World food crisis becomes major concern

by Greg R. Baugs

The goals of the group are twofold. One goal is to "raise the consciousness of the Notre Dame South Bend community so that they understand the main issues. These educational programs will be more than one-shot deals, so that interested parties can develop a framework from which to understand the crisis of world hunger.

The other goal of the coalition is to "develop a variety of creative action responses to the problem so that during the educational experience it will be possible to have a real compassion for some of the persons and issues involved."

Scully added that if the response was favorable, a program might be developed for a low protein, low calorie diet, which would enable a student to "force" the issue. This meal would provide just enough calories to "survive," Scully explained.

Many St. Mary's students when telephoned at randomsaid they did not buy tickets because of the high prices. One student said she believed that some of "the fourth floor of Regina South had bought tickets due to the expensive. A majority of the responses were unprintable.

St. Mary's students also have to sit in a separate section of the Notre Dame student section. The other goal of the coalition is to have college campuses be aware of the problem at a national level. The other goal of the coalition is to understand the world crisis in India and Africa.

A third discussion period will take place Thursday, November 14, on "The Ethics of Food, Population, and Energy." Panel members for this particular meeting will include Edward Malley of the Philosophy Department and Donald O'Leary of the Program in Political Science.

Two events have been planned for the month of November, to meet the second goal of the coalition. The next planned general membership meeting of the coalition is scheduled for December 2.

The crowd was out the door at Kubicki's last Friday, as the junior class sponsored a Happy Hour. Due to the multitude of thirsty students and the fact that campus, bars capacity was exceeded and latecomers had to wait for other drinkers to leave before they could enter.

The Sophomore Literary Festival has received confirmations from several noted authors and poets requested to attend this year's activities, according to S.F. student Chris Mahon. Scheduled for March 2 through 8, 1975, this year's festival will include appearances from Anthony Burgess, author of Clockwork Orange; James T. Farrell of St. Louis; and Joseph Brodsky, the famous Russian poet who presently teaches at the University of California at Berkeley.

Other speakers include poets John Logan, Robert Bly and Lawrence Ferlinghetti; novelist James Purdy, author of Trespass; and short story writer Tillie Olsen, author of "Tell Me a Riddle."

Since 1967 when the festival originated as a symposium in honor of William Faulkner, the guest list includes such celebrated writers as Joyce Carol Oates, Norman Mailer, Jason Miller and Joseph Rushton from Art. and devoted to each of the four departments interested in exploring ideas--people who are conceptually or theoretically oriented, in addition.

Bells stated that the new seminar is "one of the first, true attempts at an interdisciplinary course in this college." He emphasized that none of the four professors involved will be in charge of the program and that each of them will attend every session not only those related to their particular field.

Other seminars described as interdisciplinary were really centered around one filed and taught by one professor with guests from other fields occasionally coming in," Bells noted.

The course is basically divided into four three-week units, one devoted to each of the four fields. These 12 weeks of study will be preceded by an introductory, organizational week and followed by two concluding, wrap-up weeks to complete the 15-week semester. Classes will usually meet once a week on Thursday nights. Students, however, will be expected to attend occasional sessions on Wednesday and Sunday afternoons between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The seminar is not intended to be a comprehensive study of material culture. "We are simply going to look at different approaches to material culture," he said.

Cotter, who is looking for people interested in exploring ideas--people who are conceptually or theoretically oriented, in addition.

Students need not be majors in one of the four departments involved to enroll in the seminar; however, they must receive permission from one of the four professors. The class will not be filled on a first-come-first-served basis, but according to the qualifications of those wishing to join. Students interested should contact professors Bells, Vacca, Rushton or Schiereth as soon as possible.

Morgenthau to discuss political tensions in U.S.

One of America's most distinguished social scientists and historians, Hans Morgenthau, will discuss current tensions in the country and abroad at a talk at 8 p.m. Wednesday (Nov. 13) in the fashionable Charles Town Memorial Library Auditorium.

The talk is sponsored by the Student Union Academic Commission and is open to the public.

Morgenthau, who presently serves as an emeritus professor of political science and modern history at the University of Chicago and distinguished professor of political science at the City University of New York, was born in Coburg, Germany, February 1, 1902, attended universities in that country where he was admitted to the bar in 1927. He came to America in 1937 and was naturalized in 1947.

Morgenthau is the author of "Science, Master or Servant" (1927), "Truth and Power" (1976), "A New Foreign Policy for the US" (1947), and the three-volume "Politics in the Twentieth Century." His teaching career began at the University of Frankfurt, Germany, where he was acting president of the law court, and at the University of Zürich in Switzerland. In this country, he has served on the faculties of Brooklyn College, University of Kansas City, University of California at Berkeley, Columbia, Yale and Northwestern Universities, and has served as a consultant to the Departments of State and Defense in Washington, D.C.
Student calendar opinion voiced

by Terry Keene
News Editor

A random survey of students concerning the current academic calendar reveals that 46 per cent of those polled would favor a similar fall calendar in the near future. These results, coming in the wake of the week-long October break, indicate a marked increase in student support of the current fall calendar.

Majority favors break

The survey, conducted over the weekend by the Notre Dame and St. Mary's students, shows that 54 per cent of the students would favor a similar week-long October break next year. These results, coming in the wake of the week-long break, indicate a marked increase in student support of the current fall calendar.

In a Registration Day poll of students on the new fall calendar, 54 per cent of those polled opposed the September starting date for classes.

When asked if they would favor a week-long mid-semester break next fall even though it might mean beginning classes in August, 204 students said yes. Two hundred eighty-eight students did not favor the week-long break coupled with the August start.

The survey found that about 46 per cent of the student body left campus during the break. Of the students polled, 67 per cent categorized the break as a time primarily spent relaxing. Twenty-five per cent stated that they spent most of their break time engaged in school work.

Leaving early and returning late

The survey revealed that 36 per cent of those polled either left campus for the break or returned after classes resumed on November 4.

Such erosion of student attendance immediately before and after break was an issue in the debate on the new calendar before the Academic Council last year.

Earliest start on record

The current fall academic calendar marked the earliest start of classes in Notre Dame history. It also provided for the first full week-long mid-semester break in the fall. (The spring semester has traditionally had a mid-semester break.)

The calendar, passed last year by the Academic Council, will be re-considered by the Council early next semester. The Council will then decide whether or not to retain the current academic calendar.

Academic Commissioner Jim Ambrose, whose predecessor Chris Nedeau led the student fight against the present calendar last year, has promised that he will conduct a complete survey of both student and faculty opinion of the calendar in January.

ND-SMC blood drive continues

by Marlene Zloza
Managing Editor

Approximately one hundred on-campus students have already donated blood in this year's ND-SMC Volunteer Program. Each dormitory has an assigned date, either a Tuesday or a Thursday, when residents travel to the South Bend Blood Bank to donate.

Of the six dorms that have already donated, the average number of pints received has been "sixteen or seventeen," according to Blood Drive coordinator Colleen O'Rourke.

The major problems, needs and goals of modern education will be discussed in the light of the science of creative intelligence, will be discussed in the light of the science of creative intelligence, a methodology and science for developing creativity and intelligence in man. Transcendental meditation, the practical techniques used in the science of creative intelligence, will be analyzed as a tool for improving the quality of education by Farwell, and programs available for area schools and colleges will be discussed.

The symposium is open to the general public. A $1 donation will be requested at the door to cover costs.

The symposium on education to be held on Tuesday

An evening symposium on education and the science of creative intelligence, sponsored by the American Foundation for the Science of Creativity, will be held in the Memorial Library Auditorium on Tuesday, November 12, from 7:30 until 10 p.m.

Featured speakers will be Frederick J. Croson, PhD, dean of the College of Arts and Letters and author of several books; Donald A. Farwell, superintendent of the South Bend community school corporation; and Lawrence Farwell, international director of the World Plan Executive Council, Maharishi International University.

Last Thursday was a record day, with volunteers to St. Ed's Hall donating a total of twenty pints. Those students who already donated, the average number of pints received has been "sixteen or seventeen," according to Blood Drive coordinator Colleen O'Rourke.

O'Rourke added that "the donations are going really well so far," and that twenty pints per day is the maximum that can be received.

On the schedule for this week is Cavanaugh on Tuesday and Radio on Thursday. Those students who signed up to donate during the blood drive will be contacted by someone connected with the drive who will assign them to a specific time and explain the details. Off-campus students can go directly to the blood bank, or call there for an appointment.

Plans year long sabbatical

Crosson explains decision

by Maryfran Hayes Staff Reporter

Explaining his decision to resign as dean of the College of Arts and Letters at the end of next summer, Dr. Frederick J. Crosson said that he has fulfilled his role as an administrator and that he would return to writing and teaching in the field of philosophy.

Crosson announced that he plans to begin a year-long sabbatical next fall. "I have found a number of notes for projects, that because of my position, I had not had time to finish," he said.

Crosson explained that he is not certain that he will live in the South Bend area, "because that would involve moving a house. I have, however, absent myself from Notre Dame, since I think it would be a person's life, rather, for a research scholar."

"I would like to continue writing in philosophy and the great books tradition, being kind of scholastically attached to the two areas," Crosson stated.

Another reason for Crosson's resignation is his desire to return to what he feels is a more satisfying life of learning and his wish not to be a permanent administrator.

"Although I feel, as dean, I have learned a lot about people and higher education, I feel seven years is enough time to devote to administrative affairs."

In addition, University telephone directories will be contacted by the Gay Community who wish to express recommendations for a new dean.

Any member of the Notre Dame community is not expected to write to The Gay Students of Notre Dame, P.O. Box 1705, South Bend, Ind. 46614. People seeking information will be contacted by two members of the group. After this initial contact, a decision about attending the meetings can be made. No commitment, other than the desire to seek out and share ideas, is expected. The Gay Students of Notre Dame is not designed to determine the direction in which the group will move, but it "exists for those members of this university who wish to explore their own selves and help others do the same."

SBC forms committee to investigate room selection

by Maryfran Hayes Staff Reporter

In recent weeks a number of students and faculty members at the South Bend campus have met to establish a group in which homosexual men and women might feel comfortable called The Gay Student of Notre Dame, and to create a community environment in which members can share ideas and experiences with like-minded people. This group would facilitate the exchange of information on conditions in the gay person in contemporary society and allow the invitation of people from various backgrounds to address the group. Besides providing a forum for discussion, The Gay Students of Notre Dame also hopes to offer an opportunity for activism.

The group is immediately more interested in establishing a network of like-minded individuals who can share ideas and experiences with like-minded people. The group hopes that its formation will initiate a more realistic and passionate discussion of the issue than has so far taken place at Notre Dame. To achieve this objective, The Gay Students of Notre Dame invites written responses, supportive and otherwise, from all members of the university.

Since last September the group has met weekly in homes and apartments off campus. The meetings usually include a general discussion by the entire group followed by conversations in smaller groups. Topics discussed have ranged from the medical and legal context of the gay identity to the relationship between the gay community and the university. The group hopes to continue this discussion and to work toward the formation of a group in which students and faculty members who feel that they have not had a chance to explore their own selves and help others do the same.

Any number of the Notre Dame community may attend the meeting, and any opinions toward the group or to receive further information can do so by writing to The Gay Students of Notre Dame, P.O. Box 1705, South Bend, Ind. 46614. People seeking information will be contacted by two members of the group. After this initial contact, a decision about attending the meetings can be made. No commitment, other than the desire to seek out and share ideas, is expected. The Gay Students of Notre Dame is not designed to determine the direction in which the group will move, but it "exists for those members of this university who wish to explore their own selves and help others do the same."
man, woman and devil

a preview by mary ellen m'candrews

Thursday, November 14th, the Dance and Drama Series of the Cultural Arts Commission will present the New York Theater Company's production of "The Apple Tree." Composed of three short musicals held together by the common theme of Man, Woman, and Devil, "The Apple Tree" is the work of Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick. Besides this musical hit they are well known for such successes as "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Fiorello."

The first musical is based on the short story, "Diary of Adam and Eve" by Mark Twain. America's beloved satirist lives up to his reputation for biting wit in this "crane sharp" mock of the war between man and woman which began in the Garden of Eden. Set in modern times, Henry Hewes of The Saturday Review wrote of it:

"...Adam is portrayed amusingly as an easygoing, not too bright young man maneuvered into a marriage and a fatherhood he doesn't appreciate until he becomes a widower. Eve is revealed as self-centered, impelled to homemaking and motherhood."

The dialogue is comic but the story of Adam and Eve's discovery of sex and love is appealing and touchingly funny.

The second segment of "The Apple Tree" is based on Frank Stockton's classic short story "The Lady or the Tiger." First published in 1884, the story has continued to tantalize audiences with its either-or choice. This production is set in a semi-barbaric kingdom where a king offers a prisoner the choice between two doors. At the outset of the action a balladeer sings the song "I'll Tell You The Truth" but the audience waits in suspense as the prisoner chooses the way that will render him either a man-eating tiger or the princess of the kingdom.

Jules Feiffer is the author of "Passionella" the story on which the third musical is based. A multi-talented man, Feiffer is probably best known as a cartoonist whose portrayals of modern day dreads and anxieties have been in syndicated newspapers throughout the United States. "Passionella" is the modern day version of the Cinderella story. A satirization of Hollywood, the tale opens with a forlorn chimney sweep girl singing her dream of becoming a movie star. Sure enough, with the help of her friendly fairy godmother, she is miraculously transformed into a glamorous movie star. Yet she ends up making a mockery of her glamour girl image when she plays the role of her old chimney sweep self in order to win both an Academy Award and the love of her boyfriend.

First produced on Broadway by Mike Nichols, "The Apple Tree" is part of the repertory that the New York Theater Company will be staging in its 1974-75 season. The company will be touring colleges and universities across the United States with "The Apple Tree," "The Fantasticks," and "Berlin to Broadway with Kurt Weill."

The New York Theater Company was established in 1969 as the musical theater division of the National Shakespeare Company. Newsweek called the company one of the more worthy theatrical enterprises currently around town and Anna Kinsella of the New York Times wrote that the "productions are fully professional compared to Broadway, the actors relating to the material and the audience."

The company has an excellent director in Richard Ronald Beebe. Since getting his M.A. in theater in 1935 at the University of Michigan, Mr. Beebe has gone on to amass credits in over sixty stage productions. He established Studio 872 in Zulbrucken Germany where he worked as director, choreographer and designer in such shows as "Guys and Dolls," "On the Town," and "Look Homeward Angel." He has won awards for best set designer and best actor. His latest effort was the production of "Arturo Ui" with Al Pacino.

The greatest innovation since plots, as one critic wrote, you cannot pass up "The Apple Tree." The novelty of three separate musicals combined in one is sure to delight you. Tickets for the 8:00 p.m. performance on sale November 7th at the Student Union Ticket Office. Admission is $2.00 for students and $3.00 for adults.

The Features Page of Friday's Observer erroneously listed prices for "The Apple Tree" at $1.00 and $2.00. Tickets are $2.00 for adults and $2.00 for students.
Castellino receives $25,000 grant

Dr. Francis J. Castellino, associate professor of biochemistry at the University of Notre Dame, has been awarded a Dreyfus Teacher-Scholar Grant of $25,000 by the Camille and Henry Dreyfus Foundation, Ind., New York.

The purpose of the grants, which have been awarded annually since 1970, is to promote the careers of outstanding young teacher-scientists. The funds are to be used at the recipient's discretion to carry out original teaching and research ideas in the fields of chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering. A supplementary grant is awarded to outstanding young teacher-scientists. The funds are to be used to carry out original teaching and research ideas in the fields of chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering. A supplementary grant is awarded to outstanding young teacher-scientists. The funds are to be used at the recipient's discretion to carry out original teaching and research ideas in the fields of chemistry, biochemistry and chemical engineering.

Dr. Jeremiah P. Freeman, chairman of the Notre Dame chemistry department, called the Dreyfus Grant "a prestigious award for a young chemist." Since joining the University faculty in 1970, Castellino has been investigating the mechanisms by which the human body forms and dissolves blood clots. In addition, he teaches physical chemistry to undergraduate students and biochemistry to first-year medical students from the South Bend Center for Medical Education of Indiana University School of Medicine located at Notre Dame.

The 31-year old chemist has established the existence and significance of two major forms of plasminogen in the human circulation. His research group is involved in determining the molecular events which occur in the physiological and pathological activation of plasminogen to the blood clot dissolving enzyme plasmin. Recently, he was invited to present his work at international conferences at Basel, Switzerland.

Castellino's research has been supported primarily by grants from the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the American Heart Association. He recently received a five-year Research Career Development Award from NIH. The author of more than 25 articles in scientific publications.

Dr. Russell welcomed to N.D. faculty

Mediaeval Institute appoints new director

Dr. Jeffrey B. Russell, professor of history and acting dean of the graduate division of the University of California at Riverside, has been appointed director of the University of Notre Dame’s Mediaeval Institute and will be the first occupant of the Michael P. Grace Chair in Mediaeval Studies, it has been announced recently by the University. Russell will also serve as the first occupant of the Michael P. Grace Chair in Mediaeval Studies in Tokyo and as an extensive study of manuscripts and art objects above price. As we live our national life forward, he has reminded us that we only understand it backward.”

Also the author of many publications, Gabriel has served as a top officer of the International Commission for the History of Universities, a corresponding Fellow of the Societe de L’Histoire de France, the Bavarian Academy of Sciences, and the Royal Historical Society. He is a past president of the American Catholic Historical Association and a member of the Mediaeval Academy of America.

Dr. Jeffrey Russell was recently appointed director of Notre Dame’s Mediaeval Institute.

History:
Russell is a member of the American Historical Association, American Society for Church History, Mediaeval Academy of America, and the advisory council of the Mediaeval Association of the Pacific. His wife, Diana, is a professional librarian.

The Hungarian-born Gabriel served as director of the French College in Hungary and professor of the University of Budapest until 1947 before joining the Notre Dame Institute in 1948. He has occupied guest professorships at the Pontificial Institute of Mediaeval Studies in Tokyo and at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N.J., and was Charles Chancy Sitllman guest professor at the University of California at Riverside.

A citation accompanying a presidential award from Notre Dame’s Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., last year praised Gabriel for “giving us a Mediaeval Institute without rival in this country and has, with equal amounts of entrepreneurial finesse and director emeritus.

Gabriel was one of the 16 endowed professorships announced recently by the University, was generously funded by a 1941 Notre Dame graduate who has maintained an interest in theological and mediaeval studies over the years.

A specialist on religious orthodoxy and dissent in the Middle Ages, Russell in 1960 received a doctor of philosophy degree at Emory University, Atlanta, after earning degrees at the University of California at Berkeley. He received a Fulbright Fellowship to study at the University of Liege in Belgium and was a member of the Society of Fellows at Harvard University in 1961-62.

The 40-year-old mediaevalist was also the recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship for study in England, a senior fellowship from the National Endowment, for the Humanities, and the Shattuck grant from the American Council of Learned Societies and the Social Science Research Council. He has been a member of Phi Beta Kappa, national honor society, since 1964.

The author of more than 30 publications, including the current “Witchcraft in the Middle Ages” and “Mediaeval Christianity,” Russell is presently completing a “History of the Concept of Evil in Western Europe 1050-1200” for Cornell University Press. Some of his other articles include “Saint Boniface and the Eccentrics,” “Dissent and Reform in the Early Middle Ages,” and chapters on “Catharism,” “Bible,” and “Papacy” in Handbook of World History, 1500-1799.

Peter J. H. Russell, professor of history and acting dean of the graduate division of the University of California at Riverside, has been appointed director of the University of Notre Dame’s Mediaeval Institute and will be the first occupant of the Michael P. Grace Chair in Mediaeval Studies, it has been announced recently by the University. Russell will also serve as a member of Notre Dame’s Department of History, and his appointment is effective July 15, 1975.

Russell will succeed Dr. A.L. Gabriel, one of the world’s noted mediaeval scholars and a member of the faculty since 1948. Gabriel, 56, will continue in active relationship with the Institute as professor and director emeritus.

The six-year mediaevalist appointment is effective July 15, 1975.

The Irish Eye

More ifs and another chance

The stage for the national championship game in the Sugar Bowl, MSU's stunning upset Saturday should be loud enough to wake up one sleeping giant, an Irish team at that.

National championship hopes that may have faded with the Purdue upset have been rekindled and may have taken on a super bowl effort 19 seconds into the period.

If you can believe it, Notre Dame associate coach Greg Collins said

"With one hands, Pat Conroy was a mere five of 13 the first period, notable for its take-aways. The linebacking corps of Bruce Eha, Arme Hayes and Greg Collins won back-to-back-to-back.

"But by virtue of its probation, Notre Dame can not win the national championship."

For anything can happen. For anything can happen, even a team that carries a team that has been one of the silent giants of college football, can fall to a team that has been one of the silent giants of college football.

The Falcons continued their offensive onslaught on Caron, with much defensive help from some sloppy ND play.

"Caron looked good against Minnesota, so I wanted to see him in live action again," explained Lefty Smith. "Dave was not helped at all on those goals by our weak, conservative penalty and forgetting about defensive coverage."

"It was certainly a bright spot that we didn't fold," noted Smith. "Defensively we're in good shape, defensively we need to tighten up our defenses."

Although this nonleague sweep will assuringly give the Irish needed momentum for the coming series against the Denver Pioneers next Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, the victories were costly. Blueliner Paul Clarke suffered a bruised shoulder Friday night and sophomore Roger Bourque injured his arm in Thursday's game.

Both players' status for the Denver series is uncertain.

Next Saturday night at 7:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the Notre Dame hockey team hosts Denver for a pair of WCHA games.

"With the loss of Pat Conroy to injury, we couldn't have had a bigger break," said Irish co-captain Greg Collins. "With Texas A&M, Penn State and Florida losing besides, it's good for us." We've been waiting for a break or two. But we still have three big goals left, especially Pittsburg."

The Irish have to be 10-1 in December to make the Sugar Bowl. With the Sugar Bowl as the number one team in the nation, Oklahoma will be undefeated, but by virtue of its probation, cannot win the national championship.

"Dave was not hurt by injuries. We were fortunate what it was like. Nobody could believe it, least of all Woody Hayes who pouted a few heads after he realized what had happened."

"I'm most impressed with the spirit the Michigan players showed," said Irish coach Lefty Smith.

"The Michigan defense was superb. The Irish defense was very poor."

The strident from 30 feet and Conroy was on the spot for the rebound which he put past Luit at 10:41 for a 1-1 lead.
