St. Mary's assembly votes to change sign-out procedures

by Mary Janca
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's Student Assembly last night unanimously passed a proposal to change the sign-out procedures while defeated another proposal which would allow first semester freshmen to have self-responsible hours with parents' approval.

"Any resident with self responsible hours will now be required to have a sign-out card. Any resident with hours must keep the sign-out procedures," proposed Hall Life Commissioner Anne Pleasants.

"All residents will be required to keep a file in her hall office with names of people with whom she would ordinarily know where she is, and the times and places she is staying. The resident is responsible for keeping this file up to date," she continued.

"The current sign-in system is ineffective between the hours of 6:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., and is not always accurate since students often do not know where they are going and don't always stay in the place indicated on their sign-out card," she explained.

A third reason for revision is that the present system is creating an inappropriate amount of work for Hall Life Commissioner and the noted.

Smith contends that this proposal "is in no way connected with the theft of the sign-out books," which occurred earlier this month.

In order for the new system to go into effect, it must receive approval from the Student Affairs Commission, composed of administration, faculty and student representatives, the Student Council, however, the Hall Life Commissioner is optimum in the passage. "It has a lot of support and is a very logical proposal," she stated.

J. John Bryant, student affairs coordinator, proposed that "all incoming freshmen be granted self-responsible hours contingent upon parents' permission without registering in the hall or anytime thereafter and recoverable at anytime by same said parents." Many freshmen are mature enough to handle self responsible hours and consequently become frustrated and rebellious. This often leads to curfews being broken and late minutes being needed in order to direct their behavior toward the school, Albota contends.

The ruling as it stands is discriminatory, she continued, since all students, except first semester freshmen, have their hours subject to parental approval.

If it were changed, girls could decide with their parents whether they will be mature enough to handle "no-hours." This would strictly be a family decision, since there is no pressure," she argued.

"Parents are closest to their daughters and are best able to judge whether their mature enough to handle self responsible hours," she stated.

However, the Assembly was divided on the results. Members pointed out that the curfew is a requirement set up by the administration. "Sometimes it's good for students to have guidelines at all," commented one member.

Others argued that freshman year, for most students, involves a new life style, with more coursework and a different type of social life than that of high school, and a curfew helped them to adjust to it and prevented them from exceeding their limitations.

Also, some said that a curfew helped to unite freshmen and create a sense of community. Freshmen get together at 2:00 a.m. on weekends and talk.

Because of the negative response, Algebra amended the proposal to read that incoming freshmen be granted self-responsible hours Friday and Saturday nights only with parental approval.

This move was defeated by a vote of 6-5 with one abstention, as it was not a majority which is necessary for the proposal. The more attempts at its passage were also defeated.

Rule revisions stressed by HPC

by Susan Divita
Staff Reporter

The Hall Presidents Council stressed several rule revisions that must be brought to the attention of the administration and the Student Affairs Council. The first amendment is in the area of alphabetical order placement and the second is in student policy. The latter of these has been taken on the proposed changes immediately. The HPC states its views in a letter to the editor in this issue of The Observer.

Feedback was received from several students concerning the parietal issue and party house proposal. Laura Dodge, president of Badin Hall, stated she felt the feedback was of a real nature which could be shown to be a true goal for the house. The proposed move would throw an issue of a party house in Michigan ended on the point that the entire plan had to be thought out completely before presentation to the HPC. The house would involve a lot of money for tuition, etc., and the issue was more complex than it seemed at first glance.

A guest speaker, Ben Johnson from Positive Action and Development Committee, spoke on the African Appeal Fund which is a collection immediate or members of the African all night at food service there will be a box for cash contributions which the hall president or community service director in each hall will be in charge of. The project will raise money for drought stricken countries in Africa to provide them with medication and other necessities. The Positive Action Committee will also take their case to South Bend.

A few items were brought to the committee which was primarily a summer storage. The official word is that there will be no storage in halls this year and though another place is being looked into, possibly in town, though that proposal looks doubtful.
WSND to be piped into dining halls
by Mike Donovan
Staff Reporter

WSND, Notre Dame's student-run radio station, announced yesterday in an Observer interview, that starting Wednesday their music will be piped into the North Dining Hall. Slight problems with their broadcast lines will delay their entrance into the South Dining Hall until sometime next week. The possibility of being heard in St. Mary's Dining Hall is also being looked into.

Paul Bollwerk, WSND station manager, said that the station has lost some of the campus audience, and that this is just one attempt to bring WSND back to the students. Bollwerk stated that they can't compete with the big commercial stations, but that they do offer the campus good music, campus announcements, news and sports. There has been some trouble with audio quality in the past, Bollwerk said, "but we are looking into this so the work can be done to correct the difficulties."

Citing the fact that that station has lost touch musically with the campus, AM Program Director C. Weber announced a new format that will allow WSND to compete against area stations for the campus listeners. Weber stated that they are going to play the music the campus wants to hear, and will play a combination of Top 40, Solid gold, and progressive music.

Founder of reality therapy to lecture at SMC tonight

William Glasser, M.D., founder of reality therapy will present a lecture, "Discipline Internalized: The Impossible Dream," at Saint Mary's College, Wednesday, April 24, 1974, at 7:00 p.m. in O'Laughlin Auditorium.

At age 19, he became a clinical psychologist and began a psychiatric training at the Veterans Administration Center in Los Angeles and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dr. Glasser has been a psychiatrist in private practice in Los Angeles since 1957 and has consulted widely in the correctional field. His method of treating juvenile delinquents has gained popularity in various levels. He has taught and teachers. He has worked directly with children in the Los Angeles city schools—Watts and other areas—and the Polo Alto School administrators, counselors, and teachers. He has lectured widely in this country and Canada about the problems of contemporary education.

At present Dr. Glasser works extensively in both psychiatry and education. He heads an organization, The Educator Training Center, which has teachers throughout the country actively involved in studying and working to make their school a school without failure. Many more teachers are involved in his course on educational television. Psychiatric clinics, mental hospitals, half way houses and correctional institutions are now using the ideas of reality therapy, a form of treatment which stresses the importance of the individual rather than the group. At the institute of Reality Therapy in West Los Angeles, Dr. Glasser teaches and consults with those interested in learning to use reality therapy in their work and in their lives.

Dr. Glasser has authored three books: Reality Therapy: A New Approach to Psychiatry, Schools Without Failure, and The Identity Society.

Recently the Board of Regents of Saint Mary's College endorsed the establishment within the department of education of 'schools without failure' courses and reality therapy workshops in conjunction with the Educator Training Center, both as enrichment for the students, and as a teacher preparation program at Saint Mary's College and also as an opportunity for persons in the Michiana area to participate in instructional programs involving Glasserian techniques.

Three Glasser institutes in reality therapy will be held at Saint Mary's College this summer—Schools Without Failure, June 10-14; Discipline in the Classroom, June 24-28, and Religious Education, June 24-28.

Tickets for Dr. Glasser's April 24 appearance at Saint Mary's College are $2.00 and may be purchased at the downtown office of the St. Joseph Bank and Trust Company, or through the Office of Programming at the College.

For additional information, please contact Sister Maria Concepta McDermott, CSC, professor of education at Saint Mary's College, 284-9461.

Articulate Believers?

Responding to Fr. Hesburgh’s challenge for comments on the COUP report, the Faculty Senate last night passed an amendment to the section on Catholic Character, specifically regarding hiring of faculty with religious considerations. Their proposal reflects the very spirit that the Priorities report suggests towards our Catholic character and deserves immediate attention.

The Amendment

The proposed amendment deals with the policy towards recruitment of faculty which states that they “…should exercise care to attract and appoint from among the most competent teachers…who are Catholics.” Their proposal suggests the deletion of “and” and “appoint.” Not only for considerations of discipline should this amendment be adopted, but more importantly to endure the University’s declared commitment to Catholicity as well as Catholicism.

Catholic: First Priority

Without doubt, Notre Dame is and should continue to be, as the COUP report states, a Catholic institution of Catholic character.

However, the carrying over of preference for Catholics in recruitment of faculty does more to damage Catholic tradition at Notre Dame than develop it.

What could be more ridiculous than hiring qualifications based on a declared label of belief?

Labels Definable?

According to the COUP report, Notre Dame should search out faculty with a commitment to Christ in service and sacrifice. Certainly the Catholic faith professes such a commitment. But again, this should not rule out those of other faiths if we wish to fulfill our added commitment to Christianity.

As the priorities report admits, there exist numerous scholars, who while they may not claim the Catholic tradition or Christian faith, that add to our moral and spiritual endeavors.

Their worth is vital to the modern ecumenism of Notre Dame.

Proposal Warranted

The Faculty Senate attempts to insure our Catholic and Christian responsibilities with their proposal to broaden the considerations in faculty hiring practices.

They have accepted Fr. Hesburgh’s as well as Notre Dame’s challenge to evaluate our future in terms of the COUP report. Let not this or any subsequent proposals fall upon deaf ears.

-Tom Drape

Much to the dismay of a certain president, the national office holder may soon be delivered from the status of a commodity; no longer to be bought and sold, under the guise of honest election. The senate last week, finally passed a formidable campaign reform measure.

If one believes as I do, that all corrupt politicians do not choose to be, the measure is indeed a dramatic step forward. Through public financing, the candidate would be severed from the corporate umbilical cord. The cord which strangles him morally, but without which he could not even be born into the political mainstream.

The dilemma of campaign financing is no more clearly illustrated than in Kansas, where Democratic governor Robert Docking has shown that election scandals are not limited to the president, or the Republican party alone. Recently, Docking’s brother and chief aid were indicted for their part in a kick-back scheme which settled a $30,000 campaign debt. It wasn’t a pocket-filling venture that prompted the kick-back action; it was the exorbitant price of political office.

Like certain other capable American politicians, Robert Docking is a man of limited personal wealth. Every election poses the threat of defeat at the hands of a better financed opponent, a more potent campaign machine. Last year, with a twelve year record as governor, is driven to wonder how his excellence will weigh in the balance. Every election poses the threat of defeat at the hands of a better financed opponent, a more potent campaign machine.

In a larger sense, it was especially satisfying to see Allen remedied to his home Dec. 13, in which bill passed and Allen struggling to keep another one of his filibusters alive, the White House dispatched an Air Force One to return with the public financing bill in Allen’s support. A memorable act, in light of the fact that only three weeks earlier, the president had paged: “To do everything in his power to see that future campaign in not get out of hand.”

It is obvious that the president will not sign campaign reform into law once it has emerged from the House. Mr. Nixon had described public financing as a “raid on the public treasury.”

And yet, Americans can take comfort in knowing that campaign reform is inevitable. It is an idea too crucial to die at the hands of veto. It will wait in the shadows, with the knowledge that a president’s term is but four years, and sometimes less.
Editor's Note: Senator Margaret Chase Smith, former Republican Senator from Maine, in visiting the Notre Dame campus this week as a fellow of the Woodrow Wilson National Foundation. Wearing her traditional red rose, Senator Smith gave the Observer the following interview.

Observer: What does being a Woodrow Wilson fellow entail?

Senator Smith: Well, the objective of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation is to bring the community and the campus a little closer together, to have a better understanding in the community of the campus and the students and faculty, and a better understanding by the students and faculty of the community. As I understand it, it was believed that if representatives from various areas—the business professions, government, politics, the Church and so forth—with practical experience could go on to campuses and talk with students and faculty perhaps a little of the practical could rub off on the students who had it from the theoretical. And perhaps the visiting professors or senior fellows as they are called could get some of the feeling of the book-learning. Altogether, it is a cooperative thing that's hoped to bring a better understanding and a greater desire on the part of the young people to reverse some of the trends which have been developed and are, perhaps, not too good for the future.

Observer: Have you been keeping active in political affairs since you left the Senate?

Senator Smith: Yes, I have, very much. I served a very, very long and had a long time in both the House and Senate. Of course, I keep up with the day-to-day news and try to keep myself informed. But I have not done anything politically as far as campaigns are concerned. I feel that after the outcome of my own campaign of 1972, perhaps it would be well for me to take a little rest from politics and let someone else do it. So I've not participated on the campaign trails.

Observer: There was much criticism of Senator Muskie during that campaign because he supported the Democratic candidate who opposed you. Do you feel that he somehow violated a certain unwritten code of the Senate?

Senator Smith: Senator Muskie did that. It is an area that I would not want to make a judgment on Senator Muskie. I was disappointed, of course, largely because he used age as the reason for his support for my opponent rather than my voting record. My voting record, I think, could not be challenged. It if could have been they would have gotten into it during the campaign.

So we all have a right to our own views and I'm not critical of Senator Muskie. I will say that he evidently was not going to run for re-election. I noticed he corrected it the next day at a press conference and said he didn't know he meant exactly that because he might be running when he was ninety. So he must have heard from home.

Observer: Do you feel that Watergate and the President's other troubles affected the recent Michigan elections?

Senator Smith: I can't tell about that. We have a right to assume so. Yes, on the other hand whether it was a protest vote on all that has been going on, whether it was a protest vote on the president's policies, whether it was a more desirable candidate who won—I didn't know either one of the candidates and I have no right to speculate on what it was—but it could be any number of reasons.

I think the Jerry Ford district that was taken by a Democrat was very close. It came about by the stay-at-homes as a protest vote. I don't think there's much question about that. But this last one, I don't know enough about it to give you a reasonable answer.

Observer: Was the President's campaign in the last Senator Muskie. Is his detriment to the Gop candidate? Should he have stayed in Washington?

Senator Smith: Of course I believe there's a time for the President to go out around. I, again, am not the one to make a judgment on it because I always felt that people in the state were well able to take their own decisions without an outside coming in. I would prefer to have the President come in at some meeting that was not partisan—outside of the campaign rather than during a campaign, as far as I personally am concerned.

Observer: Do you seek any likely presidential candidates for '76?

Senator Smith: No, I think it's too early. I think we should get through the 1974 campaign and see where we're going from here out, but begin immediately following the November elections and get into the 1976 decisions without waiting until 1976 for it. I think there are any number of highly qualified—candidate will be. I think that they're not necessarily from the Senate, however. It seems to me that there may be an interview with margaret chase smith

Other highly qualified, experienced people, experienced in administration who would qualify if they were willing to go into it.

Observer: Is President Nixon nixing the GOP party?

Senator Smith: I think the president would help the party and help them to go along. I think he would expedite action and not continue the delay. If he is not going to give the information that is called for it, I think that he should state it and stay with it. I personally believe that he could expedite action. I believe that the Senate Watergate Committee had very, very full and complete hearings. The testimony should be summarized and analyzed and be used by the Judiciary Committee of the House in expediting its action.

But if, of course, the White House delays and there's a delay on the part of any members of the House, there's a double delay which can be very damaging. I think the damage that is coming out from this is the confusion and the suspicion that has been created and continues to increase. The suspicions on the part of the American people are far more damaging than any action that might come by impeachment and Senate trial.

Observer: Should President Nixon resign?

Senator Smith: No, I am very much opposed to the President's resigning. I don't think this would not solve anything. It would be damaging to our system, because it would indicate if after elections anybody could make a change they could start accusations and perhaps do some of the things they are doing now. I think the only way that will clear the air and bring about a more stabilizing situation in the country is for the House to vote impeachment. But there should be a clear understanding of the difference between impeachment and conviction: that impeachment is simply a means of saying we have some things that need to be looked into under judicial process. The impeachment is a matter of fact and goes over to the Senate for hearing chaired by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court who I think has the confidence and respect of the American people generally.

The hearings could be held. Mr. Nixon, the President of the United States, if he had the opportunity to prove his innocence if he is innocent and if he is not, then he should be proved guilty and the American people should know what the guilt is. And then with these facts are made public, the House could have a session to decide whether the Branch of the government we could go to the business of running the government. But first we must understand the difference between impeachment and conviction.

If there is anything to date that would indicate that he had done anything illegal. What we prove, we're going to prove for. I go on the assumption that a person is innocent until proven guilty. And of course, the President has not been proven guilty.

Observer: While you were in the Congress, do you ever feel that your vote was a waste of time? Say, for instance, on the Armed Services Committee?

Senator Smith: That question would better be asked of the senators I served with.

No. I did not consider women people. I believe, I feel very strongly that one should not take on responsibilities unless they feel they have been qualified, unless they can see and do the full responsibilities without special privileges. I have never asked for special privileges. I have always been a woman of the full responsibilities and not given to special privileges. I have never asked for special privileges.

Observer: Would the Amendment not have accomplished anything?

Senator Smith: I like to think that I continue to be a lady. But I was not elected as a woman senator. I was elected as one of two senators from the state of Maine. As a member of the House and the Senate, I always considered whatever was due one in my position, both as one of the two senators from the state of Maine and in the important committees on which I served. In those situations, I always appointed all of my fellow senators said that I was a lady but firm when it came to anything that belonged to my position.

Observer: You co-sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment. Did you do it based on principles?

Senator Smith: I have always co-sponsored the Equal Rights Amendment and I have that reservation that I was and am for equal rights without special privileges. I think it must be fully understood that in having a constitutional amendment that gives women equal rights carries with it the full responsibilities and not given to special legislation for women or special privileges.

Observer: By equal responsibilities and special privileges do you mean, for instance, that women should be drafted?

Senator Smith: I think if they ask for equal rights they have to take their potential as fledged representative citizens, yes.

Observer: Some people feel that the amendment cannot change the long-standing attitudes of the people and therefore the amendment will not accomplish much. How do you feel about that?

Senator Smith: Well, I just think that if it isn't going to make any difference why object to it? Let's have the Constitution clear in these days with the women having earned the hard way their independence. They're full fledged citizens. Let the Constitution say so and have the administration of the law rule.

Observer: As the first woman nominated to the Presidency, do you feel that people should begin to think about having women in higher offices?

Senator Smith: I think qualified women, yes. I always use the word qualified. I think that it is very essential that women appointees, or women candidates should be sure that they are going to give whatever they're asking for, all that is required, and are capable of doing.

I think everyone time there is a women candidate who is not qualified doesn't help the cause of women. But it must be remembered that there have been many pioneer women and a great many of them have done in a few short years that have brought us to the place we're in now. Women are people. And it should go on the basis of qualified people rather than qualified men or women.

Astronaut symposium moved to ACC due to large interest

Due to the large public interest in the symposium of the astronauts of the University of Notre Dame's Engineering Centennial celebration, the event has been moved from the CCE auditorium to the ACC arena. The new location for the free, public symposium, which will be held at 2 p.m. Friday (April 26), will allow the entire audience to see the event. "Free." An overflow crowd at the CCE auditorium would have had to view it on closed circuit television.

In the symposium, moderated by Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., Notre Dame president, astronauts William A. Anders, Col. Frank Borman, Charles Conrad, Jr., Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin, and James A. McDivitt will discuss some of the philosophical questions which have resulted from man's conquering space.

Two panelists, Anders and Borman, were members of the Apollo 8 crew, which made the first lunar flight. Currently, Anders is a commissioner of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission and Borman is senior vice president of operations for Eastern Airlines.

Conrad, who commanded Apollo 12 and piloted the Gemini 3 and 11 missions, and Dr. Kerwin were members of the Skylab 2 crew. Conrad commanded the mission while Kerwin served as science pilot. Conrad now is vice president-operating for American Television and Communications Corporation, Denver, Colo.

A medical doctor, Kerwin recently was named chief of physician astronauts for NASA.

McDivitt, who is senior vice president of Consumers Power Company, Jackson, Mich., commanded the Apollo 9 ten-day earth orbital mission and was command pilot of Gemini 4, a 66 orbit mission.

The symposium is one of several events in a special two-day celebration marking 100 years of engineering education at Notre Dame. Other centennial highlights include a Student Recognition Luncheon at which students will be honored for achievement and service to the college, the presentation of Horse Awards at a Centennial Banquet to several individuals and an organization for significant contributions to the advancement of engineering or architecture, and the awarding of honorary degrees at a special academic convocation.

The main speaker at the convocation will be Dr. Jerome P. Willemin, president of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Notre Dame, which was the first American Catholic University to offer engineering courses, provides undergraduate and graduate degree programs in aerospace, chemical, civil, electrical and mechanical engineering, metallurgy and materials science, engineering science and architecture. The College of Engineering, under Dean Joseph C. Hogan, includes six departments with faculty members and 1,000 students including freshman interns.

Campus housing guaranteed for all

by George Velich

"Anyone who turned in his campus housing contract by April 15 will be given a room in the hall of his choice," stated Fr. John Mulcahy, director of campus residence, when questioned about the campus situation next fall.

All but approximately 10 of the 1,630 beds in the dormitories had been reserved by a large number of students with safe housing numbers did not return their contracts. Those ten will be off campus unless they cancel their reservations, for telling their $50 pre-registration fees.

"Presently, we have 100 cards for the summer," added Mulcahy. When people choose not to retain their reservations in April, the dorms will get rooms." Mulcahy explained.

Three halls have an excess of residents planned for next year: Alumni, Morrissey, and Keenan. The office will shift approximately 30 incoming freshman into other dorms rather than transfer present students to other halls.

"Most students who are in doubt about their situations will know by May 10," concluded Fr. Mulcahy.

Campus Ministry collects funds for tornado victims

by William Murphy

Staff Reporter

The Office of Campus Ministry recently collected funds and clothing to aid tornado victims in southern Indiana. The collection was organized by Campus Ministry with the help of the Hall President's Council and the Community Service Director in each dormitory.

Funds collected in each dorm and in Sacred Heart Church totaled $3,500.40. According to Sister Jane Pitz, this money was given to the Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund to be distributed as was necessary to the tornado victims.

Sister Pitz also noted that four station wagons were filled with clothes by the student body to aid the disaster victims. The clothes were given to the Salvation Army who was organizing the clothes distribution program in the emergency areas.

Sister Pitz announced that Campus Ministry had received a letter from James Morrissey, chairman of the St. Joseph County Chapter of the American Red Cross, in which the chapter expressed its "grateful appreciation to the Notre Dame community for its donations to the disaster relief fund.

Netherlands swap Michigan squads for 13th victory

by John Vincent

The Notre Dame tennis team captured its 13th victory in 18 matches this season by defeating a fine Central Michigan squad 8-1 at the Courtesy Tennis Center on Friday. It was the second time in less than a week that the Irish manhandled the opposition beating Western Michigan on Wednesday by the same score.

Junior Chris Kane turned in a solid performance as he defeated Central Michigan’s Marc Gelina 7-6, 6-7, 7-5. Kane was down by 4-1 starting him out at the sixth position to where he is now playing in the fifth spot.

Sophomore Juan Inchauste continued his fine form Friday as he defeated CM’s Mike Ackerman 6-3, 6-2. It was Inchauste’s 15th victory of the season as he has dropped only three. This season is the first taste of collegiate tennis for Inchauste, who was a finalist in the New England singles championships last summer.

The match between Notre Dame and Ohio State was called off because of the rain and wind on Sunday.

Weather cold, bats hot as Irish lose to Wolverines

by John Higgins
University of Michigan, Notre Dame 11. No, despite the football—like score, the Big Champions did not upset the nation’s number-one football team in the 1964 Big Ten Championship. Despite three Irish hurlers failing to contain the potent Michigan attack as the Notre Dame defense performed its 4-0-4, three Irish hurlers failed to contain the potent Michigan attack as Notredame was held to a single nine-inning game was played at all as their inflated ERA’s 11’s walks, and some arms will attest to.

The cold did not have such an adverse effect on the hitters, though, as 27 hits were showered over Carrier Field. Free-swinging was the key to the offensive explosion as hitters tided off on the tormented pitchers, probably so they could get their plate chores over with as quickly as possible and return to the shelter of the dugout.

Michigan, scoring in all frames, but the first, erased a 2-1 Irish lead with three runs in the third to take the lead for good, with Ted Mahan and Pete Ross leading the charge. Michigan starter and loser Mark Piltman.

Larry Gustaven upped the lead to 5-1 with a long home run in right field in the fourth, and four straight doubles brought in four more tallies in the fifth.

Notre Dame, held scoreless on two hits for three innings, broke loose for for runs of its own in the fifth on two Michigan errors, two walks, and singles by Pete Schmidt and Ron Goodman to send winning pitcher Arthur Adams packing.

Bob Stratta relieved Piltman in the sixth and surrendered back-to-back leadoff triples to Dan Damani and Dick Wallhouse for one run, and after the Irish went down 1-2-3 in their half, Michigan put the game on ice, so to speak, with three markers on a walk and singles by Gustaven and Damani to put an insurmountable 15-6 advantage.

Notre Dame managed two runs in the seventh but one hit; Jim Smith’s second single of the day, and rallied in the bottom of the ninth to score twice on Smith’s free pass, Mark Schmidt single, two-run triple by Pat Coleman and a sacrifice fly by Pete Clemens.

In between, the Wolverines netted two runs in the eighth on four singles off Stratta and three runs in the final frame behind first hit, another Damani triple, and reliever Mitch Mixell.

The Irish belted out nine hits in the affair, led by two splices from infielders Schmidt, Smith, and Schmitz. Everyone in the Michigan lineup saw at least one hit, ninth place hitter Damani three, while Ross and Jim Sichta chased home three runs.

The Notre Dame defense, extremely tight in recent games, did not add much support as it committed five costly errors.

The Irish continue their schedule Friday at home against the Illinois State Illini as the same teams clash Saturday in a doubleheader.

Relaxing with Sully

How can you have relaxation, peace of mind, if you consistently find yourself hitting out of sandtraps, through trees, anywhere except to the tee-if it doesn’t have a name in it? How can you be relaxed if you can’t find your way to the green? Instead of golf, the game should be called chase.

Well, there are six golfers on this campus who have found the hidden meaning to life, those relaxing moments on a golf course which we believe average duffers wish for, dream of, read about in golf magazines. They’re a talented sextet, a confident sextet. In between, you haven’t met him near the swimming pool. And during the spring time, you’ve met him in groups at either the practice tee, the driving range in the Rock or out on the putting green.

Confidence can easily be shaken in a golfer if he allows himself to become too emotional after a shot. That’s the difference between the Dame golf team is supplied by first-year coach Noel O’Sullivan, but I would like him to play on and around a green. His walk elicits it, and so does his scorecard. He’s got us thinking and playing golf everyday. He’s got us thinking and playing golf everyday. We’re a talented sextet, a confident sextet.

Someone once told me you could tell a person’s nature by his actions on the course. It’s really looking like my actions on the course. It’s really looking like my actions on the course. You’ve met him in groups at either the practice tee, the driving range in the Rock or out on the putting green.
