Katz suggests conspiracy in JFK assassination

by Val Zarblos
Staff Reporter

Bob Katz, ex-reporter for the suburban branch of the Chicago Daily News, gave a lecture-slide presentation yesterday on the topic of "Killed at this time due to the recent Watergate disclosures against the government and is willing to accept the truth about the government and is willing to accept the fat­ally wounded. He was shot by some unknown man in front of the Book Depository asking questions of witnesses, and what the law and taking sides. He also showed Secret Service credentials. Katz commented that it was later learned that there were no Secret Service men in the area. They had all gone to the hospital.

According to Katz's slides, some arrests were made half an hour after the assassination. Men were allegedly arrested on vagrancy charges. There were, however, no records of anyone being arrested on those charges that day.

A strange coincidence is that a picture of one of the "assassins" in the Warren Commission has an artist's composite drawing of one of the suspects at Martin Luther King's assassination. The resemblance was shown on one of Katz's slides. Katz claimed that the arrests were made in order to prevent any real assassins from coming out of the scene.

After Oswald left the Marines, he was declared as "unfit for service" due to arm disabilities.

Amelio Santana said he fired two shots from the Dallas textile building which was across the street from the Book Depository.

Bill Seymour bore a strong resemblance to Oswald. He was working the assassination, claiming he was that man in the picture. After this, Hicks was beaten to death and is now being held, against his will, in a mental hospital.

"I think the only way he has out now would be to shop up some memorabilia coming from the Watergate thing," said, "Here I am Sam. What do you want to know?"

Goldwater, in his opening statement, was asking engagement at Utah State University in Logan.

A. Dominick, in a speech prepared for the Denver Bar Association, said Nixon should surrender all Watergate-related material to the Senate investigating committee and the special prosecutor. Nixon's aides insisted throughout the weekend he has no intention of resigning.

Washington UPI - Donald H. Segretti, the White House-hired lawyer who admitted playing dirty tricks on 1972 Democratic presidential contenders, was sentenced Monday to a six-month jail term which he described as a "fair sentence."

The sentence was imposed by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell, who had ordered three years probation after the jail term.

Key Biscayne, Fla. UPI - President Nixon, preparing to return to Washington, indicated through his aides Monday that he was more determined than ever to resist pressure for his resignation.

The President wound up a four-day stay at this oceanside retreat by meeting with his two Watergate lawyers, Leonard Garment and J. Fred Bubushard, to discuss strategy to combat the public skepticism that arose last week when they disclosed that the two Watergate tapes overlapped by a six-month period Monday to a six-month jail term which he described as a "fair sentence."

The sentence was imposed by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell, who had ordered three years probation after the jail term.

Washington UPI - Rep. Gerald R. Ford complete Senate testimony on his fitness to become president Monday by refusing to answer the "any and all ways" to convince the public of his innocence of complicity in Watergate.

Rabat, Morocco UPI - Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger arrived in Morocco Monday at the start of a global tour for Middle East peace talks in five Arab capitals and world policy talks with the government.

SMC vote set on lettuce issue

A referendum will be taken in the St. Mary's dining hall at the evening meal this Wednesday, November 15, to determine the feeling of the student body concerning the lettuce purchasing policy of their dining hall.

As of now, the SMC dining hall is purchasing lettuce, procured by Teamster Union employees, rather than supporting the boycott sponsored by the United Farm Workers union. This referendum will give SMC students a chance to voice their opinion on the matter.

According to Fr. Tom Stella, Campus Ministry director, this is an "opportunity to support a poor and oppressed people."

"Last spring, Brian McIntyre made the suggestion that we (The Ombudsmen Service) take an in-depth look into the problems of several diverse issues, to be answered by birth control and drug abuse. Tom Gibbons, the Special Projects and Services director of the organization, took over most of the early research," said Ombudsmen director Bill McLean.

In time, Mike Davis assumed control of the study. This was still last spring - there was no real urgency in completing the project. "About three weeks ago," McLean continued, "a recognizable increase in these calls occurred. I don't believe that this was due to an especially public increase in the problem areas. Rather, I think it resulted from a greater feeling of confidence in The Service on the part of the students."

The study was held by the Ombudsmen and it was resolved to continue the work on the study. Full-time devotion seemed almost impossible due to studies.

Ombudsmen director John Tully, a 1972 graduate of Notre Dame, returned from a visit to the States, California game. "I was extremely active in The Service last year," Tully added. "I talked to John and explained our predicament. He agreed to take over the study for an ample base for as long as he can."

Tully is now operating under the title of Special Consultant to the Ombudsmen. He began his study by interviewing members of campus ministry, Psychological Center, Psychological Service, Student Affairs and certain other rectors. These informal talks have taken place all this week. In all, about 20 interviews were conducted.

The cooperation of these people was just fantastic. Everybody was glad to help and there has been a valuable and necessary undertaking. "McLean noted.

"Fr. William Toohey, Fr. David Schiaver, Br. Just and Dr. Frank Hayes-Healy were especially enthusiastic and helpful in many ways," he added.
Off-campus shuttle starts Wed.

by Janet Denefte
Staff Reporter

The Student Government off-campus shuttle bus will begin running this Wednesday morning, announced Mike Geisinger, student body vice president Monday.

The bus costs only a dime and will run every half-hour for two hour blocks in the morning and afternoon. The first bus leaves at 7:35 a.m. from the corner of Michigan and Navarre and arrives at the Circle at 7:55. All other buses depart from the Circle. The last morning bus arrives at the Circle at 9:55 and afternoon bus resumes at 3:35 p.m. It follows the same route but in the opposite direction so that students who live fairly close to school will not have to ride the entire circuit. The last bus leaves the Circle at 5:25 and ends at the corner of Michigan and Navarre at 5:55.

The University made a commitment last spring to compensate somehow for having to force students off-campus. Thus the shuttle bus is the result of a lot of planning by Geisinger, H-Man, and Faizier Schiltz the Director of Off-Campus Housing. The route was planned with the aid of a demographic map that showed the distribution of off-campus residents.

Because of the low fare Geisinger acknowledged that "Student Government will lose money on it, but we think it will be a real benefit for off-campus students so it will be worth the expense." However, Student Government would like to get as many riders as possible because the shuttle bus is presently only an experiment and would have to be discontinued if it were not used.

Student Government is distributing copies of the schedule with a more detailed map. These can be picked up outside of the off-campus office in the basement of La Fortune, at the Student Government office, and hopefully at the bus shelter.

The bus is an older type, like the N-O-SMC shuttle and will be easily identifiable by the sign in its window, "Student Government Off-Campus Shuttle Bus."

Wilson internship program

Dennis Riegel, director of the Woodrow Wilson Administrative Intern Program, will be on campus today to discuss the internship with MBA students. The presentation will take place at 3:00 pm in Room 222 of the Hayes-Healy Building.

The Internship Program provides opportunities for MBAs interested in educational administration to gain first-hand experience. Potential interns are recruited at the nation's leading graduate schools of business and, if accepted, are placed in either traditionally black or Appalachian Mountain colleges. Their tasks run from assistants to presidents in budget officers to development officers and often part-time teaching.

Internships have averaged approximately two years in length and salaries range from $10,000 to $16,000, depending on the intern's talents and the financial resources of the cooperating college. The program is now in its sixth year of operation and has placed 44 interns at 27 participating colleges.

GOOD SEATS ARE STILL AVAILABLE

Buy the BSR 710 or 810.

Either way you'll get the shaft.

The BSR 610 and 710 have their brains in their shaft. A carefully machined metal rod holding eight precision-molded cams. When the cam shaft turns, the cams make things happen. A lock is released, an arm raises and swings, a record drops, a platter starts spinning, the arm is lowered, the arm stops, the arm raises again. It swings back, another record is dropped onto the platter, the arm is lowered again, and so on, for as many hours as you like.

Deluxe turntables from other companies do much the same thing, but they use many more parts-scads of separate swinging arms, gears, plates, and springs-in an arrangement that is not nearly as mechanical elegant, or as reliable, that produces considerably more vibration, and is much more susceptible to mechanical shock than the BSR sequential cam shaft system.

When you buy a turntable, make sure you get the shaft. The BSR 710 and 810. From the world's largest manufacturer of automatic turntables.
What's Really Your Name
To Mark Reynolds via the editor:

There are two things worse than a moron, Mark. One is a moron with a pen in his hand and the other is a moron with a pen in his hand who lacks the guts to sign his own name to his own ignorance.

Father Toohey's article on "Communism" was a joke, a parody on the style of Art Buchwald, and a parody that went in one of your ears and out the other because there was nothing in between to stop it. It was a clear, clinically done, and completely beyond the pale of anyone unfamiliar with intelligent writing. I tried to contact you to tell you that you really had missed the intentional irony in Father Toohey's article on "Communism," that, like a Watergate tape or two, have signed your full name and fear the consequences.

I was extremely sorry to see things done, perhaps not the best way but at least an effort to do something, and that is obviously much more than sitting back under an umbrella of ignorance and taking cheap shots under the guise of an assumed name.

I would first of all like to thank Dr. Rice for his article condemning abortion. It is an excellent article summarizing the only position a Catholic person can hold on abortion, and his article is sorely needed in a university such as this one.

I was extremely sorry to see some of the faculty's response to Dr. Rice's article. These faculty members base most of their disagreement on Dr. Rice's contention that the abortion issue is not properly debatable. I agree with him on this point, and his meaning is clear if one reads what he has to say. He does not say that we should not discuss the issue whenever we are given the opportunity. He has discussed the issue more than anyone else on campus. His actions speak for him there. But what is most disappointing in these faculty responses is that they are taking issue with one part of Dr. Rice's article and using this disagreement to hide the ambiguity in their minds about the position the University should take on this issue.

What Dr. Rice is offering this University is an opportunity to lead in an area vitally important to a human person. But it appears that some of the faculty members do not want to really lead, but would rather play a mediating role instead. Christ did not mediate between different factions in society, but rather led people to the truth and goodness of being. I am sick of the view this University seems to have of itself. It seems intent upon showing how open it is to any side of any question to the extent that it will only properly support those viewpoints which are popular to other academicians across the country. This University seems afraid to say there are some issues right and wrong by nature, because if it does, it might risk losing its prestige. The abortion issue is one such case, and I cannot comprehend why there should be any hesitancy in declaring it wrong.

I wrote an absurd statement that those opposed to abortion must concentrate on a constitutional amendment, but on education because people were having abortions. I hope that the Supreme Court's decision is righteous, and a good example of a failure to take a decisive public stand. According to what Fr. Toohey says we ought as well forget about ordered society, and throw out all the laws because people break them anyway. Just because people do not act according to the law does not discredit the law at all. It would be as if we taught kids to teach right and wrong if there were no laws applicable to all members of society on which one could base teaching on. Anyway, if Fr. Toohey would take the time to educate himself on the facts of abortion as Dr. Rice has, then he might come to see the real need of the matter and the need for a corporate stance on abortion. I see a real lack of leadership from these few faculty on this subject of abortion. It is a tragedy because people today are thirsting for leaders to provide them the real truth, but they will not receive it from those who insist upon equivocating in areas of truth.

So thank you again, Dr. Rice, for your fine article. I hope that the University heeds your request, because your is the only position on abortion by Catholic university can hold.

Sincerely,
Rick Schumaker

Tearing Down
Dear Sir:

I watched the ND-USC game last Saturday, and watched the hassle as the students succeeded in tearing down goalpost, in spite of the herculean efforts of the police. Later, I read that the policeman was injured as a result of this.

Several days later, I read that Fr. Husseybough seemingly gave approval to it and asked for a piece of the goalpost.

My question - if Fr. Hussey and his administrators are in favor of such outbursts, why hire policemen to try and protect their property and keep order, and run the risk of being severely injured? How is about some consistency for a change?

Allee Miller

The Observer
Late in the summer of '65 a young man sits on an isolated rocky island off the shore of Brighton in England. He is coming down from a violent drunk, accompanied by enormous doses of uppers. As he sits, he begins to piece together the confused puzzle of his life.

So begins the latest effort by Peter Townsend and the Who, entitled Quadrophenia. It is not a "rock opera," like Tommy, for there are none of the features of an opera such as the overture. There is only one character in this work, with the exception of a figure representing Townsend in the song "The Punk meets The Godfather." It is an unified musical composition, a portrait of one person and the times he is living through.

"... a unified musical composition, a portrait of one person and the times he is living in..."

The best way to describe the album is to say that it is literature. The narrative written on the inside cover, Jimmy's existential reflections, the motive which the album covers, has the feeling of Salinger's Catcher in the Rye. Jimmy is in the middle of the tumult and confusion, anxiety, rebelliousness, and passion that was such a part of the latter part of the last century.

The album opens with the sound of the sea. This is the foundation of the entire album. The dialogue of the Who, a result of the synthesis of its members' personalities, is characterized by the相互of four personalities in one person. Not only does this one person develop before us, though. We are also given musical simulations of the Who from the summer of '65, when they began to gain recognition, and the London underworld with which Jimmy was burdened as the result of being involved with a well-known gangster and singer for an entire generation.

Following the peacefulness of the opening is "Bell Boy," written by Keith Moon and the bass of John Entwistle. In the song a picture is drawn of disillusionment with the world around him. He tells of how he confuses his mother, his friends, his psychiatrist, by hiding himself in various personalities. It is a picture of disenchchantment.

A more complete statement of the four themes follows, and here the excellence of the production of the album stands out. The Who are quoted as producing aural magnificence. The sounds of the sea are heard again, and then we are plunged into a new edition of Jimmy's madness.

The song "Cut My Hair" has to do with the awkwardness Jimmy feels when trying to follow the fashionable styles of modern life. He is trying to find himself in exactly fit with in the world of his parents, and he also has a streak of the foolishness of fashion, but instead of getting by in the world of his parents, he is only in this song that Town dy begins to realize the paranoia of the world that he would rather remain a part of, the mindless steps of others, so he tries to make the connection between his emotion and the American Character...

In futility, Jimmy is leaping along - Dressed right for a beach fight - But I just explain - why that unscientific, uneregular way.

"The Punk meets The Godfather" is one of the major thematic statements in the album. In this song, Jimmy's mind sheds makes a direct statement, answering charges that he is nothing more than a leech on the energy of the people around him. He says to "My Generation" are here, but hardly distinguishable. It is a futile attempt to put on as the spokesman for a world that he would rather remain a part of than apart from.

"Distress is Jimmy's attempt to overcome his awkwardness and assume an identity within the modes. Failing this, he takes "The Bell Boy," and tries to find a definite place in the common worlds.

"Helpless Roger's Theme" is a direct rebellion against the world of "Dirty Jobs." Jimmy can no longer go along with the steps of others, and he is psychiatry by hiding himself in various personalities. It is a picture of disenchchantment.

Jimmy begins to realize the paranoia of being a teenager, and tries to reconcile this pain with the rebellion he feels in himself. Following this is a total rejection of everything he has been involved with. He is left with nothing, but this emptiness is better than the feeling of being stuffed with garbage.

He decides to leave in "I've Had Enough." In the song he is searching for something to represent the end the dominant, feautre of his personality "Love Reign O'Me" are heard. As he says, Jimmy exists in order to recognize its existence because he is not willing to make the deep commitment that it requires.

The second record opens with "5.15." This song, which is growing and changing, is an triumph of independence. The music of the album has a change here, and the power and strength and exuberance, sounding much like Who's Next.

"Dancing in the Dark" expresses Jimmy's joy at finding he can lose himself in the chaos and density that he finds on the streets. In "Drowned," he begins to realize again the foolishness of fashion, but instead of winning, or even choosing to lose himself, his mind sheds the outside world, and returns to the atmosphere of "Dirty Jobs," and once again Jimmy is forced to reconcile the rebelliousness of "Helpless Dancer" with the real world of "Bell Boy." In futility, he tries to make the connection between his personalities.

In the second of the series appear, this time with the rumblings of a storm in the distance.

"Doctor Jimmy," which includes the third facet of the personality, Jimmy's theme - "It's me?" - climaxes the action of the album in a violent binge on "Jeepers and bones." The worst, the most vile sides of Jimmy are portrayed here in senseless violence which is reminiscent of the droogs in A Clockwork Orange. He begins to realize the anguish in himself and the mindlessness of his life in "In It Me?", and makes a last attempt to bring his life together.

He steals a boat and heads out towards the rock, and we are brought back to the frame of reference we were given at the beginning of the album. "The Rock" is an instrumental, stating each of the four themes again, and then bounding them together into one piece of music. It epitomizes the highly passionate, expressionistic nature of the genius of Peter Townsend. It is an understandement to call it a masterpiece.

Finally, the peaceful piano work, and the rumble of a typewriter bring Jimmy to the conclusion of his life, the liberation and resignation to the love in his heart. It is a way, it is statement of death and rebirth. The scream at the end of his song is total emoitionalrelease, just as the scream was at the end of the Who's album "Tommy".

A climactic buildup is provided by a screaming guitar, and the work is completed.

This is, without a doubt, one of the best works of theater and drama series a great modern-dancer, a superb teacher all in one. Her dramatic "American Character...."

An introductory lecture on Transcendental Meditation (T.M.) will be presented this Tuesday, November 6 at 7:30 in room 11B O'Shaughnessy. This will begin the fourth T.M. course held at Notre Dame this semester in response to the rapid growth of interest of students and faculty members.

Carol Dixon, a T.M. teacher who will give the introductory lecture, describes Transcendental Meditation as "a simple, natural technique for the expansion of the consciousness which, when practiced daily, brings about the mind whereby the mind experiences finer levels of the inner silence and restfulness."

"Research at Harvard Medical School and the Stanford Research Institute has indicated that during the practice of T.M., the body achieves a level of rest at least twice as deep as the deepest part of sleep. The deepest part of the body allows it to throw off deep rooted tension which interferes with clear thinking, good physical health and enjoyment of life," continued Dixon.

"More recent research has indicated that with the very first meditation, the different hemispheres of the brain become synchronized and the brain wave patterns become coherent, bringing about a much more effective and efficient style of mental activity and calmness," stated Dixon.

There are also other benefits from meditation: the ability to improve relationships due to a more relaxed state and feeling of security, and the ability to improve one's spiritual life and mind-body coordination.

The T.M. course will begin with the introductory lecture and will be followed by a preparatory lecture on November 8. Both of these are required for beginning students.

Pedtke honored by students

Daniel H. Pedtke, the revered "Dwain" of the University of Notre Dame Glee Club members for 35 years before his retirement last May, was honored during a special weekend of song beginning Friday on campus. More than 300 former members of the singing group returned for the event.

Pedtke was unlagitated by a heart attack and stroke shortly before his farewell performance at the May commencement. His place on the dais was taken by a student leader for this performance, and he has since been succeeded by Dr. David C. Bele as director.

Former members of the Glee Club, one of the oldest organizations on the campus, joined with present members in an open rehearsal Friday afternoon before attending a reunion party in the evening.

The Notre Dame Marching Band, under the direction of Robert O'Brien, honored Pedtke during the halftime of the football game with Navy Saturday when they played one of his original compositions, "Notre Dame, We Hail Thee."

A public address announcement called attention to Pedtke's distinguished career as a composer, former chairman of the Music Department, and his selection as a fellow in the American Guild of Organists. A testimonial dinner was held for Pedtke in the Monogram Room of the Athletic and Convocation Center Saturday night with entertainment by the Glee Club. Weekend activities concluded Sunday morning in Sacred Heart Church when present and former members joined in the University Choir in songs at the 10:45 mass.

Meeting set to organize Red Cross blood drive for this month.

The Notre Dame-St. Mary's Red Cross Blood Program will hold its semester's first general meeting this Tuesday, November 6, at 7:00 p.m. Scheduled for Room 12C, LaFortune, the organizational meeting has two purposes.

The most immediate purpose is "to gather together everyone who wants to help out on this semester's blood drive," according to organizer Pete Meade. Port Wayne's Chapter of The Indiana Red Cross will be supervising the two-day drive, planned for November 26 and 27 (the Thursday and Friday after Thanksgiving break.) Donations will be taken at Stepan Center. Anyone who cannot attend Tuesday's meeting should contact Jack McKeon, at 488-76, to ask questions or to arrange to help with the drive.

A secondary motive for Tuesday's meeting is to introduce several possible new activities for the campus Red Cross Program. These include Standard and Advanced Courses, Reading to the Blind, and participation in the Disaster Action Team. For more information on this phase of the program, those interested should contact Pete Meade at 3412.
Lowenstein to speak on Nixon

by Gary Alietta
Staff Reporter

Allard Lowenstein, political insurgent and a possible 74 presidential candidate, will be speaking in the Keanan-Stanford chapel Wednesday night at 8 p.m. Lowenstein will highlight the drive to impeach the president in talking on "Nixon's America."

Lowenstein has been a political activist for a long while. In the early fifties, he founded the National Student Association. In 1967, he organized the "Dump Johnson Movement" which figured in Johnson's decision not to seek re-election. He was also instrumental in convincing Eugene McCarthy to run in the 1968 presidential race.

During the past few months, Lowenstein has been listed among the top 10 on the White House enemies list because of his anti-

Nixon activities.

Ed Davey and Chuck Noy, who collaborated on arranging the visit, are hoping for a large student response. "He's an incredible speaker!" commented Noy.

Davey, a former Lowenstein aide, said that one of the reasons the Long Island politician agreed to come is that "he loves Notre Dame." Lowenstein, a Jewish Democrat, has a campaign staff from formed almost entirely of ND students who have dubbed "the Irish Mafia."

He was the Senior Fellow in 1970 and his address then was one which both Davey and Nau have called "the most exciting and emotional speech ever at Notre Dame."

In 1970, Lowenstein lost a congressional election after a campaign marked by many "irregularities" on the part of his opponent. He challenged the election, a challenge which the court upheld for the first time to a New York history. He lost in the new election, however, after his opponent staged another question campaign.

Davey called Lowenstein "a common man with no pretensions. I've never met a man who loved his country more...this will be the best speech of the year."

SLC amends student rights to allow broader appeals

by Patrick Hanflin
Staff Reporter

The SLC recently amended the Student Bill of Rights to guarantee confrontation of witnesses and clarity of the right to appeal. Appeals are now possible in cases where "abuse of discretion" and discovery of "substantial new evidence" may have occurred. The committee also invited the Black Student Affairs Committee to send a non-voting representative to act as a liaison on minority problems.

The major changes in the student manual in regard to student rights in disciplinary proceedings require "access to the names of the persons conducting the hearing," the right to confront them openly at the hearing, and the "right to appeal final decisions to a higher body if abuse of discretion or substantial new evidence can be demonstrated."

Eric Penick: trying to do it all well

Extra Points

The big names in college football, Ara Parseghian, Woody Hayes, Joe Paterno, Paul Bryant, or John McKay for instance, are certainly those names with which we are familiar. And speaking of names, those of Joe Yonto, George Kelly, and Tom Pagna are far from our ken.

The names of Joe Yonto, George Kelly, and Tom Pagna are far from our ken. But in the game which is known as college football, these three men are worthy of such recognition because they are the men who organized, they are responsible for how their team performs, and while they are not the main men, they are the men who are the backbone of the team. They are the men who are the key ingredient in what this year could very well be.

Notre Dame's junior halfback Eric Penick is one of the thirteen assistant coaches that Parseghian has added. This is a refreshing attitude considering the fact that major football coaches have been bringing in assistants in order to help them with their running backs in the backfield.

Penick has worked to become more of a part of the team and more of a part of the University community. Eric Penick has worked to become more of a part of the team and more of a part of the University community. "I left Gilmour, I never realized I could even come to a school like Notre Dame."
