Faculty split on revisions

by Bob Quakenbush
Staff Reporter

The newly proposed Academic Code met both support and criticism yesterday as seven faculty members discussed the code by telephone conducted by the Observer to gauge initial faculty reaction. The Academic Department faculty has been asked for its realization of University academic practices.

More than dozens faculty members were contacted last night, but only seven were willing to comment. The remaining preferred to withhold their opinions until they had had oppor-tunity to study the proposals. All but one indicated they had not yet seen the proposal, which has not yet been distributed to the faculty as yet, and the one that had seen it said he had not had a glimpse of it. In fact, several reported they received their first and only knowledge of the Academic Code while receiving a call back on Tuesday's Yugoslavia. Said one quoted the American humorist William Rogers, "All I know is what I read in the papers."

The seven respondents dealt chiefly with the proposal to raise the cut-off point for the Dean's List from the present 3.25 average to a 3.5 average. They emphasized, however, that although there is a standard, flat course limit, the professor is the primary issue in the proposed policies concerning academic affairs, stressing the need for more meaningful and more realistic grading policies.

The University at Bloomington stated that if the university there is a standard, flat course limit, the professor involved and the dean of the department, the observer was told.

Indiana State University at Terre Haute provided the most critical comment of all. Dean Townsend, vice-president of academic affairs, stressed the need for more meaningful and more realistic grading policies, and more control in the handling of grievances.

Loyola University in Chicago was contacted next. Through the office of the assistant dean, it was learned that the Dean's List cut-off point was raised to 3.5, as opposed to the 3.35 requirement proposed by Dean Provost James B. Tuch HAHL.

Loyola does not have an absence policy before vacation, with no cut-off hour load-cutoff policy, or after vacations, Dean's List requirements, in order to maintain the availability of an academic policy. University curve for grades, no credit, or minimum of 25 percent. Students may withdraw at a semester's end for any reason and may return for enrollment from where they left off. Undergraduates over the 18-hour enrollment maximum a charge is made for the extra hours at the same rate of regular tuition.

No university curve has been established at Marquette, but the Dean's List is higher than it is presently at Notre Dame. In order to qualify for the Dean's List, the student must have a grade point average of 3.5, and the problem of the average does not exist as far as grading is concerned. Quade related that "each professor has his own criteria, and it has worked well."

"I am pleased to say," he continued, "that the system has not been used to very much, but it is a system that has been called upon, it has worked." Assistant Professor Government John Ross acknowledged the recommendation in favor of it, he stated, "or else abolish it. If it's not really the distinction it's supposed to be, why have it at all?"

Norman Haaser, assistant chairman of the Mathematics Department, is curious in as much to a Dean's List is currently done with the list. He observed, "This one strikes me as a little strange because my son has been on it for the last 3 semesters and I haven't seen anything in the papers about it. I just don't know what they do with it." Haaser had previously referred to the common practice among other universities and colleges of releasing the names of Dean's List students to their hometown newspapers.

"Out of fair competition (with other colleges)," Haaser concluded, "I would think it would be OK to have more of our students on the Dean's List!"

Julian Pleasants, assistant professor of microbiology, echoed this sentiment, saying, "Well, it always seemed to me that Notre Dame has high class students to begin with, so I don't really see why a considerable number of them can't be on the Dean's List! To justify his his point, Pleasants, a professor of physics, stated that in order to protect students going through just to be admitted to the University, and decided, "The students just have to be given an additional charge for credit hours taken in excess of a 17-hour limit."

The Director of the American Studies Program, Ronald Weber, believes the Dean's List cut-off point is raised in order to make the distinction more meaningful. He said, "3.5 does not indicate enough as grades have risen. The cut-off point has to rise to make the honor more meaningful and more realistic."

According to John Lucey, associate professor of aeronautical and mechanical engineering, the proposal of the university, and the University needs is to have people to consider they are handled within the community. He continued, "Of course, there is one alternative to the proposal. I think what the University needs is to have people to consider they are handled within the community." (continued on page 3).
DETROIT (UPI) - A man despondent because he didn't have a job pulled his infant son from bed Tuesday and threw him out a third-floor window, police said. When his common-law wife ran screaming from the apartment on Detroit's west side, the man then tossed his 3-year-old daughter out of the window, they said.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Senate Tuesday confirmed William E. Simon as Treasury Secretary.

The Simon nomination, one of the least controversial major appointments of the Nixon administration, was routinely brought to the Senate floor by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield and was passed by voice vote with no debate.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - A prison inmate who claims to be a leader of the Hispanic Liberation Army appealed Tuesday for Patricia Hearst's kidnappers to free her by Friday in order to win $4 million food ransom for poor people.

Calif. drivers in a hurry

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) -- So many California motorists are ignoring the 55 mile per hour speed limit that the state highway patrol could make 100,000 arrests a day if it had enough men, patrol Commissioner Walter Pudinski said Monday.

Pudinski said highway patrol speed studies during March and April showed 76 percent of vehicles are exceeding the 55 m.p.h. limit on rural freeways and up to 45 percent on the San Diego and Los Angeles urban freeways.

"Speed enforcement is approaching the saturation point, based on the number of men we can put on the road at any given time," Pudinski said.

"Violation percentages indicate we could arrest 100,000 per day if we had enough men and equipment."

Pudinski said his 4,900 uniformed traffic patrolmen would arrest a record 100,000 speeders this month--triple the number cited in April of last year.

Patrolmen are now arresting an average 3,623 speeding drivers per day.

"The need to conserve energy exists, and as long as the law is on the books it will be enforced," he said.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) -- A prison inmate who claims to be a leader of the Hispanic Liberation Army appealed Tuesday for Patricia Hearst's kidnappers to free her by Friday in order to win $4 million food ransom for poor people.

briebs

...
Ed Deavers named new band aide

The appointment of Edward Deavers of Marietta, Ga., as a graduate assistant with the Notre Dame Bands has been announced by Robert F. O’Brien, associate professor of music and director of the bands. The recipient of a bachelor’s degree in music at Jacksonville State University, Deavers will begin his duties in September.

Deavers will assist O’Brien and James Phillips, assistant director, in the planning and direction of marching, varsity and concert band programs. Also participating in the band direction is Roger Brown, a graduate student in music from Lake Wales, Fla.

Deavers performs on the French horn and has studied under David Bayne Dobkins, Dr. J. Harris Mitchell, and both Freddy and Dan Martin. He has received numerous awards for his marching and concert band performances and was nominated for the Governor’s Honor Program in 1969, as well as the McEachern High School Endowment Fund Scholarship in 1970.

Concerning the credibility of John Dean’s testimony now that Mitchell and Stans had been acquitted, Deavers commented that the official had stated in a news release that the acquittal was proof that Dean was a liar.

Deavers stated that he felt that the decision was not based on disbelieve in Dean’s testimony. Instead, said Deavers, the prosecution failed in its job to prove without doubt that Mitchell and Stans were guilty. The former Assistant Attorney General did note, however, that Dean’s own admission of guilt before the Watergate Committee has diminished his credibility as a witness.

Ruckleshaus also made several comments on impeachment. Speaking as a practicing lawyer, Ruckleshaus believed that the House Committee for Impeachment is following the proper legal angle in their investigation. Because Nixon has not given the tapes as asked by the Committee, Ruckleshaus stated, “he may be guilty by adverse inference. This means that his failure to comply with the investigation may be considered proof that he is guilty and it is admissible evidence in court.”

Ruckleshaus refused to comment on whether he thought Nixon had committed offenses deserving of impeachment. “For a period of eighty days,” said Ruckleshaus, “I ran the actual investigation. People might be prejudiced by any statement I make concerning the case because I had access to top level material pertaining to the case. This would be breaking my ethical code I am subject to as a member of the bar.”

Ruckleshaus was asked if he was satisfied with the standards he set for pollution control while he was the head of the Environmental Protection Agency.

Ruckleshaus stated that pollution standards are always subject to more change as more scientific research is done into pollution health hazards. “The future decisions of the EPA,” stated Ruckleshaus, “must be made by weighing the health danger to society by pollution against any advantage the society might gain because of technology.”

Ruckleshaus served as an interim Director of the FBI and commented on the question of the great amount of records being kept on citizens by the government as well as industry.

“There is a need across the board in this country,” said Ruckleshaus, “to review the actual function of keeping records on citizens. Government and industry must draw a line where records kept on people are actually an invasion of their privacy. Congress is paying enough attention to this problem, however, and I think that legislation will soon be passed that will bring adequate safeguards to the record-keeping problem.”

Ruckleshaus was asked to make a statement concerning public financing of political campaigns. He felt that a mix was needed between public financing and personal contributions but that limits must be set as well as strict records kept of such personal contributions.

Ruckleshaus, who has recently established his own law firm, stated that he was pleased to receive the honor of being selected Senior Class Fellow, and he offered the following advice to the Senior Class in closing:

“The value system our society was founded on is in trouble and people are adrift in this country, looking for convictions. You must all remember that if you get into government or anything else you must have some set of values by which to judge your actions.”
SMC snack shop to be remodeled

Ever want to get a hamburger, sit in a comfortable, relaxing atmosphere, and talk with friends? Or perhaps you’d like to study where there would be quiet, as well as a fresh cup of coffee. Perhaps, too, if you have been looking for a place on campus, your search hasn’t been too successful.

A solution is on the way, though, as St. Mary’s Snack Shop undergoes remodeling this summer. Carpeting, new sound and lighting systems, and moveable “conversation units” for quiet study of talking are among in-

Avances planned by the Coffeeshop Committee.

This Committee, under the direction of Dean of Students Ken Mulaney was formed last fall by SMC President Dr. Edward Henry to investigate remodelling possibilities and select what they felt to be the most suitable arrangement.

Members of the committee include: Mulaney, Sr. Basic Anthony, Vice-President for Academic Affairs, sophomore Kathy Carrigan, and SAGA Manager Crawford Cassell. According to Carrigan, “indoor-outdoor carpeting will be laid down on the floor. The walls are again being considered for the back wall of the shop will hopefully be replaced by a cork-board, which will be used for displays by the art department. No murals on the side walls are also expected.

During the Friday night coffee house, another corkboard will be in front of the fountain. She commented, “This will serve as a backdrop for a stage which can be moved in front of it.”

Another committee plan is the installation of “conversation units.” According to present plans, these will be five feet high, movable, free-standing T-shaped partitions, made of a steel case with acoustic backing. “We didn’t want to have booths,” she noted, “but we want to provide a place for quiet.” These partitions will be on either side of the snack shop, while the center will contain dining tables. Other plans call for improved acoustic and lighting systems.

“In the past, the problem has been that the coffee house was very noisy,” Carrigan commented. Following renovation, the dining hall’s present sound system will be wired to include the snack shop. Dimmer switches will be installed. In making the remodeling plans, she continued, “we wanted to provide a warmer atmosphere. We also wanted to make the plans flexible for years to come, so that changes made could be universally acceptable and adaptable to other uses.”

The Committee estimated renovation costs, including carpentry, furniture, room dividers, and lighting, at $10,000. Dr. Henry allocated $5,000 from the college, while SMC Student Government donated the remaining $5,000.

Plans for the coffee shop renovation began last fall, said Carrigan. Fr. Roger Cormier, C.C.S., formerly with St. Mary’s Campus Ministry, originally drew up minor changes for the Friday night coffee house, held in the coffee shop.

Then, he and students working on the weekly coffee house recognized the need for a new social area on campus, and saw that the coffee shop they used would be an opportunity to provide such a service.

Surveys were sent to students, concerning their use of the coffee shop, and requesting suggestions for remodeling. 75 per cent of the 252 students responding indicated that they used the coffee shop with varying frequency, and 67 per cent said that they would use it more if it provided a different atmosphere.

Surveys began to students, concerning their use of the coffee shop, and requesting suggestions for remodeling. 75 per cent of the 252 students responding indicated that they used the coffee shop with varying frequency, and 67 per cent said that they would use it more if it provided a different atmosphere.

Working with the suggestions it received, the committee set to work with four Notre Dame architecture students to draw up plans.

“The room is now dead and dreary, and no one congregates there,” commented Mulaney. “Campuses need an outlet where students can get together in a casual comfortable atmosphere.” Throughout the planning, she continued, the committee hoped to make the snack shop a “real community gathering place.”

If the Indiana drinking age were lowered, Mulaney speculated that the coffee shop might get a license, not to condone beer brawls, but to introduce a “controlled social atmosphere” to the campus. The Dean emphasized that she wants the commuter students “to feel that this is their place on campus, both during the day and at night. She sees the new coffee shop as an opportunity for all students to get together with one another more.

&

HIGHEST
CASH
PAID FOR BOOKS
BRING THEM TO:
NOTRE DAME
BOOKSTORE
LAST TWO DAYS OF CLASSES
MON.-TUES. MAY 6-7
BRING ALL BOOKS WHETHER USED ON THIS CAMPUS OR NOT NEBRASKA BOOK COMPANY
WORLD'S LARGEST COLLEGE JOBBER
Speaks at O'Shaughnessy

Carmichael attacks U.S. capitalism

by Terry Keesey
News Editor

Black socialist leader Stokely Carmichael attacked American capitalism yesterday in a lecture to an overflow crowd in O'Shaughnessy Hall. His appearance was sponsored by the Black Studies Program.

In an Observer interview following the lecture, Carmichael discussed the future of the black movement in America and his role in it. Carmichael was active in the civil rights movement in the late 1960's as chairman of the Student Non-Violent Co-ordinating Committee (SNCC). In 1967, Carmichael resigned as SNCC chairman for what he termed "ideological differences" and was expelled from the SNCC the next year.

Carmichael now resides in Guinea where he hopes to mobilize an international movement of blacks.

"Guinea is the vanguard of the African revolution," said Carmichael, who is working to influence the American black movement. "Guinea is a strong base from which to fight American imperialism," he also observed.

In Guinea, Carmichael has helped to organize the All-African People's Party to further the Pan-African movement among not only Africans, but all black people of the world.

"We're an international party," Carmichael noted. "Where the black man is -- that's where we are."

The civil rights movement has made great strides in America. But Carmichael contends that only qualitative gains are also necessary for the advancement of the black race in America.

"The struggle is no longer as visible as it once was five years ago," Carmichael insists. "The black movement means said, a base that can be armed struggle," he pointed out.

Although the American black struggle is no longer as visible as it once was five years ago, Carmichael insists that the struggle is continuing even more intensely in the state legislatures, the city halls, and the state legislators.

Carmichael, however, believes that qualitative gains are also necessary for the advancement of the black race in America. "The American black movement must be at the bookstore parking lot."

"The struggle is on all those fronts," he said, noting the possibility of violence if the struggle does not succeed. "The highest form of struggle is armed struggle," he warned.

Carmichael's visit to Notre Dame is part of his effort to raise the consciousness of students, especially black students, concerning his notions of socialist revolt. Student support for this movement is important to Carmichael, because "students offer a base that can be mobilized." Carmichael was pleased with the Notre Dame audience. "I found the reception very good," he said, "but I found the students to be very critical."

Carmichael, however, did agree with Dr. Joseph Scott, chairman of the Notre Dame Black Studies Program, who noted that Carr-

Student union finds summer storage

by Joe La Flare
Staff Reporter

The Student Union announced yesterday that there will be summer storage available in the Marycrest Complex on Western Avenue.

According to Rick Golden, services coordinator, the "pick-up" for storage items will commence May 16 and continue through May 13 from 10-4 P.M. The central location will be at the bookstore parking lot.

All articles must be boxed properly. Golden issued the following guidelines:

1) All shelves must be taped together.
2) All items must be identified with the owner's name, hall, ID number, and next year's address in at least four places.
3) All lamps, fans, and other small, loose items must be boxed.

Furthermore, the Student Union will not be able to store bikes. (continued on page 4)

Stokely Carmichael spoke to an overflow crowd at O'Shaughnessy Hall yesterday. (Photo by Maria Gallagher.)

Montessori Teacher Training

This Summer on Wooded Campus in Chicago, June 24—Aug. 7 Prepare for the Fastest Growing Field in Education (GRADUATE CREDIT AT NO EXTRA COST)

For Information: MMT-O
1010 W. Chicago Ave.
Chicago, Ill. 60622

Students ★ Faculty ★ Staff

MAY 7th PRIMARY

The Portage Township Trustee will be elected to manage an office which deals with PEOPLE WHO NEED HELP. Of the six candidates, one man will assure that this office will be run with respect and fairness.

This office is run with respect and fairness.

people who care will vote . . .

Ralph Weissert

Portage Township Trustee

Machine No. 33-c Line 3

Paid for by the Citizens for Weissert Committee.
New academic code greeted with mixed emotions by faculty members

(continued from page 1) grades. "I am impressed by the grading of five last five or six years. I believe that the grading system has been slow to change over the last five or six years. I believe that the grading system has been slow to change over the last five or six years.

However, Lucey expressed his opposition to Academic Commissioner Chris Nedeau's proposal to establish a University curriculum. "I am opposed to the proposal," he said. "This is just a desire to change the way things are done.

SU comes through on summer storage issue

(continued from page 2) of 18 credit hours at registration, only if it is needed. This can be a hardship for students who really want to return to their original fields.

The Observer is now taking applications for Assistant Advertising Manager.

This is a paid position:

- 5 days per week
- 7 hours per day

excellent position for spouse of student information call 7471 extension 10 & 5.

International Student Organization

Meeting for Election of New Officers

12:15 Thursday, May 2
International Lounge
All Interested Please Come

The LEATHER BANANA

CUSTOM & HAND MADE LEATHER GOODS & ACCESSORIES

Largest selection of FRYE BOOTS in the area

PHONE: 272-7187

Regional Distributor:

DOMINIC & Staff 10

For ND Students, Faculty & Staff 10 percent discount with ID & purchase of $10 or more.

215 Dixie Way, N Roseland, So. Bend

For KEG Parties:
We have the newest and best equipment available!

Pabst
Busch
Budweiser
Stroh's and Others

Wholesale Prices!

Call Rick (233-1115) For discounts on large orders

Party Headquarters

A wide selection of...

BEER
WINES
LIQUORS
MIXES
SOFT DRINKS
AND SNACKS

Carry-out

1003 Notre Dame 233-1115
Two ND students arrested for drug possession

Two Notre Dame students were arrested in May following a narcotics raid by state and city police at the home at 805 W. Jefferson Blvd.

The two students, Michael O'Connell, a Junior from Birmington, Mich., were found with suspected narcotics in their possession. State police reported that they confiscated nine ounces of suspected marijuana, ten grams of suspected cocaine, fifty grams of an unidentified brown powder, a target pistol, and six guns.

Three other persons were arrested in the raid. Their names are unavailable. Two were held in the Parkview Detention Home, and the third was released to the custody of her parents after questioning.

O'Connell was arrested on a felony warrant charging him with two counts of delivery and two counts of possession of narcotics. He was released on $50 bail.

Donnelly is scheduled to appear in Superior Court May 7 to face a charge of frequenting a house of common nuisance. He was released on $50 bail.

Dean of Students John Macheca Braye added.

In a related note, Braye outlined the students' responsibilities as published by the University's deliberations in the case.

Russell, Zappa coming to ACC

Reports that rock musician

Louie Russell will appear in concert tomorrow night, May 2, at 8 p.m. at the ACC, located in the Student Center.

A native of Tulsa, Oklahoma, Louie is credited by many music critics as the performer who dominated the Bengladesh benefit concert held in 1971 at the New York's Madison Square Garden. He is also known for his high-energy and visually stunning performances.

Floyd Zappa, another rock legend in his own right will be appearing at the ACC at 12:45 p.m. on the same day along with the Mothers of Invention.

Zappa is probably best known for his bizarre stage antics, especially his "grass-out" contest at New York's Fillmore East several years ago. Zappa is also recognized as one of rock's finest guitarists, and his bands are usually held in high esteem by both rock and jazz fans.

Tickets for both the Leon Russell concert tomorrow night and the Frank Zappa concert May 12 are still on sale through the Convocation Center Box Office and the other usual ticket outlets in the South Bend area. Also appearing with Russell will be the Gap Band.

Redeem laundry coupons this week

Laundry coupons issued from September 1, 1973 - April 26, 1974 can be redeemed this week. Students can return their coupons at the University Laundry located north of the grofts from 9:00 am - 11 am and 1 pm - 3 pm. Please note only coupons issued during the 1973-74 year are redeemable. There will be no refunds after May 3, 1974.

Loebach gets ROTC award

A South Bend senior in Notre Dame's Air Force ROTC has been selected as the outstanding Airline Area Army area commander in the nation. Philip Loebach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence H. Loebach, 19630 Brick Road, received the 1974 H. Harold Arnold Sabar Award. Also appearing at a recent national meeting in Houston.

Loebach's honor is the second consecutive year and the third time in five years that a Notre Dame student has been selected for this award. Last year, Mikel McLiiuster, a current Notre Dame senior was selected, and a 1970 graduate, Franck Taylor, was selected previously. Taylor is an Air Force combat veteran, assigned to Notre Dame for advanced studies in government.

A native of South Bend's St. Joseph High School, Loebach was cited for his dynamic leadership of eight schools in his area of operations, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio.

Dome is honored by J. Robert Hanna Staff Reporter

In a recently announced decision, the 1973 edition of Notre Dome's yearbook, the Dome, won five awards from the Indiana College Press Association. More accurately to members of the Association, the awards are in recognition of outstanding student journals within the state, in the areas of newspapers, yearbooks, magazines and college papers.

The list of Dome awards includes firsts in Photography and faculty coverage, seconds in academic coverage and cover, and a third place for book of the year.

Roderick Bray, current editor of the Dome and a member of last year's staff, commented on the awards. "It's a tremendous honor to be recognized by one's peers in such a manner. Credit is due to Mike Paulius, Jim Hunt, Dr. Ackerman and Waltsorw Publishing."

"They did an excellent job and it sure gives future Dome staffs a target to shoot at if they want to," Bray added.

In a related note, Bray outlined plans for the upcoming distribution of this year's yearbooks. "The books should arrive Thursday or Friday and we'll try to get them handed out as quickly as possible. Because it's a limited edition book, we have to number and initial all copies," he said.

"To put it mildly, that's not the easiest job in the world and will take some time," Bray added.

Circle K Club to hold elections

by Jane Cannon Staff Reporter

The Circle K Club of Notre Dame will hold a charter meeting, May 2, at 8 p.m. in the Breen Phillips Puzzle Room to elect officers for next year. Plans for the Charter Night Banquet will also be discussed and finalized.

It is most important that anyone wishing to join the club attend the meeting tonight. The Circle K Club is a service organization which works in conjunction with the Kiwanis Club. Anyone interested in the betterment of the community and willing to work towards that goal is urged to attend. For further information, contact Tom Schnellenberger at 2111.

The Circle K will hold a Charter Night Banquet on May 4, to celebrate the official chartering of the Notre Dame student chapter of the International Organization of Circle K Clubs.
It may be the late nights and early mornings. Quite possibly, it’s a reporter’s pursuit of his source or a day editor’s pursuit of a reporter. Or it just may be that relentless desire to do it and do it well.

To say exactly is not within my grasp. But The Observer—the people, the purpose, the place—has come a long way. Established under the students’ control, this paper remains committed to a responsibility of professionalism and dedication. And what ever combinations of reasons it may take, that commitment will continue.

As in any organization, the people are gold. It is difficult to describe the type of men and women who put forth this daily paper, for in each there are different qualities. Common to all though is a stout dedication to those with whom they share their efforts. Without it, the help needed to redesign the front page or make a headline fit that four in line would not come through.

But it does happen, day after day. Each and every Observer staffer is the reason why. Each layout assistant, reporter, photographer, typist, night control, HAL operator, ad salesman, secretary, circulation and subscription person, copyreader, day editor, assistant night editor, night editor and editorial board member deserves recognition and thanks.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.

Even now, as events which concern this University occur, ours is a position to report and interpret. Included in any responsibility which we might claim would be our ability to find out once more without looking back to see that all was well behind.

The most honest appraisal at The Observer ultimately rests with our fellow students. Ideally, every student could share in the knowledge at our operation in order for such an appraisal to be made. Succinct criticism is indeed a mandate.
the myth and the reality of working

by fred graves

"You can’t eat for eight hours a day, nor drink for eight hours a day, nor make love for eight hours a day—all you can do for eight hours a day is work. Which is the reason why so many people everywhere else are miserable and unhappy."

—William Faulkner

As the summer comes upon us, many people begin to think about jobs. Even more pressing is the situation of graduating seniors who find themselves in the midst of the "job market," and in many ways, being involved with their own.

Aside from speculations that are made about the increasing emphasis in American life on work, we cannot forget that the system of this country is still business. Work is the main thing in life; it occupies the center of the workings of our civilization. Hence, the subtitle of this book: "People Talk About What They Do All Day and How They Feel About What They Do".

What jobs, what industries are worth being involved with? Where is there a place in society for a man to find fulfillment? Will there ever be a place where one can find work from day to day and still feel his life has meaning?

These are some of the questions which come to mind with the words "work ethic" are people who are richly endowed with the fulfillment of man’s potential while he contributes to the whole of society.

A fine ideal, surely. But what about the student who is sweat to get a post-graduate job and, in desperation, to the conviction of a prospective employer that, yes, he would really like to take a good position in a shirt company.

As I read Studs Terkel’s book Working, I began to think of the future of the people I know. I began to think of the people I am leaving this year. Perhaps it is fitting that this review appear before the issue year. There are many things to be done in the way that some graduates are signing away ideal and the reality of working.

Studs Terkel Pantheon Books $10.00

any job they can find is personally desirable.

In this book, Terkel allows the working man to speak for himself. These are people who, for the most part, have already achieved something. They are the system. They are the voices cry with despair, and at times they laugh with joy. Studs has approximated them with no pre-conceived strategies or prejudices. He accepts what they tell him and says it with no pre-conceived strategies or prejudices. He accepts what they tell him and says it with no pre-conceived strategies or prejudices.

There is an element of alienation and uneness in this book, which, comes from the fact that the expression of honesty and expression may be the only such moment that such people may ever encounter. It is a moment of such man, unique and individual soul, society has no way of creating enough jobs to match those souls. Some people are placed in jobs that deny them their soul, that close them off, that make them numb. Reading their words, listening to what they have to say hurts will the pain of the unjustly denied.

Terkel knows this hurt, this pain; his soul is touched with what one of his workers calls "the feeling tone." And so he does not allow his book to fall in a pit of self-pity and overwhelming compassion. There are also people in here who are happy with what they do all day, and in the process, come to love the world and to be close to poetry. Sometimes, this is expressed in the words they use in the course of their lives—such as in the following words from a Carpenter.

"If you see a carpenter that’s alive to his work, you’ll notice that about the way he hits a nail. He’s not going (imitates machine gun). He’s got a feeling the last bit is not just a little hit, but that something is saved forever. You can’t get good hammer backs. It’s like as though there’s a separate friend of his that one moment. And when he gets it, he never comes another one. Unique. His last lick, don’t hit it with your hammer, hit it—hit it so you won’t leave a hammer mark. Stylin’.

And so he does not allow his book to fall in a pit of self-pity and overwhelming compassion. There is an element of alienation and uneness in this book, which, comes from the fact that the expression of honesty and expression may be the only such moment that such people may ever encounter. It is a moment of such man, unique and individual soul, society has no way of creating enough jobs to match those souls. Some people are placed in jobs that deny them their soul, that close them off, that make them numb. Reading their words, listening to what they have to say hurts will the pain of the unjustly denied.

Terkel knows this hurt, this pain; his soul is touched with what one of his workers calls "the feeling tone." And so he does not allow his book to fall in a pit of self-pity and overwhelming compassion. There are also people in here who are happy with what they do all day, and in the process, come to love the world and to be close to poetry. Sometimes, this is expressed in the words they use in the course of their lives—such as in the following words from a Carpenter.

"If you see a carpenter that’s alive to his work, you’ll notice that about the way he hits a nail. He’s not going (imitates machine gun). He’s got a feeling the last bit is not just a little hit, but that something is saved forever. You can’t get good hammer backs. It’s like as though there’s a separate friend of his that one moment. And when he gets it, he never comes another one. Unique. His last lick, don’t hit it with your hammer, hit it—hit it so you won’t leave a hammer mark. Stylin’.

One begins to wish that corporate renaissance in this book, no doubt been the fears and hopes in the myths of the working-class man. People come from all classes, from every walk of life. Some are incredibly disgusted with the way they spend their days, some are bored, some are mildly content, and some are some of the ways you are tempted to the selfishness, and the greed for money are others. I am not your Jewish mother, but some of you are of the second generation. I will sleep well. If you place little value on yourselves, think of the attitude the father is more his parents. It makes you feel a lot of things for yourself. Only a fool is selfish enough to claim his own life as a playing-field, but not by the shabbiness you meet, nor by the victories you encounter. The world is not all Watergate, and it is not all lovey, lovey, permitted girls miss at the country club, either. In the end, you will find that the things worth having, the values worth dying for, have to do with love and family; love and family are not cherished by the ways of easy virtue.

There is an established ritual by which brides and grooms affirm the ways they care each other. There is no way except preaching in which old clergies and cocker spaniels can tell of their concern for the people of a campus; the chaplain preaches better than the dog, but sometimes not much better. But remember: in all the places you are, and in all the places you hope to be; in sunshine or in lightning, in sin or in grace, Darby and I never said we didn’t love you.
The book must not end

By Butch Ward

I have been reading a book for the past four years and for almost the same length of time, I have been anticipating its completion. And I always thought it would be done by this time. Perhaps that lesson that the book was to teach me.

The book has not realized its purpose, for I master a content of what a man turned out to be. It is in the very who attempt it goodness and sorrow we experience every day as part of life. This author has created a work that lives and breathes, that loves and hate, that laughs and cries.

And his book is called the Real Notre Dame—Its People. And I have been reading that book for four years. Its pages have taught me much that I did not know, or at least that I did not want to admit before. I can remember the difficulty with which I first attempted to understand the book, his harsh and unfair, its revelations dishonestly, its refusal to compromise its vision of reality because of my youth.

So many times I wanted to put it down. So many times it seemed wasteful to continue with those pages full of reason to hate, those chapters that I knew were robbing me of the pleasure that I had treasured each time I renewed my efforts at reading.

And like so many other things the book showed me, I cannot fully understand why I never consented to destroying my association with the book forever. Perhaps it was because of the same reasons I was moved to attempt the task undertaken. Perhaps because the cynicism which the book awoke in me could never overcome the real joy that some of the book’s principal characters had helped me to feel. For they showed me that I had read the book somewhere before, and had understood even less, and, then too, it was its goodness that had brought me to try again.

I will never forget those characters, because of all of commiseration, of loneliness, of evil, of kindliness. I found myself studying with them, and their moments of accomplishment, and the despair of rejection. I found myself living with them, sharing their heartaches and watching the changes that both hurt and food the brunt of my ability to hurt.

It was they who taught me that love is not a wholesale item but rather a gift to be offered. And it was they who taught me that to be rejected says nothing about the man who can honestly say that he attempted, with all he is, to give his love to another.

They taught me to listen to what they taught within, and to look at myself through my own eyes. And I learned that the second point of view is every bit as important as the first.

But, even now, this book is far from completed, and it is time to put it down. It is time to put Notre Dame aside in favor of the challenges that lie ahead. And in doing so, perhaps the lessons that remain clouded now will find some way to make themselves more apparent.

For one lesson has become apparent during the two years that this column has been appearing on these pages. I cannot be sure that I have even begun on that journey of miles of which I have been writing.

For such a journey takes an assurance of self, a mastery of my own character that I realize I have yet to achieve. But this book, this Notre Dame, has taught me a bit more about standing, a bit more about walking, a bit more about the need to travel those miles.

...we will forget what it was that separated us here and cherish that which brought us together.

fortune made in their faces.

But most importantly, I found myself growing with him. I witnessed my own character as he exchanged the naive trust of the freshman for the reality of the cautious senior. I saw him realize the value of his worth, his individuality, his claim to recognition as everything that he was. I saw him accept the limitations that before he had feared hidden and real, that acceptance realize a freedom that only the honest man can know.

And it was the lessons that he taught me that helped me grow. It was they who helped me, who hurt me, who asked to be helped, and who taught us...
Caveat emptor

By Joseph Abell

Students should be alert to what is really there.

Notre Dame is real-no more, no less

Joe Abell is the graduating Managing Editor of the Observer. He is an English Major from Dallas, Texas. He hopes to enter the field of journalism by hook or crook after graduation.

Caveat emptor

By Joseph Abell

By Jerry Lutkus

Faccenda's scenario

Jerry Lutkus is the graduating Editor in Chief of The Observer. "I've always refused to write a snappy farewell column, but for the last time around there is something crucial for the University to talk about and that's the Student Affairs office and the impending shake-up." Next year he will be working for the South Bend Tribune.

By Jerry Lutkus

because of a lack of college experience. Again Faccenda was asked if he would take the job and again he said he would not. But reversed his decision saying he would hold it until a capable replacement was found. The position brought with it a certain amount of political power added to the New South Bend Crime Commission should have been evidence enough to see that he had begun to turn his sights outward. The position brought with it a certain amount of political power added to the in-town clout that Faccenda already possessed. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation. The clout could become helpful in the University because of annexation.

Faccenda's upcoming resignation throws the Student Affairs Office into a very lucky fickle futility.

In his two years in the post, Faccenda has done a great service to the University. He has worked incalculably hard in a tough position and is well respected in the student affairs office to the detriment it now holds. Likewise he is well respected in the office to make it a better place.

But let's face it, that's all a bit of a love letter away from the job. He will go on to the Law School and make a very lucky fickle futility.

Continuity must come in May. The scenario all makes sense. The only really questionable part is whether Faccenda will be in a better position to help the University fight the alcohol regulations, Faccenda as an attorney and as a political figure could fight from a position of strength against the recent increase in the university's alcohol regulations. Finally, the political figure aspect of his resignation has grown larger and larger as it has grown nearer. Faccenda could very well have his eyes on that Democratic nomination for Senate. Hartke has grown very, very weak in Indiana and a strong figure from an urban center like Faccenda could wage a stiff battle to unseat Hartke.

What also had to affect Faccenda's decision was the difference of personalities between his office and the Provost's office. Continuous harassling has a way of making a job less inviting.

The major disappointment of Faccenda's upcoming resignation throw the Student Affairs Office into a very lucky fickle futility. Throughout the past four years, every May has brought about a shuffle in the Student Affairs Office. It seems to be in constant flux and that cannot be healthy for Student Life at Notre Dame.
A young man stands behind a small television camera in Carroll Hall and talks quietly into the mouthpiece of his headset. The man, Father James T. Burtchaell, is answering questions about the problems of running a university. The young man reaches for a knob on the side of his camera and slowly tightens the machine up, closely studying the viewerfinder in front of him. He is good at his job, and the man is gripping the handle and his legs ache from standing, for Burtchaell's the last in a series of speeches that began several hours and six videotapes earlier in the day.

This cameraman is not an professional, although his work has been solicited by Candid Camera, WSBT and Valley Cable Corporation. It is majoring in Broadcast Communications, a new program in the Notre Dame Department of Speech, Radio and Television. Learning to operate a camera is part of a three-hour course he is taking called Television Production Laboratory. Offered for the first time this semester, TV Lab is one of several courses now being extended to students as part of a Broadcast Communications major.

The closest association between WNDU and the campus community, the need for communications courses became apparent after the Communication Arts Department at Notre Dame shifted its main efforts to its sixty-five graduate students. Future classes at the combined Department of Speech, Radio and Drama will include writing for television, set design and film production.

"That's a pretty complete program when you get right down to it," said Jim Baxter, the man in charge of teaching television courses this fall. "Our aim is to give students experience in cablecasting, which we are aiming to meet the standards of cable broadcasting rather than commercial broadcasting, largely for technical reasons. We're working under an unusual concept right now. Much like any cable television operation when it first starts out, we're not committed to producing any programming in the moment. What we are doing is using the equipment as much as possible and sending tapes to Valley Cable Corporation for use on local cable television."

"The different," Baxter notes, between the production class this semester and those that will follow. "This class has had set pieces, particularly since our equipment arriving late. The first ship- ment equipment, Baxter was informed, was destroyed by a firebombing during the truckers' strike in February. "Most of our time has been spent learning about the equipment and learning to live with it. Next time a student plug in a mile and go, but that has not been the case this semester. We've set things up and then had to spend time working the bugs out."

Money for the TV Lab equipment has been provided equally by Notre Dame and Saint Mary's. With each video tape costing $25 or $30 and machinery valued in the thousands, does Baxter ever worry about what might happen to it?"Baxter says," he says, "if you become so protective that you won't let anyone use it, it isn't going to do you any good. Of course there is having to be mistakes made, but you can't let worrying about them stop you from using the students learn, will earn best by doing things themselves."

Baxter's students are enthusiastic about the fledgling television program. Some have a course like this at Notre Dame at all. An accomplishment in itself, remarked one student. "A lot of things have been put down by the administration here as being impractical for a liberal arts school. But we continue. "And the possibilities of the camera are great because of the freedom of the equipment. Two people can move everything.

Because of the mobility of the cameras, recorders, and lights, and the decidedly portable set-up, this program at Moreau, students have made as many tapes as location as to the Lab itself. A recording of Senator Charles Mathias' committee committee and address at Stepan Center in March "--as part of the program--will be aired on cable television. A weekly series of original programs, one studio has been running on Channel 34 since March and hopefully will be continued through the summer. Some of the camera personnel have offered their customary $50 or more to anyone with a worth of use on the rejuvenated show. At least one of Baxter's students has accepted the challenge.

Several possibilities of campus television as an issue-oriented as well as an entertainment medium, the Television Production Lab recently opened its doors to the public in what is known as free access television. Theoretically, free access television functions in much the same manner as newspaper "letters to the editor." It offers air time without charge to anyone with something to say or even anyone wishing to entertain. Although students' response to the invitation was occasionally at the level of "I want you. Love, Pizza."

On the poet's celebration of graduation

by bill stephens

No more getting ripped off by the University

No more adventures, skittles, and much, much more.

No more all-night, amphetamine for motivation, bars packed with gapers, and more.

No more late work that counts, a checking account opened in the fall semester.

No more scalding, head-searing harassment or "Official Summons" from Deans of Students;

No more paranoia when your girl sleeps in bed, a midnight massage, a cool head to share conversation, all after you're wifened.

No more food sales atrocities, Roman remedies, or Fudgeburgers.

No more self-righteous Gestapoesque "letters of recommendation." No more sleasy bars packed with gapers;

No more sloshing across the frozen Hoosier woods to roll a dream (brewski) and a warm bar stool, to find your gas tank siphoned.

No more sleepless, sleepless nights. Only a warm bed to sleep in, breakfast in bed, a midnite massage, a cool head to share conversation, all after you're wifened.

No more food sales atrocities, Roman remedies, or Fudgeburgers.

No more Collegiate Seminar to interview your intellectual Dorienelle.

No more Sloshing across the frozen Hoosier woods to roll a dream (brewski) and a warm bar stool, to find your gas tank siphoned.

No more sleepless, sleepless nights. Only a warm bed to sleep in, breakfast in bed, a midnite massage, a cool head to share conversation, all after you're wifened.

No more food sales atrocities, Roman remedies, or Fudgeburgers.

No more sloshing across the frozen Hoosier woods to roll a dream (brewski) and a warm bar stool, to find your gas tank siphoned.

No more sleepless, sleepless nights. Only a warm bed to sleep in, breakfast in bed, a midnite massage, a cool head to share conversation, all after you're wifened.

No more food sales atrocities, Roman remedies, or Fudgeburgers.

No more sloshing across the frozen Hoosier woods to roll a dream (brewski) and a warm bar stool, to find your gas tank siphoned.

No more sleepless, sleepless nights. Only a warm bed to sleep in, breakfast in bed, a midnite massage, a cool head to share conversation, all after you're wifened.
The Top Ten of 73-74

I - The Fighting Irish of Notre Dame defeat the Crimson Tide of Alabama, 24-23, to become National Champs, at the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Eve. Ara Parseghian comments, "so I said to Clements, during a time-out with just over two minutes remaining, 'Okay, fine we'll fake the run and go ahead and throw the football.'"

II - By a 30-27 vote, the Academic Council votes to stay with a pre-Labor Day start for next year's classes. Afterwards, Chris Nedeau, Academic Commissioner, and Father Burtchaell, University Provost, agree that both sides had a fair hearing and that the debate in the Council was valuable.

III - The Indiana Court of Appeals, in a unanimous decision, rules that any person who gives intoxicating beverages to a minor is liable for any damage the minor may cause. The decision directly affects the Irish Wake, by causing "Prohibition" and a buffet dinner substitute. In subsequent decisions, the SLC kills all alcohol guidelines for the University, and leaves the responsibility up to the individual halls.

IV - After a heavy, rigorous campaign, Pat McLaughlin defeats Ray Capp for Student Body President. Capp comments, "I knew it was all over when I found out we carried Cavanaugh. It's like the kiss of death, even the Kine didn't carry Cavanaugh." The decision was one between a service-oriented organization and one that claimed to have the wisdom of experience.

V - Father Burtchaell discovers a student in Dillon Hall violating Parriets. The case goes to the Judicial Board, which suspends the student for three weeks and allows him to take an incomplete for his semester grades, until he could make up his finals in January. The case goes to the Appeals Board, who sends it back to the Judicial Board for new action. The student is now attending college in Massachusetts, and is planning to return to Notre Dame in the fall.

VI - Drug raids are conducted in three halls over a period of two weeks by Dean of Students John Macheca, in an effort to "rid the campus of all drugs." Some of the cases are not handled by normal procedures, as Macheca feels the violations are having "too serious an effect on the University." One student is expelled from the University, two are released.

VII - The Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees endorses the concept of the renovation of La Fortune Student Center as proposed by the Renovation Committee. This action, if approved by the full Board at its May meeting, could lead to a start of Renovation by this summer.

VIII - The Student Manual Guidelines are revised by the Student Life Council. Amidst much debate, new party guidelines are drawn up, only to be dismissed after the Indiana Court of Appeals hands down its far-reaching decision. (see no. 3)

IX - The Fighting Irish score another monumental victory, this time ending UCLA's eighty game winning streak in the ACC, where it all began, by a score of 71-70. John Wooden comments, "We certainly didn't figure to lose with three minutes to go, and up by 11 points."

X - Dr. Edward L. Henry, President of St. Mary's College, resigns his post, effective August 31, 1974. Dr. Henry states in his letter of resignation, "My commitments to the College, I feel, have been more than fulfilled."
Kloos and Gentine retire

As of today’s issue of the Observer, the Observer businessman and advertising manager will retire. Business manager Lee Gentine and Advertising Manager John Kloos are leaving the staff due to graduation.

Gentine, a senior accounting major from Plymouth, Wisconsin, was responsible this year for the accounting and disbursement of Observer funds.

Jerry Lukus, outgoing editor-in-chief, commented on Gentine’s contribution to the newspaper. “Lee is responsible for the complete reorganizing of business, financial, and bookkeeping processes of the Observer,” said Lukus. “He took a department that was faltering and completely turned it around.”

Gentine, in commenting on the experience of the job and the people he worked with, “It was a worthwhile job,” said Gentine. “not only business-wise, but because of the people I got to know.”

Gentine has accepted a job with a Chicago advertising firm. He will be replaced as business manager by Bob Zogas, a junior accounting major from Oakbrook, Illinois.

Kloos, as advertising manager, increased total local advertising in the Observer by 30 per cent.

“Almost solely because of John the volume of local advertising nearly doubled in the past year,” Lukus noted. “John has run the best advertising department in the history of the Observer.”

Kloos set three major goals for his job when he first came to the Observer. He wanted to improve sales, improve the appearance of the ads, and improve the sales force. He attributes his success in these goals to his upbringing.

“I owe my success to my mother who was always there with a good word and a piece of apple pie,” Kloos commented.

Kloos has accepted a position as a credit representative which he will assume upon graduation. Kloos’ successor is Bob McMann, a junior who served as an Observer advertising salesman this year.

---

St. Mary's science hall renovation scheduled

Renovation of St. Mary’s Science Hall begins immediately after the end of this semester, and runs through the summer, according to St. Mary’s Vice President for Academic Affairs, Dr. William Hickey.

Plans call for the conversion of classroom into laboratory space, according to Drs. Clarence Dineen and Francis Benton, Chairmen of the Biology and Chemistry Departments, respectively.

“The reason for the renovation,” said Benton, “is that the nursing program has increased the number of people the department has to handle. We (the chemistry department), have had our own problems with overcrowding, but the introduction of the nursing program made our problems more acute.”

According to Dineen, the 70 presently in the nursing program have almost doubled the number of students in the anatomy and general biology courses. Additionally, he noted that enrollment in the biology and allied medical majors has increased.

Currently, there are three chemistry and five biology labs. After renovation there will be at least three new chemistry laboratories and the enlargement and modernization of three biology labs.

According to Hickey, two phases of remodeling are scheduled. Phase I is the critical phase, as it provides facilities for advanced course work for science majors, and new and expanded laboratory facilities in the biology and chemistry departments for the nursing program.

On the first floor of the building, housing the chemistry department, the first phase will involve converting a classroom into a physics lab, the present storage room into an instrument room, and room 126, which was designed as an apartment and now used for storage and instruments, will be turned into an advanced lab. Also, the stockroom will be modified, and the basement used for storage.

Recommendations for Phase II of the first floor renovation include changing the present science library into a general chemistry lab, the balance room into small research labs, and another classroom into a balance room and three offices, continued Benton.

For the second floor, the Biology Department plans to enlarge and better equip the microbiology lab, convert a classroom into a faculty office, a darkroom into a research microscope and audio-visual rooms. Three other labs, added Dineen, “will be renovated in terms of additional cabinets, sinks, and tables.”

“Two or three classrooms will be retained, and the overflow of classes will go into Madeleva, where there are empty classroom’s,” stated the biology department chairman.

The cost of Phase I is estimated at $100,000, said Hickey. The college is meeting the financial responsibility for this part of the renovation. However, he continued, Phase II is to be financed by outside sources. Phase I must be completed during the summer, while Phase II, has not set completion deadline.

Besides the renovation in the coffee shop and Science Hall, a nursing library will be set up in the lower level of Madeleva over the summer. An audio-tutorial room for additional instruction for the nursing majors, is also expected to be completed in Madeleva late in the summer, or in the fall, stated Hickey.

---

announcing

Call now for an appointment... 232-6622 or just drop in!!!

The Windjammer

1637 Lincoln Way W.

---

Cutathon

The four expert stylists at the Windjammer will cut hair for 24 hours 8 a.m. May 11 to 8 a.m. May 12

All proceeds will be donated to the Developmental Disabilities Center.

---

The Cultural Arts Commission presents

CAMELOT

starring Richard Harris, Vanessa Redgrave, and David Hemmings

Thursday and Friday May 2nd and 3rd at 7 and 10 p.m.

in the Engineering Auditorium

Admission is $1.00
ND Economic Profs aid community

by David Kaminski
Staff Reporter

Fifth and sixth graders at Disney School in Mishawaka learned basic economics while operating a corporation that produced school pennants. One of their teachers would not have known enough economics to run the programs before he attended an in-service training program for economics education.

For 10 weeks, South Bend area residents attended a series of seminars on the energy environment dilemma. Experts in the field came to talk about various aspects of the problem, such as energy demands, nuclear power, waste disposal and pollution. The evening seminars were free of charge.

Four professors from the Department of Economics at Notre Dame are responsible for these programs. They are Thomas Swartz, Ken Linn, Frank Bonello and William Davison. Together they are the Center for Economic Education at the University of Notre Dame, bringing basic economics education to the community outside Notre Dame.

The center was started when Swartz and Jameson realized a common teaching problem.

Contest being held to name SMC coffeeshop

A serenaded candlelight dinner for two in the Saint Mary's Coffee House will be awarded to the winner of the "Name the Coffeeshop" contest. The contest is being held as the result of the renovation work planned for the coffeeshop, located in the basement of the SMC Dining Hall.

Entries into the contest should be addressed to Kathy Carrigan at Box 682 LeMans Hall or to SAGA Food Services. The entry deadline is midnight Thursday.

Voting for the best name will be held during dinner Friday in the SMC Dining Hall.

Students coming to Notre Dame had no preparation to help them handle college-level economics. Often, economics is not taught before college. The professors discovered that when economics is required, often teachers with insufficient training in economics teach from inferior texts.

So Swartz and Jameson, along with Bonello, began to plan an in-service program for teachers in the South Bend area, in order to give them the basics of economics and help them develop curriculums for teaching the subject. While planning the program, the professors began to make contacts with the Indiana Council for Economic Education at Purdue University, and soon they became the Center for Economic Education at the University of Notre Dame.

The Indiana Council, supported by Purdue and by business, labor and agricultural groups in Indiana, has local centers on other Indiana campuses. The Indiana Council is in turn linked to a national organization, the Joint Council on Economic Education.

Demon Productions Company

Swartz, Jameson and Bonello ran their first in-service program for teachers in the spring of last year. Fifteen area teachers attended five day-long sessions, from the middle of January to mid-May.

As a conclusion to the program, each teacher developed a project to help bring economics into their classrooms. The most exciting project to come out of the first in-service program was Demon Productions Company. Demon Productions is the invention of Tom Szumski, who attended the program, and two other teachers at Disney School.

They took their fifth and sixth graders and formed a corporation from the ground up.

South Bend teachers have not participated in the programs because the school system in the city has failed to hire substitute teachers for the days that participants would attend the day-long sessions.

"The South Bend Community School Corporation has not been terribly open, from our standpoint," comments Jameson.

But Swartz hopes that in the future, the school system will allow around outside the University. So many political discussions spring from an economic issue. You must understand to be able to act."

As existing programs continue to succeed, and as new programs are developed, Notre Dame's Center for Economic Education will continue to bring a basic necessary education in economics to the surrounding community.

Planning a wedding? Call The Wedding Photographer.

STROH BREWERY COMPANY, DETROIT, MICHIGAN

South Bend teachers to attend the program.

Evening Seminars

During one of the Thursday night seminars on the energy environment dilemma, 35 people met at the administration building of the South Bend Community School Corporation to hear Professor John Bell of Purdue University speak on the growing problem of refuse disposal in this country.

A chemistry teacher from Mishawaka High School attended that night. He and other teachers are planning a curriculum guidance program for economics and the environment in the Mishawaka schools.

A architect from South Bend was at the seminar. He commented on how he is always being invited to seminars and symposiums, all for a fee. At this seminar, he could take advantage of a university professor and learn something without charge.

"The information is free and vital," the architect said.

Notre Dame's center ran these seminars through the help of Purdue and the State Department of Public Instruction.

"If the Center for Economic Education is part of an integrated thing, then this award is related to the Center," Jameson added.

Educate the Community

Professor Swartz sees the contest as the "center of the Center" as answering in part University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh's call for education at Notre Dame to go beyond the campus.

The South Bend Community School Corporation has been terribly open, from our standpoint," comments Jameson.

But Swartz hopes that in the future, the school system will allow "The South Bend Community School Corporation has not been terribly open, from our standpoint," comments Jameson.

But Swartz hopes that in the future, the school system will allow..."
Reactions to subpoena mixed

By HOWARD FIELDS
WASHINGTON, D.C. — Republicans on the House Judiciary Committee Tuesday accepted with some misgivings President Nixon's decision to furnish only transcripts of Watergate tapes, but they were ready to battle any Democratic attempt to reject the offer.

Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino, D-N.J., declined television network offers for equal time to respond to Nixon's Monday night speech. An aide said Rodino did not want to participate in a political game and House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., said it would not be a good idea for him to accept it.

Soon after delivery of the transcripts from the White House, committee Democrats scheduled a caucus to discuss their possible recourse to what they considered less than full compliance with the committee subpoena.

Democrats generally spoke harshly of the Nixon offer—calling the transcripts a "mish-mash" and a "coverup"—but they appeared to have reached no consensus on what to do about it. Republicans seemed to want to accept the transcripts and drop the issue.

Committee Republicans held their own half-hour caucus with the House GOP leadership. House Republican Leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said "the overwhelming majority of the people in the room felt the President was in substantial compliance with the subpoena," but he said there were a few dissenters.

The station wagon-load of transcripts was delivered to the impeachment inquiry headquarters one-half hour before the 10 a.m. EDT deadline stipulated in the subpoena, which demanded tape recordings of 42 conversations.

Telegrams poured into the Capitol offices of most of the 38 committee members, most of the messages opposed to the President's position. One GOP office said it got 29 telegrams in the first mail and all were unfavorable to Nixon. During the morning, 4,500 telegrams arrived at Rodino's office and most of them opposed Nixon.

But Nixon got some strong support from Republicans in both Houses, including the endorsement of Sen. Barry M. Goldwater of Arizona. "I believe this is a fair and equitable way to approach an extremely difficult problem," Goldwater said. "If that is not enough for the Rodino committee, I am afraid I will have to reach the conclusion that the House Judiciary Committee, on a question of the very greatest national importance, has decided not to play a partisan role aimed at vote-getting rather than truth-getting."

In dispute was Nixon's offer to allow Rodino and Edward Hutchison, ranking GOP committee member, to listen to the transcripts in the White House in order to verify the transcripts. Nixon's offer did not include John M. Doar and Albert Jenner, the chief impeachment counsels whom the committee wanted included in any such compromise verification effort.

Rhodes, who had been acting as a liaison between committee Republicans and the White House for a compromise, said he viewed the Nixon offer as "not favorable." But he called it "substantial compliance."

Many committee Republicans said they would have preferred that Nixon include Doar and Jenner in the listening operation, if not actual delivery of the tapes to the full committee. But they appeared weary of the wrangling and ready to accept the transcripts alone.

With the press of other legislative business, few if any of the members took time to sit down and read all of the 1,200-page transcripts, delivered in two brown cardboard folders for each member.
Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke's findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing "double dealings" on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.

---

Notice

REPUBLIC

In me, dear. Where are you going? From Pigtown.

---

Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke’s findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing “double dealings” on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.

---

Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke’s findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing “double dealings” on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.

---

Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke’s findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing “double dealings” on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.

---

Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke’s findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing “double dealings” on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.

---

Observer insight

Angers rejects not told reason

by Jim Eder

and Mark Frazel

For the past six weeks two applicants for the Sophomore Year Abroad (SYA) Program have been trying without success to find out why they were rejected.

At the end of last semester freshmen "N. Hammond met with their professor, Bernard Doreing, who told them that they were in good shape to be accepted into the program. According to the brochure, a 2.5 cumulative grade point average and a brief, typed statement are required for selection. Both Hammond and Doreing met these requirements by their first-year semester academic records.

Hammond went to see Associate Provost William Burke. They were told at that time that Doering had been informed of Burke’s findings on April 11, and that the results would be delivered when they returned from Easter vacation. Neither Doering nor the students received any information. Burke claims that he could not comply with his earlier promise, because he was unable to speak with Provost James Burroughs. Doering assured them that there was nothing “double dealings” on the part of Doering and Doreing. The same day Brook and Doering both received letters of rejection.

When asked whether there were students who could be accepted into the April 28, wrote a three-page letter to Burtchall explaining the facts of the case as he understood them and requested student to be accepted immediately.

“We request the University to accept or reject the students of this program,” wrote Hammond. “The University must respect the right of the student to know why he has been rejected.”

This position is very similar to the one held by Dunne and Hammond throughout the entire affair. We are not questioning the committee’s ability to accept or reject students; we do, however, feel that the involved students have a right to know the rejection has been made. We also feel we have a right to appeal the case.
What I would like to do is... parents ever got to see their son during the ninth year of school. Parents always wanted their son to come here. That impressed me.

The Notre Dame record for the two-mile relay squads are known for their strength in both the two-mile and four-mile relays. Unfortunately, Notre Dame has had a struggle in the past two years, but they are still considered one of the top teams in the country.

Mike Housley, featured in the article, was a key member of the Notre Dame track team. His personal best for the half-mile was 1:51.8, and he continued to improve throughout the season. Housley's dedication to the sport is evident, as he trains even when he is not on the team.

Success follows Betz
(continued from page 10)

"Right now, I'm just concerned about playing well and hoping the team plays well," Betz admits. "It's just trying to set a good example.

Betz certainly hasn't regretted coming to Notre Dame. If there is anything he does regret, it's this season being his last. "I wish the season could have come sooner," he finishes. "I was rather indifferent in high school where I wanted to go, but I visited here and liked it. "Notre Dame certainly has lived up to its reputation. I've enjoyed my four years here, and I am going to miss it. This is the first year the optimism has been different."
Notre Dame's National Championship Class of 1974

Frank Pomarico

Dave Casper

Mike Townsend

Gary Novak

Brandon Walsh

Anne Cisle and Charlie Morrison

Tom Hansen

Joe O'Connor

Eddie Bumbacco

John Shumate

Mark Kronholm
Recruiting keys Lefty's hopes for filling gaps

by Bob Kissel

Even thinking of ice hockey in warm, blustery April and May could bring strains of disbelief, unless the person doing the thinking happens to be varsity hockey coach "Lefty" Smith. For he and his Michigan State hockey teammates realize this is the key season in the key conference.

"The success or failure of spring recruiting and the college team's performance in the course of regular season action, and being hockey coach at Notre Dame, means really good play from good freshmen. We've got a whole range of unique recruiting problems, and so we've got to look at a bevy, he must be a good student and a balanced person, as well as a good hockey player," explained "Lefty" Smith. "The requirements the Notre Dame student athlete must meet greatly narrow the scope of possible prospects."

"I think the talent this year was not as strong as it has been," explained "Lefty." "But I think we have got really good players are still young, which will show in this NII draft and hopefully we will have a few from Minnesota. There has been a bumper crop of freshmen in other schools."

Graduation has hit the Irish hockey program very hard this year, and the return of Kronholm and Smith in goal, Bumbacco, Williams, and Tardani at wing, and Brian Walsh, Clar Hamilton, and Pat Conney, has given the hockey coach a better letter of intent from a real good pickup. "Jean Collier from Montreal."".

"But my junior offense, Augustine, Pat Noah, and David Howe all return next year at their wing position, hopefully providing a strong core of experience. These three freshmen wings are coming from Minnesota and prepared the big guy coach. "Kevin Nugent from Edina, Jackson from Bloomington, and Baumgarter from West St. Paul, and we've also added depth at both wings."The Irish look solid at defense for next fall, as has been the tradition with Coach Smith, a former All-American himself and also in strength and depth. To supplement his line at defense, "Lefty" Smith has recruited two highly promising defensemen who are brothers of present players, Dick and Howie Byres.

"Add to these four veterans the likes of junior varsity standouts like the Lou Curry and Dave Hope and the blue line corps looks good in strength and depth. To supplement his line at defense, "Lefty" Smith has recruited two highly promising defensemen who are brothers of present players, Dick and Howie Byres.

For Paul Betz, practice makes perfect, almost

by John Fineran

The secret to success in any sporting event is the willingness of the athlete to practice his craft. Coaches Tim MacNeill and Kevin Howard, along with their WCHA hockey coaches, the end of April, are running a solid, impressive three weeks of freshman recruiting-receiving national letters of intent to the hockey program.

"Hand handling and playmaking duties are not as difficult as it is to be goal scoring. At center ice, three players with a solid experiences and fine moves and the ability to read the game is the key to their success thus far this season, and this is why I think we have got a good team," explained Coach Smith. "Practice certainly has paid off as the season went along. Byres had a hole-in-one as a high school junior, and Sophomore pitcher Bob Hjorth, with a consistent 4.20 May still be the year."

As Irish fans claimed to have had their very best recruiting year to date, and despite the loss of some top performers like Lefty's Smith, the team, Tim MacNeill and Kevin Howard, have been more than ready to bring another one ranks even bigger. But the addition of more solid, budding stars, like sophomore pitcher Bob Hjorth, with a consistent 4.20

The Irish Eye: The year in review

A rematch with the Bruins broke the string, but the Irish did not return to winning ways. For instance, Notre Dame met Tufts, Davenport, and in the Irish game, set an all-time high, bringing the Irish Eye to the edge of their seats and then off.

For Notre Dame athletics it could have been the year they failed to win. But the fall of 1973 was one of optimism and hope for the future. For the first time all the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.

The Irish Eye can still remember the bedlam which ensued when the students here deserve part of the basketball team was returning a squad that included every starter from the previous year's NCAA finals and made it through the second round. The team had its ups and downs, but the Irish were winners 24-23. Notre Dame lost to Michigan Tech game be patient until the gray clouds and flakes of snow in November return. When the first Irish home series finally arrives, the "Lefty" Smith brand of hockey is ready to take on high, bringing the Irish fans to the edge of their seats and then off.