O-C possibility for women brings mixed reactions

by Jim Donathen
Staff Reporter

"I think it's fair to say that men and women will face the same situation as far as off-campus living goes next year," said Sr. John Miriam Jones, assistant to the provost, who handles women housing. "The situation is different than last year. We took two large halls for girls for the 1974-75 academic year. Despite the loss of two hundred beds in Lyons Hall, some Notre Dame co-eds will have to live off campus."

"Before Christmas, women will receive information on the possibility of moving off campus," said Sr. John Miriam. "In January, we plan to get an idea of how many girls wish to move off," she said.

The university will then use this information to determine the number of freshmen and transfer students that will be accepted for the 1974 fall semester.

Lottery possible

If the shortage of beds is not alleviated by girls voluntarily moving off campus, the possibility of a lottery exists.

The general consensus among women interviewed by the Observer was that co-eds will welcome the opportunity to move off.

"Girls will be happy to find out that they can move off campus," said Farley Hall president Colletta Miller. Similar sentiments were echoed by the presidents of Breen-Phillips, Badin, and SLC member Jude Bremer.

"It's been both sides of the problem," said Kathleen Cekanski, rector of Breen-Phillips. "The problems involved with going co-ed and Notre Dame's emphasis on a residential community are complex. Next year, I'm in favor of it (co-eds living off campus). It's only fair to have a uniform policy for guys and girls."

Mixed emotions on lottery

The possibility of a lottery was met with mixed emotions. "A lottery isn't a good idea," said Badin President Laura Dodge. "Parents wouldn't like the idea of having their daughters forced off. They'd rather have them in the security of the dorms."

B.P. President Diane Merton expressed similar thoughts: "I think it's good to get the same opportunity as guys. But, I can see where there may be problems... my parents would be upset if I was forced to move off."

Although girls have special problems with off-campus living because of security and transportation, Colletta Miller feels that a lottery for males and females is a necessary evil. "We'll feel the same frustration as the guys (about a lottery), but it's fair," she said.

"It's only fair that we have a lottery if needed," said Jude Bremer.

She didn't feel that adverse parental reaction to the possibility of a lottery co-eds is reason enough to give females special privileges. "Some guys' parents reacted vehemently last year."

SU sponsors Sugar Bowl train trip

by Terry Kenney
Staff Reporter

The Student Union is sponsoring a two day trip to New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl at the price of $130.

The package includes round trip transportation from Chicago to New Orleans, food and parties on the train and three nights in the Brasill Place Hotel in downtown New Orleans. The cost of the football ticket is not included in the package.

The train, christened "The Notre Dame Football Special," will leave Union Station in Chicago at 6:10 p.m. Friday, December 28 and arrive in New Orleans the following morning at 10:30.

The train will leave New Orleans on January 1 at 4 p.m. and arrive in Chicago at 9 a.m. January 2.

The price of the student stay at the Brasill Place Hotel is based on double and triple room occupancy. According to senior Dave McCarthy, who is organizing the trip for the Student Union, the hotel is just five blocks from Bourbon Street.

McCarthy pointed out that the train may be the only means of transportation for students going to New Orleans.

"Gasoline prices are up and people may not be able to travel on weekends," said McCarthy. "Also many flights are being cut back."

The package deal will enable students to obtain hotel accommodations when many students have found most New Orleans hotels booked for New Year's, said McCarthy.

"The train will be one of the easiest and funnest ways to get to New Orleans and stay there," McCarthy commented.

Both McCarthy and Student Union Associate Director Pat Bohlander emphasized that the student group would provide a focal point for activity in New Orleans.

"One advantage of our group is that this is where the students will be in New Orleans," said McCarthy.

Bohlander sees the advantage of the train in economic terms.

"Where else can you spend three days in New Orleans for $130?"

Tickets for the New Orleans train trip will go on sale Monday at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ticket Office on the second floor of LaFortune. Students are asked to make a deposit at time of purchase.

The number of tickets available is tentatively limited to 100. However, McCarthy pointed out that if student response is large, the number can be increased.

Plans announced for Senior trip to Miami

The schedule for the Senior Trip was announced yesterday by Charles Morrison.

At 1 p.m. the bus leaves the Circle for Chicago and at 4 p.m. on January 1 a flight to Miami (non-stop). The 60 seniors will check into the Twelve Caesars Hotel and attend a party Thursday night at the hotel.

Friday morning the students can go to the beach or to Disney World. Another party is scheduled for that night which will be highlighted by an unlimited supply of beer.

Students can attend the beach again. Saturday afternoon where there will be a pep rally. The students will be bussed to the game Saturday night and to the victory party afterwars.

A bus will leave Miami for the airport in Ft. Lauderdale at noon Sunday. The plane will arrive in Chicago at 4 p.m. A bus will transport the students back to South Bend at 7 p.m.

The plan flight will not be affected by the current fuel shortage.

The SLC will meet today at 4:30 in the CCE

SMC math department announces new option

Sister Miriam Patrick, C.S.C., chairman, Saint Mary's mathematics department, has announced a new applied math option for math majors, effective next semester.

In making the announcement, Sister stated, "The plan of the mathematics department is gradually to broaden the base of our computer-related courses, the first step of which is the applied math option."

Dr. Peter D. Smith, assistant professor of mathematics, further explained the philosophy behind this new applied math option. "The main thrust of such a program will be to teach students to identify a problem, develop the math model to deal with the problem, analyze the model with new techniques developed in the last twenty years to handle quantified data in economic and sociological fields, and determine what data must be collected to test the model and solve the problem. The training will make our graduates very adaptable."

As has been reported by the College's Career Planning and Placement Office, business recruiters are vigorously seeking women math majors due to the increasing number of jobs for statisticians, systems analysts, research analysts, and related occupations.

This new program will require twenty-five upper division hours in math and will replace only three of the present courses for a pure math degree. Juniors presently majoring in math may complete the option if they have the proper prerequisites.

Fans charmed

LUSAKA (UPI) - Zambian soccer fans watching the Zambia-Zaire World Cup match halted the game briefly Sunday by rushing the Zaire goalie in an attempt to remove the charms that he had strung charms for sports success and job security. The fans charged onto the field early in the second half in an attempt to remove the charms, but police pushed them back into the stands. Zaire won the match 2-0.

Girls admitted to ROTC program

by Howard Wood
Staff Reporter

Since the student demonstrations in the late Sixties, the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) has made two significant changes to improve and update their program. ROTC has started admitting women and revising their curriculums and faculty to meet university academic standards.

For the first time, women have been allowed into the ROTC program since military instruction was organized in colleges. Air Force ROTC opened their doors to women in 1970, and the Navy and Army followed with training at selected universities in 1972.

Notre Dame's program has 12 girls, three in Navy, and one in Army. Candy Kelly, senior government majoring in administration of justice, is considered the first from any ROTC at Notre Dame. Kelly joined ROTC primarily for the same reasons as men. They like the travel and adventure military life and enjoyed it. Her career.

Kelly, whose father is a Navy officer, has experienced a military life and enjoyed it. She likes the travel and adventure military life and enjoyed it. Kelly said, "I want to be an officer. I start a job with my hands on my shoulders. They are subject to the ideas, policies and laws of their time.

Col. Joseph Fahey and Col. Alvin Gendren of AROTC agree the changes have opened to them.

Kelly and the eleven other women joined ROTC primarily for the same reasons as men. The girls are highly regarded by the three commanding officers and well accepted by the cadets. They are subject to the same discipline and rules as the men in the program.

The book, which results from research supported by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, provides concrete recommendations for action. Among the strategies suggested for expanding higher education’s role in military training is establishing curriculums which train students to be self-learners and setting up student oriented programs. The book also presents broad concepts of teaching and education and revised institutional orientations toward science.

The Paulists are trying to meet the challenge of today's world in city streets and suburban homes on the campus and in the parish facing the issues of poverty and peace, injustice and war, and listening for sounds of love and signs of hope using their own talents in their own way to achieve their mission: to help Christ communicate the ideas from His mind to the minds of all men.

For more information about the Paulists, America's first religious community, send for the PAULIST PAPERS—a new booklet of articles, posters and recordings. Write to Father Donald C. Campbell, Room 104, 415 West 59th St., New York, N.Y. 10019.

Hesburgh coauthors book

Fr. Theodore M. Hesburgh is one of the university's coauthors coauthoring "Patterns for Lifelong Learning," a revised part. Forthcoming which urges colleges and universities to take the lead in meeting the needs of a lifelong learning process. Dr. Paul A. Miller, president of the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Robert R. Wharton, Jr., president of Michigan State University, are the other authors.

The book, which results from research supported by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, presents a philosophical basis for society's establishment of lifelong education and provides detailed recommendations for action. The book also presents broad concepts of teaching and education and revised institutional orientations toward science.
The Problem:

It is very important that a great many students show up at today's meeting of the SLC. 4:30 in the CCE). In many respects it could be the last chance that students have in their battle against the new calendar.

The question hangs as to what student mobilization at the SLC meeting can possibly be. It seems necessary for the Academic Council to recall the vote on the calendar and reconsider it.

As it occurred in 1972, when the Administration once before announced a new calendar, Labor Day. But, in that case, the present situation is more critical.

The representation of that opinion can serve as a catalyst—the catalyst that is necessary for the Academic Council to recall the vote on the calendar and reconsider it.

The annual fall meeting will show one thing—that student reality are concerned and in opposition to the new academic calendar.

The question hangs as to what student mobilization at the SLC meeting can possibly be. It seems necessary for the Academic Council to recall the vote on the calendar and reconsider it.

The representation of that opinion can serve as a catalyst—the catalyst that is necessary for the Academic Council to recall the vote on the calendar and reconsider it.

The Alternative:

Consider this:

Classes begin on Wednesday, Sept. 4, after registration in the third and run until Friday, Nov. 22. Thanksgiving break begins after classes the 22nd and run until 8 a.m. Monday, Dec. 2. The last class day is Monday, Dec. 14. It takes the petition of 10 members of the Academic Council to bring the question to the floor again. There are 6 student members of the board. Presumably, they would all sign the petition. Therefore, the signatures of four administration or faculty members would be needed. It would seem that a massive show of disquiet over the calendar at the meeting today would initiate action toward the signing of that petition and result, hopefully, in the addition of those four signatures.

The calendar announcement was made possibly by the council's vote of December 14, 1972. The question can be recalled in the council, it seems highly probable that the calendar can be changed.

The final stumbling block to changing the Calendar is the Provost. And changing his mind seems an in-surmountable problem. He told student leaders last week that there is no choice; the calendar must begin before Labor Day. And, according to Fr. Burtchaell, it doesn't matter what you do about the new schedule; he says it will stay, a stand that is incredibly unresponsive, insensitive, and tyrannical.

The provost claims that Notre Dame must schedule 72 class days during fall's semester for accreditation. Yet his proposed calendar only has 71-credit 'em, Father—71 days. So much for academic accreditation.

The unique method of compensating: football weekends. The relaxation and non-academic activity involved in a football weekend is more than enough of a psychological break in the routine of classes during the fall. The spring semester, however, still needs some kind of vacation to break up the lack of comparable activities.

Think about it. In standing firm, Fr. Burtchaell is dismissing a survey that states that 89 percent of the student body opposes his calendar. But perhaps facing all those students in person may induce him to reconsider.

The SLC meeting is at 4:30 p.m. today in the Center for Continuing Education. Go to the meeting and make it known how students have in their battle against the new calendar.

In the spring semester, the English Department is offering a course, under the able direction of Dr. Kline, called "Computer Applications in Linguistic Theory." Reading this, you probably wouldn't think, you probably didn't drop your spoon effectually sputtering everyone around you with onion soup, nor are you likely to speak in swed, hushed tones to the bewildered chap next to you. It probably doesn't seem to affect your life at all.

But, you know, the fact that it's being offered means that someone sees reasons to think that you will want to know what's going on in this world. It seems to be one of the most important things to know about the world to be put together in a way such that "Computer Applications in Linguistic Theory" is meaningful enough to the way life runs that it should be studied. That sounds pretty strange, sound like it would be a difficult thing to convince you of. But stranger things have been suggested a fellow grabbing you by the lapels (or whatever) and feverishly trying to convince you of your great need to learn of "The Status of Imagination in Bacon's Deductive Method" or perhaps "The Digamma in the Development of Classical Greek."

Why DOES the College think that "Computer Applications in Linguistic Theory" is important? How does the computer help you in understanding, say, a poem? Well, it does seem to most of us that sex-with-another is a better kind of sex, a intended product (which would be the set of pleasurable responses which can also be called "ways to succeed.)"

Take another example, widely different in nature: sex. There are two ways of looking at and appreciating sex: 1) as merely a means to an intended product (which would be the set of pleasurable responses which can also be called "ways to succeed.""

Think about it. In standing firm, Fr. Burtchaell is dismissing a survey that states that 89 percent of the student body opposes his calendar. But perhaps facing all those students in person may induce him to reconsider.

The SLC meeting is at 4:30 p.m. today in the Center for Continuing Education. Go to the meeting and make it known how students have in their battle against the new calendar.

As for Fr. Burtchaell's assertion that a break is needed between summer and Thanksgiving, Notre Dame has an almost Freshmen colloquium expands

The Collegiate Seminar Department’s highly successful Seminar Program will be expanded next semester to allow more freshmen to benefit from their experience, according to its director, Dr. John Vacca.

The one credit humanities course “offers freshmen a chance to find their way into the regular curriculum,” said Vacca.

Each class, based on pre-established syllabus, each class format is largely determined by student feedback. This semester’s colloquium had 16 sections and no two had the same type programs,” pointed out senior Gray.

Senior teacher Mark Bright sees his seminar as a means to provide his class with the “basic facts of the ND environment” and to allow his students’ opinions and personal philosophies, “instead of dogmatism.”

The different sections activities this semester included reading from Aristotle, Norman Mailer, Kurt Vonnegut, and Herman Hesse; field trips to Chicago museums and ethnic restaurants, meditation and sensitivity sessions for both rock and classical music, sociological game theory, and even some such as Fr. James Burchael, and Fr. Robert Griffin, and free-form art projects.

Senior teacher Terry Garrel explained, “To go to school and just sit through the mechanics of education is no longer. If you do that and do not open yourself to as many aspects of experience as possible then you will get nothing out of college.”

The program, however, extends beyond its liberal activities: “There is a human element not available in a lecture hall of 200 people,” pointed out freshman Dan Hayes. Student Argery Bitchakas agreed, “The seminar helped me to understand other people’s values.”

Senior Jim Purvis hopes that his format “prompted self-realization” in his freshmen. One of his students, Sue Feni, remarked “The seminar helped me to define in my own mind how I stand on different issues and problems.”

The seminar provides a place where the freshman can discuss with one another, and with the seniors, all the problems that matter to them personally.” Vacca commented, “These make-up. I suppose, the core of what we mean by the humanities.

The classes e ‘shariz’ that which is concrete and specific rather than what is theoretical and abstract,” Vacca continued. Classes do things rather than just talk about them.

Freshmen can enroll in the program by filling in “SEM 181” on their course-selection forms, when they pre-register.

Freshmen taking the course this semester will be allowed to sign-up again on a “space-available” basis.

ROTC program updated

leadership and management. All technical training and military aspects for all programs are taught in summer camps or after graduation.

The Army and Navy Departments are substituting some other university courses for their own Departmental courses. The AROTC has substituted a geology course in place of their own military history class to the History Dept. to be taught by Dr. Kerby.

This substitution reduces the number of “extra courses” (i.e., courses taken for course credit but not satisfying requirements) needed in the ROTC program.

Gendren and McLean believe that their officers are teaching the courses that they are best qualified to teach. They also think that courses officers are not best qualified to instruct should be transferred to other faculty members who are best qualified.

Fahey opposes the substituting, “Air Force courses are best taught by Air Force officers.”

The military faculty has been upgraded to meet the academic standards. Since 1971, the Army did not have one master’s degree among their officers. This year, all have master’s degrees in the discipline they are teaching, and three are working toward a doctorate,” stated Gendren.

McLean and Fahey believe that their staffs are better qualified as assistant professors than past year. All officers in NROTC and AFROTC have at least a masters degree.

“One of the objections to ROTC by faculty members,” commented Gendren, “was that military officers obtained equivalent rank to the civilian faculty without the proper degree. Faculty members needed a masters or better for academic rank as professor or assistant professor. Military officers have been working toward a doctorate, without the necessary degree.”

Vietnam and the Draft

The Vietnam war had a devasating effect on the University. According to a New York Times Survey, the number of cadets in all Department of Defense programs has plunged from 212,400 in 1969 to about 75,000 this year. The University has incurred the biggest loss, going from 174,173 at its peak in 1966 to about 38,100 this fall.”

A large portion of this drop is the result of many campuses ending the mandatory two-year ROTC courses for all able-bodied men. This trend was completed by the late sixties.

Notre Dame never required two years of ROTC for its students. However, the total enrollment in the three branches has decreased since the student unrest in 1969 and the end of the draft last year. In 1966, there were about 700 in AFROTC. Now there are 130. Two years ago, AFROTC had 180 cadets, now there are 112.

The end of the draft and of the Air Force has been met with a large portion of men who joined because a commission as an officer seemed preferable to risking the draft and ending up as a private.

When the draft had ended last year, 27 sophomore dropped out of the AFROTC. In AFROTC, 24 cadets quit after one year in the program.

While the numbers in Air Force and Army are down, the Navy’s midshipmen for the past five years. Midshipmen for the past five years. Navy midshipmen are on scholarship. AFROTC will commission 38 officers this year. Capt. McLean explained the large numbers on the part of men who joined because they want to and not by outside pressures.

Scholarships

There is no outside pressure anymore but there is a great deal of financial motivation to join ROTC. These scholarships are available in four, three, and two year basis for men and women. Each scholarship pays for tuition, fees, and books. The student receives $1000 per month for 16 months of each school year.

Smc in process of selecting commencement speaker

By Judy Rausenbush
Staff Reporter

Through Senior Class and Faculty nominations, St. Mary's College has begun the process of selecting a 1974 commencement speaker. The top nominees include Helen Hayes, Katherine Hepburn, Margaret Mead, Barbara Walters and Capt. McLean. Senior Class President Mary Ellen Stumpf explained, "We sent out a newsletter to the seniors and faculty asking for suggestions for a commencement speaker. After receiving twenty-six different names, we ended up with a ballot." Voting took place at a Senior Class meeting held Monday, October 28. Each student voted for their first four choices. Stumpf explained that ballots were also distributed to the faculty and administrative team. A total of 168 seniors and 59 members of the faculty and administrative team voted. "The administration now takes care of contacting the top candidates one at a time, until one is available for the May 18th event," said Stumpf. "Helen Hayes had been contacted, but she cannot make it," she added.

Nixon asks Congress to turn federal land into preserve

By RICHARD LERNER
WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Nixon asked Congress Wednesday to turn more than one million acres of federally owned desert, wildlife and coastal areas into specially protected national wilderness preserves.

Nixon proposed 12 sites stretching west from Arkansas to California for inclusion in the National Wilderness Preservation System, created in 1964 to keep unspoiled areas in their natural condition indefinitely. Congress has designated more than 11 million acres of federal lands for protection under the law.

"At a time when our nation is seriously concerned with conserving our energy resources, it is also important that we protect another treasured national resource - our wilderness areas and the many varieties of plant and animal life which thrive uniquely in wilderness environments," the President said in a message to the House and Senate.

If added to the wilderness system, the 12 areas would be closed to all motorized transportation, including snowmobiles, meaning visitors would have to travel by foot, horseback or boat.

The areas proposed by Nixon were:
- 373,700 acres of desert land in the Joshua Tree National Monument and 16,460 acres of beach and wooded slopes in the Anza-Borrego Desert State Park in California.
- 333,900 acres in the Big Bend National Park in Texas, described as "some of the finest desert and mountain scenery" in the nation.
- 14,470 acres of "desert uplands" in the Imperial Valley National Wildlife Refuge in California.
- 21,110 acres of the Bandelier National Monument in New Mexico.
- 283,700 acres of the Mesa Verde National Park in Colorado.
- 1,700 acres of forest vegetation and natural swamp in the Mingo National Wildlife Refuge in Missouri.
- 44,400 acres boasting various desert resources in the Sonoran Desert.
- 41,100 acres of forest land in the White River National Wildlife Refuge in Arizona.
- 44,400 acres of the Mogollon Rim.

United's immediate layoffs of 300 pilots and 650 flight attendants announced a day earlier. United also has canceled 100 daily flights beginning

Wednesday when President Nixon's directive to cut jet fuel consumption by an additional 15 per cent becomes effective. A majority of other airlines already have cut domestic flights or plan cutbacks in service by the Jan. 7 cutoff date.

Bransiff Airlines said it does not anticipate layoffs of personnel at this time but will support the airline's filing

Hawaii and Atlanta and it's planes are counting the cost of its portion of a reduction. A reduction of 3.5 per cent is planned in flight hours before now 1.7 per cent, a spokesman said.

Dallas Airlines said it has no plans to cut employees even even though the carrier has reduced miles by 7 per cent. Dallas is not eliminating specific flights but cancelling those which have the most effect on the jet fuel bill.

An American Airlines spokesmann said the carrier has announced cuts in the "by the book-

2 and has suggested to other personnel that they take early vacations and leaves of absence on a voluntary basis.

Beginning Sunday, American will cut seven daily round-trip runs from its schedule, including three between New York and Detroit and one New York-

Chicago flight. Further schedule cutbacks may be made.

National Airlines said "any talks of cutbacks or layoffs is premature." A National spokesmann said in October the airline logged 5 per cent fewer plane miles than a year earlier and the company is holding up for November.

Irish attempt rebound this weekend against Denver

by John Fineran

It has been a disappointing start for the Notre Dame hockey team, but that can be rectified as Lefty Smith's Irish (2-5-1) take on the defending WCHA champion Denver Pioneers (4-2-1) this weekend in the Athletic and Convocation Center. It will be a very unusual series for two reasons.

First, the series will include Friday night (7:30 p.m.) and Sunday afternoon (3:30 p.m.) encounters instead of the usual Friday-Saturday night ones. The reason for this is Notre Dame's busy weekend of athletics both at home and on television.

Second, and most important, Notre Dame will be without the services of right wing Ian Williams and center Brian Walsh. The two players have been handed team suspensions as a result of misconducts incurred last weekend during the Irish double-loss to Colorado College.

"We have a team rule which relates to conflicts with officials," Smith said. "I am extremely pleased with our team's composure. Ian and Brian will each be serving a suspension as a result."

Smith has had to reshuffle his lines for the series. One line will remain intact, however. Junior Pat Conroy will again center a line with junior Ray DeLorenzi on the right wing and senior Larry Larabell on the left. The trio have acquitted for 37 points with DeLorenzi and Larabell being the team's leading scorers with 17 and 12 points respectively.

"Pat's line has been our most outstanding line to date," Smith reflected. "I am extremely pleased with their chemistry."

Senior Ric Schafer will center the second line. The New Brighton, Minn. native, who had played defense and right wing his first three years at DuLaC, drew primary playing time at center. "Ric has just been excellent at center this year," Smith said. "He already has scored two goals and three assists."

Schafer's wings will be freshman Alex Pirius and senior Eddie Bumbacco, who had played defense and right wing his first three years at DuLaC, drew primary playing time at center. "Ric has just been excellent at center this year," Smith said. "He already has scored two goals and three assists."

Meanwhile, Brian Maren, a senior and captain of the team, has been named by the 45 member school Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association as one of two nominees for the office of Commodore. This office is the highest undergraduate office in the MCA. The MCA controls all inter-collegiate sailboat racing in the area from Ohio to the Rockies. The election will be held in February.

The second tandem of defenders will have another All-America choice of a year ago, senior Bill Nyrop, paired with freshman Paul Clarke. Another freshman, Jack Brownwich, will alternate as the fifth defenseman.

During penalty-killing situations Lefty Smith will use Byers and senior Mike Tardan and Larabell and sophomore Pat Nowotniak.

Senior Mark Kronholz will tend net both nights for the Irish with either freshman Dave Caron or senior Don Smith getting the call in the event of an emergency. Kronholz has yielded 5.23 goals a game this season to the opposition, but has frequently been the victim of defensive breakdowns.

Denver is traditionally one of the toughest teams in the WCHA, but graduated four of its top five scorers and lost its best back-liner, senior Steve Curry.

The second tandem of defenders will have another All-America choice of a year ago, senior Bill Nyrop, paired with freshman Paul Clarke. Another freshman, Jack Brownwich, will alternate as the fifth defenseman.

"Denver is a conservative team because they don't apply deep pressure. They wait for mistakes."

In seven games, the Pioneers have scored 34 goals while allowing only St. Pete Le Prew, a sophomore from Eveleth, Minn. the wins. Sam, played in the NHL has been in goal for all seven contests.

"Lo Presti is a fine goalie," Smith said. "He is a big, strong kid with quick hands. I expect him to be one of the premier goalies in the WCHA in years to come."

Denver's one-two punch is supplied by seniors Rich Preston and Rick Bagnara. The latter leads the Pioneers in scoring with 14 points while Preston has 12. Another player who might see action is senior Bob Krieger.

"Krieger is one of the top forwards in the WCHA," Smith said. "He is considered a nice pro prospect, but so far this year, he has been hindered by a knee injury."

Defensively, Denver has one of the better rushing defensmen in the league in the person of Bruce Albreffe. The sophomore has scored four goals and two assists from his blue line position. Another defenceman, whose name might be vaguely familiar to Irish fans, is junior Dave Tomasoni.

He is, of course, the younger brother of former Irish goaltender Dick Tomasoni, despite the difference in the spelling. Dick dropped out of school to go into the NHL, has been in goal for all seven contests.

Tickets are still available for both contests. Students can present their I.D. and purchase a $3.00 ticket. For those unable to attend the games, there will be the usual area radio broadcasts (WSDN-AM on campus, NDU (1480) in South Bend). It should be another outstanding weekend of collegiate hockey in the Athletic and Convocation Center.

The Irish have had many shots on goal this season, but not enough have gone in the net . . .
