Burke contends

Seminar can be ready for spring

by Pat Flynn
Staff Reporter

The values seminar for seniors proposed in the report of the Committee on Study of the University’s needs would be realized as early as the spring semester of this year, according to Dr. William Burke, Assistant Provost. The seminar seminar would be a one hour, one semester course, as described in the report, would be “to reflect on the values which motivate us and subject them to a fair examination,” Burke said.

Burke, chairman of the Committee on the Course of Study, based his statement on what he termed the positive nature of the seminar proposal. “I believe that the proposal in the report do not carry the priority of this proposal,” Burke said. “I believe that, if given the chance to come into contact with the type of decisions that people make, the values seminars would be a valuable addition to our academic community.”

According to Burke, if the Academic Council is strongly in support of the proposal it can “move very quickly.” Burke qualified his statement by noting that the Academic Council on the Committee of the Course of Study report will most likely not come up for discussion at the first four meetings of the Academic Council.

On the other hand, Burke did not think the proposal to unify the Colleges of Arts and Letters as one course could be dealt with in any less than three years. “Such a broad, wide-ranging decision as this requires the Academic Council to be realized slowly,” he asserted. Burke also pointed out that there is a general one-month lag in enacting proposals passed by the Academic Council.

“Those who are of the opinion that there is no conflict of interest in merging the colleges,” Burke said, “are the ones who do not want the good work that has been done by way of study of the subject of this proposal.”

Burke added the committee would have to study the merging of the colleges and would have to make recommendations to the University’s prestige and relations with other universities. “For example, the College of Science as we presently know it is at least 54 years old. It has a tremendous tradition of students being accepted into and doing exceptionally in Ph. D. programs and medical schools,” Burke pointed out. “Do you sacrifice that kind of tradition and prestige?”

Burke stated that he thought this was the most important development coming out of the Committee on the Course of Study report—proposals to be submitted by the committee to form a permanent study group like itself, as part of the Academic Council.

“Over the course of last year we met between 50 to 75 hours. At the end of this year I think all of us felt that the issues we were pursuing were absolutely vital to the academic future of the university, and needed much more probing to be properly resolved,” Burke said.

The Committee on the Course of Study report suggested a number of major changes in academic policies. Two of these are the addition of “mini-courses” to the academic curriculum and suggestions for the greater utilization of available educational technology in teaching methods.

O’Neill admits releasing wrong CAP report

The letter released by Professor Carl O’Neill last Monday was not accepted by the Committee on Appointments and Professors (CAP) as one of the final drafts. O’Neill admitted yesterday that the letter he had released was not accepted by the official CAP report submitted to the Academic Council last May.

“O’Neill admitted yesterday that he had released the letter as the official CAP report submitted to the Academic Council last May was actually an early draft of the final report. O’Neill stated that he had mistaken the earlier draft, which he himself had written, as the final version of the CAP report. “It was the only document that I had in my files,” O’Neill said. “I have since learned that the draft that I had in my files was not accepted by the CAP members,” O’Neill explained.

Due to the inaccuracies of the early draft of the CAP report, O’Neill stated that he had to rescind the candidates for Crosson after receiving the final report. O’Neill added that he had no idea who had changed the candidate for Crosson after receiving the final report.

“The final draft did not include those names that were included on the initial draft of the candidates. The final draft did not include any candidates that were not confirmed by the CAP members,” O’Neill said.

“I do not know who has changed the candidates for Crosson,” O’Neill said. “I believe that there are some copies made of the actual report because of a confidentiality,” O’Neill explained.

To ensure equity

HPC Supports student lawyers

by Terry Keelan
Staff Reporter

The HPC voted unanimously to support a proposal for legal representation by law students involved in disciplinary cases. The proposal is intended to "ensure equity of procedure" according to John Mazza, last year's Student Body President. The Appeal Board voted on the recommendation of last year's Appeal Board.

The proposal, written by Mazza and Assistant Dean of the Law School Leslie Paquet, faculty representative on the Appeal Board, would create a regular student counsel appointed by the Student Bar Association from its membership and by the Dean of Students. "This would provide the student with a more knowledgeable, experienced, and effective counsel."

The conference is the second in a series of such conferences. The first conference was held during September 29 thru October 1 in San Francisco.

Robert F. Corcoran, head of the conference, explained that the purpose of conference was (twofold: 1) to would be looking at states' financing postsecondary education in a broad economic context and 2 to engage in the framework step for determining policies for such things as grants, student assurance programs, etc. The conference business will start today at 9:00 a.m. with an address given by Edward M. Gramlich, Director of Higher Education Programs for the Ford Foundation. From this point on, there will be a panel discussion on Postsecondary Financing, moderated by Dr. Frank V. Burtchaell, Provost of the University of California at San Diego. The panelists will discuss various problems in the judicial process due to students' lack of awareness about their rights and the nature of the charges against them. In such situations, Mazza pointed out many problems in the judicial process could be solved by providing the student with more knowledgeable legal counsel.

Indiana candidates and issues

by Matt Yokem
Staff Reporter

Students registered for the Indiana election will be able to vote for U.S. Senator and representative and various other state, county, and township offices. In addition, students may also vote on three amendments to the Indiana Constitution.

The most visible race will be for the Democratic nomination between Democrat incumbent Birch Bayh and Republican Virginia Don L. Lee, running on the American party ticket. The only other federal office being sought is that of third district representative. The Democratic incumbent, John Brademas will be challenged by Republican Virginia R. Black.

Voters in the November fifth election will also decide on candidates vying for five top state administrative offices.

Democratic incumbent Larry A. Conner in the attorney general contest could be opposed for Secretary of State by Jeffersonville Republican William L. Allen III. Democratic Auditor of State, Mary Akins Currie of Iaeger is challenged by Republican, Jean C. Merritt of Indianapolis.

Randall C. Miller, Republican from Michigan City, is running against Democratic incumbent Jack L. New of Greenfield for the Treasurer of State.

Washington House Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had made some "tentative choices" among the economic brain trust met again last week for that estimation of the economic problems and possibilities and will vote on what should be included in the economic package, expect Ford to "virtually approve the plan if it is a plan" and "juggling his options."

Ford told a group of congressmen Wednesday night that he was adamantly opposed to an increase in the tax on gasoline, and statements he was considering such a move were made without his authority.

On Wednesday, federal energy chief John C. Sawhill outlined a complex plan combining a 25-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax hike with a tax rebate for motorists who keep their mileage to a minimum.

The press aide added that despite his distaste for a gas tax hike, which could have an unpleasant political backlash at a time when Ford is trying to whip up support for Republicans in the fall congressional elections, the President maintained an "open mind" on the subject.

This indicated that he might reluctantly approve the plan if recommended by his economic advisers that it was in the nation's best interests. Meanwhile, Ford and his economic brain trust met again last week to consider various anti-inflation proposals, many of them put forward at last weekend's economic summit conference. The President has cut down his official appointments and will spend "virtually the entire weekend" juggling his options.

"The President has made some tentative choices among those people and is emphasizing some," Nessen told reporters. "There are no final decisions made.

discussed for the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals. Three amendments to the Indiana Constitution are also on the ballot. The first question is "Shall Section 19 of Article Four of the Constitution of the state of Indiana be amended to read as follows: 'An act, except an act for the codification, revision, or rearrangement of laws, shall be confined to one subject and matters properly connected therewith?"

The second question asks if the state constitution should be amended to provide that "candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor run for election jointly so that a vote cast for one is a vote cast for the other, and to provide for the selection for a Governor and Lieutenant Governor in the event of a tie vote in a general election?"

The final constitutional question is whether of not the militia shall consist of all persons over age seventeen (except those persons exempted by law), that the militia be divided into active and inactive classes, and that certain other specified changes be made concerning the militia. This is mainly a housekeeping bill but notably the present phrase in the constitution, "The militia shall be divided into active and inactive divisions I, II, and consables in divisions I and II. Only the position of township trustees and the three openings on the township board have candidates from both parties.

Anti-inflation program discussed

A teenager asking for directions early in the evening followed by what was thought to be a dog’s harmless romping turned out to be more than just coincidence for seniors Larry Casey and Tom Brett. The next day, Casey discovered that his $140 tape deck, a $20 toaster and $10 worth of beer had been stolen from his house at 526 North Allen Street. The September 30 burglary took place while all but one of the residents were gone. “We were down on campus watching the Monday night football game and only one of us was home,” Casey explained. “Early in the evening, a young black kid knocked on the door and said he just wanted to see if anybody was around.” Casey continued. “He was lightly touched with the mace,” Kovatch explained. Kovatch explained that mace has only been used twice in the past three years and that he rarely carries it. “I tell them not to use it unless it is absolutely necessary. We were carrying it that night because of the threat of a panzy raid,” Kovatch said.

Kovatch said that Walcott’s language was filthy throughout the entire incident. “The young man kept saying he could do what he god damned well pleased at SMC.” Kovatch concluded that it was a distasteful affair that nobody likes, but it “is part of our job.”

SCULAITI BURGLARY

Controversy continues over SMC victim incident

By Larry Casey

Saint Mary’s security and Mike Sculaiti yesterday offered conflicting reports of a Sept. 26 incident in front of the SMC guards.

Sculaiti, a junior Arts and Letters student from Holland, charged that a Saint Mary’s Security guard sprang to his conclusion for using abusive language. Saint Mary’s Security Director, Mr. Anthony Mahoney, denied that Sculaiti was not directly maced, just lightly touched with the mace by a student. “Just a matter of the way, effectiveness is zero.”

The incident occurred after Sculaiti’s 5:20 class was passed-out Saint Mary’s Mary’s woman up to her room on the sixth floor of Regna after an evening with her, another SMC woman, and an ND student.

According to Sculaiti, the Regina resident told him he couldn’t take the girl upstairs, but Sculaiti proceeded to do so, accompanied by the girl’s friend and the assistant assistant. Sculaiti claimed he was asked by either the assistant, the girl, or the friend if he could carry the passed-out woman upstairs.

As he descended the stairs after depositing the girl in her room, Sculaiti was confronted by Security officials. Sculaiti admitted he had been drinking and that he used abusive language, as Sculaiti accompanied him out the door. When Sculaiti left Regina, he passed the guards. The guards were parking their car. Narrating the incident, he scoffed, “Nice uniforms” as they passed.

“The one guard without a uniform was saying, ‘That’s enough, you’re coming in.’ The guards asked me to turn around and shot mace right in my face, missing my left eye by a quarter of an inch,” Sculaiti said. He realized that they drugged him into the guardhouse, where he was washed out the mace. Sculaiti was bothered by the mace for the entire next day.

“Two guards took me back to ND. I wasn’t really satisfyingly that I was a rapist or a pervert until one threatened to throw me in the South Bend jail,” Sculaiti complained. When they arrived at ND, Sculaiti said six or seven ND security officials were there, took his ID and were going to take him to see Arthur Pearse, director of ND security. Sculaiti told the guards, “I’m not going anywhere until I see a security director. Have Schizzi order the guards let him go.

According to A. N. Kirk, Security Director at SMC, said, “Only part of Sculaiti’s story is true; the rest is fabrication.” Kovatch said that the assistant assistant did not accompany Sculaiti upstairs. “After treatment he was less raucous because, if it was nothing, Sculaiti carried the girl upstairs while the resident called the assistant assistant and security. The assistant assistant met him at the room’s door.” Kovatch reported.

“I was called out of class and told about it,” he continued.

Casey related this is not the only time this blue car has been seen around the house. “One day this kid came up our house and asked if the Davises lived here. He said he was a friend of theirs. I replied that the Davises lived next door. Anyway, the Davis family was out on their front lawn and he promptly walked right by them and got in the same blue car I had just driven past.” Casey continued. “I got the blue car’s licence number and reported it to the police. The cops said they would keep an eye on them and that’s about all that we have heard from the cops.”

Police actions discussed

Casey and Brett reported that the actions taken by the South Bend Police were similar to the actions described by Bruce Petruevick in the October 1 Observer. “The uniformed officer came by after the first robbery and took down the basic information, then a detective came,” Casey explained. “The next time we called, we were given a uniformed officer who was an experienced, no detective followed.”

“I don’t want to sound as if I’m getting on the cops because there isn’t much they can do,” Casey said, “but our landlord, Ray Flynn, has had five calls from the University.”

Casey thought the University should pay more attention to the safety of the off-campus student instead of “trying to bust kids for drinking and breaking parietals.” He added, “off-campus students need a good insurance plan.”

“That’s the most feasible thing to do,” Casey stated. “Instead of devoting a half effort to projects and the University should shift their concern to dealing with individual’s needs. Right now my concern is for the safety of off-campus students and I think it should be the University’s concern too.”

Frank Robinson appointed as baseball's first black manager:

CLEVELAND (UPI) - Frank Robinson became the first black manager in baseball's 100-year history Thursday, and the highest paid manager as well when he was named playing manager of the Cleveland Indians.

Robinson, who signed a one-year contract and will receive the same $175,000 next season he is making with the Indians, was completely surrounded by a heavily-attended news conference. Robinson said he felt he was being given the job "because of my ability and not because of the color of my skin."

"The only reason I am the first black manager in the major leagues is that I happen to have been born black," said the 39-year-old Robinson, only man ever to win the Most Valuable Player award in both the National and American Leagues.

"I want to be judged by our play on the field," he said after his appointment to succeed Ken Aspromonte, who was fired. The Indians finished fourth in the American League East this season with a 77-85 record, their best winning percentage in six years.

President Gerald Ford sent Robinson a congratulatory wire stating the appointment was "welcome news not only for the Indians, the American League and all of baseball, but also for baseball fans across the nation."

Attending the news conference were Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn and American League President Lee MacPhail.

Mrs. Jackie Robinson, whose husband — no relation to Frank — broke the color barrier in major league baseball as a player in 1947, was also on hand and called Robinson's appointment "significant and highly commendable."

No Communication

Communication does not exist between anyone at Notre Dame.

A sad commentary, an unfortunate commentary, a tragic commentary - but most of all, it is a profound commentary on the state of this university. If only each administrator, professor and student could make known the barest sketch of their thoughts or actions, the potential for accomplishment would increase 100 percent. Presently, the percentage for change is zero. And it is simply because, no one knows or is ever willing to let it be known, what the hell is going on.

This situation exists between administrators and faculty, student and administrator, administrator and office. There are offices separated by a few doors whose occupants never know or care to know of the other's existence. Even if such an interest existed, they might as well try sending smoke signals rather than search for the formal means of intra-university communication. For quite frankly, there's not any.

Consider the past week for instance. Attempts to locate reasons for the controversy over last year's selection of a new sociology department chairman, find only the administrators and administrators. Barely able to link facts about the case if one or the other were not directly involved.

The failings of coeduction again surface from within the university. But besides the letter's page of this newspaper, where else can they be really taken? The stock answer: the futility of communication. For what channels for communicating these feelings? Is a student's complaint, that is submitted to Student Affairs on Monday and then filed on Tuesday, the proper channel?

Or perhaps it is within the very pages you hold now, which is only about to dent any issues because of the "no comments" or "that is so" and so's responses.

Exactly who knows the proper but defunct channels of communication?

Exactly who cares.

There appears to be no one. So everyone lay back, take it easy; October break is only three weeks away. Let the professors chatter until they are blue in the face about raising their means of existence, those offices in the Administration building will get done. And no matter if renovation on the LaFortune student Center remains incomplete; we can still roll the bus up to Michigan and have a grand time.

But remember, let's not tell everyone. What they don't know won't hurt them.

Clarification

Dear Editor:

I believe that my statement to The Observer (Monday, September 29), signifying the cause of my resignation from a Departmental CAP is quite clear. My statement was printed in full in the story which appeared on Friday, September 27, the thrust and tone of which was derivative to my current Departmental Chairman, and which by implication presented a distorted view of my reasons for resignation.

While the points, which I attempted to clarify in my interview essentially stood as they were, I wish at this time to correct some inaccuracies concerning the CAP statement, which appeared in The Observer, regretfully and through error, was an early draft of the document which was being prepared for the Dean. My colleagues, who served with me on the committee, are reluctant to release the final document, and I share their reluctance. However, I feel bound to sketch out, in as accurate a way as is possible under the circumstances, the nature of the discrepancies between the final form and earlier form of the document.

The vote tally was modified group consensus, when one member declared that he intended to abstain, one of the candidates. He had at the time of the vote believed that the vote was a foregone conclusion, all candidates, which it was not. This abstention affected the outcome first, second and third-place votes for any of the candidates.

The final document, expressed reservations about professor Despres' background in terms of coordinating the broad range of interests which exists in a joint department such as the one we have. Some uncertainty was expressed over his experience in terms of giving proper balance to graduate and undergraduate programs in a University which serves a majority of undergraders and a minority of graduates. Dr. Despres' most recent experiences were in a graduate-oriented, non-liberal arts University. Fear was expressed that Despres might, because of his background, be inclined to impose effective interpersonal relationships within the Department, and perhaps deal with the Administration in an aggressive way, which in turn might impede desirable professional development.

Despite expressed trepidations, the College administration, which was an articulate, motivated candidate with a high level of professionalism and dedication. Dr. Despres' committee did not feel that he was ready for the position.

It is my firm opinion that the decision made by the Administration, despite the objections of some of us, was a sound and academically defensible decision. Furthermore, I feel quite confident that whatever else it may represent, the problem is not religious bias. I believe that to make a cut and dry choice on the basis of politics out of this issue would be an unfortunate and futile gesture.

The merits of the decision can rest solidly on academic and professional questions pertaining to such decisions by administrators in any institution of higher learning. If, however, there is anything to be learned in the bitter experiences of many of my colleagues, I think it is simply that for both faculty and students alike to work more closely with one another, without suspicion and without hesitation. To make the most effective avenues of communication from which we all stand to benefit.

Sincerely yours,

Tom Drape

off-campus: changes and challenges

Bob Johnson

My experiences in the first month living off-campus have given me a chance to re-evaluate my college life and my views of the university. As well as provide some insight into what independence means. The effects of living in a dormitory is, that although a dorm stiokes me until after I had been in the apartment for a few months. It was then I realized the invaluable experience I would get to move off-campus. Life had been pleasant in the dorm but the need for a change and a challenge prompted reconsideration of a fourth year of on-campus living. Living off-campus is quite a change and challenge socially, academic, and culinary, are being met everyday.

I can think I can casually observe my experience of both styles of living and the difference between them. Off-campus living is more demanding primarily because it creates more responsibility. The luxuries of on-campus living - prepared meals, laundry service, proximity and accessibility to campus events - are not available to the off-campus student, I am now responsible for cooking my own meals, doing my laundry, and getting to campus. I don't want to make these examples appear overly burdensome, because they aren't. In fact, I find them very novel. I had never done any major cooking. If I had to eat, well, it was a choice between tuna fish and McDonald's. Cooking is fun, at least it is so far. It's a challenge to see if recipes will turn out successfully. Fortunately for myself and especially for my housemates, they turn out deliciously.

Getting off-campus for a movie downtown was always a great lift in college. After spending an extended amount of time on-campus, I felt very confined. Seeing the dome from a distance was very refreshing. I don't spend lots of time on-campus now but I feel more comfortable while there. I feel less intimidated or separated or loosely attached. I have come to campus everyday but I have to be more responsible. This change, I believe, allows me to be other to delegate on official, independent and community-oriented. I must act in accordance with those laws and since Notre Dame is an important part of South Bend, in manners not detrimental to the role of the university. Living off-campus affords me plenty of freedom in action. Hopefully I can be back in the dorm eventually.

One more responsibility of interest is academic. Some friends and mine claim off-campus living increases academic performance. For example, two friends in Vermont say their grade points jumped to 4.0 in their first semester off-campus but they never heard anything about their second semester. This theory is not really challenged this year. So far, experience is crushing theory. But that is of little concern to those more interested in cleaning a house, washing clothes, or making spaghetti. I guess I just have to arrange my priorities.

Living off-campus is fun. I'm glad I moved in order to challenge my values of responsibility and independence and prepare myself for living alone. I'm learning to budget time more and more effectively although my housemates might contend differently. I'm learning more practical experience than I had previously known or attempted. My day is always busy. There's no lack for things to do. Being off-campus, the challenge of responsibility and independence is the education for this year.

Coeducation: challenge at ND

by Dennis Kelly
Staff Reporter

The question of how well coeducation is working is one which has caused controversy at Notre Dame. Indeed, a running war between males and females on the pages of this newspaper has brought an indictment against coeducation as it now exists.

Any of several factors contribute to arguments against coeducation. A disproportionate number of men to women, historical bias, which has caused controversy at Notre Dame, and loneliness all seem to lend themselves to arguments against the success of it. Often, however, statistics are misquoted, facts are misconstrued, and hostilities commence.

The hard fact: out of a total enrollment of 6,600, 1,120 are women—17 percent of the student body. If one studies in the College of Engineering, he finds the ratio worse: 50 women to 733 men. A long-time advocate of coeducation, Sr. John Miriam Jones, commented, "We have come a long way in two years. It is unrealistic to believe that two years have turned around 130 years of tradition—but I find a list of young women delighted with the progress made."

However, some students have not been so pleased. As graduate student Mari DiSabatino, a member of the Counseling Center staff, put it: "Women wanted to be recognized as people; men would not recognize Notre Dame women in the way they wanted to be." The problem of women at Notre Dame has not been confined to students. Two statistics assert this: one, that out of a total faculty of over 700, women hold only 30 teaching positions; and two, in an establishment where almost half of the 2,400 full-time positions are

Women's dorms to be unlocked

by Mark Byljan
Staff Reporter

All women's dorms are now being left unlocked from noon until 6 p.m. The "open door" experiment has been undertaken by the residence halls with the approval of Campus Security and the University Housing office.

Farley Hall rectress Sr. Joan Lenz stated yesterday that no problems have yet arisen with the new policy. People often react against the Detex system without realizing its purpose. "The present Detex system is one way of controlling who gets in the dorms, and it would be inadvisable to do away with them," Gallagher stated.

The need is for a system that balances security measures with accessibility for residents, Gallagher observed.

Assistant Prevost Sr. John Miriam Jones said the Detex systems have been successful so far. They are buildings located close to public roads as well as women's dorms. "The Detex system is a security measure not for exclusion of on-campus students, but instead to prevent non-campus people from having easy access to the halls."

Only doors used most frequently in the afternoons will be left unlocked.

With the "open door" experiment in effect, Detex cards are no longer necessary to enter a woman's dorm between noon and 6 p.m.

Bicycle registration to be held next week in dining halls

by Maureen Flynn
Staff Reporter

Bicycle owners who have not yet registered their bikes will be required to do so next week in the North and South dining halls and in the Huddle. A $1 fee will be charged for nationwide registration and for the registration sticker.

Jim Panici, executive coordinator for the bike registration, stressed that all bicycles ridden in the city of South Bend are subject to impoundment by the police if they do not have a registration sticker. Panici also pointed out that “the sticker makes it a lot easier in returning stolen bikes that have been recovered.”

Students who registered their bikes last year need not do so again as the registration is good for four years. Any student who registered his bike and did not receive a sticker may obtain one next week by presenting his copy of the registration form.

Information needed for registration includes the brand, year, model, serial number, the color of the bicycle and the owner’s social security number. The names and addresses of previous owners are also requested if known.

Students who cannot register their bikes next week will have opportunities later when Panici opens an office that will handle registrations and reports of stolen bikes.

Chief horseman falls off horse and dies

By FERRY WIMMER

VIENNA (UPI) — The dancing white stallions paused momentarily when chief horseman Col. Hans Handler fell dead from the saddle. But then the show went on.

"It was the finest death he could dream of," said his deputy, Lt. Col. Kurt Albrecht. "He dedicated his whole life to the horses."

Handler, 63, died Wednesday night in the saddle of his beloved horse, "Siglavy Beja," during a performance of precision horsemanship at Vienna's famed Spanish Riding School.

"After about 20 minutes of the one-hour performance, Handler suddenly fell from the saddle," Albrecht said. "The horses stopped for a while but then danced on to the tunes of a Mozart symphony while Handler was carried out to an ambulance."

Albrecht said the horses were so used to keeping in time with the music that they carried on as long as they heard it over the loudspeaker.

"We saw no reason to stop the program as nobody realized it was so serious," Albrecht said. "Handler was never sick before and we thought he just fainted."

"Even Handler's horse attempted to dance on," Albrecht said. "It had to be led to the stables. But the show went on to the end. The audience thought it was just an accident."

Post-graduate jobs discussed at Women's Commission meeting

by Lonnie Luna

Staff Reporter

The Women's Commission held a meeting Wednesday evening to provide the ND-SMC women's community with information concerning jobs after graduation.

"The majority of the girls are not sure of what they are going to do after they graduate," said commission member Terry Audo.

Richard, Willemin, director of the Notre Dame Placement Bureau, and Karen O'Neill, director of the Placement Bureau at St. Mary's, informed the women on job opportunities in major companies across the U.S.

"Our focus is in helping you plan your life," said O'Neill. She and Willemin noted that there is a great demand for women by employers.

"All companies are bound by law to open their hiring to women," commented Willemin. He added that some companies come to hire females only.

filled by women, only hold a 3 to 1 margin on the campus jobs.

Dr. Alberta Ross, associate professional specialist in Notre Dame Radiation Research, and chairperson of Committee W, the women's committee of the American Association of University Women, attributed this to historical bias in hiring and recruitment. Ross especially noted that women holding Ph.D.'s are usually married to men holding the same degree. Nepotism, regulations and the fact that the man gets a job first have hindered qualified women from obtaining teaching positions. One other statistic enters here: Dr. Josephine Ford of the theology department is the only Notre Dame woman professor to hold tenure.

The problems are many, but the solutions are few. Assistant Dean of Students Mary McCabe noted, "We have to know ourselves before we can interact." She added that understanding "what it means to be a human person" is a big first step toward reconciling the differences that exist between men and women.

As Sister John Miriam puts it, "The crucial issue of coeducation is attitudinal." She added, "Women are struggling to obtain new niches, the world is ready for women in new ways and Notre Dame is rethinking the position of women.

To discuss Catholic history

Conference is scheduled

A conference on reinterpretting American Catholic History will be held this Friday and Saturday in the CCE, Dr. Jay P. Dolan of the History department announced yesterday.

"Notre Dame has had a tradition in research and writing in American Catholic History," Dolan said. This weekend's Conference further reflects this and is trying to stimulate interest in the field by bringing in rising historians of American Catholicism from all over the country.

The Conference will feature the topics of Catholics and the left, Catholic ethnics and studies, and new approaches in American Catholic history on Friday commencing at 10:30 am. Dolan suggested that "graduate and undergraduate students taking courses in history, sociology, theology, or education might be interested."

Highlighting the conference will be the Friday night 7:30 pm session on new approaches in American Catholic History by Dr. Robert D. Cross of the University of Virginia.

Football picks

College football shifts into high gear this weekend and only January's bowl games will give teams any sense of being out of this year's scramble.

Difficulties for Michigan teams in the nation are unconfirmed at this point and the biggest surprise of the season may be if any team remains so.

Ask the Irish.

Picking winners is becoming more risky business in '74, but The Irish Eye ventures forth.

At Miami: This game is tonight and pits two unbeaten surprise teams. Hurricanes lose their ferocity as they move in, but unfortunately for Doug Jordan and Aubrey the game is close to seashore in Miami's Orange Bowl. It should be close but look for Miami by three.

LSU at Florida: The Gators are surprising people (pleasantly) in Gainesville and have been an upstart (unpleasant). This contest is another close one, but Majors will show the everglades and Gators are right at home, literally. Florida by two.

Texas vs. Oklahoma: The Big 8 title is up for grabs and we have to keep our eye on the Jayhawks. They have a bye week schedule considering how bad they are. SC has a breather this week and next week and the week after that and the week after that and the week after that.

Texas A&M at Kansas: The Aggies broke into the top five this week so this shouldn't be a week though. Look for a smackdown in Lawrence and a lot of trampled Jayhawks.

Michigan at Stanford: Possible upset here but Stanford has been recently defeated at home.

Penn State at Army: Army isn't one of the worst teams in the nation for the week, and even during the next week, and even during the next week, the observer has been immensely disappointed of a loss offered Ara.

O'Sullivan. "Jeff Baggett is the biggest problem, he's been driving well, and that seems to be the key to my running."

Defensively the Spartans are led by cornerback and co-captain Jim Taubert, linebacker Terry Smith, and safety Tony Heriville, Indiana. The Spartans have done a lot of lately.

Defensive starters will be the target, as undoubtedly he will be, four yardage passes.

UCLA. "They've been playing great football, which is something we haven't been doing."

The ineffectiveness of the running game has been the primary reason. Tomorrow the Irish will try to get on track with a couple of less fancy runs. Starting in the backfield with Clements will again be the dependable Wayne Bullock and halfback Al Samuel, but at the other backfield slot will be Jim Welfare, a 6-5, 213 pound and sophomore. Russ Kormann and Jim Goodman will again provide back-up strength as will another senior familiar face. Art Best has been working all out and is expected to see action soon.

The rest of the Irish offensive and defensive starters will be the same.

"Purdue is a sticky ball club and a tough one to beat."

We have reached a level of confidence and maturity that had not existed before," said Coach Noel O'Sullivan. "Jeff Baggett and Jim Culveyhouse are this year's big upset."

"We've definitely got the material and the will to win, but it will be tough," said Majors. "But we're all playing that this will be the final match of our fall schedule. We'll be working hard during the winter in our conditioning program but the absence of playing will definitely set us back."

Iowa vs. Illinois: Stranger things have happened. It's late in the year and nothing makes sense to anyone. All this. But the game is in Jackson, Miss. and it may be Bear Bryant's turn to blow his trumpet. Another long shot, but look for the Mir. Last week: 12 of 15, 80 percent. Season: 32 of 45, 71 percent.

Spartans aim to capture the quintessence of that experience—the tears, the butterflies, the triumphs, the ecstasies, the disasters, the页目, the problems, the.

If Baggett chooses to move through the air, something he has not done in the last two games, he has seniors Mike Jones at flanker, Mike Hurd at split end and John Winkler at tight end as prospective targets. However, outside, despite his 24 yards, Baggett has completed only nine passes.

But Majors will show the everglades and Gators are right at home, literally. Florida by two.

The Invitational, to be held at the Phelan gym, will feature a number of teams to be winners.

The band came to practice on Tuesday, surrounded the field, and made into tomorrow's ball game. The Big 8 title is up for grabs and we have to keep our eye on the Jayhawks. They have a bye week schedule considering how bad they are. SC has a breather this week and next week and the week after that and the week after that and the week after that.

If anyone wants to test their expectations to test a year's work in two hours before 80,000 people.

The moments were so fleeting, yet long enough to last a lifetime. The impressions were almost abstract, a kaleidoscope of flashing images—hurting brothers and sisters, bewailing parents, labelling friends floating aimlessly down a New Orleans street. It was too much, it was not enough.

"This year's big upset."

The Irish Golf Team concludes its fall season today with the Notre Dame Invitational at the Phelan gym. The Invitational will begin at 11:00 includes teams from Wayne State, Wisconsin-Parkside, Wisconsin-Whitewater, Indiana State, and DePaul.

The Irish have done a lot of lately. The band came to practice on Tuesday, surrounded the field, and made into tomorrow's ball game. SC has a breather this week and next week and the week after that and the week after that and the week after that and the week after that. "New York is that they have very fine school spirit that we have not been able to do in several years against Notre Dame and stop Clements both in passing and running.

"I was hoping Notre Dame wouldn't be undefeated and ranked No. 1 when we came together. If you're going to meet a great team like Notre Dame, you might as well have it at the top."

If it has been at practice this week, he'd have known Ara felt the same way.
