President Gerald R. Ford will meet with several Midwest governors and about 45 collegiate officials in his visit here to Notre Dame Monday.

Campus groups considering action to display opposition

By Pat Hamilton

Two campus groups are considering the possibility of taking some kind of action to make President Ford aware of their opposition to domestic and foreign policies, while Ford is on campus Monday. Rules for any possible demonstrations outside the ACC will be established today according to Secret Service sources.

Prof. Joseph Duffy of the English Department said he and a group of about five other people are discussing the possibility of a protest such as "perhaps handing out leaflets or suggesting that students and faculty not sit down." He stressed that nothing would be decided until the weekend.

Fr. Thomas Stella, director of volunteer services, said that if any action is taken it would not be disruptive and would respect the rules about no demonstrations inside the Academic Convocation. "I explained that he had monitored the possibility of action unadvertised to some administrators but said nothing no member of the group has written to Fr. Hesburgh objecting to the invitation," Fr. Hesburgh is handling the situation in the way he thinks "best, in order to perhaps effect a change in Ford's policies," Stella said, "and we do not want to disrupt Hesburgh's line of communication with the administration but we do at least want to state our position on Ford's policies on matters like the war in South Vietnam and the treatment of the poor in America."

Another group, organized by senior Timothy Deeming "personally delighted he is coming so we can give him a message," student body President Pat McLaughlin, Ed Byrne, president-elect and St. Mary's student government leaders. All declined to endorse his position but O'Brien felt their support was "not really needed."

Sr. Madonna Kalenchenko, assistant professor of American Studies, who is not currently linked with either group, objected to the visit on the grounds that this visit looks like it may turn out to be an exploitation of the University by Ford for political purposes.

She pointed especially to the limit on demonstrations themselves to comment on Hesburgh's invitation since she "does not know the background." A Secret Service source with the presidential advance party said that a decision on procedures for possible demonstrations outside the arena would be decided today. At some other presidential appearances the Secret Service has provided a special message from student body President Pat McLaughlin, Ed Byrne, president-elect and St. Mary's student government leaders. All declined to endorse his position but O'Brien felt their support was "not really needed."

The ACC network will cover all events on the President's schedule, including the address in the ACC, and his meeting with student leaders and the ACC. Although none of the events will be broadcast live, the film will be distributed for national news networks following Monday night.

The ABC network will have at least two national television networks. ABC and CBS have plans to release film footage of the visit for nationwide broadcast.

While several groups are planning protest, other preparations are being made for President Ford's upcoming visit to ND. These signs will be used in setting up the President's route.

Ford to meet governors, college officials Monday

by Jim Eder

Indiana Governor Otis Bowen will join governors from four other Midwest and Middle Atlantic states in attending a working dinner with President Ford on the Notre Dame campus Monday evening. Governors William G. Milliken (R-Mich.), Julian Carroll (D-Ky.), Mills E. Godwin, Jr. (R-Va.), and Arch A. Moore, Jr. (D-W.Va.) will also meet with Ford. Governor Marvin Mandel (D-Md.) and James Rhodes (R-Ohio) were also invited by the White House but have not confirmed their attendance.

The University has invited 45 university and college presidents from the Midwest to meet with Ford. Invitations were extended by telephone to all the Indiana colleges, including the University of Notre Dame, and the University of Chicago. A complete list of confirmations will not be available until noon today, according to Assistant Press Secretary Ron Nessam.

Administration officials attending the luncheon will include Nessam, Robert Hartmann, counsellor to the President; Richard Cheney, deputy assistant to the President; Secretaries of Federal Energy Administration; James M. Cannon, executive director for the President; and for domestic affairs; Max L. Friedersdorf, assistant to the President for legislative affairs; Jack Haskins and Gerald Varner, deputy press secretaries to the President, and Robert Mead, Lewinsky advisor to the President.

At 6 p.m. the President will hold a press conference in the auditorium of the Center for Continuing Education.

Television coverage

Ford's visit to the campus of St. Patrick's Day will be covered by at least two of the national television networks. ABC and CBS confirmed plans to release film footage of the visit for nationwide broadcast.

The network will cover all events on the President's schedule, including the address in the ACC, and the meeting with student leaders and the ACC. Although none of the events will be broadcast live, the film will be distributed for national news networks following Monday night.

CBS has not yet decided whether or not any portion of Ford's visit to the Notre Dame community will be carried live. Film footage will, however, be available for broadcast by National Broadcasting Co. and NBC.

NBC in New York has not yet confirmed plans to cover the President's appearance at Notre Dame, but reportedly will be sent to Chicago for broadcast there and possible distribution to other NBC affiliates.

McLaughlin, Byrne decline invitations

by Ken Gernard

The student body president and student body president, declining to attend the luncheon and the ACC. Pat McLaughlin, student body president, and Ed Byrne, student body president-elect, declined invitations yesterday to meet informally with President Gerald Ford during his campus visit on Monday. In a letter to Fr. James Burtchaell, university provost, McLaughlin expressed personal dissatisfaction with the methods used to determine who would meet with the President. According to Richard Conklin, director of Information Services, invitations to the luncheon were sent to a group of faculty and students who "represent the academic aspect of Notre Dame. This group consists of the seven faculty and 32 elected student members of the Student Council, the twelve student members of the College Council, McLaughlin and Byrne, and Joanne Garrett, legislative assistant to St. Mary's."

Explaining his refusal to attend the meeting, McLaughlin stated that it was "a simple, personal refusal, not a political one."

"I turned down the invitation because of the make-up of the list of invitations. I was upset because of who wasn't invited," McLaughlin said. "I think they've separated academics from the rest of Notre Dame, and an awful lot of people were left out."

McLaughlin expressed concern over the criteria for selection of the invitation list. "I don't understand their logic," he said. They said that the visit was an academic affair and so they invited academic people. I'm not slamming those who were invited, but I don't agree with the scope of their definition of 'academic.'"

He indicated that no one should be cut out of the guest list, but that it should have been expanded to include a wider representation of the campus community.

Hersh talks about CIA activities

by Gregg Bangeson

Speaking on issues ranging from the CIA to the Pentagon, New York Times investigative reporter Seymour Hersh presented his viewpoints on several domestic topics in a lecture and question and answer period last night at Washington Hall.

Before an audience of approximately seven-five people, Hersh gave a short non-strucured talk on his latest assignment, the Central Intelligence Agency, as well as the Pentagon and reporting in general. Following this, he entertained questions on these topics for an hour and a half.

Hersh began his talk by giving a brief background sketch. After attending the University of Chicago in the late 1960's, he worked for the Associated Press Chicago news bureau. He then was assigned to A.P. to cover the Pentagon, where he started "to get disillusioned by Vietnam." After this he worked for Sen. Eugene McCarthy's press secretary during McCarthy's unsuccessful 1968 bid for the Presidency. In 1972, he was hired by the New York Times as an investigative reporter, an area he claims "they were weak in at the time."

For the Times, Hersh has four percent of the stories, including his Pulitzer Prize winning articles on the My Lai massacre. Since then he has done investigative articles on Watergate unshuffled bombings of North Vietnam and CIA activities. The focus predominating both the lecture and ensuing question and answer period was the CIA.

"Ever since the domestic spying story broke last December 22, I've come to the conclusion that the moral arrogance of the CIA is very frightening," he said.

"I feel sorry for any historian trying to write a history of Western Europe without taking into account the actions of the CIA. It's impossible, for the role the CIA has played in Europe since World War II is incredible large. And since no one from the CIA is going to let out the whole truth, nobody will know the full extent of their activities for quite some time," he explained.

Hersh characterized most CIA men as "Constitutionalists." "Most CIA guys are very loyal and would not believe in violating the law of their own land," he stated. When questioned why CIA men would then participate in domestic spying if they follow the federal laws, Hersh answered "CIA men are also very loyal to their organization. If they are told the domestic spying they're partaking in will help the nation, then it's alright."

"The domestic spying, Hersh said, has been taking place as early 1967 when the CIA started to keep files on anti-war demonstration leaders. When asked if anyone had anything to do with Vietnam it's always propped up with it."

He explained he became disillusioned with Vietnam following a press conference on an early battle in '68. "After Bob McNamara had just gotten done praising our boys for the great job they were doing, I was informed by somebody who was there that we had over six hundred casualties which would be spread over the week's casualties reports to make us look good. After that, I got increasingly bitter over Vietnam policy," he stated.

Hersh saw "no great lesson in Watergate." "All the people who followed Nixon were selfless people who thought the boss was right," he stated.

He characterized Watergate "plumber" G. Gordon Liddy as a man who "thinks in 1944 and he's in the O.S. shot down behind enemy lines."

John Dean was an "absolute cold-blooded rat who manipulated the press all last April and May to get himself out of trouble-the only trouble was he didn't start early enough."

KEGS OF GREEN REFRESHMENTS

AT A VERY LOW PRICE
Student Government has formally requested that the Office of Student Affairs send a directive to certain halls on the north quad informing them that the purchase of doughnuts from a source other than Student Union is in violation of University regulations.

Brian McGinty, Student Government Judicial Commissioner, said yesterday that he had been asked by the Services Commission to request this restriction.

"Legally, the concession has been purchased by us (Student Government) and it shouldn't be taken away without our approval," McGinty stated.

He cited the University regulation concerning merchandising which requires permission of the Student Union Services Commission in opening a new concession. This passage reads: "Approval of the Student Union Services Commission and the Director of Student Activities is required for the sale of any item on campus, including special concessions granted by the Student Union Services Commission, such as birthday cakes, doughnuts and corsages."

McGinty explained that the Student Union Services Commission operates on a very low budget, making only approximately $95 per year, in order to provide the students as cheaply as possible. This new concession has apparently taken more like a lecturer," Burke added. It wasn't Hesburgh or Burchell who decided to keep this thing manageable, "It's the way the President likes to do it," he added.

Burke explained the selection of guests, saying that "since its an academic convocation, the simplest way of selecting students was by taking students and faculty on the highest academic organizations. It's only logical that the Academic Council and the College Council be represented." He added that, "Making a list is like making a calendar. You're not going to please everybody. There were many demonstrators who felt that the Academic Council, the College Council should have been represented. They were disappointed that Student Government was left out of the mix.

"What Ford likes to do is talk informally to a group of about 50 people. He likes to talk with each individual on a personal level, and if there were any more than 50 people, it wouldn't be informal," Burke said.

He added that he did not intend to disrupt the activities, saying, "I don't want to disturb Ford's visit, because that's the important thing. It's an internal affair and we'll settle it ourselves." Richard Conklin, director of Information Services, explained that the main security measures will be parking and pedestrian control, "such as the bread and butter." Pears stated that the Secret Service deals with the situation if he is on private property. "It's an internal affair and we'll handle the situation," he added.

McLaughlin returned to his enlarged delegation for the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees in Key Biscayne, Florida. Conklin defended the selection of guests for the meeting, "It's impossible to make up a list that's not going to upset somebody. The representative should reflect the character of the university, which is an academic one. Therefore, we chose the members of the best academic organizations of the university."

Legal Aid services outlined

Besides University Referrals, which provides legal advice to Notre Dame students, Legal Aid has six other divisions which serve the community at large.

Cass County

Approximately 25 Notre Dame law students work as volunteer attorneys to lawyers in Cassopolis, Michigan, 20 miles east of the state line.

The program is designed to help those who are impoverished obtain legal counseling and services. Jack Garbo, director of the Cass County Division, explained who is eligible. "We can serve only the "indigent" clients, he said, "under the rules of the local bar association."

"Eventually, we hope to expand our services to include all the working poor, including those in the South Bend area."

Garbo screens each client. He decides that a person can afford a lawyer, he sends the client to a referral agency. If the applicant is "indigent," Garbo hands the case to the program's assignment director, Garbo explains, who in turn decides who will handle the client's case.

"We handle a wide variety of cases," explained Mike Quinn, a member of the program. "People come from all walks of life, and they all have problems that we only handle divorce cases. This is not a routine legal practice. It is a program to help the poor."

Between 100 and 200 cases are handled each semester by law students, aside from gaining in-class practical experience, help lighten the workload of the 16 lawyers, Garbo said, the program is sponsored by the local bar association.

"The program in Cass County is sponsored by the local bar association," Garbo commented. "We've had tremendous support from the community. It is by far the best program of its kind in Michigan, and certainly one of the best in the country."

Although the students are volunteers, they receive one credit for four hours work per week over the course of a year, and two credits for eight hours. "In reality," Garbo said, "the students put in from fifteen to twenty hours per week." These are the same conditions required of all the students who work in Legal Aid. In addition to their clinical work, they must attend at least five seminars sponsored by Legal Aid in order to receive the credits.

Both Quinn and Garbo emphasized the value of the program aside from a purely charitable viewpoint. "The courtroom experience is a very real situation," Quinn reflected. "It's practical rather than theoretical learning."

Labor Division

Directed by Terry Bowersock, four law students are active as aids to two full time attorneys in Berrien Springs, Michigan, about 15 miles northwest of Niles.

"Right now most of our work is handling bail for the numerous migrant workers in the area," explained Bowersock. "Eventually, however, we hope to expand our services to include all the working poor, including those in the South Bend area."

The students help migrant workers when they run into trouble with the law, specifically in regards to the numerous migrant workers in the area. "Many of these people are from the south west part of the country and come in the pick grapes and the many vegetables raised in this area," Bowersock stated. "We do field work, informing the workers of their rights, and helping them when they are at odds with the farmers." There are approximately 200 labor cases in the Berrien Springs area.

The program also deals with workers refusing to pay bonuses after hire, safety standards and minimum wage work and criminal involving minors.

Bowersock hopes to get involved with civil rights cases also. "I talked recently with Prof. Howard Flickstein, Director of the Center for Civil Rights."

Bowersock stated, "and we hope to work in connection with the Center in the future."

Post-Conviction Remedies

This division was the original work around which the Legal Aid and Defender Association grew since its inception in the fall of 1961. Seven students provide legal research and advice for those who are beyond the trial stage or whose case calls for an appeal.

"Our work is mainly with prisoners in the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City," stated Tom McGill, director of the division. "In addition, we make trips to Pendleton Reformatory (just north of Indianapolis) and help the inmates at the Federal Prison at Terre Haute."

"We get mail requests from prisoners all over the country," McGill added, "and act as an information clearinghouse in many respects."

The students' work can be divided into five sectors:

1) Handling mail requests. The division receives from two to ten letters per day requesting legal advice and information.

2) Prison interviews. Within 30 (now 60) days after a trial the prisoners are interviewed. Staffers interview the prisoners upon request and review their cases.

3) Legal Research Seminar. Established last year, the seminars are held one day a week, are designed to show inmates the fundamental legal texts to the library of their rights and research to those who can't afford legal fees.

"We are not magicians," mentioned one of the staffers, "but we do what we can."

Don Monroe, Director of the Prosecutor's Division, spends much time on cases involving Notre Dame students.

The campus is filled with people on their way to, or on the look-out for, excitement or entertainment; or anything else that will divert them from the solution of being lonely. Always in the midst of the crowds, a figure will appear—a man or woman so completely outcast, so much of a loafer-type; so mentally or physically destroyed; so wroth with tics and mutterings, so disturbing in appearance or performance—that only the very curious and the compassionate will even dare to look at you. You wender to yourself: who cares for this poor soul? Who does he speak to? Who speaks to him?

But between the pity and the nausea you feel, there comes a kind of half-temple of awareness, befriended this poor outcast, and you may be befriending the dear Christ Himself. Thus, say the legends, did the sages make their visits with the outcasts.

"No," says the practical mind, "it is only a lost soul old deferred from the city streets." So, by being realistic, I miss adventuring with the angels.

I grow old, I grow shabby; I fear the falling away, the feeling of being old, and age will usher the gifts in me that merit love. But I cannot bear age nor shallowness nor ugliness as the wounds of time configuring me to the likeness of a slain Lamb. Lepers may be the masquerade of God, and the dying may bear His wounds, but age, if you are the one growing old, is not His disguise; age is merely dull. So I play the charades of being young: I take on a steady veneer, I hide the inner emptiness with a smile. I am resolved that I will not hear the mermaids singing, and in growing older I have seen the terror of never being loved forever.

I am not ashamed for my need of being loved, though I am embarrassed if it makes me act silly or appear shallow. All of us—all of us, including God and man—are seeking love; so on one or of that special hunger of the heart. Even when we play at the art and crafts of being selfish and ambitious, we are merely loving ourselves with a passion no one else seems capable of securing. We are building empires for ourselves, attempting to be secure in estates and titles that no man's neglect can take away from us. Only God says: "These fool, this night is thy soul required of thee.""
Ford's Reception

On Monday a President of the United States will visit Notre Dame. He will be on campus at the invitation of Fr. Hesburgh for 10 hours of activities and events, both connected and apart from the University itself.

Yet the appearance of Gerald R. Ford at the University of Notre Dame on St. Patrick's Day has a meaning that should not be lost amid the excitement and glamor of preparing for an event that has happened only twice before in this school's history.

The focal point of the President's activities Monday will be the Special Academic Convocation in the ACC. This event has been billed by both the White House and the University as an academic event. The faculty of both St. Mary's and Notre Dame will dress in academic garb and Ford will be conferred an honorary degree in a ceremony meant to parallel graduation.

It makes no sense to advertise as a strictly academic event what is blatantly a political affair. The President's visit, of course, is political, thinly disguised under the academic trappings of the Special Convocation. The conference of governors scheduled in the Memorial Library is simply another in a series of meetings aimed at introducing the President to all the governors. Notre Dame will be in the national limelight of the press. In effect the University is being overplayed.

To the students he has made the impression that Ford has extended the right to his Notre Dame audience on the topic of campus and that this agency uses people for their own means. But we, the undersigned, would now like to call on all students to get across a few things to Ford before he rushes off. In our case, we are now told that some of our students will have the privilege to meet with Mr. Ford Monday. However, these students do not represent the full voice of the students, or the members of the Academic Council and other college councils.

What happens when most big people visit a college or university campus? Do the majority or the minority make the campus, i.e., the students, get to come in close contact with him and have their opinions carry some weight? Generally, no. Ordinarily, the guest gives a lecture, meets with a number of people and is satisfied with a little P R with the masses, gets national coverage, and then is rushed off. In our case, we are now told that some of our students will have the privilege to meet with Mr. Ford Monday. However, these students do not represent the full voice of the students, or the members of the Academic Council and other college councils.

This has bothered a number of students and has led them to consider the possibility of organizing some students organizations in an attempt to get across a few things to Ford before he heads back to Washington. Where a roadway block has just been thrown at us—yesterday's observer tells us that "authorities" have already called in a special construction or protest. It is the purpose of this letter to see if this roadway block can be overcome in order to get the message across.

Our message is this: that we, across the country, are becoming very disillusioned with the present Ford administration. We are dissatisfied for a number of reasons.

1 The Economy Mr. Ford, we question your proposal to give a tax cut to the wealthy minority of the people. You argue that this will stimulate investment and up the buying power of the poor and middle sectors of the economy. Certainly this is an important solution to this problem and so do we. What poor person in these times is going to buy a new car?

b) Our country is in a recession and is heading toward a depression. Unemployment is skyrocketing and by June it is predicted that 10 percent of the nation's work force will be unemployed. This has them both to become angry and frustrated which will be heightened this spring. Ford's coming here will have an effect on thousands of people and to political stability when unemployed workers find themselves shoulder-to-shoulder with angry University students.

c) This unemployment of course is brought about, ecologically, by a skyrocketing crime rate. This coming summer is going to be hot. People will be on the streets. The Washington Post says that "not everyone in the city, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about."

d) When you hear about the economy, you must also hear about our education system. The paper says that Fidel Castro. There was a military coup that you supported in Chile has resulted in Catholic schools being taken over, and priests fleeing the country, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about."

The Washington Post says that "not everyone in the city, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about."

f) Your administration has put pressure on the Immigration and Naturalization Service to deport and harass one of the most oppressed sectors of the society in this country—Mexicans. We students across the country are asking you, Mr. Ford, when you come here on Monday, please don't make the mistake of trying to back-talk or hold us back any longer. These people are not "illegal" aliens. They are that we are not "illegals" aliens. They are oppressed and they need our help.

1.1 Politics We see your secretary of state "set out the possibility" of going to war over oil in the Middle East. Do you actually think our generation—who does the fighting—will put up with another "vietnam" type war?

1.2 CIA a) We are appalled by your statements on CIA complicity in Chile—spying on the student movement—You argue that this will stimulate investment and up the buying power of the poor and middle sectors of the economy. Certainly this is an important solution to this problem and so do we. What poor person in these times is going to buy a new car?

b) We are very concerned that the CIA has uncovered the fact that this agency has been involved in political assassinations and that they hired Mafia leaders to assassinate Fidel Castro.

c) We know that the CIA has in the past been recruited on our campuses, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about.

1.3 Economy a) We are very concerned that the CIA has uncovered the fact that this agency has been involved in political assassinations and that they hired Mafia leaders to assassinate Fidel Castro.

c) We know that the CIA has in the past been recruited on our campuses, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about.

1.4 Finally, you, Mr. Ford, are president because you were elected by your rich brother Nixon—a man whose political judgement was shown to be seriously deficient by events (to put it mildly). We the people did not elect you. Let us hope that you supported in Chile has resulted in Catholic schools being taken over, and priests fleeing for their lives. Some of these priests were from the Holy Cross Order, Mr. Ford. Notre Dame priests belong to this order, and some of the ones that are dead here are our campus.

b) We are not deceived by the promises you made on your "blue ribbon" panel to investigate the CIA. Ronald Reagan, Nelson Rockefeller, and a military man are general are not our idea of serious and effective investigative committee. We wonder if we would have uncovered the fact that this agency is involved in political assassinations and that they hired Mafia leaders to assassinate Fidel Castro.

c) We know that the CIA has in the past been recruited on our campuses, e.g. parts of Michigan (your home state) the unemployment is high enough to worry about.
Again the Black student body of this campus has been given a tremendous opportunity. Recently, an article was published in the Observer. March 13th by Joel Percore, staff reporter, which stated "This campus has been given a tremendous opportunity."

Notre Dame, or any other college, is a belief to be separated from the popular image. We are getting now is less concerned with the Black movement and more with a separatist philosophy. It should be noted that the concerns among Blacks regarding the Liberation Movement are still present.

The light for liberation continues but in "subtle" and "not so obvious" ways. In essence, Blacks are continually turning the area of controversy on which I feel that the Black Cultural Center would be to deny our existence--and that would be admitting that the students have no respect for the Issues of all students? Notre Dame represents the interests of all students? Don Schlaver's hours?

Father Schlaver commented, "What must be seen that the current Black student leaders, such as Angela Davis, is it not said that the..."

"The idea modeled on the concept of the law firm," stated Maureen Power, the division's only present staff member. "Thus far this year there seems to be litigation so I haven't had any work to do in this area." Powers worked with Dr. Thomas Tallardiva and the Off-Campus Housing Office earlier this year in writing the off-campus booklet and drafting the model lease, which provides students with an idea of what their leases should cover.

Problems

In an organization as varied and complex as Legal Aid, problems are inevitable and the most commonly voiced by most often by the division directors was that of insufficient manpower.

The heavy academic workload of the law school limits the amount of time a student can devote to Legal Aid. The recession has had an adverse effect as many summer-oriented legal jobs have been closed.

"One of the problems with the case County program," noted Director Jack Garbo, "was that many of our staffers were dropping in the program in the middle of the year or even of the semester. We insist that if a student has a commitment to a particular case that he finish that case before going on to another."

Jesse Jackson to speak at Civil Rights Lecture

One of America's leading black spokesmen, Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, will join several noted authorities planning to attend the annual Civil Rights Lectures and Conference at the University of Notre Dame April 16-18. The annual event is sponsored by the Center for Civil Rights and the Law School and will be open to the public.

State and National leaders attending the conference in the University's Center for Continuing Education will focus on the theme "Beyond Civil Rights: The Right to Economic Security." Discussion topics will embrace health care and its distribution, urban education and the right to quality education, economic distress and minority groups, and welfare reform and redistribution. The latter two cover the right to meaningful employment and the right to an adequate income.

Jackson was a top aide to the late Rev. Martin Luther King, who split three years ago from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference to form Operation PUSH—People United to Save Humanity. It is an outgrowth of Operation Breadbasket, the economic arm of SCLC.

Jackson's acceptance of the invitation to speak at the Civil Rights Lectures and Conference has been negotiated by Robert Glickstein, director of the Notre Dame Center, as assurance that the event will draw the most knowledgeable spokesmen to the campus. Previous speakers have been the late Justice Earl Warren, who stated the judicial chronology of civil rights movements and Sen. Philip Hart, the legislative perspective of Rep. Sargent Shriver, participant in many of the executive decisions during the presidencies of John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson.

"Jackson has been a participant in every major civil rights activity since the beginning," said Robert Glickstein. "He will be able to accurately portray the major goals of the movement in the light of the current economic and social problems facing the country."

Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the University, and former chairman of the nation's Civil Rights Commission, has set the theme for the conference with a plea for recognition of the economic and social rights of all citizens, rather than symbolic references to Constitutional guarantees. Both he and Glickstein were on campus last week before Congressional subcommittees, asked for progress in legislation assuring equal privileges for all citizens.

Joining them at the public talks during the three-day session will be several nationally prominent legislators, educators, medical authorities and labor leaders who will participate in discussions on health care, urban education, economic distress and welfare reform. Governor Jerry Apodaca of New Mexico will be the speaker at opening day banquet.

Addressing the subject of "right to health" for all will be former Congresswoman Martha W. Grifiths of Michigan; Dr. John S. Holliman, president of New York City Health and Hospital Corporation; Dr. E. Peter Isacson, professor and head of the department of preventive medicine at the University of Iowa, and Howard N. Newman, president of the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center.

Ford visit stirs curiosity

by Pat Cuore
Staff Reporter

Student interest yet unquantified currently exists over the exact reason of President Ford's visit to the Notre Dame campus on Monday. Ford's appearance marks only the third time an American President has visited the Lou and for the first time the event has been rushed so that not even the purpose for this meeting has been revealed. Both Franklin D. Roosevelt's visit in 1935 and Dwight D. Eisenhower's stay in 1960 were arranged well in ad-

Nine thousand people jammed into the Old Footballhouse on December 9, 1963 to listen to Roosevelt praise the Philippine's years of Catholicity in the United States' possession from November 15, in order that the President could deliver his commencement address on June 5, 1965. The President's appearance at Notre Dame followed the explosive Paris Summit Conference, and in his address, Eisenhower explained the problems lying ahead in the United States foreign policy.

With President Ford's visit only three days away, many students have expressed interest in the sheer novelty of actually seeing a United States president, regardless of whether you like him or not.

Pageantry will highlight Monday's events. Ford will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree at a special convocation at 11:30 a.m. President Ford's correspondence with University President Fr. Theodore Hesburgh on the World Hunger issue will most likely be a key issue discussed.

Various interesting preparations have been planned. Both Flanner and Grace Halls and the Memorial Library will be sealed off by presidential security. This is one case of presidential security.

Ford has taken place since President Ford's decision on Wednesday to visit Notre Dame. The campus community has readied itself and now awaits the presidential arrival with increasing anticipation.

Henry Fonda to appear in 'Darrow' at Morris Civic Henry Fonda, distinguished star of stage and screen, will be appearing in the stage production of 'Darrow' at the Morris Civic Auditorium, April 3 through April 5. The veteran actor will play the role lead as the famous trial lawyer and champion of the underdog in the Scoop "monkey trial" concerning the evolution of regular price naturally.

Collections for dystrophy slated

In the spirit of St. Patrick, the Alpha Phi Omega Fraternity will be out in force this Saturday, Sunday and Monday at the North and South Dining Halls collecting the "green" to share the luck of the Irish with people afflicted by muscular dystrophy and related diseases.

Harry Baisbridge, co-chairman of the "Shamrocks Against Dystrophy" drive on campus announced that volunteers aiding the South Bend Chapter of the Muscular Association will give a lucky "Shantricks" button picturing MDA's Leprechaun, Paddy O'Brian, to everyone contributing to the campaign.

The program is ordered by Dan Devine, head football coach and National Vice-President of the MDA. Shamrocks, according to the Irish, are the symbol of hope and monies raised in this campus give exactly that—hope, through MDA's research programs, for a healthy tomorrow as well as help today through patient service programs.

Huge US nuclear arsenal called hazard

By DANIEL F. GILMORE
WASHINGTON (UPI) - A research society said Thursday the United States has an arsenal of nuclear weapons that invite an enemy first strike, and its NATO allies have weapons - a number, it said, which will increase to 8,500 by the middle of this year.

In Europe, it said, the United States has an arsenal of nuclear weapons that destroy Hiroshima.

It said that nearly 15,000 nuclear weapons are stored in the United States in various locations throughout Europe and Asia and on ships and submarines at sea.

The Center for Defense Information, a private organization headed by retired Rear Adm. Gene H. R. La Rocque, said the arsenal is too large and dangerous and should be reduced.

"I wasn't really sure about coming to Niagara Falls," says McLaughlin. "But once I came out here I realized there was no doubt in my mind that ND had super basketball potential."

It's great to be involved in a program that has a tradition at a university but it's also important that others go on to be successful in their own business.

Both coaches have gained considerable respect in the basketball world, and there is often little until the final seconds. But neither DiBiaso nor McLaughlin actively seek any attention or feeling dissatisfied with their situation here, though neither is totally closed to any possibilities.

With DiBiase and McLaughlin around for a while under coach, the Off-Campus basketball indeed looks bright. There are problems, I mean look at the unbeaten. But there's a head coach we would have to weigh it against,

DICK DIBIASO (left) and Frank McLaughlin (right) will get a chance to show just what they have to offer if the Irish meet Kansas in the first round NCAA action tomorrow.

by Bill Brink

They don't get interviewed on national TV very often, or speak at many luncheons or write books. They don't even have flashy war trophies or nicknames that ring bell in every basketball mind in the country. But Dick Dibiaso and Frank McLaughlin, the two assistant basketball coaches at the University of Notre Dame don't think those things to be a vital part of the Irish basketball program. Despite the spotlight on head coach Digger Phelps, these two young men are secure in the knowledge that their role as assistants is essential to the overall program.

"We have a great job in selling all the members of the team that they are a vital cog in the overall program," says Dibiaso. "This is what makes Notre Dame, it's a team effort. I feel I'm a part of the total team concept."

McLaughlin adds, "We can't win the program and we all know we had a part in it. We stay at Notre Dame."

"We've been to three post-season tournaments in a row and that speaks well of the whole program. The limelight isn't on us. It's the team's."

Despite the trio of Phelps, Dibiaso and McLaughlin arriving in South Bend in 1971 to take charge of Notre Dame basketball the results have not been few or unnoticeable. After struggling through a 6-20 opening season, they turned the team around for an 18-12 mark in 1972. Last year theychalked up a 23-6 record and won the NCAA tournament, an they repeated this year to win the Big East Conference coaches poll.

The impressive list of accomplishments, both assistant coaches believe that Digger and themselves have created a new basketball tradition here in the last three years. They feel that this more than makes up for the setbacks they often were involved in of the big games in the country.

Both Dibiaso and McLaughlin accepted invitations from Phelps to join him here at Notre Dame. Dibiaso leaving his assistant coaching position at the University of Virginia and McLaughlin switching from assistant to Digger at Fordham to assist to Digger at ND.

McLaughlin had been a Fordham assistant coach for three years, graduating from Fordham Prep in 1969. Before joining Fordham, he then moving on to Fordham University, where he played from 1966 to 1969. He passed up an opportunity to play pro ball for the New York Knicks at that time he was in the national guard, and would have missed training camp and part of the season. He played one game as a pro but didn't like it and moved to Holy Cross as an assistant. In 1970 he moved down south to assist to Digger's assistant before he followed his coach to Fordham and now Notre Dame.

Tournament picks

NCAA basketball tournaments are as unpredictable as ACC basketball tournaments. That either says something for the NCAA and the ACC or nothing for either.

In 32 teams in the tournament this year even the characteristically dull first round content will be, at least, interesting. And matches like Marquette-Kentucky, Notre Dame-Kansas and Arizona State-Alabama may be the most hair raising of the entire tournament.

For the first round, the Irish eye's predictions:

East

at Penn- Lot of people say Notre Dame to beat this one.

Kansas over Montana- A lot of people say Montana will lose this one.

North Carolina over New Mexico State- It can almost be said the worst two teams in the tournament.

Midwest

at Alabama- Marquette over Kentucky: The Warriors got a break when Alabama lost and Kentucky came in to play at Tuscaloosa. Al McGuire will make the most of it.

Marquette over Pensacola: A lot of people say Marquette will lose this one.

Utah State over New Mexico- This is the toughest one of the bunch. Oklahoma State is one of the top eight in the country and can win this one. Brink: Utah State Rutgers over New Mexico- This will be a high-spirited affair, but the Bruins are a better team.

Valparaiso over Montana: A lot of people say Montana will lose this one.

Bengal's end in a flurry of fights

Two of the three former champions were among the winners. In the 4th round preliminary match, Zawalich crowned twelve titlist holders just to make a record. Despite the thought of most that crowd thought it was a thrill to be a part of the event. The winner was an exciting experience. Zawalich's success was due to his fighting skill, his application of the elements and an ability to deal with his opponent.

One of his competitors was a long time fighter who had lost a number of matches and was considered a topnotch fighter. Zawalich defeated his opponent in the 1st round.

The only knockdown of the evening was scored by Matt Wellner who decked John Nicotra in the 1st round. Wellner used his powerful left hand much more sparingly than in previous matches, relying more on his speed and winning the round.
