The organizers of An Tostal unanimously voiced their pleasure with campus in 1968. and the effect the law will have on the University. This law places the responsibility on the University for any student charged with violating Indiana drinking laws.

Several hall rectors voiced their comments on what effect the law will have on Notre Dame students. Fr. Gorski said, "We had a core of hard working people who were really dedicated to what they did. Also I think our organization was important to the success." Gasior was also pleased with the free concert. According to the An Tostal Chairman, Luther Allison was only contracted and paid to play for one hour, but asked to play longer, performing for three hours. "The Irish Wake turned out to be a great success considering the court ruling and other things," said

SLC to discuss state statute today

by Susan Divita

Staff Reporter

The SLC will meet today to discuss the new Indiana state law concerning alcohol and the effect the law will have on the University. This law places the responsibility on the University for any student charged with violating Indiana drinking laws.

Several hall rectors voiced their comments on what effect the law will have on Notre Dame students. Fr. Carl Eby from Fisher Hall stated that he hopes to see the Indiana law as powerful as the Supreme Court ruling on obscenity. He says the University must approach the problem seriously and listen to the legal advisors. Notre Dame must face up to the risks of violating the law and must decide on what the stance can be toward the law, according to Fr. Eby.

Fr. Eby approved the old campus drinking policy which recognized that parties with alcohol existed on the campus. He said, "Parties are very good social occasions. I've enjoyed this year very much under the present party regulations. It's been a better year." Fr. Gorski from Howard Hall agreed with Fr. Eby in saying, "I have been happy with the party guidelines this year. We had some great advancements this year." About the new Indiana law Fr. Gorski says, "The whole news has made me very sad." Alcoholic beverages and parties first appeared on the Notre Dame campus in 1968, according to Fr. Eby. Before the "enlightened" policy established at the beginning of this year, the situation concerning parties and drinking was what he termed a "two-faced" thing. "Soon, the custom became law" said Fr. Eby.

No more waiting: BU accepts Joanie!

BOSTON (UPI)-Ms. Joanie Caucus, the liberated housewife in the comic strip "Doonesbury," has been accepted to the Boston University Law School.

Law school Dean Paul Siskind said today he has send an official letter to Ms. Caucus, in care of the comic strip's creator, Garry Trudeau, in New Haven, Conn., saying:

"I am pleased to advise you that your application for admission to the class entering Boston University in September, 1974, has been accepted. A place in the class will be reserved for you, provided we receive before May 1 the items described in the attached literature..."

The comic strip appears daily in The Observer.

Siskind said he decided to accept Ms. Caucus after 300 B.U. students signed a petition asking the law school to admit her. John Berk and fellow law student Rick Broady said they circulated the petition because Ms. Caucus has applied to several other law schools in the comic strip and has been turned down.

"I think the students got a kick out of it," said Siskind. "That comic strip is rated very high, there's a lot of respect for it, and it's got a large following here..."

"Besides, I think it represents a situation that's very real—the problem of getting into a law school today..."

Contacted at his home in New Haven, Trudeau said, "I'm delighted, of course. It's a little eerie, though..."

Because of gold prices

ND ring prices raised

by David Kaminski
Staff Reporter

Soaring gold prices have boosted the cost of a gold Notre Dame class ring. According to Bro. Conan Moran, N.D. Bookstore manager.

The official Notre Dame gold ring with blue stone now costs $98 for the men's model and $96 for the women's model. $97 now buys a men's gold ring with a blue onyx stone. But from this level, prices rise in relation to the stone in the ring.

A man's gold ring with a one-eighth carat diamond set in onyx sells for $171. A similar women's model with a three point diamond set in onyx costs $98.

The Bookstore has introduced a line of sterling silver rings. A men's silver ring with the blue stone costs $48. The same ring in the women's model costs $27.

From this level, prices also rise in the silver rings according to the stone chosen for the ring.

Despite the new line of less costly silver rings, students generally still buy the gold rings at their new higher prices.

Bro. Moran blames the price increase solely on the rise in the price of gold on the free market.

A few years ago, gold was still held at $35 per ounce. Today, gold hovers at about $108 per ounce. The price of sterling silver is also rising. However, Bro. Moran hopes that current Bookstore sales of gold rings will stay constant until at least September of this year.

Bro. Moran said that all the old ring price lists were probably based on the new ring prices went into effect on April 8, 1974.

However, for the sake of comparison: A gold men's ring with a synthetic emerald stone, sales tax and additional charges for extra engraving included, sold for about $75 in the winter of 1972.

Today that same ring, without tax or engraving charges, sells for $92.

A steady business relationship between the Bookstore and Balfour, the ring supplier for N.D. has kept rising prices from rising even more.

First of all, the price of gold has been rising steadily. However, for awhile Balfour was able to make the class rings from a surplus of gold bought at lower prices.

Also, a school has to pay the ring manufacturer for the tool and die work needed to produce the school's design for the rings. By staying with Balfour, N.D. saves the cost of new tool and die making.

Finally, while other ring manufacturers apparently may price-gouge according to the current price of gold at the time of the ring's purchase, Balfour agrees to quote a fixed price over a longer period of time.

"We have to make a few dollars on every ring we sell in order to continue selling and servicing them," Bro. Moran said.

But Bro. Moran said the rings are only one item that will soon be rising in price. One of the Bookstore's major paper and notebook suppliers recently warned of a 20 per cent increase in their prices.

"It amops our people a great deal to have to raise prices," Bro. Moran said.

Social commission organization sought

by Jim Doaneth
Staff Reporter

Ken Utz, Zahn Hall social commissioner, in recent weeks has been holding meetings of the social commissioners to discuss ways that are an effort to co-ordinate planning for hall activities.

An organizational meeting of all hall social commissioners was slated for Thursday, April 25th at 11:00 p.m. in the Zahn Hall chapel.

Interested social commissioners or hall presidents should contact Utz in 305 Zahn or call 8786.

Utz conceived of the idea of a campus organization of all hall social commissioners when he found that Farley was planning a hall party the same night as a Zahn Hall party. Before Easter break, he called together representatives from St. Ed's, Cavanagh, Farley, B.P., Lay, LaMann, Keenan—Stanford, and Zahn Halls.

At the meeting the social commissioners discussed possibilities for multi-hall activities and chances for saving money by operating as a group.

It was suggested that two dorms were scheduling events for Friday, April 26th at 8:15 p.m.—concert, university chorus, directed by Dr. David Kaminski.

Campus Life Commission solidifies plans

The Campus Life Commission met yesterday in the LaFortune Ballroom for students interested in working on any of the commission's committees. Under the direction of Ray Capp, the Campus Life Commission is retaining two former committees: Social and Co-ex. Movies, Parties, and TGIF committees have been created to meet current student needs.

Headsed by Ralph Pennino, the Social Committee's major efforts are directed towards establishing a coffeehouse on the Notre Dame campus. The Rathskeller. Capp explained that they think women are surprised when you do their attitudes or the things they let slip in make such a big thing about co-education. Women are just people like everybody else. Chrost schedules address for N D Natural Law Institute

Professor Anton-Hermann Chrost of the Notre Dame Law School faculty will address the annual meeting of the Natural Law Institute tomorrow at 11:15 p.m.

Chrost's lecture is entitled "The Philosophy of Law of St. Thomas Aquinas: His Fundamental Ideas and Some of His Historical Precursors." It will commemorate the unique and lasting contributions of Thomas Aquinas to the philosophy of law. In view of the relationship between the Natural Law Institute and the Catholic Church, it is particularly appropriate that we recognize the contributions of Aquinas in this area.

Born in Germany, Professor Chrost was educated in Germany, France, Italy, Austria, England, and the United States. He has taught at the University of Harvard and Notre Dame. He was also a visiting professor and Senior Fellow at the Yale Law School on two occasions. His books include "Aristotle: New Light on His Life and Work," and "Some of his Lost Works," and "Two volumes, University of Notre Dame Press, 1974. He has also written numerous articles on various subjects, published throughout the world.

The lecture will be delivered at the Notre Dame Law School. It is open to the public.

O'Connor named Valedictorian

First woman honored

by Pat Flynn

Marianne O'Connor this year will become Notre Dame's first woman Valedictorian. O'Connor is in the joint program of the College of Engineering at Notre Dame and a member of the Class of '72.

"I think maybe because of being a woman, I have a different view of things on campus," she explained in an interview with The Observer. "In the first place it is a real challenge psychologically. People are surprised when we do well." She said that few male professors outwardly think that women are unable to compete intellectually, but often their attitudes or the things they let slip in make such a big thing about co-education. Women are just people like everybody else. According to O'Connor, men and women for specified social events, but in working, wardly state that they think women are more reasonable. People are place it is a well-organized system. It's wrong to dump all women or men into one group.

"And it's wrong to lump all women or men into one category." The Valedictorian is optimistic about the social situation at Notre Dame. She claims that although people complain about the present situation, it has gotten better in the four years she has been here.

"As Valedictorian, I have to represent my entire class in my speech at commencement. I know that what I say will not please everyone, but I hope my fellow graduates will understand my attempts not to be partisan, but to be as representative as possible." Valedictorians are picked solely on the basis of grade point, she continued, "but I hope that is not all I am representing. There are things which are as important as academic success. Academics have been just one part of my education here at Notre Dame.

An Tostal '74

In the six years that the An Tostal festival has been tradition, it has served to, as Fr. Hesburgh said on Friday afternoon, "welcome spring, in a fitting way, to duLac."

This year, despite the "Gentle Thursday" rains, late-arriving Beach Boys, and an almost thwarted Irish Wake, the An Tostal committee, with a little help on the side from happy students and pleasant weather, gave Notre Dame the finest "Rite of Spring" it has yet to witness.

Three elements seemed to have been essential to the success at this year's An Tostal: the planning, the people, and the weather.

It would take this entire page to give deserved credit to all of the people who planned and worked for the success of this weekend. But some mention should be made of a few of the essential members of the An Tostal committee. Chairman Wally Gasior, with the aid of Ron Paja, Tom Eichler, Fred Baranowski, and the ever-present Jim E. Brogan, among others—performed the task of uniting the Hall President's Council; without these people and the staff under them, the memories that surround An Tostal '74 would not be the same.

The weather and the crowds were truly co-operative, at times battling with each other (as on Gentle Thursday night), and at times serving as perfect complements (as on all of "Sunny—or was it Muddy—Saturday.

An Tostal was the perfect way to toss off winter's cobwebs for the renewed vitality of the spring. It was a weekend of joy and excitement, and this year that spirit was abundant. The '74 Committee is to be highly commended for their work. Next year's will have their work cut out for them just trying to equal An Tostal '74.

beach boys: an ostal climax

a review by jerry lutkus

The Beach Boys interrupted the activities at the Notre Dame ACC playground long enough Saturday night to drive the fans, (and the media) bananas. Despite the rigors of their brutal touring schedule, the Beach Boys did another magnificent performance (their third in as many years) at Notre Dame.

The world of the Beach Boys has become one of Gate 6's airplanes and hurried meals. They have become the epitome of shows. Saturday, before coming to the ACC, they played (Grand Rapids at 7:00 Indiana time) and yesterday they had two more shows.

But nonetheless, the show at the ACC was something special...again. If the group was tired, they sure didn't show it, granting the fans the spectacular performance they had been promised. The high point of the concert came from the song that Carl Wilson sang the beautiful God Only Knows, both the crowd and the group visibly picked up. The harmonies is that particular song were the best of the night.

From there on, the songs were the most powerful of the show. The Boys did another magnificent performance that had us wishing for more. Despite all that, when their voices worked together, there is no better vocal work in the business.

Unfortunately, the same could not be said for the Staley Brown group who opened the show. They were different from any other rock group with mediocre harmonies and songs which ran into each other because of their similarities. Despite the group's performance though, the ACC crowd again showed its colors. Concert crowds here have got to be the most inconsiderate in the Midwest. Loud talking and shouting punctuated the first set and people were still flushing in 60 minutes after the concert was over. To add to it, after their specific requests by the Beach Boys not to light matches after their set members of the crowd did anyway.

But all in all, the concert served as the best possible climax of the most successful An Tostal weekend ever. An Tostal is a great idea for The Beach Boys sure gave us a lot to celebrate.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said Sunday President Nixon appears to be obstructing justice by stalling on subpoenas issued by the House Judiciary Committee and the special prosecutor's office.

Percy also said Republicans were "whistling in the dark" if they believed Watergate would appear to be obstructing justice by the House Judiciary Committee, and the special prosecutor's office.

The senator was interviewed on ABC's Issues and Answers. "I continue to see reluctance, dragging of feet, almost what might be considered the hindrance of justice here, an obstruction of justice," Percy said of the White House delays in supplying documents.

"I feel we are moving toward a very dangerous position of confrontation if the subpoenas of both the House and the special prosecutor are not lived up to," Percy later added: "It would appear there is now a chance that justice is being impeded. I know the work of the grand juries is being impeded and slowed up because Mr. (Leon) Jaworski (Watergate special prosecutor) in a letter to me this week indicated that much to me in much those same words."

A high-ranking White House aide indicated last week that Nixon would not comply fully with the House subpoenas for tapes and documents relating to 42 presidential conversations. But he indicated the White House would supply the committee with verbatim transcripts of most of the conversations.

The deadline arrives Thursday on the Judiciary Committee's subpoenas and Mr. Jaworski's.

Percy, who has mapped strategy for running in the 1976 presidential nomination, said he would not be satisfied with White House-prepared transcripts of the tapes and thought a refusal by the President to offer anything but the tapes themselves could end up in a bill of impeachment prepared in the House.

Regarding the fall elections, Percy said "there is no possibility of us (Republicans) up in the House or the Senate. The question is how much damage is going to be done." He said the economy would be stronger by fall, but doubted inflation would be significantly slowed.

"I'm more concerned about inflation than anything else. We do not have to date demonstrated our ability to control that. Watergate will be with us in the fall and we're whistling in the dark if we think it won't be." In response to a question, the senator said it would be "unreasonable" for the Republican party to lose 70 to 100 House seats, but he added "those are the figures that are in the ballpark, and it would be disastrous for us, I think, to have that much power and control in one party."

On other issues, Percy said:

—His strategy for the Republican nomination was to ask the party to accept a possible winner. He cited the 1960 party convention and said the party wanted to pick Sen. Robert Taft, but chose Dwight Eisenhower instead because he could win.

—Agreed with Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., that Percy's current odds against getting the nomination were around 10 to 1.

Grad students to have workshop

Graduate students in the Department of Economics have scheduled a workshop on inflation for Friday April 26. Sessions in the Memorial Library Auditorium are open to the public without charge.

Dr. Ronald L. Teigen, professor of economics at the University of Michigan, will discuss "Realities of the New Inflation" at the opening session at 9:30 a.m. His talk will be followed by a discussion of "What Should the Federal Reserve Do About Inflation" by Dr. Thomas Mayer, professor of economics at the University of California, Davis. A panel discussion is scheduled for the afternoon.

Ducks defeat Club 31 II in Bookstore final game

by Bill Delaney

The DUCKS are the champions of the 1974 Bookstore Basketball Tournament, as the result of their 21-17 Friday afternoon victory over last year’s champions, Club 31 II.

In a very emotional game between the two teams, Joe Coney and Ron Hein made three driving layups early in the game to give the DUCKS the lead. Club 31 II, led by Frank Allocco and Steve Sylvester, couldn’t find the basket, enabling the DUCKS to open up an 11-5 halftime lead.

The opening minutes of the second half were marred by poor shots, shoddy rebounding and all-around lack-lustre performances, but in spite of these events, the DUCKS continually went to the basket, as Rosely Thomas’ drives opened up a four-point lead.

Norb Schieltz tried to bring Club 31 II back into the game with his shooting and drives, but Brian Harrington’s jump shot from the top of the key snuffed out a late Club 31 II comeback and gave the DUCKS the victory and the Championship.

The All-Bookstore Team, chosen by the Tournament Committee was selected after the game. It was composed of Rosely Thomas and Joe Coney of the DUCKS, Mike Bonifer of Club 31 II, Dave Kelly of the TLUCC, and John Cornelius of the HOLY CROSS ROOST. Coney was also selected as the MVP of the Tournament, and the title of “Mister Bookstore” awarded to the DUCKS’ Ron Hein.

In the Consolation Game for third place, the HOGS easily defeated HEILS HOOPS 21-10, in a game where the ROOPS couldn’t get their offense together. Bedford Bruno and John Cornelius combine for 11 points, which proved much too for the HOGS to overcome.

An Tostal Volleyball

Pangborn Hall defeated the Hogs from Holy Cross in the featured event of Saturday’s mud volleyball extravaganza to claim the volleyball championship for the second consecutive year.

Pangborn defeated the Hogs in a best-of-three set, which was played in eight inches of mud and grime on the An Tostal field.

In the preliminary event, the Observer staff and student Government played to a 1-1 tie in their long-game series. Student Government captured the first game of the set, but the Observer’s musketeers gained a tie by winning the second contest, 15-14.

The DUCKS defeated Club 31 II in the running board jump.

-John Trampe’s 40 for nine holes of golf at the Burke Memorial Course.

-Joe O’Connor’s 54-second clocking in the 100-yard swimming event.

-Mark Sullivan’s free throw accuracy--28 out of 30 shots.

-Bob Case’s winning softball home of 296 feet.

-Dan O’Connor’s 43-foot toss in the shot-put.

-Scott McFarland’s 30.6 effort in the running broad jump.

-Bob Kiesel’s 10.8 hundred yard dash.

-Mark Sullivan’s 4:47 effort in the mile, and

-Frank Cimino’s touch with a bull for three laps around the course.

-Terry Murnane’s touch with a hammer for nine holes of golf. -Mark Sullivan’s accuracy--28 out of 30 shots.

-Dan O’Connor’s 43-foot toss in the shot-put.

-Scott McFarland’s 30.6 effort in the running broad jump.

\textbf{We're ahead of where we were'}

A change of scenery seemed to take an early, adverse toll on Notre Dame's football team during Saturday's full-dress scrimmage, but by the time the Irish gridders had completed their two and one-half hour workout, they seemed to be right at home in their new surroundings.

Head coach Ara Parseghian scored his scrimmage activity from Carrier Field to the playing surface of Notre Dame Stadium for the first time this spring on Saturday morning, and the change, particularly, seemed to favor Parseghian's passers. That, or inspired coach Paul Shoemaker to his best game coaching backends.

The first three drives during Saturday's workout ended in interceptions—one each by senior Tom Clemens (to Tim Simon), junior Rick Haaning, and second-year student Steve Mahalic—and junior Fred Trosko (to Tim Lemonakos)—and those miscues, along with a pair of 15-yard penalties and a high snap by center Steve Quehl in a puntng situation gave Parseghian good reason to frown during the early—and very late-portions of the scrimmage.

But only three hours after things began, Ara was doing much more smiling.
