for his most recent blunders. He was banished from the state of Texas after predicting that the Fighting Irish would win the 1971 National Title. And of course they couldn't forget 1970 when Seymour produced a magnificent color picture, divided into three separate sections complete with three different captions of Ohio State, Notre Dame, and Texas. Naturally, Nebraska won the National Title."

Bob Olsen, team secretary, was particularly pleased at the turnout Friday night. "The size of the crowd definitely contributed to the way we played," Olsen added, "the people who watched the game were so happy, and the crowd was best, not a high scoring game, but two balanced teams playing well."
