The Committee on Undergraduate Life (COUL) released last spring, cited create and maintain areas of neutral space for recreation on an informal basis.

"There is no tie to the classroom or dorm," said Syburg, COUL co-education committee chairperson. "The relationship between men and women that occurs in the classroom can be competitive, men are common places to meet and women that occurs in the library."

Sarah Thompson, Assistant Dean of the College of Arts and Letters, said, "The total encompasses approximately 20 percent of the undergraduate student body. Last fall, the total was 204 while in the spring the number decreased to 1,067 students."

"If I were to give an initial set of percentages, I think that I would have to say that the COUL is a reaction against grade inflation or greater academic pressure, according to Thompson."

"I thought this was unfair," was Thompson's view. "Everything is written in stone. He doesn't fail." Thompson continued. "I think the majority of students who get a D or F average at Notre Dame do not appear to be cut-throat tactics as sabatoging fellow students and we nailed them," he explained.

"The matter was sustained by an anonymous committee. It was made a matter of permanent record that they had been proven to be dishonest. Of course, they all got F's on the course." he states. "I refuse to look for cheating, but if he in the nose then I won't miss it," states Danehy.

One junior pre-med student thought that Notre Dame is drastically different from the schools listed in the survey. The severe cut-throat tactics are non-existent here. A junior woman pre-med student said cut-throat tactics were more prevalent in the larger lecture classes than in the smaller pre-med courses.

"As a result of his policy, he claims there is very little dishonesty in his course. "So far this year, I haven't seen any overt cheating," he contends.

The number of students receiving academic deficiency notices this semester totaled 1,114, an increase of 110 over last fall's figure.

Club founder looks back

RENO, Nev. (AP) - Four decades after he founded the casino that bears his name and five years after selling out to Howard Hughes, Harold Smith says he is "just a has-been."

Although he admits sorrow that Harolds Club was sold, he maintains he has no regrets after he prepares to leave Reno in search of something to keep him busy.

"It's been an exciting life," he said. "I lived it good. I lived it hard. I did it all over again. Change nothing. Not a damn thing." Smith says he started with nothing, worked it up, worked 11-9 hours a day, and made it.

"I've had plenty of women. Plenty of booze. Plenty of gamble. Now it's over. I don't live with regrets. Time to move on."

Harold Smith, now 65, whose club was once synonymous with Reno-style gambling, is far past the days when he rode his palomino into his casino and dined on a sumptuous feast.

Under the stern hand of his father, Raymond "Pappy" Smith, Harolds Club grew to become perhaps the nation's best known casino as "Harolds Club or Bust!" Billboards spread around the world.

The Harolds Club facilities were sold for $16 million to a New York investment group in 1962, with the Smith family retaining management control.

"Pappy" died in 1967 at the age of 80, and in 1969 Harold Smith went into what was then called a temporary retirement because of poor health.

In July 1970, the Smith family relinquished its remaining holdings to the Howard Hughes organization for $11.5 million.

In 1971, Harold Smith told reporters he'd bought an interest in a small cocktail lounge in downtown Reno. He still has the interest, but he doesn't care. "I'm not a bar man," he says.

Chairman of RCA leaves company

NEW YORK (AP) - Robert W. Sarnoff, chairman of RCA Corp, resigned Wednesday to devote his time to personal interests, the company said.

Sarnoff, 57, took over the giant communications company 10 years ago from his father, David Sarnoff, who had founded it.

Under the Sarnoff family, RCA formerly Radio Corp. of America, was among the pioneers of the home radio and television industries. It has diversified into a broad range of consumer and commercial electronic products and services.

Sarnoff's resignation will become effective Dec. 31. The board of directors designated Anthony L. Conrad, president and chief operating officer of RCA to become chief executive officer, one of his jobs, immediately.

Before directing RCA, Sarnoff led an RCA subsidiary, the National Broadcasting Co. in the summer session, except during the winter session, and is published by the student publications of North South and St. Mary's College submarine. Subscribers may purchase it per copy or more.

Crack not only defect in Bell

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Liberty Bell is not only cracked but might be America’s most ancient treasure.

"Scientifically speaking, it’s a piece of one of the largest Mike Modes, who spent an entire night last week making "radiograph" pictures, similar to X rays, of the nation's largest crack in Bell. The large crack that everyone knows about. It is also full of things called 'shrinkage' and 'porosity.'

These are soft spots created when the metal cooled after casting. These were common in the 1700s. So the good citizens of Philadelphia were not “taken” when they paid $303 to London’s Whitechapel Bell Foundry in 1700. London's Whitechapel Bell Foundry in 1700. London's Whitechapel Bell Foundry.

Franco fading fast

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A new specialist was summoned to Gen. Francisco Franco's bedside today, raising his medical team to 25, as the 82-year-old leader faced more blood clotting and lung complications.

In a political development, the university gave its permission, to use the Liberty Bell, is a symbol of the American people in the United States.

"But I do not think such an event was possible in the past. He stressed the drinking as a social purpose. The real purpose of the Death March is to salute the seniors and all they've done for the university."

Last year the Death March was turned into a fun event, with the Senior Classes of Notre Dame and St. Mary’s to get together. Grace said he considered the Death March to be a special."

"We have not been able to carry the burden of the last years, but it’s a good sign for the future."

Initially, Grace expressed disappointment with the administration concerning use of the Liberty Bell. "The purpose of the Death March is to respect the seniors," he said.

"The Death March is a day of reflection for the seniors," said a written proposal in order to get approval of the Death March committee.
Cheating, lack of help plague ND pre-meds

"The TA's just thought we'd get carried away and distracted the boys. We were just taking up their time, because they didn't think we would ever get into med-school," she stated.

She claimed that many times TA's gave girls the hardest questions and often ignored them in classes, especially in labs. She also mentioned that guys in the classes still stereotype girls in pre-med as not serious.

Another woman pre-med student disagreed with her.

"Most people are generally willing to help. Guys will go out of their way to help you," she said. "I do think it's difficult for a girl in pre-med here, but not because of cutthroat competition but because of socialization pressure," she added.

"The problem is not with the teachers but with many of the teaching assistants and the boys in the classes.

SMC begins business program

by Mary Rokavina

The St. Mary's Career Development Center is in the process of instituting a new program aimed at strengthening relations between the business world and academia.

Director of Career Planning Karen O'Neil described the program. "One way to increase communications between the business world and the college community is to invite representatives from various companies to come and meet on an informal basis with students, faculty and administrators.

The general idea behind the program is that the representative is a resource who would be available to the college for a day to talk to students who are interested.

O'Neil is hopeful that this will bring more understanding between businesses and the college. She feels this is important because business is changing so fast. "We lose track of what is happening in that community," she said.

"We have stereotypes of them and they have stereotypes of us. The important thing is that businesses realize that the image of women is changing away from that of secretary or wife of the chairman of the board.

She added, "The program originated out of an idea from the parents council and is in the early planning stages with many tentative specifics to be worked out yet.

Some topics that may be covered in discussions include the employment situation, how to improve the background in business for properly prepared job applicants.

"The business world is concerned that the applicants are not really prepared and they realize that they need to have a responsibility in this matter. They are willing to invest money in their representatives coming to college because they strongly feel about it."

She added, "Our interest at this end is great too, because we are a women's college and a liberal arts college. The business world is always talking about hiring women and yet the statistics just aren't there."

O'Neil feels that this program will give the college an opportunity to show that there are qualified women available for key positions in business and that there are positions which should be filled with liberal arts majors.

Because of the belief that there are positions in business for the liberal arts majors, the program is not geared solely to the business major, but it is open to any liberal arts majors as well.

O'Neil said, "Any program aimed at improving opportunities is mutually beneficial for both sides."

When I went to AT&T, I took Army ROTC with me

By the time Gerald Lucas got his college degree, he had two good jobs waiting for him in the Army. And, since he was graduating with a commission through Army ROTC, a job as an Army officer.

But he took them both. One at a time, of course. First he took his tour in the Army, then he took the skills he acquired there to AT&T.

Because, through Army ROTC, Jerry got some very practical experience in leading people and managing enterprises which he might not have got otherwise.

Of course, AT&T had to wait a bit to get Jerry. But what they got for the wait was a seasoned manager, who is now a Supervising Engineer with his eye on the next step.

Was the wait worth it to Jerry? "Well, to be honest," he says, "it had its pluses and minuses. But the pluses won. And if I had it to do over again, I'd do it the same way."

Company respects rights

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the "basic beliefs" of the International Business Machines Corp. is "respect for the dignity and the rights of each person in the organization."

This basic belief contradicted by doing business in South Africa, where an apartheid policy segregates blacks from whites and discriminates against them politically and economically.

Some critics, including church groups, have accused IBM of "manipulating" its sales operations or "wondering" whether IBM should challenge the South African government in court.

IBM has maintained its support of the South African government, but it has refused to comment on the precise nature of its support.

Frank T. Cary, IBM chairman, said in an interview, "We're politically neutral and we're not making any policies that are political.

This means that we're not supporting or criticizing any political party.

A distinction must be made between the activities and responsibilities of a corporation and those of a national government or an organization.

Our job is to make goods and services that are good for the community and our customers.

Certain critics have said that we're not doing enough to change the political situation in South Africa, but we don't think business can or should take that responsibility.

The South African condition, he said, "is not a matter of business ethics.

"The fact that I do business there means I'm approving of South Africa," he said, "or the Russian or Finnish or Irish or any other political system.

However, IBM statements are made by IBM as a business.

We do business with people who are not ordained by IBM, and we do not have any political views.

IBM has made a number of commitments to maintaining good relations with the South African government.

For example, IBM has been working with the South African government to develop new technologies.

Don't Surrender

Notre Dame Student Government has been working at improving an off-campus food co-op for over six months now and each plan has become less attractive to students and less likely to succeed.

In the first plan, released by the Ed Byrne administration on April 29, was well-presented and seemed feasible. Co-op organizers presented the student body with a solid proposal: for a five-dollar membership fee, students would receive ten to fifteen per cent discounts on food, clothing and records. Student Government provided an itemized survey of potential savings for members and five hundred memberships were secured. Recent co-op plans have degenerated into near oblivion. Gone are the savings and careful planning. Gone is the reality of the co-op.

Interest in the co-op has waned. Student Government has found fewer students interested for less than twenty-five thousand memberships.

Recently, the co-op has been hounded by the administration for it has not been able to work for less than twenty-five thousand memberships.

The problem is that the co-op has been hounded. It is too late to open a co-op this year. Most off-campus students are seniors and they would have but one semester in which to use the co-op. The apathy which greeted Student Government’s most recent proposal is no surprise.

The amount of time and effort student organizers have put into the co-op is admirable but that is not the issue. The point is that they have failed. They have failed to present a co-op plan which is inexpensive, attractive and easily accessible for off-campus students. Their recent plans have seemed tentative and unconvincing.

Having failed on the co-op enterprise, Student Government would do well to direct its energies elsewhere in providing relief to off-campus students. And its new work could easily be done right on campus.

Notre Dame is unique in its lack of decently-priced eating establishments on campus. There are three places on campus where off-campus students can buy dinner: McSharry’s, the Huddle and the Sacred Heart dining hall. The Huddle is the ice cream cone and an expensive, attractive and easily accessible for off-campus students. Their recent plans have seemed tentative and unconvincing.

Notre Dame is unique in its lack of decently-priced eating establishments on campus. There are three places on campus where off-campus students can buy dinner: McSharry’s, the Huddle and the Sacred Heart dining hall. The Huddle is the ice cream cone and a fast, cheap and not-so-quality option. One’s only bargain at the Huddle is the ice cream cone and a steady diet of ice cream is not often recommended.

Student Government should work for some change in the campus dining situation. Price reductions would be a good start. A local, homemade replacement for the Huddle with a commercial不是 sixes like McDonald’s or Burger Chef. McDonald’s makes food faster and cheaper and of better quality than the Huddle.

There are positive steps Student Government can take to aid the off-campus student. One defeat—no matter how frustrating—is no reason for Student Government to surrender.

Offensive Buildings

Dear Editor:

In the spirit of James Roemer, Dean of Students, I call upon the Notre Dame administration to remove or alter all of those buildings which might offend future visitors with their sexual connotations.

Because, unlike Dean Roemer, I also cared about the continuing effect these edifices would have on Notre Dame students. Such a superficial housecleaning as the removal of a few signs doesn’t have the foresight which my solution has.

The first buildings which attract attention on the Notre Dame campus are those with heavy sexual connotations such as the power plant smokestack and the staples of Sacred Heart Church and Washington Hall. These must be chopped down to an inoffensive size to avoid the entire student body walking around grim and white-faced as Father Hesburgh might have been during the USC weekend.

Next, there is the ACC. Enough has been said of the similarities between it and a certain women’s undergarment designed to lift and separate (you’re suddenly shapelier). But this isn’t the only campus structure that must go because of such connotations. Even Stopen Center, when compared with the gym, has picked up sexual connotations with reference to the physical condition of both our nation’s First and Second Ladies.

Offensive Reasoning

Dear Editor:

Concerning Dean Roemer’s comments about the student’s right to privacy, I must say that I find the Dean’s reasoning “offensive”.

Four of the Dean’s statements are most discouraging.

1) In reference to entering a student’s room to remove an “offensive” banner, Roemer said that he was not worried about particular rules at the time.”

2) Dean Roemer justified his actions by maintaining that “the orderly operation of an educational institution” was threatened.

DOONESBURY

by Garry Trudeau

It is amazing how medical technology in our society has advanced in the past 50 years. The average life expectancy has increased to 75 years. Organ transplants, for example, from rat transplants, is a common occurrence, cures for previously untreatable killer diseases such as malaria and bubonic plague are universally known, and even the cure for cancer is drawing near.

However, all these advances are creating moral dilemmas never before imagined, as in the case of Karen’s plight, who has been in a coma for five months.

Karen’s family wants to unplug the unlucky victim from the respirator that has been keeping her alive, but the doctors decided against it because they feared legal repercussions. The Quinians brought the case to court, and the final decision could affect hundreds of people in positions where they cannot personally communicate their will to live or die.

The Harvard Medical School has come up with a definition of brain death that has already been adopted as law in eight states. When the brain is declared dead (as opposed to the heart) vital life organs can be removed and transplanted into another individual. Now the question is how to define brain death artificially means another definition of death may be needed. If there is a statutory definition of death doctors are bound by law to follow it. If by law until that change or possibly face the cost of a malpractice suit, or perhaps even a murder charge.

It is very difficult for anyone to decide this, and it is questionable whether the patient has the right to decide his own values and possibly terminate his own life. People will soon be asking, Why am I thought to be in their “right mind” and near-suicide victims are labeled mentally unstable. After all, the will to survive is the basic thought to be in their conscious state. There are also the elderly who would rather die than live in a vegetative state. There are also the elderly who would rather die than live in a vegetative state.

2) Roemer mentions that the sign was “offensive” to Fr. Hesburgh and himself. Why do the feelings of one-thousand of the Notre Dame students? The deadlock is that an action should be taken which the majority of the community, in all likelihood, does not find “offensive”?

3) The Dean states that a student should pay close attention to the physical condition of both our nation’s First and Second Ladies.

People will soon be asking, Why am I thought to be in their “right mind” and near-suicide victims are labeled mentally unstable. After all, the will to survive is the basic thought to be in their conscious state. There are also the elderly who would rather die than live in a vegetative state.

The Harvard Medical School has come up with a definition of brain death that has already been adopted as law in eight states. When the brain is declared dead (as opposed to the heart) vital life organs can be removed and transplanted into another individual. Now the question is how to define brain death artificially means another definition of death may be needed. If there is a statutory definition of death doctors are bound by law to follow it. If by law until that change or possibly face the cost of a malpractice suit, or perhaps even a murder charge.

It is very difficult for anyone to decide this, and it is questionable whether the patient has the right to decide his own values and possibly terminate his own life. When thinking of Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young, most people automatically put Stephen Stills and Neil Young. After all, Crosby, Stills & Nash was produced and practically defined by Stills and Young. Deja Vu was enhanced by the mysterious presence of Young, because in between their original break-up and the recent national tours, Young has made the more successful solo albums (especially Harvest) while Stills had a brief shot with Manassas (band consisting in a couple of solo albums). CSNY was supposed to come out with a fourth album. Although the group made to themselves and did terribly, even though it notes from backup vocalists in the recording industry. Nonetheless, the story we told was a near-metropolis. We did, though, lose our way, kinda-sorta. To the east of Rome lay the Appenine mountains, which rest still and calm upon our return, at the end of city life are undefined by the inhabitants and are unaware of our presence, one day in the year, because the sun had been made to cross and then returned, was crawled into. What we were all gathered, the man and woman, the ox, and his beast had moved on down the road to fight the city again, and time. It was then when we were completely blanketed by a late afternoon fog. We lost test of anybody's concentration--if one can read them straight through, then anything will seem easy.

The trademark of Crosby & Nash has always been on their harmonies and this record does nothing to tarnish that reputation. Two seem to perfectly compliment each other perfectly well and received favorable reviews while the group made to themselves and did terribly, even though it

The presence of Nash orchestration is evident on their first album, Songs for Beginners, and in a deeper quality as compared to those on Graham Nash-David Crosby, their first collaboration. The group produced a fine album titled Wind on the Water.

Cumbine the harmonies, orchestra, and vocals, and the songs almost give Nash's voice a baritone quality. Together, they are the two folkies who produced a fine album titled Wind on the Water.

One of the main reasons for this is that everybody in the group is now making contributions. Whereas Graham and Payne used to dominate the writing and production ends of the group, George and David now contribute to the writing while the percussion section of Clanton and Bryan keep the band in motion. The group has a low, gravel-edged voice that is almost as brutal as it is beautiful. Nash has a tendency of writing protest lyrics and turning them into very appealing, pleasant songs. "Military Madness" is another example. The two songs that got most of the air play on the Frakes album were George's "I Don't Care" and Payne's "Oz."

Crosby's "Romeward Bound" is a fine example of this combination. Crosby drives his lyrics home with a very forceful vocal and fine harmonizing by Nash and Ring. Crosby George and David and Linda's voice complement the lead guitars and piano, and are held together by a key phrase: "Here we go again--and we're not alone anymore."

The group consists of George and Paul on guitars and vocals, Payne on keyboards and vocals, Ken Gradney on bass, Sam Clanton on congers and vocals, and Sam Clanton on congers and vocals. The group is truly geomorphic, more responsive to nature.

The north wind had brought a greyish light, and light-fated fourth album. The last record album is steady throughout while Barrere keeps a steady beat. George's lead vocals are more effective to boot than in previous ones.

Approaching Saracinesco again was an event pinched from a fairytale. The loft was Oz, or Chartre Cathedral (thus we be pilgrims). We, the ND-SMC delegation of 23 look out over the Appenine mountains, which rest still and calm upon the crest of the boot-panhandle之类不思议的, but not indistinct, non-ids they are. Even so, they did not seem to be unaware of our presence, one day in October.

Nonetheless, the story we told was a good one, and were not upset by the trimming of the summit. We set out on our monumental foot hike from the town of Perugia, and followed, Perched upon a lofty rock, we viewed the aposiopesis of sunset; dark grey clouds, precipitated by a sudden chill, and the light-fating silence of impending turn, by the time we crossed the ridge, the light-fated silence, continuous and shackled.

Grocery price inflation predicted to lag

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail food prices are expected to increase at a much slower pace next year than this year, according to a report by government experts who predict a continued decline in food prices this year will end with only a slight increase expected during the first three months of 1976.

The department's Outlook and Situation Board said its earlier forecast of a 9 per cent annual gain since 1972 when food prices were at their peak seems likely to hold. Retail food costs rose 4.5 per cent in 1972 and about the same margin in 1973.

Larry V. Summers, a food economist in USDA's Economic Research Service, emphasized that a 4 to 5 per cent food price increase in 1976 may seem reasonable. But by comparison, much lower inflation in other areas of the economy — and in the price of the basket of goods that the average consumer buys — makes the forecast of the USDA Outlook Service seem uncompetitive with the present high food prices.

Pennsylvania city elects four women to city council

SCHWENKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — This small Philadelphia suburb, long run by a steadfastly Republican borough council, has elected a new council majority — four women, including three incumbents, in Tuesday's election. The women now control the seven-member council.

Elizabethe Stengleberger, a 34-year-old Western Electric assembly line worker and mother of two, said the party's platform was based on providing a two-party system for the town and had nothing to do with feminism.

"We need a system that is just for our town," she said, noting that Schwengensville Democrats didn't even bother to nominate candidates for the four council seats up for election.

Schwenksville, population 6,000 and 38 miles northwest of Philadelphia, has about 90 Democrats among the town's 460 registered voters.

"It got to the point where it was really an unhealthy situation," Mrs. Stengleberger said of the uncompetitive political balance.

She expressed sympathy for the women's party — merely reflects the gender of its total membership of four.

None of the women had ever been involved in politics before, although most of them had been active in local civic affairs. Mrs. Stengleberger sounded pretty much like a seasoned politician when asked what caused her party to emerge. She pinned it on feminism.

"We want to give the town back to all the people. Let their voice be heard," she said. "We want to make constituents workers and the public will want to come and will be treated with respect.

The top vote-getter was Becky Msgill, a 47-year-old Western Electric employee and the mother of two, who got 189 votes.

George Williams, Dean of Admissions, will be visiting St. Mary's and Notre Dame on Friday, November 7. Appointments may be made by contacting the respective Placement Offices.

SADAT asks for U.S. support in Palestine

WASHINGTON (AP) - Egyptian President Anwar Sadat asked the United States Wednesday for support in his bid to reach a just solution to the Palestinian problem and said it is an inescapable responsibility for the United States and the world.

"We have reviewed and we cannot be expected to wait long," he told a joint meeting of the House and Senate in a meeting lasting almost three hours. "We would like to express our gratitude to the President and the Congress for meeting us in this way."

Sadat said the Palestinian problem is the core of the entire Middle East dispute. "Once solved, all other outstanding issues can be solved," he said.

He emphasized that the United States should lend the Palestinian people "your understanding and support." Sadat added: "The continuation of neglect and defiance is but an open invitation to violence, negativism and extremism."

Sadat held a final meeting with President Ford in the afternoon. After the meeting, newspaper reports said that no specific commitment was made on U.S. military aid to Egypt.

But Deputy Secretary of State Jack Straw said "visibly this is an issue that in time will have to be confronted."

Sadat also told newsmen after Sadat's strong appeal to Congress for U.S. support of a Palestinian solution that "our position has not changed."

He said that the meeting is that negotiations with the Palestine Liberation Organization can be suspended by the PLO's refusal to recognize Israel's right to exist.

The United States agreed in principle Wednesday to sell Egypt two nuclear reactors and related technology and supplies to operate them.

Many Egyptian congressmen stayed away from the Sadat session but others were there and joined the applause for Sadat's praiseworthy speech.

Sadat asked for U.S. help in establishing contacts with the Palestinians.

"One day, understanding," he continued. "Understanding helps develop solutions.

In an obvious reference to Palestinian terrorism, Sadat said other nations even with reservations about "certain aspects of Palestinian resistance" recognize its right to self-determination and statehood.

The Egyptian President proposed on Tuesday that a Palestinian state be carved out of the Israeli-occupied Jordan河西 and the Gaza Strip."

Washington is not in support of the president.

Earlier, military commandes met to discuss their political role in the crisis-ridden nation said that neither her health nor her record of interior minister."

She also told newsmen that "contacts with the Israelis must be continued."

Sadat also said that the U.S. military aid program to Egypt has been increased to "new levels of cooperation." Sadat said he thought Miss Fromme will be charged with training."

Another potential juror, Edward Hoagland, said he had been taught in the military that "if you point a gun at a person you intend to kill them."

But MacBride let him remain after he said in response to a written question submitted by Miss Fromme that he could understand that training as a judge.

MacBride has said that the prosecution must prove both that Miss Fromme passed a gun at Ford and that she intended to kill him.

Miss Fromme objected when the judge refused to allow a potential juror who said she felt that if Miss Fromme had a gun she would probably intended to kill Ford. "I think that's sensible," Miss Fromme said in a written statement. She then told MacBride: "I understand to ask if she thinks that would prejudice her.

"I think that was the question I asked her," MacBride replied.

He then repeated the question to juror Claire Davenport. She replied: "I think I probably would. But MacBride dismissed her.

Theology department to teach two new courses

by Ken Bradfeld

Two theology courses, "Modern Decision-Making and the Christian Tradition" and "Christian Community," will be offered for the first time next semester.

Theology teachers will be taught by Dr. Frank Reynolds and John Holt from the University of Chicago. These courses will include myths, doctrines, rituals, meditations, practices, ethical concerns, and organizational patterns which are parts of both the monastic and lay settings of church life.

Readings and class discussion will focus on primary texts which are available in English translation. Reynolds is an expert on the history of religions at the Divinity School in Chicago.

The "Modern Decision-Making" course, cross-listed under the theology and management departments, will be taught by Prof John Hoek and Fr. William Williams.

The course is designed to understand the importance of Christian faith in real life problems.

Hoek and Williams will lead discussion on case studies which portray concrete situations involving issues of public policy as well as business and personal life.

The case-studies will involve students in such issues as world hunger, corporate social responsibility, the limits of the profit motive, the tensions between individual conscience and institutional life, the role of women in church and society, and the limits of technological society.

According to the course description, these two courses will be to discern crucial issues in relation to particular articles of Christian faith and to develop understanding of the case and for making judgments about the issues raised.
Students' vote reduces marijuana penalty

OXFORD, Ohio (AP) — "It's a sign of the times that students and other young people are asking questions and things happen," said John Williar, a political science professor at Miami University. "They're aware of the issues, and they're demanding to be included in the decision-making process of their communities." For the first time in decades, the issue of marijuana legalization was voted on open, with a majority of students deciding in favor of decriminalizing marijuana possession.

The vote was taken at a town hall meeting in the university's student center, where hundreds of students and community members gathered to discuss the issue. The meeting was moderated by Miami University President Greg Crawford, who thanked the students for their thoughtful and passionate discussion.

"I think the defeat of two other issues was as significant as anything," said Williamson, referring to the rejection of two issues seeking sale and consumption of strong beer and wine at city bars.

"We didn't want Oxford to become another Athens, where they have 9:00-2:00 beer. We wanted to preserve Oxford's atmosphere as a quiet college town," he said.

The marijuana issue passed 501 to 210. Voters approved the proposal to have regular beer and wine available at carry-outs by a 310 to 263 margin. The referendum to okay a state liquor store passed 1906 to 1967. An Ohio drug reform will pass the legislature this year, reducing the severity of marijuana possession. It makes possession of less than 3.5 ounces of marijuana an offense punishable by no more than a $100 fine.

UFW rallies against food chain

by John Calcutt

Staff Reporter

The United Farm Workers of America are sponsoring a march and rally on Saturday, November 8, at 11 a.m. in Chicago to protest unfair labor practices by the Jewel Food Stores chain.

The march is being called "Open committee policy adopted"

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted unanimously Wednesday to require for the first time that all its committees be open to the public.

The 86-0 vote was a major victory for advocates of "government-in-the-sunshine" legislation, who have long sought to get a similar open-meeting requirement adopted for many federal agencies.

The Senate approved a resolution by Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., to require all meetings to be open unless a majority of committee members vote to close them.

Such a vote would have to be taken in open session, however, and committees could only be closed for narrowly defined exigencies — such as matters that relate to national security. A 67-30 vote, the Senate also agreed to extend the open-meeting concept to House-Senate conference committees named to work out differences in bills passed by each chamber.

The House already had agreed to open conference committee.

All House meetings currently are open unless committee members vote to close them. But in the Senate, business meetings are considered closed unless a committee votes to open them.

A few measures, by Chiles, which is cosponsored by more than 50 senators, is scheduled for Senate debate Thursday. It would prohibit most closed-door sessions by some federal agencies, boards and commissions.

Earlier, the Senate rejected, 77 to 18, a proposal by the Senate Agriculture Committee that would have, in effect, allowed committees to set their own rules on whether to conduct business in closed open sessions.

The specialty teams play an important role on any football team. And the Notre Dame specialty teams are proving their importance. While the offense has been sputtering, the specialty teams have been and have given the Irish the ball in excellent field position for most of the season.

The special teams include: punt block, punt return, kickoff, onside kick, kickoff return, field goal and extra point teams. Any or all of which can be vital in a game.

Head Coach Dan Devine realizes the importance of the specialty teams. "We believe in specialty teams and it's been passed on," Ed Chlebek, specialty teams coach, said. "We've been working hard on them and the players really believe in them."

The Irish work on each of the specialty teams everyday in practice.

Each of the specialty teams has a number of set plays. For example, on kick returns, each blocker has a specific assignment in order to set up a wall along the sidelines for the return. Every play executed by the specialty teams is a designed play.

But of all the aspects of special teams, the Irish have managed to block three punts (including one against Southern Cal that calls back) and have given the Irish the ball in important role on any football block, punt return, punt, kickoff, 12 the observer Thursday, November 6, 1975.

Baseball team completes intra-squad scrimmage

by Rich Odioso

The fall practice season is over for the Notre Dame baseball team and new head coach Tom Kelly is very happy with what he saw. "I was really pleased with the attitude of our players, they worked hard all fall and did a lot of good things."

Coach Kelly, who has a reputation as a quality hitting instructor, put together a tourney dividing his squad of over 60 hopefuls into four teams. "This gave me a chance to look over everybody under game conditions and see which men we need with a chance to sharpen their play in game situations." Each team played twelve games with returning pitchers capturing each squad. The final standings:

The Green Machine (Bob Statta) 6-4
The Wolfpack (Don Wolfe) 6-4
The Fighting Irish (Jim Sholl) 5-5
The Hustlers (Mitch Statta) 5-7

"I think we're going to have good pitching," commented Kelly in the midst of the tourney. Notre Dame had a fine staff last year and all nine Irish pitchers return plus freshman Mike Robinski who blanked in the opening game. The Irish won 2-1 this fall after a rain in the home. Hitting may not be as big a problem as graduation leaves suggest. A pair of freshmen, shortstop Rick Tarnoczy, outfielder Dan Monroe both hit over .325 and return Mike Galley, Bob Stratia, and Mitch Stolls all had good summers with the bat. A number of players who saw limited action with the Irish in the past—Frank Funck, Jim Abballebro, Dave DeFaccio, Dave Lazzeri and Joe Alonso—all hit .300 or better and appear ready to step in.

Pep rally Friday

The pep rally for the Georgia Tech game was held on the football field on Friday night, 7 p.m., in Stephenson Stadium, Chestnut Street on the Notre Dame Campus.

Head Coach Dan Devine, Coaches Ed Chlebek & John Roland, and co-captains Ed Bauer & Jim Stock were the speakers.

The band will step off at 6:40 from Washington Hall and request all bikes be removed from their path.

Dillon elected to kick because there was still plenty of time left. The snap was low and Griffin had trouble getting it down. This was all the opportunity that lineman Gary Hakkenner needed as he stormed through the line and blocked Holicky's kick to give Pangborn their margin of victory. But Dillon did not give up as the game moved into the 4th quarter. After having an 86-yd. punt return canceled back because the ball was out of bounds, they moved the ball deep into Pangborn from their own 30-most of the yardage coming on a 32-yard burst by Brien. At this point, Pangborn kicked off and Brien noted that the dropkick and their punter faked out the holder.

Dan Vautman of Pangborn recovered on the 30 but could not find an opening to advance further. Dillon had one more chance to go to the air. Incomplete passes and a sack, his 4th down pass was just inches short of a first down. Pangborn took over the ball, ran out the clock, and the title was theirs.

"I really am proud of these guys," said Pangborn coach Jett Jeffers. "Our defense was the backbone of our team all season and they came through for us again. I'm really looking forward to playing Keenan."

The vaunted "Vengeance" defense was led by the superb play of linebacker Bob Dalpes, nose guard Witkowski and end Jay Van Heyde. Their hard hitting inside and their wide pursuit continually shut down the Dillon ground game.

After the game, the Dillon bench was the scene of many dejected faces, but they were proud faces. Coach Paul Linhean expressed the same pride in his club that Jeffers did.

"I'm really proud of this team. They worked their butts off to get here tonight and knew our game. We knew Pangborn this year. We have to remember that this is not the overpowering Dillon team of past years. These guys started fresh and had to work hard to get here and (that's why) they're so disappointed right now."

For Dillon, it's looking toward next season but Pangborn must take on undefeated Keenan on Sunday afternoon at Cartier Field for the conference championship.
