School to open August 28

Classes will resume prior to Labor Day

Notre Dame and St. Mary's will begin classes for the 1974-75 fall semester on Wednesday, August 28, informed university sources revealed yesterday. Administration officials were reluctant to comment on the proposed calendar until after its release scheduled for next Friday, November 16. But University Registrar, Richard Sullivan, who refused to release the calendar until its release yesterday, explained the rationale for the pre-Labor Day start.

"From the academic point of view we had to lengthen the fall semester before Christmas, an earlier start was necessary. Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost, did not know the specifics of the new schedule. "I'm sure we're going to start in August, but I don't know the date," she said.

For the past four years, the fall semester has ended before Christmas. During this time, classes could not start before Labor Day because of a trailer show, according to Sr. John Miriam.

The Midwest Mobile, Modular and Recreational Vehicle Show each Labor Day weekend occupied much of the campus. "When they're here the whole campus is encumbered," said Sr. John Miriam.

The university contract with the mobile vehicle show expired this year, enabling the university to start before Labor Day.

Dean of Administration Leo Corbaci refused to comment on the new schedule until its release next week. Corbaci, whose office is responsible for compiling the schedule, said, "I'd prefer to keep the hush up agreement."

Frederick Crosson, dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said he has received no official word of the new calendar.

"I gather from the newspapers and the Tribune that the calendar has been established. But I haven't been given a schedule," Crosson said.

Dr. William Hickey, vice-president for academic affairs at St. Mary's emphasized that the calendar would apply to both Notre Dame and St. Mary's.

"There is every intention on the part of both schools to have a common calendar," he said.

Hickey contended that there has been no "firm, final decision" about the new calendar. But he countered, "There is a definite leaning toward a particular calendar. It may very well be a calendar that begins before Labor Day."

The Law School will remain unaffected by the schedule change. Law registration will begin August 22, compared with the August 23 registration date this semester.

P. Ferdinand Brown, associate provost, and Richard Conklin, director of information services, refused to comment about the proposed calendar.

University Provost James Borchelt and Assistant Provost William Burke were unavailable for comment.

Washington—Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski testified Thursday that he has been promised the authority to sue President Nixon. Jaworski, appointed by President Nixon November 1 to replace former special prosecutor Archibald Cox sought in his testimony to discourage a House judiciary subcommittee from filing a lawsuit in Washington—Former Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson testified before the Senate Judiciary Committee Thursday, that the Watergate House talked of "getting rid of" special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox two months after he started his investigation.

Washington—The House will vote on confirmation of House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford as vice president the week of December 3, it was announced Thursday.

Washington—Agriculture Department economists predicted Thursday that the current decline in grocery prices will end in early 1974 and then begin to climb at a moderate pace. The experts said, however, that the January-June increase in food prices will not reach the record levels of last August.

Jesup, Md.—About 40 Maryland state policemen, using shotguns, tear gas and an armored vehicle, stormed the education building of the maximum-security Patuxent Institute Thursday, freeing 14 hostages who were held two hours by nine inmates.

A hand-to-hand fight between police and the inmates, five persons—three hostages, one inmate and a police sergeant—were injured. One guard suffered multiple stab wounds.

Washington—President Nixon formally asked Congress Thursday to quickly enact emergency legislation empowering him to ration gas and heating oil.

Following up his broadcast speech to the nation Wednesday night on the nation's energy crisis, the President sent a special message to the House and Senate outlining his proposals. Nixon's request came as Federal Power Commission Chairman John N. Nassikas and Sen. Henry M. Jackson agreed at a hurriedly called hearing of the Senate Interior Committee that there is no way to avoid gasoline rationing unless Americans drastically reduce consumption.

The committee already has a bill which would grant sweeping new authority for the President to force the bureaucracy to conserve fuel, to allocate ration fuel, require power plants to use coal instead of oil, and to relax clean-air standards for the time being so that relatively high-pollutant fuels can be used.

ND student suspects in attempted assault

by Tony Proseco
Staff Reporter

Two Notre Dame students are suspects, according to ND Security Director Anthony Kovatch says his office is waiting for a positive identification of one of the two men before filing of formal complaint.

The girl was approached between the St. Mary's library and science buildings around 9 p.m. by a man who came up to her, exposed himself, and put his arms around her. Kovatch said, "She resisted him and escaped unharmed."

"We picked up the first suspect Friday night," he continued. "The girl had given us a good ID, but she couldn't positively identify the man we brought in." Security police then found the second suspect, he said.

"This is our first problem with a Notre Dame man," he noted. "The first incident (an attempted assault in early September) did not involve a Notre Dame student."

A South Bend resident is being held in that case.

The girl described her assailant as a "white male, 5'10", 160 pounds, with long, black hair tied back with a headband, and wore wire-framed glasses. He had a mustache and beard and wore an army fatigue jacket and blue jeans."

"The man was from 19 to 21 years old, Kovatch said, and escaped on a yellow 10-speed bicycle.

"She ran back to Madalena hall," he continued, "and called her roommate. The roommate called us, and Security was there in a few seconds. If other girls that have problems would call right away like that, security could do much more."

He added that plans are being considered for a front gate at St. Mary's to regulate incoming traffic at night. An additional route to provide one way routes in both directions is also a possibility, he said.

"We've been fortunate," commented Dean of Students Kathleen Mulhern. "In that no one has been hurt. Both girls (referring also to the September incident) kept their cool and handled their situations very well. We urge girls, if anything like this should happen to them, to get in touch with security right away. They'll be treated con-

McGovern to speak Sunday

Senator George S. McGovern of South Dakota, defeated Democratic presidential candidate in 1972, will discuss contemporary politics at a public talk in Stopen Center at 8 p.m. Sunday, November 11.

McGovern's talk is sponsored by the Notre Dame Academic Commission. Charles A. Nau, lecture chairman of the Bar Association, was a member of the 1970 McGovern Commission on Party Reform.

Sunday's talk will be McGovern's third Notre Dame appearance in recent years. He debated the morality of the Vietnam war with Senator Gail McGee of Wyoming at a 1967 symposium and was a speaker at a Brademas-Hartke rally in 1970. He is a candidate for reelection South Dakota next year.

McGovern's talk is part of the Robert F. Kennedy Lecture Series on the campus. Other noted figures lecturing at various lectures include Frank Mankiewicz, writer of the Kennedy campaign, and Charles Evers, outspoken black politician.

Lowenstein in depth

by Ann McCurry
Staff Reporter

Allard Lowenstein unabashedly entered the crowded Flanigan's 3rd floor dining room, wearing a rumpled, bargain-basement suit, a dirty ski parka slung over his arm, a worn manilla folder bearing with references tucked underneath. The other, he bore more resemblance to an absent-minded professor than a dynamic politician.

He looked a little uncomfortable as he sat down, but then a Catholic chaplain set forth to a Jewish politician. As his former aide, Ed Davey, introduced him, Lowenstein oriented himself to the surroundings.

An assorted assembly of three hundred people filled the chapel, their hair styles, their hearts, not unlike the names on the floor. There was no question that the ND Laundry Service so long as you are willing to pay the cost of the service rendered which is usually very reasonable.

Davey completed his greeting and Lowenstein unperturbingly approached the podium. Suddenly he was no longer a seemingly shy middle-aged man. He exploded into a forceful, energetic, responsive Allard Lowenstein that Notre Dame has loved and supported throughout the years, the Allard Lowenstein that had been named the Senior Class Fellow of 1970.

He appeared to speak expeditiously. Often, however, a smooth transition to a hasty ruffling of the information stood beside him. Fuse in his manila folder, followed by a quota or a statistic betraying purpose.

Lowenstein spoke vigorously with a vivacious wit and well-timed sense of humor that delighted his audience as they seemed, in turn, to please him. He spoke from his heart, with conviction and logic and a openness that promoted the rapport of a kitchen table bull session. And the talk flowed as such a discussion. The crowd dissipated but some stayed, at Lowenstein's formality and talked honestly about the political as well as the political.

Hope and Idealism

Lowenstein changed into a sports shirt now. He sat on the back of a pew, his shoes off, sipping a Coke, promoting the use of coffee and promoting the use of coffee, the use of coffee and promoting the use of coffee, the use of coffee and promoting the use of coffee, the use of coffee and promoting the use of coffee.

He answered questions more freely now, permitting a little more of his emotion and sentiment to shine through. He talked of the coming elections, his possible candidacy, the power of the people and the people who had made substantial impressions on his life. It was at this time, as he spoke of Robert Kennedy, that pain and sorrow registered most clearly in his expression. Yet, he haunted his listeners positively, reminding them not of the horror of Kennedy's death but of the hope and idealism our country had once held in its heart. He assured them that, in time, this hope could come again.

Comforted, the majority of the lingering crowd faded into the November night that had brought them to the sanctuary and introduced them to Allard Lowenstein. Drawn by the warmth and magnetism that flows from this humble Brooklyn man, a few lingered in hopes of gaining still more of an insight into Allard Lowenstein, the man.

A quick trip to the Ruddle refreshen (sic) the tired politician. Shortly, he sat in Davey's room munching an apple, calmy chatting with his followers. Lowenstein relaxed now. He removed his socks and shoes as if casting aside the last guise of pretense. He sat in Davey's room munching an apple, calmy chatting with his followers. The tension between ideals and practicalities is not peculiar to the life of a politician, Lowenstein explained. "Every man has two basic needs: love and commitment. If you have requitted love, you have given up the security to fulfill commitments. The loss of an election isn't so much in comparison to the love of your family and friends."

Observer Insight

"What can we do?" asked another.

Lowenstein smiled slowly as if embarrassed by the weight of the compliment he was about to pay. "There is no place," he said of Notre Dame, "that has, per capita, more interested or intelligent people... Kids from this university can deal openly in a way no others can."

Lowenstein continued more generally. "Most people never make an effort which extends themselves, they cheat themselves as well as others. When people extend themselves it is not a hurt or a sacrifice, it produces something better in themselves...produces a ripple that can better society."

Lowenstein donned his socks and shoes. He still had to drive to Elkhart before his day would end. Another Lowenstein visited to Notre Dame had come to an active end. The lessons he taught will remain, however.

For the New York politician brought more than a folder of old clippings and a store of anecdotes. He brought hope.

Suspect students attempt assault

The LaFortune Renovation Committee met yesterday to discuss problems concerning the proposed Irish Pub construction. At the meeting Vice President of Student Affairs Philip Facenda suggested a redirection of the committee's efforts. Although the Board of Trustees rejected the first bid of $244,000 for Pub construction they suggested an alternate plan which would include renovation of the Hoynes Hall (Psychology Department), the mail, and the possible construction of a small adjoining building, said Facenda. Among Facenda's suggestions for redirection were moving the Pub to first floor LaFortune as an extension of the Pub, creating a large second-floor room for private parties, and reshuffling the upstairs offices.

Ken Knevel, a fifth-year architecture student, said he wanted to see LaFortune project a "living room atmosphere." It was against the philosophy of the project, he added, to move the Pub upstairs making the first floor into a restaurant. He also expressed his reservations concerning the Elise & Architect's $1 million dollar estimate for the Pub. "I'm happy with the plans we've drawn up for LaFortune," said Knevel. He continued that he felt the figure for the Pub was outrageous.

In further discussion the committee considered Facenda's suggestion to move student publications to the Hoynes building and Student Affairs and Lathers resigns from SLC Board of Commissioners

by Joseph LaFlare

Maureen Lathers resigned from the Board of Commissioners last month. Since then, no one has been elected to replace her.

"I felt that the work needed to do a good job just took up too much of my time," Lathers said. She felt that someone else with more time could do a better job.

According to Dennis Knevel, Student Body President, "I had a replacement in mind, but the Board of Commissioners decided to nominate some more people and give the decision some more consideration."

The Board of Commissioners has been very busy with SLC meetings lately, and have not yet had the opportunity to decide on a new member yet. According to Knevel, a new member should be elected next week or sometime in the near future.

Facenda suggests redirection of committee's efforts.

Efforts to educate female students on defence are underway, she continued. Films made by the South Bend Police Department and self-protection booklets are being offered through security offices, a course in self-protection was recently given to St. Mary's RA's. Booklets are also available from the Dean of Students office, she said.

Centers solve doctor shortage

In the Nineteenth Century Malthus developed his theory that population increases at a faster rate than its means of subsistence. In 1973, the population is still increasing and we are faced with a problem similar to Malthus' theory. The population is growing but the number of physicians graduating from medical school remains static.

How do we solve this crisis before it is too late?

The state of Indiana was a pioneer in taking steps to relieve the problem pragmatically and realistically by developing a regional center program administered by Indiana University Medical School using the facilities of various neighboring universities.

Increase and distribute

In 1967, Governor Edgar Whitcomb commissioned the "Indiana Plan" which was to increase the number of graduates from the Indiana University School of Medicine in as short a time as possible without a major capital expenditure or the building of additional educational facilities. The plan established seven regional centers for medical education for first-year students.

Even though the centers have a cooperative agreement with their respective universities' facilities, these schools are not connected administratively or academically with the program.

The regional centers are located all over Indiana, thus spreading the medical opportunities to all residents. Centers are in South Bend at Notre Dame, Bloomington, Lafayette, Muncie, Terre Haute, Evansville, and Gary.

Edward G. Gibson and William R. Pogue were declared in good condition for Saturday's blastoff on a record-length Skylab 3 space mission. The prime crew completed the last major pre-flight examination today and the astronauts are cleared medically for the anticipated launch," said Dr. Royce Hawkins, the astronauts' chief physician at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The primary mission of the Skylab 3 crew is to study the effects of prolonged weightlessness on human body systems. Other tasks include spacewalks, the first in the history of the Skylab program, and the collection of scientific data.

Microbiology, anatomy, and physiology. Pathology and pharmacology are offered first-semester sophomore years.

Microbiology and biochemistry are taught by Notre Dame professors and the other courses are instructed by IU faculty with offices at Notre Dame. There are only two other full-time faculty members besides Troeger, Jerry Critz and Jack O'Malley, both Ph.D.'s. O'Malley is also associate director for the program at Notre Dame.

Three regional centers are "advantageous" in that they afford small class sizes with a future minimum of twenty-four in a class said, Dr. Troeger. Importantly, they have increased the total number in the I.U. Med School freshman class by thirty percent. This year's freshman class totals 360 versus the 256 freshman three years ago. Fourteen first-year students are located at the South Bend center at Notre Dame.

In previous years, there have been at least two to three Notre Dame graduates in the school, according to Troeger, but this year there is only one. This program enables the students to have easy access to instructors. It also gives students an opportunity to attend classes close to home. Through the plan, med students have immediate contact with physicians and patients by doing clinical work in surrounding communities.

Senior "elective year"

A pilot program began seven years ago with two students in the center at Notre Dame and two at Purdue to see if other educational institutions other than the Med School in Indianapolis could provide the basic sciences which freshman med students study, said Troeger.

The Notre Dame center is in the basement of the Wenninger-Kirsch building.

Thomas A. Troeger, M.D. director of the Notre Dame center, claims that the goal of the regional program is to increase the number of doctors in Indiana and to improve the distribution of the physicians in the entire state. He believes the plan can increase the number of doctors in Indiana by one-third without delay and without spending $50 million to build a new state medical school.

The seven regional centers are "advantageous" in that they afford small class sizes with a future minimum of twenty-four in a class said, Dr. Troeger. Here we go again!

The Observer has discovered that on Nov. 16, the University will release their calendar for the 1974-75 school year and it's nearly the same schedule that students have been using for three years now.

It's kind of incredible because we've been here before.

The Past Repeats

Wednesday, March 8, 1972 - "1972-73 schedule starts classes early" blamed The Observer headlines. The university explained that the semester was too short and that more class days were needed. Further they claimed that the early start was necessitated by a mid-semester break. The final justification offered was that it followed the trend being established by other Indiana schools. The article admitted that student response was negative.

Thursday, March 9, 1972 - "Students try to change the new calendar" was the headline on the second day lead about the calendar in The Observer.

Friday's issue revealed in an Observer poll that 79 percent of the students were not in favor of the calendar. On March 14, we published that over 3400 students had signed petitions disfavoring the change. Finally, on April 5, the Academic Council bent to the student response and changed the pre-Labor Day opening.

A Mobile Escape

Last year, the new calendar was to have started before Labor Day again, but the Mobile Home show interfered with the new academic calendar, so the plan had to be scrapped until the contract with the show and the ACC ran out. Well, the contract runs out next year and the students get stuck because of it.

Lost Work Time

The students should be very much against the new calendar again. It dramatically shortens the summer working season for many students resulting in considerable smaller earnings. From all indications, the average wage level of Notre Dame families is lower than in past years, which would further emphasize that the students need the time to earn the money and the Labor Day weekend is a crucial period for earnings.

Further, a lengthy break in the midst of the semester would force many of the students to go home - an expense many cannot afford. Compounding the problem established by a shorter possible earning calendar.

Why Not Co-ed Dorms?

Finally, handing us the line that it's part of a trend is nonsense. Coeducational dorms are another trend, but you don't see Notre Dame opening up coeducational living facilities. That is simply an excuse made up after the fact.

The announcement of the new schedule was to be released on Nov. 18, the Sunday after The Observer's final issue before Thanksgiving break. A move undoubtedly planned to keep students unaware of the announcement. Rumors claim that the Provost is adamant that the calendar be implemented and the planned date of release simply strengthens that claim. Only after some urging and pressure did The Observer convince University personnel to release the official version of the calendar before the termination of Observer publication.

Two years ago considerable student pressure forced the issue and caused a change. And students are now faced with the glaring fact that such pressure must be duplicated.

The Male Role

In all the talk about abortion, I have yet to hear any discussion, much less a solution, which takes into account the man's responsibility as impregnator. Why are we so gorilla-like about the issue? God and religion always talking in terms of controlling the woman when the simplest solution rests with themselves and with the young boys who are visibly opposite abortion.

It seems to me the easiest way to eliminate abortion is to control the impregnator, NOT the woman already impregnated.

One method comes to mind. A man would engage in sexual intercourse with a woman only when the woman wanted a baby. He could continue sexual relations with her if she was convinced that he would fulfill completely his responsibilities as father, from the birth of the child to his her independent adulthood.

Otherwise, she could discontinue sexual contact with him and take care of the baby herself, as many women are forced to do anyway.

The benefits of this system are immediately apparent. Since there would be no unwanted pregnancies, there would be no abortions. "Phantom fatherhood" would be impossible.

This line of thinking makes no sense whatever. Mr. Aiello's borrowed wisdom that he uses as his example of solid evidence is a list of charges, each of which has one unproven aspect, either it is not proven that Nixon had any direct link with the illegal act, or it is not proven that the act was illegal. Mr. Aiello thinks that if it was in all legality he could be indicted for bringing a person into court of Federal Nature without an indictment obtained by testimony of reliable witnesses backed up by a sufficient amount of solid evidence. Mr. Aiello is in no legal position to impugn Mr. Nixon. As it is not proven that the act was illegal.

The statement that all the un-democratic things that happen in other countries can happen here is a vehemence insult to our Constitution. It would take a lot more than one man in one office to make that true. The constitution is designed to prevent any one branch from becoming omnipotent. The balance has always been maintained and it will be, which is the one thing that distinguishes our form of government from others.

In reference to Mr. Aiello's use of Willie Townsend's quote, and also as a final comment I would suggest to Mr. Aiello that he look at employment as a reporter, because although his pseudo-dramatic editorial did not appeal to me, my sense of rational debate, it warped, an aspect essential for good lines.

David Crosby on Graham Nash: "Now Crosby and Nash were more like brothers than anything else. Nash is much more than just a brash extrovert, a self-proclaimed energy source. Nash is more laid-back, calculating, calm, and generally more predictable. Sometimes they will stay together, not because of their basic similarities, but because their differences mix so well.

Nash always seemed to be the anchoring force in the group, as if without him the others would burst from the friction of ego scraping. Even in the Hollies, he seemed to have that certain touch that they had lacked since his departure, a touch of simple symmetry. For Crosby, his personality and musical talent are beginning to display themselves in new, unpredictable ways.

In concert, Crosby and Nash are somewhat separated. Sometimes they will play with their electric instruments, sometimes they will do a whole show with only acoustic instruments. Either way, it is a treat to watch two musicians play and know that they enjoy what they are doing, and the chance to do it. One possibility is that they will be playing some of the songs from the album they just completed in Neil Young's home studio.

Also on the bill Saturday night is Linda Ronstadt. She is not only known to play large halls, preferring to entertain in clubs and smaller places. Her beautiful, clear voice and pleasant manner are sure to be an enjoyable lead-in to the main attraction.

Dunham found another exam­ ple in a speaker in the First Circle, who said, "The writer is a teacher of other people. A great writer is the second government in his country. For that reason no regime has loved great writers, only minor ones." Dunham said that this parallels Solzhenitsyn's own situation.

"Ever since the Revolution, the Soviet Government has controlled the Soviet writer in several ways," Dunham said. "It has suppressed him, persecuted him and destroyed him while giving him, non-literary tasks, turning him into a servant of political power. But it has never ignored him."

Dunham added: "I am gathering shred that show Solzhenitsyn's concern for that sense of self which leads to spiritual freedom," said Dunham.

Dunham concluded, "A person you have taken everything from is no longer in your power, he is free all over again."

"Most of his work is autobiographical. Many stories could have been about himself, but they are not. They are about Everybody," Dunham said.

One such example is Matrona's House a short story Solzhenitsyn wrote in 1963. "If I lost my memory and got to first circle that story, to remember, that is the story I would choose," Dunham claimed. Matrona is a woman who forgets herself and her own work to help her neighbors dig potatoes.

Dunham found another exam­ ple in a speaker in the First Circle, who said, "The writer is a teacher of other people. A great writer is the second government in his country. For that reason no regime has loved great writers, only minor ones." Dunham said that this parallels Solzhenitsyn's own situation.

"Ever since the Revolution, the Soviet Government has controlled the Soviet writer in several ways," Dunham said. "It has suppressed him, persecuted him and destroyed him while giving him, non-literary tasks, turning him into a servant of political power. But it has never ignored him."

Dunham added: "I am gathering shred that show Solzhenitsyn's concern for that sense of self which leads to spiritual freedom," said Dunham.

Dunham concluded, "A person you have taken everything from is no longer in your power, he is free all over again."

We are a relatively young organization which is the result of our hobby developing into a business enterprise. While still hobbyists we were plagued by a recurring conflict. We had to pay the high price of audio salons or to get a good price we had to mail order to the coastal discounters and then take our chances that the equipment never needed repair.

WHAT ARE WE TRYING TO ACCOMPLISH?

Our goal is to combine the business efficiency of the low overhead, high volume warehouse with the professional guidance and services of the plush audio salons, allowing us to be directly competitive with the lowest prices in the country.

HOW ARE WE GOING TO DO IT?

From our experience we can recommend the best products from a performance and service standpoint thus cutting down the high cost of returned merchandise and repairs. By combining this with super-low prices and large sales promotions we hope to create enough excitement to double the volume normally possible in a store of our size and overhead.

ARE WE MAKING PROGRESS?

Only you can answer that question — so if you haven't shopped for audio components lately come on down to meet us, chat about the newest products, and see what you think of our prices.

3,000 tickets remain left for Air Force game

by John DeCoursey
Staff Reporter

There is a good chance that the Notre Dame Air Force football game will not be sold out, according to N.D. ticket Manager Don Bourfard. "If it is, it will be the first time Notre Dame Stadium hasn't been sold out since the 1964 Notre Dame-Michigan football game," he continued.

There are still 3,000 general admission tickets left, and the student tickets are being converted to personal admission tickets at a slow pace. As of November 8, with freshman still turning in tickets, 1,100 student tickets are outstanding.

Bourfard said that some of the students probably haven't exchanged their tickets because they don't know what their Thanksgiving plans are at the moment.

Students may still bring their regular season tickets or their receipts from ticket exchange program, to the ticket office and obtain general admission tickets, up to the day before the game, Bourfard added.

Mock Market

The annual Notre Dame mock stock market is now underway in the lobby of the Hayes-Healy building.

The mock market, sponsored by the Finance Club, gives students an opportunity to play the market with no risk of loss.

The Mock Stock Market will run for six weeks from November 5 to December 14. Hours are Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. until noon, and in the afternoon from 1:00 until 3:30.

Wisconsin, to be played on November 16 and 17, at the ACC have already been sold out. 3,200 season tickets, including 1,100 student tickets, have been sold, thus leaving only 1,300 single game tickets for each game.

The 1,200 tickets for the weekend series against Wisconsin went on sale November 7 and were bought immediately. Most of the tickets went to Notre Dame students, while a few went to Wisconsin students who drove down to buy the tickets, according to the ticket manager.

ATLANTA (UPI) — A bandit cornered in a bank with four women hostages and got $200,000 in cash late Thursday, then died in a gun battle that erupted as the hostages tried to escape.

The police believe he was a member of the Black Egal Rights and Female Equal Rights movement, walking this she made four main points.

First, opponents and oppressors of this should not let themselves be divided. They should collect divided. They should collect

Second, all women are being accused of trying to de-masculinize the male. Thus, when women receive equal rights and pay, they are alienating their male counter-part.

Third, while a few years ago she saw black dams using black to pledge allegiance to the flag, she sees women daring women. Reciting the phrase "with liberty and justice for all," she asked the audience, "who is all?" She then questioned whether women were really considered people.

Fourth, society by using another divide and conquer tactic is infiltrating the second largest minority, women of Spanish heritage. They are leading these women to thinking that they have a cause.

But that is not the case, Jones declared. "Women must assume their obligations. They should not let themselves be divided."

a Committee on the History of the University, responsible for collecting and publishing documents for Notre Dame's 150th anniversary in 1992, has been appointed by the Office of Provost under the direction of Fr. James Burtchaell.

According to Richard Conklin, Director of Information Services, "The formation of this Committee has become very necessary for a university of our stature. There was a kind of gap left between the Cavanaugh years and the Hesburgh years, from 1946 to 1973. Almost everything has happened to the university since then. Conklin labeled the Committee as a "control center" or "clearing center" for the written and oral sources which will eventually be used as background material by the as-yet-unknown person commissioned to write Notre Dame's sesquicentennial history.

The last official history of Notre Dame was compiled by Fr. Hope, a professor of philosophy and former Notre Dame student. This history covered the first 100 years of Notre Dame (1842-1942). Since that time there have been several studies, but none under the specific direction of the University.

The whole focus of the new Committee will be to collect source documents, view these facts and provide a framework for the writer, stressed Conklin, but it will not interpret or imprint one point of view upon the proposed history. At present, the Committee's source materials are primarily located in the University Archives, which hold published materials, and the Notre Dame Collection, which holds published material in the history of the University.

Although the Committee intends to draw upon these two collections, it also plans to make a more concentrated effort in discovering new untapped areas of information.

Committee member Dr. Thomas Streichert, assistant professor of American Studies, hopes to not only save administrative and institutional materials but also the diaries, journals and correspondences of students and faculty in the 20's and 30's, which would provide a more three-dimensional view of university life.

Dr. Schreiber, who also teaches the seminar this Seminary year, "The History of Notre Dame," believes consideration may be paid to his students' research projects, which might explore more student insights.

To Fr. Thomas Blantz, university archivist and committee chairman, "the historical knowledge compiled by the Committee will help us to understand the Notre Dame of today and guide us in the decision making of the future. It's good to know our background simply for the sake of knowing our own university." Dr. Blantz sees the Committee continuing to write the history. "The kind of growth rate since the end of World War II made it imperative for the Committee of this at time," believes Dr. Schreiber. "We have a long time away but actually it is not."

The Committee invites any individual who might know of any sources of data or collections of materials to contact the following Committee members: Blantz Schreiber, Conklin, Fr. Thomas Clark, is the Memorial Library's microfilm specialist; Price, archivist for the Holy Cross Fathers' Indiana Province; Dr. M.A. Fiume, director of Information Services. Dr. Philip Gleason, associate professor of history; Dr. Vincent Lanni, associate professor of education, and Dr. George Sereika, assistant director of Libraries.

SMC Food Service has lettuce shortage

by Melissa Byrne

Staff Reporter

"I am sure there will be lettuce shortages and I am anticipating some problems in obtaining UFW lettuce," said SMC Food Service Director David Brewster.

SMC students voted Wednesday evening to change SMC dining hall purchasing policy. The change involves buying lettuce directly from the United Farm Workers, rather than Teasman Union Lettuce purchased at the SMC campus store.

As a result of the vote, if no UFW lettuce is available, no lettuce will be served in the SMC dining hall. "I spoke to Mr. Price, director of Notre Dame Food Service, and he said he was beginning to have problems obtaining lettuce," commented Caswell.

UFW lettuce has been served in Notre Dame dining halls since a referendum similar to SMC's was passed last spring.

Price commented, "We can't get lettuce now. It's a wonder this hasn't happened before." "Our suppliers have bent over backwards to supply us with UFW lettuce in the past few months. They've been going all the way out to the west coast," said Price.

"The referendum said when we could not get United Farm Worker students the lettuce would do without lettuce. So if the students want to break the referendum, then they'll have lettuce," said Price.

The SMC Food Service has not ordered any lettuce since the referendum passed. "However, we'll soon be calling in orders. We'll know the situation better later this week," said Caswell.

GOOD SEATS ARE STILL AVAILABLE
The University of Pittsburgh has seen a major change in football this season. Coach Johnny Majors, that's right, the one who also brought Iowa State football up from the Big Eight cellar during his five years there, is hoping to work similar miracles for his new empire at Pitt.

The Panthers have not posted a winning record since 1963, when they finished 6-2-1. Their overall record is just 2-68-2, including victories over Northwestern, West Virginia, Boston College, Navy, and Syracuse, and a 7-7 tie with Georgia.

Majors is determined to finish even better.

"Our fans are not going to learn now to lose," he said. "We certainly won't lose."

To begin his campaign against defeat, Majors has concentrated on what he considers "the most important factor of the game."

Freshman Tom Dorsell, a much sought-after back from Aliquippa, Pa., was successfully recruited to Pitt, and has already gained over 100 yards on the ground to break the previous Pitt single-season record. Besides scoring 9 touchdowns, Dorsell has Pitt's first run from scrimmage this season, a 79-yarder against Northwestern, a record of 365 yards in that game. Honored as back of the week by the UPI, AP, and Sports Illustrated after only three weeks of college ball, Dorsell certainly gives a new meaning to the word "Irish".

Quarterback Bill Daniels, the team's leading scorer, has 10 touchdowns, in second in rushing with 422 yards and 33 assists while All-East tackle Glenn Hyde (6-3, 235) is a close second.

Two transfer students, linebacker Keevy Davison from Arizona State, and tackle Gary Burley from Wharton Junior College, are also strong defensive players, currently third and fourth in total tackles made.

"We've come a long way, further than I anticipated," said Daniels. "And we're going to go out there and play with reckless abandon," he continued. "And we're going to have some fun. There's no sense for us to be uptight about it. We've got too out there with confidence, but we have the ability to win a ball game yet I didn't think I could win."

Despite the strength of Pittsburgh's defensive unit, Majors will have his work cut out for him if he plans on stopping the fifth ranked Irish.

Outscoring their opponents 235-41, Notre Dame has 3226 yards total offense against 1146 for the opposition. Quarterback Tom Clements is pacing at 54 percent and has an excellent receiver in split end Tom Canfield (116 yards). Backs Wayne Bullock, Art Best, Eric Penick, and Al Hunter have proven difficult to stop for seven teams the Irish have defeated thus far this season.

Notre Dame's defense is the best in the nation, yielding only 41 points for an average of 5.9 points per game and 144 yards per game. Freshman back Luther Bradley had, including victories in the last five years, and with Mike Townsend, who last year led the nation with 10 thefts, he gives the Irish a strong secondary.

An even stronger defense against the run is led by Junior linebacker Greg Collins, freshman defensive end Ross Browner, and senior linebacker Gary Potema.

"Defensively," noted Pitt scout Bob Leahy, "Notre Dame can replace its starters more than any other team. They have the people capable of doing that. Luther Bradley is one of the most impressive freshmen I've ever seen, and quarterback Tom Clements is very, very similar in style to our own. We have to call his own number in key situations."

In this long rivalry between Pittsburgh and Notre Dame, the Irish hold a commanding 27-15-1 lead, including victories in the last nine years. During this time the Panthers have been outscored 413-79.

Johnny Majors is going to do his best to change that picture tomorrow, but it certainly won't be easy.

Notre Dame's defense throttled Pittsburgh last year, 46-14, but will have its problems tomorrow. The Irish "D" must stop the Panthers' double threat combo of Tony Dorsell and Bill Daniels.

Student season hockey tickets available Monday

Those Notre Dame and St. Mary's students who purchased hockey student tickets may pick them up at the Ticket Window on the second floor of the A.C.C. this Monday and Tuesday, November 12 and 13, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Students are asked to bring their ID for identification. Ticket orders have already been snapped up.

Those students who have purchased season tickets may buy tickets on an individual basis at gate 10 of the A.C.C. $20 reserved-seat tickets may be purchased for $15, upon presentation of a valid N.D. or SMC. ID card, a limit of one (1) ticket per game. ID's are available at the Gate 10 Box Office from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Saturday.

The Wisconsin series is a complete sellout.

Steve Curry  Captain's Corner

Notre Dame plays 34 games during the regular season. Last weekend we played the first two, winning and tying at Michigan Tech. Our major concern for that series was to be physically ready. Each weekend from now on, however, we must make sure we are ready both physically and mentally. These teams which are ready both physically and mentally do well in the WCHA.

It is old; we cannot afford to reach an emotional peak for any given series. Rather, we must reach the same plateau for each game. To prove this point, last season we traveled to East Lansing in February after beating the Spartans 8-5 and 13-5 in the ACC. On Friday night, we lost to them 4-2. We were ready for them physically, but not mentally. On Saturday evening, though, we were ready for them mentally, and we won 6-5.

Three transfer games of action at Michigan State's Ice Arena, we have won only one game while losing the other five. Their ice rink is one of the oldest in the nation. The lighting there produces a shadowy atmosphere on the ice, presenting the opposing goalie with additional problems. However, in Mark Kronholm, we have the best goaltender in the nation. He kind of exemplifies this mental readiness, because as a goalie, he can not afford a mental lapse. Last weekend, Mark did not make any.

We know this weekend the Spartans will be ready for us. This will be their opening series in the WCHA. This means it will provide extra incentive for them. Their rivalry with us is also one of the longest and bitterest in college athletics. Michigan State is always prepared for the Fighting Irish. This was evident in football this season, and it should be no different tonight and tomorrow evening.

Michigan State is a physical team. They'll try to forecheck us into mistakes. In order to do well this weekend against them, we'll have to "play with reckless abandon."
