C.O.U.L. panel evaluates Student Affairs

Editor's note: The Committee on Undergraduate Life, C.O.U.L., was created by the Hoard of Trustees last October at the request of a group of student leaders headed by SHP, Pat McHugh. It is a large, diverse, and strong point of five areas of undergraduate life at Notre Dame and is charged with the task of improving the quality of life here.

Students wishing to file claims for compensation for mismanagement of property from the summer storage program must do so directly with the Bakers Trucking Company, according to a panel representing the Student Union Services Commission.

The unexpectedly large volume of material involved in the storage program this year, along with the difficulty in returning items promptly to those who lost them, was the major reason for the change, according to the panel. Although most of the storage has been returned, the group believes that the Union will probably be handling this type of claim for years to come.

The committee sent its report to the Board of Student Affairs on Thursday, September 18. It was considered by the Board but not officially acted on.

In the third of a five part series "Campus Editor Pat Hanifin looks at the report of C.O.U.L.'s subcommittee on Student Affairs.

The preliminary report of the Student Affairs Committee concerned with the Office of Undergraduate Life Council. The committee suggested that the Office of Undergraduate Life Council should be abolished.

The committee stressed the need for a genuine plan of student affairs reform, described as "a lack of student input and influence in matters that touch their lives."

One critical problem the committee found regarding the Office was a lack of cooperation between the Office and the Office of Student Affairs. Many students have "a lack of student input and influence in matters that touch their lives."

The vice president of student affairs, on the other hand, claims that "the Office is a lack of student influence in matters that touch their lives."

McCabe claims that the Student Affairs Office has "made tremendous progress and improvement even since the report came out last May. We have been constantly moving and reorganizing and I am excited about the things that have happened this year like freshman orientation and the Student Union.

Student advisory groups are an excellent idea, she feels, and McCabe hopes to have one working with her on student development programs this year.

The Faculty Senate held its first meeting of the 1975-76 year last night receiving two final reports and hearing from various committees.

A lengthy discussion dealt with the Retired Faculty Committee's report. This committee, chaired by Professor Kenneth Goodpaster explained ideas of the Student Affairs Office, the proposed grade inflation. "The committee is preparing a questionnaire for long hours."

Another issue this committee might explore is student representation of Faculty Senate committees.

The question of the current "side effect of teacher evaluation is being taken up by the faculty evaluation committee. Headed by Mr. Bobby Farrow, the committee will look into issues such as the validity of the evaluations, possibilities and how the evaluation can be done in a cooperative effort to improve human situation of the faculty.

Trubac named to head special business management program

The appointment of Dr. Edward R. Trubac, associate professor of Finance at the University of Notre Dame since 1969, as director of the Institutional Administration Program; in the College of Business Administration has been announced by Brother Leo V. Ryan, C.S.V., dean.

The summer graduate program leading to the degree of master of science in administration is designed to provide professional training in business and administration for laymen and members of religious communities and others who have responsibilities for managing nonprofit institutions. Trubac will succeed Dr. C. Joseph Sequin, who was named chairman of the Department of Mangement at Notre Dame.

The Institutional Management Program is "unique in the nation" observed Dean Ryan, "because it is structured to develop proficient managers for the nation's hospitals, schools, homes for the elderly and other organizations and institutions." An undergraduate degree in business administration is not required for admission to the program, which provides sufficient depth in the basic areas of management, finance, and public administration.

A specialist in business forecasting, Trubac received a bachelor's degree at New York's Manhattan College and his graduate degrees in economics and public administration at Syracuse University. He has recently been engaged in research on the economic impact of private coal companies in the State of Indiana and has published articles in the Review of Social Economy, Journal of the Catholic Hospital Association, and Journal of the National Catholic Education Association.

Trubac was named "Teacher of the Year" in Notre Dame's graduate program in business administration in 1972 and 1973. He has also served as president of the Notre Dame Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Coed housing is not impossible at Notre Dame. Jack Paczesny, vice president for student affairs, said last night coed coed housing "will come in time."

"I am confident and optimistic for change in the future," Paczesny added, "but when do it, we do it right."

The administrator conceded that coed housing would be discussed at a later time and that he emphasized the importance of the Committee on Undergraduate Life, which is currently working on the concept of coed living in the Stanford-Keenan halls complex.

"The proposal will have to go through the Student Life Committee and through the Board of Trustees," Just explained. He also pointed out that the administration is not ready to convert any halls, Paczesny added, "the proposal of coed living in Stanford-Keenan is several years away from becoming a reality."

"The whole problem about coed rooms is the facilities," he went on. "It would be great if we could create a coed living environment that would be a cornerstone in the concept of coed living."

"Just as the University is moving towards more open dorms, and not just a few coed students," he further explained. "It would be great if we could create a coed living environment that would be a cornerstone in the concept of coed living."

"At the time of Fr. McNally's last annual report, the Stanford-Keenan idea is somewhat more possible."

McNally remarked that the implementation of coed living in Stanford-Keenan "might be a good first step. It may quell some fears about coed living." He also said that there should be some criteria set up to determine which students would be part of any coed housing experiment.

"The students should be evaluated before, during, and after the experiment. Of course, they must be serious about it," he commented. "Coed living can create a better social climate for male and female students in a positive and healthy way," he continued. McNally said he was encouraged by the COUL report recommendation that the SLC could be a reference center for halls desiring information on the subject.

"I feel that since the COUL report recommendation that the SLC could be a reference center for halls desiring information on the subject, the committee was able to go into the proposal last year to make Grace Hall coed housing," he commented. "It is a great step to allow women students to participate in the dorm system," he added.

Due to the lack of time the committee was able to go into the Grace Hall proposal last year to make Grace Hall coed housing, "it would be great if we could continue them again this year," McNally said. "It is important to have a coed housing environment that would be a cornerstone in the concept of coed living."

Perhaps the most crucial of the decision-making processes is the "general decision-making process of the University." The report criticizes the administration decision-making for being secretive. Student opinion surveys "often indicated that the more decisions after discussions were either explained or disputed," the report stated.

Few students, the report said, claimed to have seen such a proposal. "It is important to have a coed housing environment that would be a cornerstone in the concept of coed living."

"The committee was able to go into the proposal last year to make Grace Hall coed housing," McNally said. "It is a great step to allow women students to participate in the dorm system," he added. "I don't think I've ever received a reply about his concerns," McNally said.

Lists plans

The Hall Presidents Council (HPC) plotted its course for the upcoming academic year at its first meeting last night in the LaFortune Ballroom.

Chairman Elton Johnson and Executive Officer John Keenan announced that the HPC was to be the official HPC cadre planning list of the council for the coming year. The plans include an annual HPC calendar, an information service and a new in- centive for Hall competition.

These plans are intended to better inform the Notre Dame student body, according to Johnson. The information service under the supervision of John Keenan is to serve as a reference center for halls needing specific information and not knowing where to obtain it.

The HPC will also maintain an official calendar of hall activities. These activities will be based on activity sheets kept in the HPC office or sent from the Hall Presidents Council.

In addition to this calendar, the HPC plans a new form of interhall competition this year. It will award a traveling trophy to the hall that gives the best example of hall spirit or specializes in the most activities. The trophy will be awarded on the basis of the activities on the HPC calendar.

The HPC, as are other organizations on campus, is busy preparing for the upcoming year. The HPC is an integral part of the Notre Dame community, Johnson said, and is composed of all hall presidents on Notre Dame campus.

It is intended to be a service-oriented body, responsible to the needs and desires of the Notre Dame community. The HPC will work with the Notre Dame community to begin in May and continue throughout the following May.

Gay students respond to TIME cover-story

by Don Reimer
Senior Staff Reporter

Members of the Gay Students of Notre Dame have expressed a variety of reactions to the TIME magazine cover story on homosexuality which appeared in the September 8, 1975 issue.

Picture of the cover's star, Leonard Matlovich, a sergeant in the Air Force who has recently received national attention for his legal challenge to the military ban on homosexuals. The seven page article surveys the political and social activities of gays that occurred since Time's article on heterosexuality in 1974.

Notre Dame have expressed a reaction that a going before the Time's article several years ago, "it was extremely difficult," because psycho-social evidence consistently reveals that human sexuality preference existed since the age of five, probably by the age of six, and definitely by the age of seven. We cannot 'create' more gay people, we may, however, help those who already experience a homosexual preference to find themselves."

The Gay Students of Notre Dame have indicated that this quest for personal identity is precisely the function of their organization. As they begin their second year of weekly meetings, they invite any members of the University community who wish to receive further information to write to P.O. Box 206, Notre Dame, Ind. 46556. All serious inquiries will be answered confidentially.

Pagna resigns as Alumni head

by Mary Mangavan
Staff Reporter

Tom Pagna, former Notre Dame associate football coach, will resign as executive director of the Alumni Association effective October 1, 1975.

Pagna explained that he has much respect for his job and position in the Alumni Association, but he is not prepared to commit the rest of his career as its director. The decision to resign was made in March, "it was extremely difficult," For Pagna, "it was the only one of the options, and he is reluctant to leave after 12 years of service."

Pagna's successor will not be determined until the Alumni Board meets again on the weekend of Sept. 27, 1975. Pagna could recommend his offensive coordinator to the board, and he is not ready to spend the rest of his life in business.

Deadline set for concession stand assignments

Fourteen locations are available for concession stand at home games. Pr. Bill Matthews of the Student Activities office announced yesterday.

Groups interested in having a stand should submit a request to the Student Activities office in the Student Union. A lottery will assign dates and places and lottery winners will be notified by Sept. 10.

In the past, several clubs have complained about groups who win the lottery but have never used the stand. According to Matthews, there is a new policy for this year.

"If a group does not show up for their allotted time, they will lose all dates they have won in the lottery for the remainder of this season, and all chances for a stand for next season," he said.

When Pagna assumed the position of 31-member Alumni Association in February, 1975, the position had been vacant for several months. Pagna updated the schedule of class reunions and alumni club activities. He planned to start a Mini-College Program the summer of 1975 and group tours to be conducted with other groups. Pagna has made several trips to see the prospects of the 1975 football season under Dan Devine as good.

When Parseghian resigned in December, 1974, Pagna did not wish to continue coaching under any other head coach. The following February, he assumed the position of Alumni Association's executive director.

As yet, Pagna has made no definite decision concerning future plans. He is considering either coaching offers and has done some admirable lecturing and writing on football. He holds a master's degree in education and has experience in personnel management and organization.

unalike city as a potential major threat to the environment---the lowly aerosol spray can.

According to U. of California chemists F. Sherwood Rowland and Mario Molina, who first called attention to the danger over a year ago, the problem arises from the chlorofluorocarbons used as propellants in sprays. The molecule cuts produced by the breakdown of these chemicals in the upper stratosphere act as a powerful catalyst for the destruction of the thin ozone layer which shields the earth from deadly ultraviolet radiation from the sun and makes it possible for life to exist on earth.
New guidelines

SMC extends visitation hours

by Mary Egan
Staff Reporter

St. Mary's residence halls did a quick U-turn last week, extending the hall curfew because the halls councils were dissatisfied with the policy. The previous guidelines were recent work. The halls were still looking for new guidelines for the "dorm parietal system," stated M. Allen, hall vice president of the Student Affairs for student senators.

The parietal visitation hours extended were for summer. Partiels are now from 6 p.m. to midnight on Fridays, 1 p.m. to midnight on Saturdays, and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

The Student Affairs Office did not take up the role of the program because the students were absent, explained Steve Bilek, assistant to the president of the Student Affairs office. "We don't set up things without the students," he stated.

According to Bilek, the hall councils were still in the meeting stages last week, because "we want to make sure that parietals are clear on what their limits are. They have to work," she emphasized.

She added that they want to make sure we have a system that the hall councils feel is fair and workable.

Bilek said, "There have to be some guidelines and something to make sure the guidelines are followed." The new guidelines will be posted in all the dormitories, according to Bilek.
 Two University of Notre Dame students are pioneering a new Foreign Study Program this year in the Republic of China, the eighth overseas campus opened to undergraduates and law students around the world. More than a thousand students have participated in the specialized programs abroad since their inauguration over a decade ago.

Located on the island formerly known as Formosa, the students are attending the Jesuit Chinese Language Institute in Hsinchu City before beginning the class year at National Taiwan University in Taipei, Taiwan. Staff members at the Beijing combined university have studied in the U.S. and speak English in addition to Mandarin. Courses will be taught in English with as much use of Chinese as the students' preparation and ability allow.

Fall and spring classes for the Notre Dame students wishing to pursue their study of Chinese language and philosophy include language, history, literature and philosophy as core courses, and elective courses in sociology, folklore, art and anthropology. Holiday and semester break will be in accord with a Taiwan calendar that has the spring semester beginning in mid-February after the Chinese New Year.

Other Foreign Study programs, also known as Sophomore Year Abroad programs, include classes at Catholic University of the West in Angers, France at the University of Innsbruck in Austria, at Sophia University in Tokyo, at the School of Irish Studies, Dublin, Ireland, and at the University of Andalucia in Mexico City. Law students study both in London and Tokyo, and students majoring in architecture may spend a year in Rome along with College of Arts and Letters.

Grades at the foreign universities are given the same as at Notre Dame and all credits apply for degrees sought. Costs of attending the schools are approximately the same as for those in residence at Notre Dame. Dr. Charles E. Farrell, professor of modern and classical languages and a member of the Notre Dame faculty since 1948, serves as director of the Foreign Study Program.

The first Notre Dame students in Taiwan are Theodore Gustykowski, Onset, Mass., and Stephen Seiler, St. Louis, Mo., both juniors. They have been joined by Carole D'Amato, an exchange student from Stonyhill College, North Easton, Mass.
