NORML conference claims 'Pot' laws detrimental

by Roy Eckert
Special to the Observer

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Highlighting the third annual conference of people on the subject of exploitation of the black athlete in the Library Lounge on Monday, Nov. 18, NORML Director Keith Stroup said that existing marijuana laws are detrimental to both society and the individual.

"Last year in this country more than 30,000 persons were arrested for marijuana offenses," Stroup said. "The law enforcement costs to the taxpayer may approach $600 million annually. And the personal costs in terms of wrecked lives and lost jobs are impossible to calculate."

Stroup's speech welcoming some 250 guests at the 3-day conference here was this past weekend from NORML chapters from across the country analyzed the goals of NORML. He expressed the hope that the conference would "host some new ideas, a common sense thinking, and honesty" into the question of marijuana laws.

He cited that 130 millions Americans smoke marijuana regularly. He cited current enforcement efforts which list arrests for marijuana laws as accounting for 86% of all drug arrests. In addition, marijuana arrests jumped 47% in 1972 over the previous years.

Stroup referred to column Ann Landers, Attorney General William Saxbe, and National Review Editor William F. Buckley, all of whom favor liberalizing marijuana laws.

"Perhaps William F. Buckley summed it up simplest when he observed, 'Pot is harmful, but people shouldn't go to jail for smoking it,'" Stroup said.

Criminal penalties failed

The keynote address of the conference was given by Dr. Robert DuPont, the chief White House spokesman on drug abuse.

"The criminal penalties have clearly failed to prevent widespread use of marijuana," DuPont said. DuPont believes that criminal laws against the use of marijuana are unjustified. He emphasized that this stand did not indicate a change from the Ford Administration's policy.

To re-inforce that statement, DuPont stated that society should legalize marijuana use and possible immunological defects.

DuPont explained that the active ingredient in marijuana, delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol, travels through the bloodstream and concentrates in fatty areas of the body.

"This means, unfortunately, not just the hips and areas we normally associate with being overweight," he said, "but the more significant fatty areas in the vital organs, including the brain."

Once in the liver, the active marijuana ingredient may affect such cellular mechanisms as the breakdown of amino acids to toxic acids, such as DNA.

DuPont said, "Although the conclusive evidence of its effect on human health is questionable, the result may be a reduction in the capacity of the body to fight infection and producing possible genetic mutations as well."

Edward claims black athlete exploited

By Fred Herbst
Staff Reporter

Professor of Sociology Harry Edwards addressed a group of approximately 40 people on the subject of exploitation of the black athlete on Friday evening.

"The black athlete is exploited on the level of the individual," he said according to Edwards. "The black athlete is exploited in terms of both the individual and as an 'agent of oppression.'"

According to Edwards, the black athlete is exploited on the level of the individual since he is led to believe he can achieve as much as a white athlete who obtains an equal amount of success. "Even after success in sport, he is often exploited until he realizes that all the valuable attributes to whites aren't available to him," said Edwards.

The Professor pointed out that "when the black collegiate athlete graduates, he doesn't have the same opportunities as the white athlete since the social structure." As an example, Edwards stated that influential alumni normally give jobs to outstanding white athletes while this is seldom done in the case of the black athlete.

Edwards, the author of Revolt of the Black Athlete and Society of Sport, also discussed the fringe benefits available to white athletes such as television commercials. These opportunities rarely are open to black athletes since the black athlete has to work so hard to identify with a black role. "The black athlete pays the same or more dues than the white athlete, but he can't expect the same rewards in terms of money and opportunity," said Edwards.

American Edwards also claimed that the black athlete is used as an "agent of oppression" that he is used by society to reflect a stereotyped role that all blacks should follow.

"Sports reflect the prevailing system of values in a society," said Edwards.

During his talk, Edwards went on to say that the prevailing values in our society are those of fair play, patriotism, hard work, competitiveness and numerous other 'cultural fictions.'

In our society, Edwards says that a successful athlete projects and reinforces the "cultural fictions" which the athlete who supposedly loses due to his failure to uphold one of the "cultural fictions."

Erratum

The story on the world hunger panel in Friday's Observer contained two errors. The average annual runoff of water throughout the world is 100 million cubic kilometers, not kilograms. Secondly, there has been an increase of over 100 percent, not 10 percent, in areas classified as deserts.

CAP distributes 300 course cards

by Kathy Mills

Approximately 300 course cards, for popular courses were obtained through the Committee on Academic Progress, according to Gerhard Niemeyer, chairman of the CAP. "There are about 170 students in the program," Niemeyer explained. "and every student can have several cards.

The courses for which the CAP members either used or card were those that "fill up quickly with majors," as Niemeyer stressed. However, he stressed that admitting CAP students into these popular courses is "not an unlimited process."

"We ask the departments exactly how many cards they are willing to give to the CAP," added Niemeyer. "It may be live for one course, and three for another. These cards are then distributed among the CAP members, according to classes. With this arrangement, students in the CAP can preregister before official preregistration." Niemeyer remarked that this type of arrangement is basically the same as that for preregistration for majors, whereby students are admitted into courses necessary for their majors before everyone else.

Niemeyer explained that the treatment accorded to the CAP students could not be termed "preferential" unless the major's program was also called "preferential."

In describing the type of student accepted into the Committee for Academic Progress, Niemeyer said that the typical CAP student is one who shows "great promise as a student, and, while he has a goal, he is not too clear in his goal, and he needs counseling."

He went on to say that a student with a 3.7 average would not be accepted if he has no problems, but a student who has mediocre grades and who shows promise and purpose could be helped through the CAP.

Niemeyer termed the CAP "mainly a facility for help," and stressed that preregistration for CAP students before official preregistration is one way that the CAP aids students with special problems.

Notre Dame Heart Fund hopes for success in this Saturday's fund raising campaign

by Mary Fran Hayes

"The Notre Dame Heart Fund hopes that this Saturday's campaign will be more successful than their last campaign of Sept. 28," stated the chairman of the Notre Dame Heart Fund Campaign, Senior Jim Meehan. The Sept. 28 Purdue-Notre Dame game was the first time the North Central Indiana Area American Heart Association had solicited on a football Saturday. That campaign netted $800, which was more than Meehan had anticipated.

Because of this unexpected success, the Heart Fund will campaign again, this Saturday from 10:30 a.m. until the kickoff of the Air Force-Notre Dame game.

Twenty-one student volunteers solicited at the Purdue game and Meehan is disappointed because fewer have volunteered for Saturday. Because of the need for volunteers, Meehan has scheduled an organizational meeting for Thurs., Nov. 21 at 6 p.m.

Nevertheless, Meehan anticipates this campaign to be more successful than the last because the soliciting for the Purdue game had to be done off-campus because of a stadium policy whereas Saturday's campaigning will be done on campus. Meehan stated that "due to the work and cooperation of Father David Schlaver, Director of Student Activities the Heart Fund has permission to solicit this Saturday on the campus itself."

The Notre Dame Heart Fund's primary slogan is "Notre Dame is No. 1 and so is heart disease." Saturday's campaign will be sponsored by the First National Bank and station WBTB, sponsors of the previous campaign. Meehan added that Notre Dame's Athletic Department has been extremely helpful with publicity.

Options for DC life discussed

By Jim Donahue Staff Reporter

Editor's note: This article is the first part of a two part series which will appear in the next issue. It attempts to offer several options for off-campus life in the University area. It is written primarily from the point of view of a student who will be moving into campus housing in the fall. This article is a result of my research and conversations with local residents, student leaders, and members of the university administration.

A university district, a community of student housing, bookstores, bars, shops, and restaurants is common to many colleges. For example, the University of South Bend, but what shape will Notre Dame off-campus life take? The Off-Campus Administration is wrestling with this question in the face of a rising crime rate and student resident friction.

An October 22 Off-Campus Administration policy statement asks: "Will we encourage an apartment complex development in preference to family unit dwellings, devote our attention to both, or concentrate on some third alternative?"

"Are we to concentrate on development of more attractive and suitable accommodations for working class families two event that they live both in their male colleagues, either concerned or receive or are forced to live off-campus?"

"Will the University encourage the development of a university district, which has become such a common feature of American College life, or are we to attempt to dispense with student concentrations in response to public pressure?"

The statement, directed to the Office of Student Affairs, stresses the need to establish priorities for off-campus housing.

A present situation

Most of the 1860 undergraduates living off-campus reside in complexes where long-time South Bend residents live. The absence of a university district causes a conflict of life styles.

"The primary problems arise through the differing lifestyles and expectations of the students and residents," said Tom Wilson, assistant director of off-campus housing. "The complaints from residents deal with the problems of litter and noise." Wilson said these were also cited frictions between student parties and student bars.

Further, Thomas Tallarida, director of off-campus housing, also cited frictions between student and low-income families. "Proprietors prefer to rent their homes to students since the rent received is higher than what they would receive if property is rented to low-income families," he said.

Tallarida said these problems are most visible in section ten of South Bend. "One-third of our students live in the area bounded by Madison, Hill, Edison and Rockne streets."

Section 10's crime rate is among the highest with three robberies and 25 residence robberies reported in 1974. Tallarida outlined options for university policy concerning off-campus life.

Restrict where students live

The Director of Off-Campus Housing had his office could restrict students from living in section ten. "This isn't a practical solution. The basic things thieves are after are student commodities," he emphasized. "Thus, the crime rate will follow the students wherever they go."

Police crime reports support Tallarida's statements. There were 28 robberies and 180 burglaries during October. Section six is bounded roughly by Portage Ave., Lincolnway West, and Diamond Ave.

A second option suggested by Tallarida involves constructing apartment complexes close to campus. Tallarida said the university could lease out land to private contractors for development.

"But those people would have to depend on the university for their life style. "Would housing complexes provide a different type of life style option?" Tallarida questions.

Tallarida admitted housing complexes would be preferred by women, who are more vulnerable to crime. Over half of the 20 women currently living off-campus reside in the Notre Dame Apartments. This figure excludes women students from South Bend living at home.

New residence hall

The building of a new residence hall is a third option open to the University. "Notre Dame will always be a university that goes contrary to the trend," said Tallarida. "While other universities are closing halls and turning them into offices, demand for housing here remains constant."

A university district would be made to reduce competition for off-campus housing, stressed Tallarida. "Then supply will grow and students will be in a better position to bargain. We could establish a minimum Notre Dame community and students would not live as isolated individuals as they are now."

Tallarida felt a university district would be made to reduce competition for off-campus housing, stressed Tallarida. "Then supply will grow and students will be in a better position to bargain. We could establish a minimum Notre Dame community and students would not live as isolated individuals as they are now."

"A university community doesn't hamper the life style of the community at large," he said. "Force stations are separate from the rest of the community, residents have no fear of student life styles affecting their own."

A university district would clearly benefit low-income families according to Tallarida. With less demand for student housing, landlords would be forced to rent to families and lower rent rates.

ND law students propose change in rape law

By Maureen Flynn Staff Reporter

Members of the Notre Dame Law Students Association have been discussing the possibility of suggesting new state令人惊讶的 standards for rape cases. Some of the students have been working behind the scenes to create a bill which the Indiana Criminal Law Study Commission in South Bend last week. At the meeting, the group presented its proposal in with the Women's Committee on Sex Offenses of South Bend. Georgia Lute, first year law student and head of the project, and second year law student Jerry Frese explained the proposal to the committee. The proposal has been discussed at various stage and in with the committee both verbally and in writing.

According to Frese and Lute, both the present law and that proposed under the new Indiana penal code contain the phrase "against her will and consent will remain an affirmative defense to the guilt of sexual misconduct." The phrase "not included in either the present or the new code."

"The phrase is used in the new section on sexual offense cases. The phrase is also suggested in the American Law Association's principles on sexual offense. It's difficult to change thinking like that."

"It's unfortunate," said Frese. "But it is a very traditional, Victorian notion."

The Legislative Research Service group is composed of Notre Dame law students who conduct research for legislators and non-legislative organizations. Frese commented on the possibility of the suggestions being accepted by the committee. "Probably the threats of force clause will be accepted, and the suggestion on gradation has a pretty good chance. The spouse exclusion clause may still contain the consent clause."

"This is the critical point," added Lutes. "It's the old 'good woman, bad woman' syndrome. It's difficult to change thinking like that."

"It's unfortunate," said Frese. "But it is a very traditional, Victorian notion."

the observer
Dear Editor,

Concerned students everywhere have become increasingly alarmed that the active role the Central Intelligence Agency now plays in world affairs. Students from Japan, Greece, Portugal, South Korea, South Vietnam, and Latin America have all voiced their strong disapproval of the CIA's activities in their countries. They've seen what the CIA has done to other countries of their size. They've seen what China the CIA has financed and organized the flight of Pigs fascist against the people of Cuba. They are aware of the CIA's direct intervention in Guatemala in 1954 when the government's president was deposed and replaced by a puppet, for reason given here at Notre Dame property. They've seen how China cooperation with the big bosses of I.T. brought about the bloody fascist coup on the people of Chile. They are aware of CIA activities in countries that are on the verge of political, economic, and social chaos. So long as there are activities in the name of patriotism they cannot do so as long as the country is a political satellite of the "protecting U.S. investments."

Concerned students everywhere who want their countries to take their own paths to develop here at Notre Dame? These type of questions have got to be asked by all Notre Dame students who dare to call themselves "Christians." Notre Dame students of the past have illustrated their concern for Christian ideals and awareness of oppressed peoples throughout the world by demonstrating and organizing marches for various causes, e.g., against the Viet Nam war, in public, on campus, food crisis, CIA recruitment, Cambodian invasion, and students' task must now be to start asking what are the actions of the CIA at this University? Is Notre Dame policy in line with Christian values? Are we a school and a people allied with the majority of suffering people of this world or are we connected to a onry's cats who have all the wealth and share nothing? A revealing article appeared in the Observer a while back that pointed to the fact that only two percent of the Notre Dame Student Body comes from U.S. families of working-class origin. Does the N.D. Admissions Office's statistic truth or lie? Does the rich people can be Catholic and Christian? Let's let the big people here at Notre Dame know that we are not the apathetic and ignorant people of the past that you thought we were. Voice your disapproval and let them know your feelings.

The Central Intelligence Agency will be on campus today under the Golden Dome for all those concerned. And they will be here again in the Spring semester on February 28th.

Sincerely,

James P. Danby

Dear Editor,

To all those misguided souls who read Ms. Magazine and have fallen in for the fraud and false promises of the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment," I quote Mrs. J.B. Patton's letter to Gloria Steinem. Mrs. Patton's letter appeared in the August, 1974 issue of Ms. Magazine's (635 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10022).

I am the acknowledged spokesman leading the proponents for the passage of ERA. I am also the editor of Ms. Magazine.

women, here attacking the one organization which has given the moniker to the movement. As an Episcopalian, I am am much disenchanted to see that I have been told that the opportunity have chosen to accept every advantage and demand more, and defy every discipline."

As an Episcopalian, I am absolutely horrified to read in Ms. Magazine's published remarks on the Blessed Virgin Mary. America's multitude of religions have been taught by the Church that the breeding is critical in public of any nation's religion. Your magazine's remarks (by someone's printed place) is a criticism of every person on its staff outside social acceptability:

It is odd, one might remark parenthetically, to see women, who rail against the lack of appreciation, through history, of instincts of Americans. It is much furor agitation by minority groups and radical women about the discrimination which they feel they suffer. It is time that they start to ask what is the situation in the United States, ours is a situation here, and then to ask why are they here? After all, is the Catholic Church?

Sincerely,

Mrs. John R. Fawcett, Jr.

Dear Editor:

When one is trying to make a point it is strategically sound to offer a concrete illustration. If a pertinent example is not available from one's own experience it is not necessarily wrong to invent a plausible one for the sake of rhetorical effect. But if the name of an actual member of the community is emblazoned in the invention, the result may be either flagrantly or calumny.

The conversation reported in some detail in the column of Dave Sonneg in The Observer for November, is entirely fictional. I believe that most of the more than 900 students on campus who have been (or are) members of the classes for which I am responsible would regard this fantasy as calumny."

Sincerely,

James P. Danby

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A citizens' tax group said Sunday it has documents proving the IRS had been using a secret intelligence 'file' on 11,000 potential White House enemies from 1969-1973, and that there is no assurance these files have yet been destroyed.

Citing previously secret IRS documents it obtained after a year's legal battle, the group said it had 44,000 names and 8,000 organizations targeted for tax investigations by the IRS and intended to be destroyed in 1969 by the Nixon White House.

It named 99 organizations on the IRS target list, including the National Council of Churches, the Americans for Democratic Action, the Urban League, the Black United Fund, the Church of Scientology and the Jewish Chaplaincy.

Former presidential counsel John D. Ehrlichman testified to the existence of a politically-motivated IRS investigative report during his appearance before the Senate Watergate committee in 1973.

IRS commissioner Donald Alexander subsequently said the IRS would confine its special investigations to tax evaders and tax resisters. He dissolved the "Special Services Staff" that compiled the complied the IRS clients' file and one of the IRS documents deposed Sunday said all but legitimate tax-case files would be destroyed.

The Public Citizen's Tax Research Reform Group, which released Sunday's report, said the IRS's own audits indicated all but 22 per cent of the 11,468 intelligence files should have been destroyed after an IRS investigation of the group. The group tried to find out whether they had been.

"In a Nov. 8, 1974, response to a recent tax group inquiry as to the disposition of the old Special Services Staff files, the Justice Department's chief litigation attorney stated that it would be inappropriate to reply to this request in the context of the present action."

The tax group said it had used the Freedom of Information Act and the threat of lawsuit to obtain 41 official IRS documents on the secret tax files, and had received them only after a year of trying.

It said the documents show that top IRS officials met on July 2, 1969, in response to White House pressure to begin investigating certain "suspect" tax entities, "and decided to set up a special task force which would collect information, establish files and key-punch the information so that the IRS data processing division could use it."

"The task force was to be an 'intelligence gathering' operation. Besides tax information, the task force would collect data on each organization's 'philosophy, its activities, its attitude, its size and its impact on the general public.'"

It said one IRS memo described the objective as "a massive central intelligence file" and another cautioned, 'we do not want the news media to be alerted to what we are attempting...because the disclosure of such information might embarrass the administration.'
CCUM termed great success

by Robert Jacques
Staff Reporter

Mgr. John Egan, the Chairman of the Catholic Committee on Urban Ministry, referred to last week's four-day national meeting of CCUM at the Center for Continuing Education as "a great success." He added that, "All the plans were well beyond my best hopes."

The conference, running from Nov. 18-21, attracted 350 social action leaders from 125 U.S. and Canadian cities. All five days were filled with seminars and discussions concerned with economic power and injustice in America today.

The Committee is a support network of Catholic priests and religious and lay people involved in the social ministry. The goals of the organization are to create a more humane world and to achieve justice, freedom, and peace in the U.S. and abroad. The group's tools include the annual meeting, either in seminars and summer institutes where ideas and assistance are shared. The conference centered its attention on the American economic system with the question, "Is the system reformable?" Some of the many problems the group cited as needing solutions include "misdistribution of income, power, and wealth," "social disorder, human suffering, political irresponsibility, and moral confusion."

With the goal of enabling the participants to clarify their own questions and to understand their experiences concerning economic power and injustice, five objectives were established:

- To elucidate the relationship between the U.S. economic system and daily life both in America and abroad.
- To enable Catholic social action people to relate their work and direct their efforts toward national and world reform for peace and justice.
- To develop new approaches to reform and to disseminate information on economic issues to church members.
- To enable participants to assume positions of leadership in the evaluation of justice and injustice in American society.
- To give new direction to CCUM, its board and its advisers in order to meet the concerns and priorities of members working in the field.

The accomplishment of the first four goals and the promise of the fifth, Egan said, was due to the diverse and large national representation at the conference.

There were people from thirty-two states, seventy-four U.S. dioceses, and six Canadian dioceses present. The male-female ratio was fifty-fifty. Egan added that "it was by no means adequate."

A large number of national and regional leaders were present at the conference to lead the discussion and seminar groups. Included were Dr. Richard Burnet, the Co-Director of the Institute for Policy Studies, Washington, D.C., Dr. Lyle Schertz, deputy administrator of the Catholic Research Service of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, and others. Many archdiocesan and regional program directors were also speakers and participants.

The fifth goal of the conference, Egan explained, "can be measured only in the future because it concerns implementation of the material exchanged at the meeting on the local and state levels."

Nixon's medical status may prevent testimony

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — Herbert J. Miller, Jr., Richard Nixon's attorney, reportedly visited the former president here last week to see if he would submit to examination by a court-appointed medical panel.

Miller told U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica he would report Nixon's response to the Washington court by Tuesday.

The former president's answer could play a major role in the outcome of the Watergate coverup trial. The physical examination would determine whether Nixon is well enough to give testimony, either in seminars and summer institutes where ideas and assistance are shared.

Nixon's doctors who treated him at Long Beach Memorial Hospital said last week such an examination could prove stressful and raise Nixon's blood pressure.

Nixon left the hospital last Thursday after a 23-day stay and at that time his physician, Dr. John Lungren, said he suffered from "tabelle hypertension," or fluctuating blood pressure.

He said the former president's blood pressure shot up even with non-physical stress, such as conversation and problem solving.

He said the planned medical check-up was not necessary and would be "stressful situation"

NDicers split with Denver

by Bob Kissel

When the Notre Dame icecers want to play hockey, they can skate with any team in the WCHA. But when they want to play in a game, they must show. Notre Dame played Saturday night winning 5-3, but did not look dominant, losing 7-4.

In Saturday's 5-2 win, the Irish came out flying, knowing the Denver series to be crucial to their league standing. The team's forward-thinking and back-checking efforts paid off at 2:01 of the first period when Brian Walsh hit his first of three goals in the opening game. The play on Walsh's goal started deep in ND's own zone. Paul Clarke broke out from his net and passed to Alex Pirus at his blue line. Pirus made a nifty move around a Denver defender, passed the puck into Denver's zone, and took a good backhand on the Denver goaltender, Bob Lieg. When Lieg did not control the rebound, Duke Walsh was there to flip the puck home for the 1-0 lead.

After Walsh's goal, play slowed down considerably, with both teams alternating offensive rushes. Denver scored the answer at 14:41 on a goal by Bob Pazzelli with 1:26 left on the clock. Brian Walsh hit his second goal as a result of persistent fore-checking by Clark Hamilton and good positioning by Alex Pirus. Pirus pulled the string from just inside the right circle and Walsh flipped the puck off the rebound for his second goal of the game. Walsh and Pirus start two on one break against Denver Saturday night. The Irish split with the Pioneers winning 5-3 Saturday and dropping a 7-4 decision Sunday afternoon.

"Denver played good fundamental hockey," added Smith. "Our kids played hard up to the very end, I hope they continue next week with the same attitude to go out and do the job." The Irish are now 24-4 in the WCHA, (4-4 overall) which puts them in seventh place. Next weekend the Irish travel to Colorado country--Grand Forks--to play the Fighting Sioux of North Dakota for a two game WCHA series.

quarter to win. I am very proud of our team and the way they came back to beat a darn good football team.

"Wayne Bullock gave a great performance playing hurt today. He scored two goals and just bleeds his yardage. He gets where it isn't. He hurt his shoulder during the game but kept coming back to get in that final drive."

"I was hurt and the coaches didn't want me to go back in," said Bullock, "but I wanted to stay out there and get the win. The offensive line was just great today, and we finally scored a few points. That's how I was able to get back in and pick up that yardage in the fourth quarter."

But as all good coaches know, the Irish are grateful for that return. But these close games are getting to be too much.

"Two weeks ago I told the team they were definitely causing me some headaches," he said. "Today I told them they're going to make a replacement for Kojak."

Bullock stars; Irish squeak by Pitt

Fourth quarter touchdown plunge by Clements erases 10-7 Pittsburgh lead

By Greg Corgan
Sports Editor

The script was the same. And again, the ending was a happy one. Notre Dame ended its season on a happy note. But if it seems that Irish fans have seen this show months before in games against teams that did not fail to win, it should be understood by now that that hole has not been filled in any other way.

In TV jargon, Saturday’s big game against the Pittsburgh Panthers was an All-America game. It was passed for Michigan State, take four; Notre Dame, take two. And, none would win an Emmy.

With 374 total yards and a typically superlative effort by the Notre Dame defense in allowing 113 total yards, the ND fans took out a scorecard of the damage. Like Michigan State, Rice and Navy, the Irish were victims of their own mistakes. In this case, a 14-10 victory may not change the Irish outcome but it does cause AP’s and UPI’s to plummet.

Unfortunately head coach and executive producer Ara Parseghian had been in the best of form this week. Bullock always seems to get it for the Irish.

Extra Points

"Wayne the Train"

Thy black cylindrical body, golden brass and silvery steel
Thy wheels beating against the parapets and connecting rods,
Gyrating, shuddering at the sides.
Thy metrical, now swelling and now tapering
Thy, in distance.
Thy great protruding head-light fix’d in front.
Thy fenders, no doubt humming-vapors, tinged with delicate purple.
Thy knitted frame, thy springs and valves, the tremulous
Twitching of thy wheels.
Thy train of cars behind, obedient, merly following.
Through jale or calm, now swift, now slack, yet steadily
They go.

Type of the modern—emblem of motion and power—pulse
Of the continent.

Wait Whitman, “To a Locomotive in Winter”

There is something about Wayne Bullock carrying a football that inspires the throw. He has an explosive, as he methodically drives for a first down, as he drags defenders for an extra yard. Wayne “The Train” displays a certain style, a certain rhythm, a certain dramatic effect. In fact, at 6’1”, 235 lbs., with his long churning, his head down, and both arms around the ball, he is simply awesome.

Saturday against Pittsburgh, on the cold, slippery turf of Notre Dame Stadium, “The Train” ran wild. He rushed for 124 yards in 25 attempts. Playing with a bruised shoulder and a bad ankle, he accounted for 28 carries and three passes for 26 yards. On Notre Dame’s winning drive, he carried the ball five times for 32 yards while converting on fourth-and-two and third-and-six situations.

He ran on an angle, with a determined offensive afternoon, was consistent with his play all season. As Pittsburgh found the Irish defense didn’t loosen for 35 yards on the previous play.

As it turned out, the extra point was not enough. Quarterback Bob Medwid, replacing the injured Bill Daniels, who sustained a knee injury early in the third quarter, his offensive line, Wayne Bullock, always seems to get it for the Irish.

Irish cagers open season with 92-83 exhibition win

By Bill Delaney

Digger Phelps and his Irish cagers got their college basketball season on a happy note Friday night with 92-83 exhibition win over the Chicago Bulls in front of a crowd of 4,100 at the ACC. Although the game was not an exhibition, this first performance by Phelps’ "youngster" Irish left him pleasantly surprised.

"We were definitely pleased with the kids effort tonight," said a happy Phelps after the game. "Our press and four-corner stall in the second half really worked well, and against a team that had the size to their advantage, I think we did rather well.

Phelps started the players he has been working on with Wright Clay and Ray Martin were the guards, Billy Paterno and Adrian. Danny Carter, the forwards, and Tony Knight’s team. Phelps was not happy with the 28 minutes and even though he wasn’t getting all the rebounds he got seven and made some things happen in the offense. Clay, Notre Dame’s other co-captain, had taken over with Gary Brook’s offensive spot, and it was not surprising he had six rebounds in 33 minutes for the Irish.

Dwight is going to try to fill Broke’s role, and if he can do it, he’ll give us a scoring as well as rebounding that will help the Irish. Our big concern is rebounding, and I was impressed with Peter’s work," said Phelps of his senior co-captain. "He played 28 minutes and even though he wasn’t getting all the rebounds he got seven and made some things happen in the offense. Clay, Notre Dame’s other co-captain, had taken over with Gary Brook’s offensive spot, and it was not surprising he had six rebounds in 33 minutes for the Irish.

The Irish came out in the second half with their full court press, forcing the Athletes into several turnovers. Daniele and Paterno put Notre Dame ahead with their defense and Broke’s jumper from the top of the key made the score 54-44. Irish.

With 4:45 left in the game, Wayne Bullock hopped the rebound basket and put the Irish up 65-48. Irish.
