Concerning lottery
Mulcahy clarifies off-campus issues

Expressing a hope of clarifying the many issues raised by the off-campus lottery, Director of Campus Residence and Student Affairs, Fr. John M. Mulcahy voiced his regrets concerning resulting student anxiety.

The lottery, revealed last Friday, February 1, is "the only way we have of dealing fairly with those students who must be forced off," said Mulcahy.

Mulcahy and students under pressure
He expressed that his office is under a great deal of pressure regarding the three major factors: effecting the lottery, Mulcahy continued, "We must consider first, those students who will move off voluntarily; second, the anxiety which the students experience as a result of the lottery; and third, the fact that on-campus room availability improves with time."

The April 16 date for publication of a waiting list is to give students time to research off-campus housing and ensure the sincerity of those who wish to remain on campus, said Mulcahy. He continued, "I don't want students saying they want to stay on campus while planning to move off anyway."

Overcrowding, housing burden
"The planning is live possible,"' Mulcahy said, "Weori,nally for a top notch security operation," said Boy, "and now we have been forced to triple the security."

"We are now at a maximum security level," explained Boy and the he added, "it's been worse than other years!"

When asked to account for the increase in cheating, Boy said, "Obviously we can't run this place like a Las Vegas casino. Otherwise we would have people running around constantly. There must be a median between the business and the social end of the event," Boy added.

Too many people have looked upon Mardi Gras as a profit-making activity, according to Boy. Boy would like to see more people enjoy the carnival as a social activity. A.J. Schwartz, the Student Director of Security at Mardi Gras, had this to say about the security problems. "We have hired four dressed and three undercover St. Joseph County police officers to patrol the carnival. They have been rather successful for what they were hired upon," according to Schwartz.

"A bad evening now and then is all right, but when we find a booth that has constantly been acting funny we must suspect something," said Schwartz. He then gave credit to Grace and Keenan as being the two most profitable booths.

"The University has given the committee the option to prosecute cheaters as a university violation," Schwartz warned. There will be 18 students along with the professional security staff who will be patrolling constantly.

"Out of sight of goals!"

Commenting on the success of Mardi Gras this year, Boy said that the greatest deficit has come in the amount of raffle tickets sold. "It has been the poorest return of tickets in the carnival's history," said Boy. The largest volumes of sales have come from the committee itself!"

Boy urges more students to buy raffle tickets. A 1974 Chevrolet Impala, worth approximately $5,000, is the prize to be drawn by University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh on Sunday at 4 p.m. To this date, only 5,000 out of a possible quarter million raffle tickets have been sold toward the car.

"We have lost our goal," said Boy. "Students are for petting that the money is used to fund student-oriented volunteer groups and charities such as the St. Mary's Day Care Center and the ND-SMC Council for the Retarded."

Friday and Saturday night there will be live music at Mardi Gras and Boy again added that students might buy their raffle tickets there. "If we don't make a minimum of $5,000, Mardi Gras will be defunct," said Boy. "The only way we can make that money is to sell four to five thousand more tickets!"

Mardi Gras will be open from 7-12 on Friday, from 8-12 on Saturday and from 1-6 on Sunday.

Security force to combat increased cheating level

The security force at Mardi Gras has been tripled to deal with cheating, said Mardi Gras Director Steve Boy. The ride has ranged from players cheating to dealers overpaying their friends.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trucks loaded with food headed to the nation's big cities Thursday even before drivers voted on a tentative agreement between the government and truckers to end the strike that led to scarce buying by worried housewives. Supermarket chains reported some foods such as chicken and meat were already scarce in several areas.

The La Fortune Student Center was the site of a panel discussion concerning Arab and African relations as seen in the historical roots for conflict, and the possibilities for unity between these two factions, Thursday night. Professors Joseph Scott, Alec Chege and Rita Cassidy made the panel with Prof. Peter Walsh acting as moderator.

History professor at St. Mary's led off the discussion by stating that the Arab and African relationship in terms of past historical experiences. The Arab subjugation of the Africans as witnessed in the slave trade on Africa's East coast emphasized the past treatment of the Africans.

Scott elaborated on the possibility of improved African-Arab relations as common interests increase. Participation in the Organization for African Unity (OAU) could further the cooperation between the Africans and Arabs. Scott related that the African nations wanted to cooperate in the Third World Struggle but the question remains as to the utmost the Africans will have to pay for their involvement.

SBP runoff election to be held in March

by Mike Rizzo
Staff Reporter

The Student Government election primary will be held on February 27 and the final runoff vote on March 1, according to Student Body Vice President Mike Geisinger.

Prospective candidates may pick up petitions for signatures from the student government office any day this week. They must be returned by February 21, at 5:00 p.m.

To prevent the complications which arose during last year's election, the Board of Commissioners set a campaign spending limit of twenty-five dollars, required 175 signatures from presidential candidates, and outlawed last year's blank ballots in the final voting.

The Board rejected the opinion that unlimited spending or setting a higher limit, because that could become more of a mandate to spend rather than an allowance for candidates, said Geisinger. The campaign spending limit ensures that requiring only 175 signatures led to a larger number of serious candidates.

InPIRG members hear director explain purpose and goals

Mark Frazel
Staff Reporter

The Indiana Public Interest Research Group held a preliminary meeting Thursday night in the Student Government Offices in LaFortune Center.

Fritz Wiegand, executive director of InPIRG in Notre Dame, explained InPIRG's goals, and its establishment at Notre Dame to an audience of over twenty.

The purpose of InPIRG is to aid consumer groups, the media, the courts, and other legal means, the concerns of students and the campus issues of general public interest.

"The programs of InPIRG are inspired by Ralph Nader, and I think they can provide answers to some of the problems of our country."

Just as any independent citizen's organization, two things are necessary to make it work: stability and money. On the campus, money is collected through a voluntary fee assessment of every student, usually about a dollar per person. The chief advantage of this system is its universality, no one person or interest can "buy" off the group.

The organization of goals is assured by a full-time staff of attorneys, organizers, and researchers. They plan programs to assure continuity in the completion of projects that vary from organization to organization the year when students, either because of semester exams or summer vacations, are unable to devote time to such activities.

Seniors to elect Class Fellow

by Bill Meaux
Staff Reporter

Due to a slight change in the assigned dates for the Student Body elections, elections for Senior Class Fellows have been changed to Wednesday February 27. All nominated candidates must submit their application to the Student Government office by 5:00 p.m. on Monday, February 25. Petitions for entering or withdrawing from the nomination simply entail filling out a petition with 50 signatures and the names and I.D.'s of four seniors indicating support of one's candidacy, and (b) returning to the petition to the Student Government office not later than 5:00 p.m. on February 25.

Petition forms may be picked up in the Student Government Office. The Student Class Fellow must be physically capable of contributing to Notre Dame during Senior Week in early May. The selected nominee will come to campus for the entire week prior to final exams. During this period, the Senior Class Fellow will personally address the entire senior class and spend the remainder of the week making himself available to the campus for the purpose of getting to know the seniors.

Jerry Samaniego, Senior Class President, indicated the fact that traditionally the Senior Class as a whole represents the attitudes of the entire student body in the years to come. The position should be one of honor and prestige.

Samaniego went on to say that the Senior Class Fellow will represent the Senior Class and reflect their concerns, attitudes and feelings about human life and society, its people and its structure (whether it be good or bad).

Samaniego encourages any nominations so meeting the requirement. However, Samaniego indicated that no nomination of less than five dollars, amount of pride and sincerity should be required in the nominations.

Senator Bayh- Indiana's Junior Senator

by Ann McCarry

Senator Birch Bayh rose from his seat and turned to shake hands with the audience. The taping of a question and answer session with constituents at South Bend's WSBT was complete.

Senator Bayh had finished talking to the women from the Right to Life foundation and the audience. The taping of a Right to Life foundation and the audience. The taping of a Right to Life foundation and the audience. The taping of a Right to Life foundation and the audience.

Birch Bayh relaxes while informally chatting with students in the law school.

Meeting the Constituents

It had already been a long day for Indiana's junior senator. The meeting had been spent in downtown Plymouth, where Bayh had attended a meeting of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce. After a quick lunch with the senior citizens of the South Bend Model Cities, the senator had come to WSBT. The next stop was Notre Dame, where Bayh planned to chat informally with students in the law school.

WSND News Director Bruce Schulte began the questioning, asking Bayh, whose second 6-year term ends this year, about the upcoming senatorial election. Although no announcements have yet been made, it is assumed that Bayh will be running against Indiana's young Republican Senator, Richard Lugar.

Issues that Count

"When you get right down to the nuts and bolts of the campaign, it is going to be how you stand on the issues that count," said Bayh. He went on to say that he expected Lugar, once named "President Nixon's favorite mayor" to support the Nixon administration contrary to Bayh's liberal democratic stance. Lugar who spoke at a county Republican women's dinner last said that he thought Senator Bayh too liberal for Indiana. Bayh laughed in response.

"The issues most people are concerned with are those being discussed right now: the broad-based issues," quipped the Senator. He went on to site the failure of the president in exercising powers the Congress had given him in regulating proper price control as the main cause for the inflation and unemployment now present in our economy.

Bayh elaborated on the energy crisis as an example of the president's incompetence.

Gas Rationing

"The president disregarded his cabinet when they warned him about the crisis in the economy. I want it done on a basis of how much a family needs to sustain it and what the supply means to the economy. I don't want rationing. But today let the gas prices go up and not have rationing is ridiculous." Bayh feels this type of action would pitch the poorer citizens who cannot afford to pay the higher prices.

We had arrived at the Circle signaling the end of the interview. The Senator wanted to speak informally with the students here. He shared his concerns and possible strategies for the upcoming campaign. No press questions would be allowed.

A Politician's Handshake

Walking down the block to his aide's car, Bayh spotted a woman waiting in a parked car on the opposite side of the street. Dodging oncoming traffic, Bayh sped over to her, shook hands with the friendly voter. Moments later he was in the car, the interview underway.

A short time later Bayh talked politics with a small group of the students. He shared their concerns, respecting their opinions and suggestions for his campaign. He spoke of the time of the nation and the need to challenge ourselves and our system to prevent stagnancy of thought and action.

Soon the Senator was on his feet, donning his coat. Tonight he would speak in Michigan City. The challenge would be with him.
That's fine. But what about the server, a letter appeared entitled "Cattle for the Campus." No single letter printed this year within these pages has prompted such a response from both the student body and the editorial department. As a result, the editorial department has decided to devote this entire page today to airing those responses.

Male Apparition

Dear Editor,

Well, here it is, Mardi Gras time again. When all the male domers pour out of the library for the first time after Spring Break. The number of new faces is astounding! Especially the number of new faces on both the freshman and sophomore classes. It is being made to enable you and all the rest of us to meet a little closer to normal. We hope you will meet a little closer to "normal." We hope you will have no choice but to import; for, otherwise, the cost of the domestic cattle would rise to the reach of the vast majority of consumers. We regret only that we are not sufficient to satisfy your needs. To us, the cattlemen, this comes as a discouraging word. But, alas, one must consider the cattlemen's position. When the domestic supply is sparse and of inferior quality, we have no choice but to import, for, otherwise, the cost of the domestic cattle would rise to the reach of the vast majority of consumers. We regret only that trade agreements limit us to one import per year.

Sincerely,

Editor:

Dear Editor,

We wholeheartedly agree with your sentiments concerning the cattlemen. We agree with you that it is desirable that for one weekend, every Notre Dame male should have an opportunity for male companionship. However, we feel that the ratio is approximately 8 to 1. If you wish to be a part of the competition, we are sure that you will have no choice but to import; for, otherwise, the cost of the domestic cattle would rise to the reach of the vast majority of consumers. We regret only that trade agreements limit us to one import per year.

Sincerely,

Editor:

Dear Editor,

On a college campus where men outnumber women 8 to 1, there is going to be an enthusiastic response towards all women that can be housed in. There is certainly no reason to bus men in. Perhaps there is something about those women who see incoming students as potential candidates for the competition? You must feel very insecure or else you feel that the men on campus aren't good enough for you. At any rate maybe we should honor your requests. The next bus leaves at 5:00 pm on Friday.

Sincerely,

Let's get those buses moving out

Parietals for SMC

This weekend, the St. Mary's Board of Regents is meeting to decide on a number of important issues. Among these issues are a salary increase for the faculty, improvement of recreational facilities, and possible renovation of the science hall and library.

However, the issue of most immediate concern to the student body at this time is parietals. The parietal proposal expresses the desire of the students to have more time to study and to pursue their interests. The students have been waiting on this issue for nearly a year. It was first tabled in May, due to controversy over a letter sent to parents, from persons opposed to the proposal. The board decided it could not come to a decision in such an emotional atmosphere. The second time it was tabled in October, due to the addition of twelve new board members, who felt inadequately prepared to vote on the issue.

The time has clearly arrived for the Board to act on the parietal issue and their action should be a positive one. The parietal proposal should be passed. The board must realize that a dormitory is more than a place to sleep, but a home which includes all parts of human life, including social interaction.

Saving Our Goals

When interviewed Thursday concerning the state of the Mardi Gras carnival, Steve Boy said it rather well. "We've lost sight of our goals."

Indeed, it appears we have.

Security at the Stepan affair has been tripled in an effort to stamp out the rash of cheating. There is little that can be said to soften the impact of such a move needed at an event dedicated to raising money for the underprivileged.

We have indeed lost sight of our goals.

Throughout the week, Mardi Gras officials have begged for support of the carnival and raffle in an effort to save the charity extravaganza from financial starvation. Beyond a doubt, this Mardi Gras is staring at discontinuation more astutely than any in history.

And yet we must triple our security force.

Dealers are overpaying their friends, fanatic gamblers are switching cards, and Mardi Gras is going under. There is no need to single this out as a particularly severe disgrace because it is happening at Notre Dame. It would be a disgrace anywhere.

This weekend Mardi Gras will make a last ditch attempt at survival. Those who attend and spend whatever funds they have can return home knowing that there are people grateful for their generosity.

Those who cheat can return home knowing that there are people in pain who have indeed been cheated. Perhaps if those needy people were standing on the other side of the booth, the money wouldn't mean so much.

Save Mardi Gras. And the people who need it.

I'd Rather be a Mechanic

Concealing the matter that Denis Krill took under wing in a recent article of The Observer, that of upholding the University's rules and regulations, if for no other reason than because they exist. I must admit that I agree with him, and let me explain the basis of his argument is concerned.

Mr. Krill uses as his basic fact that Notre Dame is a private, non-government-supported university. The students of Notre Dame were not told that dulac was the last place that would be available to them. They were not forced to come here, nor are they forced to stay if they don't like it. Though this is a rather frustrating position to accept, especially when the terms "human rights", "legal rights" and "choice of living" make the headlines for days at a time concerning the treatment by the University of an individual, I must state the facts. Almost quite literally, the University can do with its students what it pleases.

But one only has to wonder if this truly gives the University the right to do what it wants. Mr. Krill spoke of a "specialness" inherent in Notre Dame, the "specialness" that has lasted throughout these many years the University has been in operation. But doesn't that "specialness" also include the input of the student, the student body? The "specialness" that begins with the administration of Notre Dame dictates and students merely acquiesce.

Mr. Krill's analogy of the University and its students to a machine and its cogs seems particularly inappropriate. In fact, it seems a bit naive to equate everything a university (Notre Dame, The University of Michigan, the University of Texas, even Alabama) stands for: to produce human beings. If the University of Notre Dame wished to produce "cogs" to fit very neatly within the machine-society of itself and tailored to fit within the machine of the outside world, it would seem to be a very simple matter to impose West Point-type regulations and enforcement upon the students, thereby venturing into the Dark Ages once again.

No, Mr. Krill, I believe the University strives to do more than manufacture "cogs". I think one of its purposes is more like the nurturing of men and women toward their own destinies and maturity, the grooming of intelligence and ambition to go after their highest dreams. Cogs the world has plenty of. Notre Dame derives its "specialness" from creating men and women.

Like you, I believe that the adequacy of the University's rules are not the subject here. Neither is the justice or injustice of the so-called "Dillon Hall incident." What is the subject is the willingness of the students to truly become members of the Christian "community" at Notre Dame. Many of the University's attitudes and positions, like those of the Catholic Church, are becoming outdated and incomparable with modern values and lifestyles. The only way to change some of those attitudes is to work within the structure of the University (or the Church) to press for improvement. If members of the community would rather sit back on their laurels and say "we, should obey all the rules because they're there", there is no sure way to change things.

This is not to mean that I advocate the entire student body go on a "rampage" of rule breaking merely because it doesn't like the rules. But when a rule is passed and is generally ignored both by students, who consistently break it by rectors and other administrators who condone that breaking by turning their heads, and is only enforced by three or four somewhat fanatical administrators, it would seem that the rule is more than merely inadequate. There are the rules that need a hard, long looking into determination whether they do indeed serve the best interests of the entire community, or whether they only serve the best interests of an outdated philosophy. And since the administration of this University refuses to do that looking the students have no choice but to do it themselves, even if it means breaking it. These students are not the "irregular cogs" who refuse to fit themselves into the machine; they are the tools of the mechanic continually adjusting that machine to keep it in top running order.

If Mr. Krill prefers to remain a complacent cog in his machine of Notre Dame, that's his decision. I certainly pity him when he graduates into the bigger machine of society, for he'll become nearly another cog in that machine. I also pity the rest of the country if this kind of defeatist, "there's nothing I can do about it, so why try?" attitude becomes dominant.

Personally, I have a little more hope in the student body of Notre Dame and the world at large than that. And I certainly think I speak for many people when I say that the role of the adjusting tool of the mechanic is much better for both me and the "machine" than the role of the cog.
About poetry he was never wrong. His eye, ear and mind were amazingly attuned to the whole history of the English tongue, to say nothing of other languages, and like Ezra Pound, he attempted to demonstrate in his writing the construction of a strict syntax which each reader and writer of a language should feel.

W.H. Auden is a rare poet if only because he wrote during our time, but his mastery of the spoken word will continue to set him apart from contemporaries and occupational descendants. Notre Dame is particularly privileged to have two of Auden's close friends and associates, John Hollander and Stephen Spender, as opening speakers of the 1974 Sophomore Literary Festival.

The program Sunday, beginning with their own readings in the afternoon, will also continue as part of W.H. Auden's theme of poetry. The inclusion of this feature makes this year's festival one of special significance, as Auden himself had been scheduled to appear at the Festival. His death in September of 1973 leaves much to mourn. There is a special grief in the United States, which was graced by his advice and presence during the last three years.

Auden's command of poetry extended to the light and serious, and achieved unparalleled results in both fields. Whether charming Dickie Oldfield in his recent audience with a well-chosen innerkeg, or stirring one's greatest sympathies for a memorial for a dead friend, Auden was always accomplished, a man of the greatest warmth and understanding. In his finest moments, Auden has no match.

"Lullaby" is an example of Auden's ability to capture the fleeting, emotion-charged minutes of life in language that is eternally compelling.

"Gertrude Stein's Gertrude Stein", a one-woman show created in Paris by American actress Nancy Cole, will be the first of the American Character series, presented Sunday, February 17. This internationally acclaimed theater show has been performed at the Edinburgh, Avignon, Dublin and York Festivals and has toured extensively in Canada, the U.S.A. and the U.K. All the material in the show has been taken from the works of Gertrude Stein.

"The nature of Cole's show can be best summed up by a quote from Weuer Karrer: "Nancy Cole showed how Stein's language studies used repetition to approach complete consciousness. With rich nuances of mime and gesture, a speaker with a starting ability to differentiate and characterize, she transformed herself in the wink of an eye into Stein, Picasso, Matisse, typical American women, lovers in a novella and even simple children."

Second semester events sponsored by the Dance and Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission will be highlighted by the appearance of the "great living pan- Malaysian" Marceau. He will also feature a unique American Character "Series" - prototypes in humorous, pathetic, tragic or hilarious situations in life.

"The Three Ages of Walt Whitman" is the second American Character series, to be presented March 24. John Fields will perform dramatic readings from Leaves of Grass and later this spring will perform an statue of Whitman in Washington Hall on April 20. Admission to each will be $1.00, with all Dance and Drama Patrons admitted free.

Stephen Spender himself gives an interesting account of how Auden saw the job of the poet. Did Auden believe that the subject of a poem was only the peg on which to hang the poetry? A poet was a kind of chemist who mixed the words, whilst remaining detached from his own feelings. Poetical experiences were only the occasion which precipitated into his mind the idea of a poem. When Auden was suggested he arranged words into patterns with a mind whose aim was not to express meaning, but to concentrate on the best arrangement that could be derived from the occasion. Auden was not a "romantic" poet. He would twist words, pronunciations and meanings to achieve the musical effect. Auden was first an artist, patiently re-fashining, always aware of the power and subtleties of words.

Wyman Hugh Auden never mistook youth for its ignorance, nor age for its sagacity, but embodied the best of the two. This balance attracted many like Spender and John Hollander, who, great poets in their own right, have benefited from their association with Auden. The"organized resident of St. Mark's Place in Greenwich Village, was representative of himself of the balance, strength and humor of his work.

In a poem entitled "Alone to Fervidam" is framed as a father's advice to his son growing up.

"How narrow the space, how slight the chance For civil pattern and importance Between the watery vagueness and The earth's sufficiency."

How soon the lively trip is over From base craving to base aggravation. Aimless jelly to paralyzed bone.

One can only look forward to Sunday evening when Auden's "heirs" come to recast their version of Mark Twain's life and color which make W.H. Auden more than his bones, and the equal of his words.

The American characters' follow marceau by Mike Kulczycki

"Gertrude Stein's Gertrude Stein", a one-woman show created in Paris by American actress Nancy Cole, will be the first of the American Character series, presented Sunday, February 17. This internationally acclaimed theater show has been performed at the Edinburgh, Avignon, Dublin and York Festivals and has toured extensively in Canada, the U.S. All the material in the show has been taken from the works of Gertrude Stein.

The nature of Cole's show can be best summed up by a quote from Weuer Karrer: "Nancy Cole showed how Stein's language studies used repetition to approach complete consciousness. With rich nuances of mime and gesture, a speaker with a starting ability to differentiate and characterize, she transformed herself in the wink of an eye into Stein, Picasso, Matisse, typical American women, lovers in a novella and even simple children."

"The Three Ages of Walt Whitman" is the second American Character series, presented March 24. John Fields will perform dramatic readings from Leaves of Grass and later this spring will perform an statue of Whitman in Washington Hall on April 20. Admission to each will be $1.00, with all Dance and Drama Patrons admitted free.
Counterforce targeting

New nuclear strategy increases war risk

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The new U.S. "counterforce" nuclear targeting strategy could increase the risks of limited nuclear war, Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger said Thursday.

But Schlesinger added he hopes that the actual effect will be the opposite — to deter the Soviet Union from even small-scale attacks by increasing Moscow's uncertainty as to how the U.S. would actually respond.

Testifying on the 1975 defense budget before the House Armed Services Committee, Schlesinger put a figure on the new target system. Most of the money will go into new ICBMs (Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles) they are working on, he said.

"But at the same time we believe that we will be increasing the deterrence to smaller scale attacks."

The secretary said that a "counterforce" strategy is the same as a "counterforce" strategy conceived in the 1950s—a means to wipe out an enemy's nuclear forces in a first strike.

"That sort of thing, the capability to dig out the other side's (missile) silos, would represent instability," he said.

"But we are not in a position to attain a capability to wipe out the Soviet Union's second strike capability, nor can they do it to us," he added.

Nevertheless, he said, money is needed to improve the accuracy of U.S. missiles and make their warheads bigger because the U.S. must maintain parity with the Russians.

Gairy's opponents charge he has recruited a secret police from the island's prisons and used them to harass his political enemies. They hoped to force him out of office before independence. They asked Britain to delay Thursday's ceremony, but London refused.

The Royal Navy did send a frigate to St. George's, however, to evacuate Americans and Britons in case of violence.

Aside from about 300 policemen who shot their weapons into the air just past midnight, there was no violence visible. Instead, Independence Day was a somber event. Many of a minority of students to planning a "riot" said.

"Dear Dr. Ackerman & Dennis Etienne:

Your letter of apology in regard to the disrespectful actions of some members of your student body at our game at Notre Dame on January 19 was deeply appreciated.

You may rest assured that neither nor Mrs. Wooden nor I have changed our opinion of the ability of a small minority of students to influence our respect for your great university and the large majority of your student body.

I know your standards and I know your problems. It would be wise if we did not repeat the problems, but we do — many of a similar nature and some of an individual situation.

A number of Notre Dame students and fans have also written me letters of apology.

Sincerely,

John Wooden

ST. GEORGE'S, GRENADA (UPI) — A 38-day-old general strike upset Independence celebrations for the tiny Caribbean spice island of Grenada Thursday, and a prominent opponent of Prime Minister Eric Gairy was arrested early before actual independence.

Gairy, in an independence reception, said his police had uncovered evicence that the leftist New Jewel Movement, led by Maurice J. Bishop, was "planning something for today," presumably an armed insurrection.

Bishop's home was raided by 70 policemen late Wednesday night just after telex communications used by foreign newsmen shut down for the night.

"Telescopic equipment, miniatures and camping gear were found in his garden. He had in his possession a detailed plan of my place. They were planning something for today," Gairy said.

Bishop was charged with illegal possession of munitions and jailed in Fort George, just below the parapet where the flag of Grenada was hoisted after midnight.

"Independence meant Grenada's only ties with Britain, which has governed the island since the Treaty of Paris in 1763, was as a member of the Commonwealth. The island has been self-governing internally since 1967."

Scores of other political figures were reported in hiding. While Gairy delivered an independence address Wednesday night the home of Michael Sylvester, a lawyer who presided at the New Jewel Movement in a commission of inquiry, burned to the ground on a hilltop within sight of where Gairy was speaking. No firemen showed up.

Gairy hinted there could be more arrests. Asked about this he said he would "take all steps necessary" to restore the island to normalcy.

In his address, broadcast by Grenada Radio but available only to those with battery-powered sets, Gairy appealed to his opponents to return the nation to normal.

US to turn over Panama Canal

P. ÁMA CITY (UPI) — The United States agreed Thursday to improve control and author­­ity over the Panama Canal, which failed to pacify Panamanian students who besieged U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger after it was signed.

As Kissinger toasted the pact on the third floor of the Panamanian legislative building, he was drowned out by 3,000 students and laborers shouting and singing anti-American slogans outside.

The unruly crowd failed to respond to appeals by Panamanian National Guard Col. Manuel Antonio Noriega to move back and blocked the front entrance to the building.

The Coast Guard of the United States Maritime Administration said over Panama Canal Radio that it would not interfere with the students' protest.

$50 deposit clarified

By Drew Wallach Staff Reporter

Students have become confused regarding the advanced enrollment deposit and the housing security deposit, according to the president of Student Accountsm Ernert Moore.

The enrollment deposit of $50 is due during the period of February 11-15. The security deposit, also $50, is paid once freshman year and refunded after the student leaves the campus housing facilities.

Students planning to attend the University in the September 1974 semester must pay the advanced enrollment deposit. The money will be credited against the student's net obligations at that time.

"Although the deposit will not be required in the case of some scholarship holders, they should come in and confirm their intent to return next year," Moore added.

Heath calls for vote on coal miners strike

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG

LONDON (UPI) - Prime Minister Heath, gambing his political future against that of his embattled nation, Thursday called for new elections Feb. 28 and asked coal miners to call off a scheduled weekend strike which industry leaders said could wreck Britain's economy.

"There are some people involved in the mining dispute who have made it clear that what they want is to bring down the government— not just this government but any government," Heath told the nation on television. "They have made it clear they want to bring down the whole democratic way of life.

"The majority of you are fed to death with them and the disruption they cause."

Heath appealed to the "voice of moderate and reasonable people" to say to the extremists and militants: "We have had enough. For heaven's sake let's get on with it."

In a letter to workers, Heath appealed to the miners "in the national interest" to call off strike schedule to start at midnight Tuesday morning.

Gormley said he personally favored this. But leaving union leaders said the strike would go ahead.

Heath called a union executive meeting Friday to decide.

If the miners strike, industry leaders have warned the economy could be ruined. Britain depends on coal for 70 per cent of its energy.

Report on Watergate is delayed

By WESLEY G. PIPPERT

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate Watergate committee bowed to a request by special prosecutor Leon Jaworski Thursday and voted to delay its final report for three months, until May 28.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-NC, chairman of the Senate committee, told reporters after a 2-1/2-hour meeting of its panel that the delay was approved to "avert the danger of prejudice to individuals who might be indicted by the Watergate grand jury.

Ervin said the committee also voted to share all its information "everything" with the House Judiciary Committee now empowered by the House to take up impeachment proceedings in the Watergate case in 10 days.

Ervin explained that if indictments were returned one day, and the committee made its final report the next, the defendants almost certainly would claim prejudicial publicity as an argument for dismissal of the indictment.

Lecture on relations

Dooley: Mid-East 'timely'

by Pat Flynn

Staff Reporter

"To deal with the problem that defines objectivity in a non-biased fashion is ... the theme of the Tuesday night lecture given by Professor Howard Dooley on "American and Israeli relations after the Yom Kippur War." The lecture was held in the Carrol Auditorium of Madelevia Hall, Saint Mary's College.

Professor Dooley was emphasized that for the United States, Middle East relations were "at issue" politically. The recent war changed many of the stereotyped images Americans have of Israeli relations. Syria and Egypt's military success in the recent war surprised everyone (including the Arabs), Dooley suggested.

Arab oil diplomacy has put economic pressure behind the Arab side of the Middle East Conflict. The oil, which was available before the war were the first bipartian conferne between the nations since the 1967 war. The results of these conferences was even more precedent making, marking the first Israeli military pull back in twenty years, Dooley added.

Professor Dooley also emphasized the controversial nature of the Middle East, which fuses strong emotion ties with a multitude of complicating factors. Factors such as the geographical position of the Arab states in the Middle East, which is the largest oil producing area in the world's proven oil reserves, the political pressure exerted by the American Jewish minority and the Israeli lobby's and Iran's military significance for the United States as a check upon both Russian and Arab power in the Middle East.

Dooley also reviewed the historical and cultural roots of the conflict. While it held the entire Middle East as a colony, Britain promised the Palestinian lands both to the Palestinian Arabs and to Jewish colonist. Both sides can document ical claims to the territory that is now Israel. Attempts at establishing justice for the Jewish race have caused an injustice to be done to the Arabs. Zionist nationalism and Arab patriotism also has lead to conflict.

There is finally a conflict arising out of what Dooley called Israeli genocides, paranoia vs. Arab machiavellism. For the Israeli, memories of the gas-chambers of World War II are still clearly in mind. As a result Arab threats of driving Israel into the sea are taken seriously and responded to with extreme aggression.

On the other hand, Arab culture, with its emphasis on honor before the peer group, is embarrassed by Israel's military and economic successes amidst their relative failures. As a result they also react with aggression.

Despite the complexity of the problems he outlined, Dooley looked at the present situation hopefully. Through Sadat's oil diplomacy and military campaign of last fall the "flag jabs" in Israeli relations has been broken. Further, Mr. Henry Kissinger's success in reaching an interim peace settlement could possibly provide a stable base from which more permanent settlements could be reached.

Finally tying it all together, Dooley esposed five necessary conditions for a lasting peace in the Middle East; the creation of another nation in the Middle East area--as a homeland for the Palestinian Arabs strong border defences for Israel, the formulation of a specific written treaty defining the United States commitment to Israel militarily, and the end of the "greater Israel dream"--Israel's hope of becoming a stronger world industrial and military force through the acquisition of Arab territory in their military campaigns.

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—President Juan D. Peron virtually read the left wingPermanent Youngstown Organisation JP out of his divided party Thursday in a speech before rightwing youth leaders.

Baron also recognized the existence of "shortcomings" in his 17 week old government and promised a gradual purge of some rightists.

The leaders of the JP were not invited to Thursday's meeting with 56 rightist youth leaders. Last week the JP leadership boycotted a similar meeting because they said the other representatives "do not represent anybody."

The leftist JP is known as the "Revolutionary Youth of the Peronist Youth of the Argentine Republic. JPRA"

ND vs. Spartans--not for the meek

If you're thinking about having a quiet weekend, don't plan on starting it tonight in the ACC. It looks like the Blue Devils and the Fighting Irish will be roaring into the Carrier Indoor Stadium in Durham Saturday night for a game that promises to be a real barnburner.

The Spartans, 6-4-2 this season and 15-10 in all previous meetings, will be taken on by the Irish. The Blue Devils are shooting for a second consecutive win.

The Blue Devils have won every one of the five meetings with the Irish--the most recent decision coming last year, when Duke defeated ND, 100-74, in the Carrier Indoor Stadium.

Notre Dame and Duke will play Game 3 of their 3-game series, which began in 1947. The Blue Devils hold a 2-1 advantage in the series, having won the first two meetings, 97-80 and 94-70, and lost the third, 79-74.

The game will be played at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at the ACC indoor stadium.

The Blue Devils and the Fighting Irish will be opening up the 1973-74 Varsity Basketball season at the Carrier Indoor Stadium.

Both teams are favored to win their respective conferences, the Blue Devils having won the ACC regular season title, and the Fighting Irish having won the Big East.
