Duggan discusses future

by Mary Janea
St. Mary's Editor

Dr. John Duggan, the recently-inaugurated president of Notre Dame, foresaw no major changes in the school in the immediate future. In a recent interview, Duggan said he was open to all student suggestions and was willing to try out new ideas to the extent that they were not disruptive to the school's educational mission.

Duggan mentioned the installation of a new computer laboratory, the renovation or construction of a new library, and a possible extension of the academic year to include an extra week. He was also looking into the possibility of offering more courses in the evenings and on weekends.

Regarding the relationship between St. Mary's and Notre Dame, the president said, "We (SMC) have no intention of moving away from Notre Dame."

"I have had several conversations with Fr. Hesburgh, University of Notre Dame president, and Fr. Burtchaell, University provost, and I am convinced that we (Notre Dame and St. Mary's) are both interested in the kind of cooperation which we can co-operate to our mutual advantage," he noted.

Duggan described the relationship of the two schools as "an extremely close one," and he said that he looks forward to working closely with the president of Notre Dame.

Relations between St. Mary's and Notre Dame:

He noted the shared roles of husband and wife and the coeducational nature of both institutions. He also mentioned the importance of mutual respect and understanding between the two schools.

Burtchaell comments

Role of women changing

by Mary Mangavan
Staff Reporter

Fr. James T. Burtchaell, Provost, discussed changing roles of women in the church, the family and society in his opening Mass remarks on Sunday in Sacred Heart Church.

In his sermon, Burtchaell said, "In the past, women have been provided for public, private and service which society had deemed the all- and that the role of women is no longer confined to the home."

He added that women also have the opportunity to test their intellectual abilities in the classroom situation with men, "refiguring the co-exchange of classes between Notre-L. one and St. Mary's."

He continued, noting that he is equally pleased that cultural and social programs at Notre Dame are available to St. Mary's students, and programs at St. Mary's are likewise open to Notre Dame students.

Above all, the new president is "committed to enhancing the tremendous sense of community that is here." He added that the school will meet with faculty members informally twice weekly, and thus break down the "natural division between departments and between administration and faculty." He also announced that he plans to meet with each department individually, and to meet monthly with all members of the administration to facilitate communication.

Burtchaell sees "the liberation of women" eliciting the renegotiation of roles within the family. Many marriages are going to be created by husbands and wives both of whom wish to make their lives to challenging jobs.

Burtchaell claims coeducation at Notre Dame provides an example of "liberation for women" and the elevation for men. He noted that the pattern of academic and career interests of female students differs little from those of male students. Burtchaell later commented that many recent families associated with the university are an example of the remaining "old" sex role and wife in family and career.

In the numbers and positions of women in the faculty and administration, Burtchaell believes Notre Dame provides a good example of equal opportunity. He cited June McCauslin, director of financial aid; Sr. Johnimirise Jones, assistant to the provost; Sr. Isabel Charles, acting dean of the College of Arts and Letters; and the administration as significant administrators. He explained that the numbers of women in senior faculty positions is the result of having women on the faculty for the past 50 years.

In response to Burtchaell's comments, Cardinal Spellman, professor of history and chairperson of Committee W of the American Catholic University Professors, reported, "The number of women in the teaching faculty and the academic positions at Notre Dame will continue to grow and we have lost ground for the second year in a row." Moore commented, "It is marvelous that someone in a high position of leadership as Father Burtchaell would note these figures and that he would correctly credit the gains to the efforts of a great many women, and would go on to note the gains made in the teaching faculty and the academic positions at Notre Dame will continue to grow and we have lost ground for the second year in a row."

Byrne's opinion, "the big issues this year will be a continued examination of the university's alcohol guidelines and a restructurig of the judicial board." He added that the SLC will have explicit tasks set for them.

For the first time the SLC will have explicit tasks set for them. Many of the questions raised in the C.G.L.P. reports will be discussed. The SLC will be the main vehicle for passing any proposals. According to Byrne, "much of the homework has already been done and the SLC can begin immediate action on certain issues.

Byrne's opinion, "the big issues this year will be a continued examination of the university's alcohol guidelines and a restructuring of the judicial board."

He added that the SLC's first order of business would be the budget for the next governmental year, student union and the various campus clubs.

Gottsacker felt the Keenan-Stanford cooperation proposal, which is in the drug situation might also rank high on the SLC's calendar of events.

Voting hours on September 23 will be 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. in the halls on campus. Ballot boxes will also be placed during the same hours at the new polling places. Campus View and the Notre Dame Apartments.

Ballots boxes in the Student Union and the library will be open from 12 noon to 6 p.m.

The SLC was established in the late 1960's to discuss and recommend student-related problems for the university in general and the Board of Trustees in particular. It is composed of fifteen members, including seven students. They include the president, three district representatives, the student government officers, and a member appointed by the last President's Council.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 19 - Trainer Brady Grohsmann of the Express said Mira apparently caught his finger in one of the giant zippers on the artificial turf when he got hit. "The stadium is set up for baseball, too, and when it's converted to football they cover certain areas with turf by putting down canvas tarps," Grohsmann said.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Central Intelligence Agency maintained a secret poison arsenal and developed sophisticated hardware to deliver the toxins despite a presidential order to eliminate the program before its assets were disclosed to the Senate.

He told the Senate Intelligence Committee on Tuesday that records were "incontrovertible" and "indeed ironclad" and that his agency was "guilty as charged."

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford said Tuesday he will ask for administrative changes in the Central Intelligence Agency but that he will not rule out political activities in other areas if American Security is involved.

The president did not spell out what the changes might be. But in an earlier interview with the Chicago Sun-Times he was quoted as saying he may see "an opportunity for CIA of its authority to conduct covert political operations overseas."

MOSCOW (AP) - A top State Department official sent here by President Ford to seek an end to sudden large Soviet purchases of U.S. farm goods left for home Thursday saying he was "very optimistic" that a long-term grain trade pact will be signed soon.

No class rank relieves pressure

by Patrick Cole
Staff Reporter

To rank or not to rank. Although most American universities do not rank students, the Notre Dame Law School does not compute class rank.

The Law Faculty abolished ranking in response to a panel of the harmful effects. "We would guess that most American universities do not rank students," said Professor David T. Link, Dean of the Notre Dame Law School. "We do not rank students to impose the importance of progress in specific courses."

Consequently, this policy toward class rank is contrary to the grade-point average computations. The Law School does not provide statistics to compute rank. Likewise, the Law School does not endorse anyone who makes them. As policy, it is considered dishonest for a student to imply, orally or in writing, that the school keeps class rank or grade-point averages.

"We do not give class rank because it eliminates the need for a student to imply, orally or in writing, that the school keeps class rank or grade-point averages."

Unemployment to stay over 8%

by Jill Truitt
Staff Reporter

The unemployment rate will remain above eight percent until at least the middle of the year, according to John Alaimo, vice president of the Career Development Center and Trust Company of Chicago.

Speaking last night at a lecture sponsored by the Notre Dame College of Commerce, Alaimo said that government, management, and labor must combine forces to end the unemployment crisis. "The only way to get a job is to get a job," Alaimo said. "The best way to get a job is to get a job."
At Placement Night
Interviews emphasized
by Kaisy Mills
Staff Reporter

Richard D. Willemin, director of the Notre Dame Placement Bureau, introduced graduate students and seniors in business administration to the importance and methods of interviews with campus representatives of prospective employers last night. This meeting in the Engineering Auditorium was the first of three annual Placement Nights sponsored by the Placement Bureau. The purpose of these meetings is to alert all seniors and graduate students to the different employers and graduate schools coming to campus in the near future.

Two representatives of Atkins and Soil, one of the "big eight" public accounting firms in the nation, assisted Willemin during the program by conducting interviews with two senior accounting majors. The representatives then evaluated the interviews, a general question and answer period followed the evaluation.

"Interviews are very important. They may be the starting point of your career," Willemin told the business administration students. Willemin added, "Employers invest a great deal of money in coming to campus. They think it is a good way to get top-notch people. Take it seriously."

He stressed the necessity of preparing for interviews with employers. Willemin observed that no preparation is necessary for interviews with graduate schools since the purpose of these is simply to talk with the representatives and ask questions.

A representative of IBM will speak to students in engineering and science about his company and the job potential in these fields, Wednesday night. A slide show on different types of interviews and methods of preparation for them will be given. A demonstration of a "typical" interview and a critique of each will follow the slide show.

An official from Sears, Roebuck, and Co. will present Thursday evening to talk to students in the College of Arts and Letters. Two interviews will be conducted, followed by evaluations and a symposium.

"These two remaining Placement Nights will be held at 7 p.m. in the Engineering Auditorium. Each student who attends a Placement Night will receive a placement manual, as business administration students did last night. This manual lists the dates of the interviews scheduled by each employer and includes a profile form. This profile form, which is similar to a resume, is required of all students planning to use the services of the Placement Bureau. At present, 411 businesses and industries and 27 branches of government have scheduled interviews at Notre Dame, as have up to 48 grad schools and 10 law schools. Students must sign up for these interviews at least one week in advance. Last night, Willemin stated the number of employers who have scheduled interviews presents a good picture. "We did not have that number last year at this time," he remarked.

However, Willemin also pointed out that the economic and employment situations are not that strong. "I do not think employers are looking for as many applicants as in recent years. Employment does not seem to be up," he explained.

Willemin told the students that they are in effect faced with more competition now that students in past years. All graduate students and seniors seeking employment or entrance into graduate school are urged to attend the Placement Night.

If a student should find it impossible to attend on the night assigned to his college, he may attend a different meeting. However, it is strongly recommended that he attend the proper discussion night.

Burchasell can state these views on woman's changing roles. But let's see some work in our own back yard," Moore called for "more active recruiting of women faculty and a sincere commitment to cooperation in the areas of housing and athletics." Instead of continuously pointing to differences between men and women, we should emphasize their sameness. Across the board, Moore stated, "Notre Dame is just beginning to touch the surface."

Fr. Eugene Gorski, theology professor and rector of Howard Hall, said he was "sympathetic to the view of women expressed by Fr. Burchasell. In particular, Gorski was "sympathetic to the ordination of women in the priesthood."

"I see no serious theological difficulties, though there are perhaps some cultural aspects which might delay it," Gorski explained. "It can also be a way for women to fulfill what they believe to be their Christian vocation. At Notre Dame there are serious attempts to increase the importance and roles of women," he stated.

committees which reviewed over 100 applications for the position of Dean of the College of Arts and Letters. At the time of applications for the position of Dean of the Study of Higher Education at the University of Notre Dame, President Fr. Hesburgh for the 1975-76 academic year. Isabel Charles, assistant professor of English, was selected for the position. Fr. Hesburgh assisted in this song by the Tucker's Jerry Caldwell's flat-picking, guitar style connected with his smooth and flowing throughout the whole night. Vocalist Doug Gray made up for his lack of instrument by a multi-octave performance of "Rambling on My Mind" that was nothing short of amazing. The rest of the band, drummer Paul Riddle and keyboardist George McCorkle, played steadily and tightly, weaving in and out of the music. The flute-lead guitar duets of Marshall Tucker Band were excellent works that were tastefully done by a technically excellent band. "Foolish heart" is most representative of the material in the album, then this is a band to watch. With such a little polish and originality, they could go a long way. The Tucker Band started out on a softer key, opening with "Give Me the Land," a new song. "Give Me the Land," a new song. They were contented to wander back to find the bathrooms. They did try to rush the stage before the band came out." One point in their favor... The Tucker Band back the band for the first encore with the customary hoots, cats, clapping and lighting of matches. Nobody had started leaving when Toy Caldwell cranked the band into a routing version of "Take the Highway," an old crowd favorite. They jammed for about ten minutes when Toy led them into a blues medley made up of "Everyday I Get the Blues" and the Allman's "You Don't Love Me. They played confidently and smoothly, sprinkling liberally with solos from Toy and Jerry. The second encore consisted of "My favorite song," "This Old Cowboy." The fluke-guitar lead guitar duets created a spacey country sound that fit the image of the isolated "cosmic cowboys" and his searchings in the barren wastelands of the Midwest for America. The Tucker Band was getting impatient and did not support another encore and the band left... The group left, happy and.poor. The sad thing is neither group inspired the other. The crowd did not inspire the band and the band did not give them an inspired performance. Don't get me wrong, it was good, even superb, but it wasn't inspired. We didn't see the best out of them and we didn't give them our best. The Tucker Band played smooth, original music, and they did it well, but they looked like they wanted to do something else. And the crowd, well, they had nothing else to do. special needs of the dean's office at Notre Dame. Isabel Charles is the leading Catholic university in the nation. Its faculty have high academic standards, and Notre Dame here calls for a scholar, a teacher, and an administrator. Religion also plays a part in the candidate's religious sense. We didn't eliminate non-Catholics from consideration.

Q: What about the Search Committee—was it disappointing to work for a year and fail to find a candidate acceptable to the university?

A: It was a very difficult and a very exhausting task. We reviewed between 500 and 400 applications, and chose three names to submit to the president and the provost. The recommendations, however, took place in the context of a discussion so the committee understood the action of the president and the provost regarding the candidates.

Q: Why is it so difficult to find a qualified candidate? What are the criteria?

A: It's difficult to find someone to meet the qualifications of the first women administrators here.

Q: Have you had any trouble with the attitude of your co-workers?

A: I have honestly not had problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, indeed, work in a more individual situation. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

Q: Notre Dame has been a male-dominated institution for over 100 years and there are a variety of barriers for women to overcome. Is there any way to change the policy?

A: I've not yet found any method of changing the policy here. Years ago I would have done it, but I'd be 100 years older today.

Q: Has the college suffered from the swing toward career-oriented education?

A: Fortunately, we have not had such problems with the men not taking me seriously. Some of the women, indeed, work in a more individual situation. I've never had anything but very fine cooperation.

USAF puts homosexual Sargeant on trial

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) - The associate attorney for T. Matlovich, an admitted gay, told a historic ban on homosexuals in the military once their sex deviation is discovered. He testified that he had not formed prior opinions in the case. Each said he had not.

Matlovich, son of an Air Force Sergeant, showed little emotion as the hearing - which the Air Force said might last a week - often bogged down on technical issues in its opening hours.

"That's an individual question they must answer themselves."

Matlovich has said he isn't interested in becoming a symbol of gay liberation. Most of all, he has stay in the Air Force once his case is decided.

Duggan examines SMC future

"I am convinced that the Sisters of the Holy Cross do not want to run the college," he said, referring to the administration of the school. "They just want to see that the values they believe in are preserved - and I agree with that."

In discussing his appointment, Duggan said that he did not apply for the position. Rather, the Search Committee was given his name by an administrator from another school. As meetings and interviews in the selection process continued, the total number of possible candidates for the position narrowed down to five.

When interviewed by the Board of Regents last fall, Duggan insisted should he be selected for the job, that he should have the power to appoint the college vice presidents and that business with the Board of Regents would hamper recruitment, destroy morale and hobble the college. He is satisfied that he has the power he needs.

Heart Association sponsors bike-a-thon

Cartier said, "Another ten speed bicycle will be given away by the Heart Association to a participant who will receive one chance for every ten dollars he turns in."

Riders must turn in their money by Oct. 2 to be eligible for the prizes. The money may be turned in at any branch of the First National Bank or to the Heart Association Office at 1630 Mishawaka Ave. in South Bend.

Students wanting to participate can pick up entry forms and instructions at the Student Activity Office in LaFortune Student Center.

Browner brothers; two here, four more on the way
by Chip Scanlan

Some people are able to find something good in anything, even the rock,” but Notre Dame fans will find a great deal of kudos in that saying. Tom Browner, the Notre Dame Irish, could definitely be one of those people.

Browner brothers, Ross and Jim, had a great deal of experience playing together this year. They played against each other on the team last year, and Ross and Jim Browner were the best players on the team. They are both very fast and have an excellent scoring average over the season.

Jim Browner, the outstanding defensive player of the game, had seven solo tackles, a pair of assists and a key fumble recovery when BC was starting to press in the third quarter. Jim, a holder of a Black Belt in karate, brought impressive high school statistics with him when he reported for fall practice, including 129 yards rushing in his senior year. But when Jim took the field and faced against Buckeye he didn’t worry about his past accomplishments, his brother Ross, or even the record crowd on hand at Schaeffer Stadium. “It was exciting playing in front of all of those people,” the younger Browner remarked. “But I went out there to try my best and played for myself.”

He said that he can’t be worrying about his brothers and games, but to concentrate on his role on the Irish. During the game he realized that he was a very important factor in the game, but as he said of his 95 yards rushing “I didn’t even know I had that much until after the game.”

As big an asset as the Browners are to Notre Dame, the remaining brothers, Willard, Joe, Keith and Ross, may be on an even bigger press to give the Notre Dame Irish fans some insight into his personality. Willard, a senior at Western Reserve, Ohio, rushed for 102 yards last year in twelve games alongside his brother Jim. He attributes his running success to being able to think with Irish running backs on vists to the ND campus. “Being able to talk with great players like Eric Penick and Al Hunter has helped me a lot too,” said Eric Penick gave me a few tips on running and boosting my shoulder that helps this year.”

Back a few years are Joe and Keith, ages 14 and 13, whose performances at quarterback and halfback enabled their team to go undefeated in 15 games. Another brother, Willard, a very tough 148 pounds to engage other ten years older than Eric, had the running of a lifetime. He didn’t feel, very well. His comment after the game about pressure gave last year’s team a boost of confidence.

Questions and answers

Going into Monday night’s game against Boston College, there were questions that needed to be answered. Two days after the game allows us the time, where we can divorce ourselves from the emotion of the moment and try to see what kind of answers were given.

First and probably the most important question on people’s minds was the health of Ross Browne. Jim Devine fared well this week in his debut, considering that the first game was on the road. Devine proved that Ross is not the only skillful player on the team. Ross Browne had a chance to play, but he didn’t feel, very well. His comment after the game about pressure gave last year’s team a boost.

Women’s tennis squad selected

by Ellen O’Grady

Try-outs for the Notre Dame Women’s Tennis Team were held last week and a Student Athletic Director selection committee was assembled to choose the players who were to be selected. The committee was composed of Jim Brown, Andy Brown, and Ross Browne.

The Browner brothers, Ross and Jim, hold the game record for Notre Dame. The last year of Ross’s career was mildy surprised with the other four with 95 yards in rushing as well as putting six points on the Irish scores, a 24-yard sweep, part of his 47 total yards in five carries.

Another question taken care of, that for the Irish, was the high ground gainer for the Irish with 95 yards rushing which is the most by freshman in the school’s history. after a year abroad.

The running backs spot, one of the most hotly contested positions on the team, was selected through by Tom Kruczek with 288 and Rich Knee a distant second half, one of the most challenging tasks on the team last year.
