Knowledge lacking about Honesty Policy

By Jill Treuil

Noire Dame students seem to be unaware of the Academic Honesty Policy passed last May by the Academic Council, according to John T. Goldrick, director of admissions.

"There seems to be a noticeable lack of knowledge among students that the Academic Council passed an honesty policy," said Goldrick.

Goldrick heads the Academic Honesty Committee, a Student Life Council (SLC) Policy and Planning subcommittee. The committee first met Nov. 5, Goldrick revealed.

"We will be doing research and discussing the honest behavior at the University," Goldrick explained.

The Academic Honesty Policy's guidelines include monitoring of examinations and assignments.

In the absence of a university-wide policy, the committee decided to hold a procedure for a teacher to see that he could prove students who are adequately monitored, the policy stated.

The policy proposed that students pledge to uphold honest policies in all classes, and to report cheating when the semester begins.

According to the policy, students may refuse to sign the form. Their decision will be held confidential.

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Cit is accumulating a deficit of $1.1 billion beyond that already accounted for in the city books because for months it has not been able to borrow for capital expenses.

The $1.5 billion is separate from the $991 million generally acknowledged by the city as the shortfall in the 1975 budget.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Banking Committee voted Wednesday to kill President Ford's nomination of Ben W. Blackburn, a respected congressman, to head the Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

Opponents said Blackburn, a Republican who served three terms with Ford in the House, was too insensitive to the needs and rights of minorities to serve in a post that sets federal policy on equal access to home mortgage money.

Notre Dame will host the 24th Annual National Invitational Debate Tournament this weekend, Nov. 14-16.

Fifty teams representing 29 schools and nine states will participate in the tournament. Notre Dame will be represented by 15 students who will divide into three or four sub-teams.

The purpose of the competition will be "Resolves. That the Federal Government Should Institute a Comprehensive Program of Land Use Control in the United States."

The tournament will consist of eight preliminary rounds in addition to the final rounds.

John Borkowski, debate club assistant, termed the field of this week's competition "extremely good."

The tournament will be the largest debate competition held on Notre Dame's campus ever scheduled.

"Not as many people were going around(env.) this time last year," a Notre Dame sophomore commented. "This year everyone's dragging around half­"died."

Unusual weather conditions were given as another reason for the greater number of colds. Sudden temperature changes have left students unprepared for cold winter weather.

"Right now we have one flu case and a lot of people have colds," Hindu Konig, section leader in St. Mary's infirmary estimated it handles about 10 cases of upper thaws, colds or flu per day last week. Notre Dame infirmary officials were unavailable for comment.

Notre Dame and St. Mary's students have been complaining about an increase in colds and illnesses on the campuses.

The increase is especially prevalent among freshmen, they said, and cited lack of sleep as the main cause.

"Almost all of my friends are sick because of overwork," Libby Lamb, freshman at St. Mary's, said.

"They pull all-nighters,skip meals and just get run down. Then they get sick," she added.

Most freshmen agree that academic pressures are keeping them from rest.

Many upperclassmen feel that the problem could have been avoided had a mid­semester break been scheduled.

Students in the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps are happy with the leadership training they are receiving and the open relationship they have with the officers.

However, some freely admit they are in the program only for the money. Others feel that drill is not only a waste of time but that it discourages highly competent people from entering the program.

"Drill is too tedious so we give it for only one semester," said the unit commander, Colonel Alvin Gendron. "These kids and I are too damn bright today."

During the second semester the students have a number of options to choose from as a replacement for drill. A ranger team, drill team, orienteering and map reading and physical training are included in the options.

George Lucas will work with the ranger team. The Irish raiders, during the second semester. Reconnaissance and patrol are the hardest subjects to adequately learn in a classroom and Lucas likes the opportunity for practical field experience.

"We do reconnaissance of an enemy objective and go out with our M-14's and the new Proprietor's Manual last fall," Lucas said.

The sophomore team, orienteering and map reading and physical training are included in the options.

"I'd give it a 10 on a scale of one to 10," Faainuinu said.

Drill tedious for some David Faainuinu said drill, while tedious in many cases for the freshmen and sophomores, helps the juniors learn to be leaders.

"I'd give it a 10 on a scale of one to 10," Faainuinu said.

However, one sophomore said that drill is much too tedious after one has done it twice. Another sophomore said that drill is intended to help the juniors prepare for summer camp and that it is constructive to that extent.

However, the majority of students are freshmen and sophomores, the student noted, of whom have taken ROTC at high school. For these students drill is just another walking round in circles in the parking lot, he said.

The same student then became more specific in his criticism. "The air drill is a total waste of time just to pursue more constructive ways of teaching leadership," he said.

He said he would favor dropping drill altogether and eliminating the尔来 haircuts regulations for freshmen and sophomores.

"The Army has good things to offer for the right type of person," he said. "But many people are turned off by the haircuts regulations and drill.

The first two years should concentrate on teaching what Army life is about. It will attract wellrounded kids and the enrollment will go up," he said.

The elimination of the strictly military aspects of the program for the first two years would attract a broader cross section of students, the sophomore maintained.

He characterized the students now as "intolerant" and that they want to be part of "the Army brats."

The senior student stated that the weering of uniforms and military customs and courtesies could be easily learned in just the last two years.

Course of study Gendron outlined the classroom work done by the students.

Freshmen study political science, military history, the relationship of the President, Pentagon and military.

Sophomores study military history, current events, map reading and photo interpretation.

Juniors delve into leadership and management techniques.

Seniors also take a management course and a one-credit course in military law.

None of the students thought the courses were monotonous.

Joseph Palamela, a military school transfer, described the instructors as "fantastic."

He stated that many of the instructors were new at the beginning of the year and weren't used to teaching.

According to battalion literature, students may also participate in a color guard, rifle team, and write for the unit newsletter, the Blueshark, and enter in national drill competition with the drill team.

The literature also lists 25 awards and decorations which may be won by cadets.

During the second semester the students have a number of options to choose from as a replacement for drill. A ranger team drill team, orienteering and map reading and physical training are included in the options.

"But they caught on pretty quick," Lucas said. "To be an Army officer you have to be top notch."

On the other hand, one sophomore thought the officers are too demanding and stick to ROTC over regular academics.

Many of the students said the instructors are friendly.

Cadem executive officer, John Ormesty, said that the instructors are close to their students. The students often watch the away football games on the color television at the ROTC building allowing informal contact with the officers, Ormesty said.

He also mentioned that Major Alexander Cochran bailed some of the ROTC students out of jail last year, and praised his concern.

Benefits Army ROTC students, like other ROTC students on scholarship, have their tuition, books, fees paid by the government.

The Army also pays them a $100 a month maintenance allowance.

Gregory Quackenbush is taking advantage of the free flying lessons with a local pilot provided for in the program. Lucas said the leadership training is a preparation for his career. He said that many employers look favorably upon experience as an Army officer.

Fieldhouse may go

by John Hansen

The fieldhouse may be done away with. Plans for tearing down the seventh-eight-year-old facility for the Art Department have been circulating for a number of years.

Bill Kremer, assistant professor in the Art Department, indicated there was substance to these rumors.

"Sure there is substance to the rumors," he said. "They haven't maintained this place at all, all the maintenance is on our own. We never had a chance to patch the roof. I've built every inch of it with my own hands."

According to Bill Carter, an architecture student who has picked the design of the new Art building as his thesis, the new facility was scheduled to be behind the bookstore and in front of the Architecture Building.

Now, however, the new facility will not be located there.

"Plans keep changing," Carter stated. "The Art Department kind of wants to keep the fieldhouse."

Renovation costs

A study was made years ago showing to renovate the structure of the fieldhouse would cost 1.3 million dollars, Carter said. "With inflation, it would now be considerably more," he noted. According to Carter, the new building is still up in the air, even within the Art Department.

Kremer commented he does not think the structure of the fieldhouse has any serious defects.

"Any one of the walls is perfectly straight," The Administration Building has more cracks," he said.

"But the school may have to put a little money in the real this year," Kremer pointed out. The roof leaks badly, he said.

Kremer is opposed to tearing down the fieldhouse. He feels the use of the space justifies its existence.

The fieldhouse has brought together-the elements of the scattered Art Department, he said.

Kremer did offer some criticism of the fieldhouse. He said the space is not being fully utilized.

He noted the ceiling is high enough to have a second floor installed. The bleachers could be knocked out for a painting studio, once the natural light is good there, he pointed out.

More room needed

The Art Department needs more room, according to Kremer. "Footprints is very cramped," he said.

Kremer also feels the building is good for the ceramics program and the Art Department. He called the fieldhouse the "biggest ceramics shop in the country."

"We give everyone studio space, so they can develop their personality and not have their work thrown in with a mass of others," he explained.

"This sense of environment develops excitement," Kremer stated.

He added, "This place is attractive to grad students. The purpose of working in this kind of space is to think and be so cramped as at other colleges. But we can't live on excitement forever!"

Kremer remarked. He noted that the fieldhouse is nice. Kremer attributed the fieldhouse space as a major factor in keeping the University competitive with other institutions.

Student feel of studio before they get out of school.

"Other people are envious of our space," Kremer remarked. He added, "Known people involved in the summerworkshop at the fieldhouse were impressed with the environment."

"Kremer pointed out the applications for graduate studies in art at Notre Dame are on the rise again this year in spite of the tuition. Kremer attributed the fieldhouse space as a major factor in this."

WASHINGTON (AP) - Granting a last-minute con­ cession to the Ford adminis­ tration, congressional conferees approved a comprehensive energy bill Wednesday that would roll back consumer fuel prices for two years.

Most Republican conferees voted for the comprehensive and Democratic leaders said the plan is acceptable to adminis­ tration officials.

Expected acceptance of the plan by the full house and Sen­ ate, probably next week, would end a 10-month-long dispute be­ tween the Democratic Congress and the Republican President over the shape of national ener­ gy policy.

For consumers, the most ob­ vious effect would be a 3.5-cent-per-gallon rollback in the price of gasoline and home-heating oil until about September 1977, when prices would return to to­ day's levels before resuming their upward climb.

The plan accepted unani­ mously by the seven House con­ ferreces and on a 172-2 vote by their Senate counterparts is only slightly different from the one accepted last week.

The key difference is a provi­ sion in the Senate bill that could result in above-average prices for ultra-low-sulfur diesel fuel that will begin flowing from Alaska in late 1977.

The pricing provisions are the major part of a com­ prehensive energy bill that re­ quires automobile manufac­ turers to build cars that use less fuel and requires the states to enforce energy-conservation plans.

The conference committee is expected to finish work on the bill this week, but that would not allow enough time to get the final version approved by the full House and Senate be­ fore current oil-price controls expire on Saturday.

However, the pricing provi­ sions in the bill will be retro­ active to Saturday, meaning that oil companies will not be in a position to raise prices without justification pending fi­ nal approval of the bill by Ford.

Let's be realistic about the calendar — for a change.

The academic calendar for next fall is virtually signed, sealed and delivered. It awaits only the approval of St. Mary's. The calendar is one that almost no one wants. It features a post-Labor Day start, Saturday class in November, and a finishing date very close to Christmas. Its most glaring deficiency is that there is no break in October.

But, barring a massive student uprising, the simple fact is that this calendar will not be changed. Students will again be forced to struggle through another October without a break from the daily grind.

Unfortunately, the only way students may get an October break is to start classes before Labor Day. Last year, a Student Government poll showed the vast majority of students opposed starting before Labor Day. However, the student preference is irrelevant in this case. Based on the guidelines established by the Academic Council last year, the University has already scheduled a conference of Christian Charismatics during the weekend freshman orientation would begin under a pre-Labor Day start. It may prove impossible for the University to break that commitment to the Charismatics.

Some students have proposed that next semester's calendar follow that of fall 1973 with a two-day break in mid-October and a regular Thanksgiving break. This proposal for next semester will meet stiff opposition because the number of class days would dip below 70. Fr. Burchaell and the Academic Council have set 70 days as the required length for any semester.

The basic question concerning the fall calendar is this: despite the near unanimity that some kind of October break is necessary, why can't a satisfactory calendar be adopted? An October break is favored by virtually all the students. In a year when academic pressure on campus is noticeably increased a break is more needed than ever.

What many do not realize is that many administrators favor the October break. Fr. Burchaell has been on record for a week-long break in October since the calendar controversy began over two years ago.

In last year's Student Government poll, 30 percent of the students and 30 percent of the faculty favored the calendar for next semester will meet stiff opposition with a two-day break in October and a week-long Thanksgiving break. Thirty-three percent of the students and 31 percent of the faculty opposed a calendar like that of fall 1973 with short October and Thanksgiving breaks.

What is most significant is that only 11 percent of the students and 14 percent of the faculty said they favored the calendar we are now all struggling through.

Somewhere in last year's confusion over the calendar, the Academic Council voted guidelines that produced a calendar no one wanted. Some students have charged they were short-changed by the Council. What was advertised as an extended Thanksgiving break was merely the two-day break we have now and not the week-long break the students and faculty said they wanted.

Regardless of how this semester's calendar came about, it is important that next fall's calendar include some kind of October break. It would be worthwhile for the University to drop below 70 class days next fall just to grant a two or three-day break in October. The gain in student and faculty rest would more than outweigh the alleged loss in academic quality. Besides, the 70 day requirement is not necessary for academic accreditation.

But, none of next fall's calendar will be changed unless students start to get excited about it. If not, students may be left in the perennial position of Chicago Bear fans: "Wait until next year."

In the next few weeks the financial panic of last October over the City of New York will fall to bankruptcy unless positive steps are taken by the federal government.

Several faculty members and students responded last night to President Ford's failure to back the largest city of the world trade. Dr. John Malone, associate dean and director of the graduate division of Business Administration, summed up the feelings of those interviewed.

"I feel this is a very serious economic question and any action by President Ford and the Federal Government is simply half-baked," said Malone. "Malone believes the government should initiate a guarantee program and stand behind the city."

By this, the government would take the position of guaranteeing the municipal bonds, thereby making them marketable. Otherwise, the bonds would become worthless.

"As long as 'co-signers' of the bonds, the government could prevent disastrous situations in banks, the markets of other American cities and economic recovery of the country," said Malone.

Budget reforms needed

On the other hand, Malone said the government shouldn't insist that New York set up budgetary reforms and various other forms so the dilemma could be avoided in the future.

Similarly, Professor Emeritus of Finance Dr. Raymond Kent said Ford is quite wrong in his attitude toward New York City.

"It's simply not sensible for a President to make a move like this especially when he's up for re-election," commented Kent.

Kent feels that permitting New York City to default is a very serious mistake for the entire country as well as for international markets.

"Somebody is going to suffer from this decision, and we can only mean a backup effect on American bonds and on the international market. Interest rates will soar even higher than they are now," Kent explained.

"It can only mean a step back into deeper recession," he added.

"Hopefully, Congress will pass the currently-proposed bill providing reservations in Presidential veto so that the President won't have the economy and any political gains from trying to re-elect him," Kent said.

"I don't think the election is very close. For campaigning for 14 and 15 months before the election, Ford is obviously demonstrating much more interest in his job he already holds by appointment rather than fulfilling the responsibilities of the Presidency," he remarked.

Dr. Adam Arnold, associate professor of Business Economics and Finance, agreed with Malone.

Mock Convention plans speakers

The Mock Convention Executive Committee has announced the speakers for tonight's session of the Public Platform Hearings. Edward Chapleau, chief trial lawyer with the St. Joseph's County Prosecutor's Office, will speak in favor of gun control. Howard Williams, Notre Dame Law School student, will talk against gun control.

Williams is an avid pistol target shooter. He has authored several articles and a book.

The session will start at 7 p.m. in the Memorial Library Auditorium.

Norb Sax, a freshman business intern from a New Jersey suburb, was "upset" by Ford's inaction.

"It's most important that New York stay on its feet because it represents the people of the U.S. in foreign language," he pointed out.

Sax added: "I can just imagine the economic bust if the federal government refused to back the city. People won't be jumping out of windows this time, they'll be pushing congressmen and presidents out."

Sophomore government major Dave Nani said, "The only thing in New York worth saving is the Mets," he quickly added.

"Seriously, the financial situation would be in ruin and both the city and country would be plunged into economic disaster."

Nani continued. "In order to get re-elected, Ford would have to carry both California and New York, and he goes through with his plan of idleness. New York surely won't vote for him."

New York City is on the verge of bankruptcy and President Ford continues to withhold the necessary financial aid.

Professors and students react to New York's financial crisis

Ford lenient to NYC; aid still not promised

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Ford administration is adopting a more flexible stance toward New York City's fiscal problems but still is not promising any financial aid, administration sources said today.

The change in stance, which was described as one of offering "encouragement," resulted partly from steps city and state officials have taken and partly from adverse reaction to President Ford's hard-line, no-bail-out statement on Oct. 27.

Ford was said to be considering a new statement on New York City, although a firm decision reportedly has not been made.

However, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the President's position remains unchanged on any promise of financial aid. Nessen repeated the comment for emphasis.

While Ford is "encouraged" by the work city and state officials are doing to solve their own problems," Nessen said, the President has always believed New York City can avoid default.

There has been a considerable shift in the last 24 hours in the position of many officials in the administration, the Congress and the Federal Reserve Board, who previously had opposed federal help for the city.

The New York Post, meanwhile, said state officials are optimistically awaiting word, which they expect today or Thursday, that President Ford has reversed his position and will not help the city until it goes into default.

Their hope is that Ford will accept the state's last-ditch maneuver to raise taxes, cut the city pensions, lower interest payments to banks and lay off more city workers to win federal loan guarantees to block default, the newspaper reported.

At the same time, the stock market accelerated its buying, suggesting a favorable resolution of the city's financial woes.

The noon Dow Jones average of 36 industrial stocks was up 7.48 at 846.03. Gainers outstripped losers by about a 7 to 1 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

New York officials presented their plans for restoring financial soundness to New York City during a two-hour meeting Tuesday with Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, Chair­man Arthur F. Burns of the Federal Reserve Board and L. William Seidman, economic adviser to Ford.

But one participant at the meeting, Assistant Treasury Secretary Gerald L. Parry, said of the plan that "the very tentative nature of it makes it difficult for us to judge on it." Nessen said Ford has not talked to Burns recently about the city's problems.

Other sources, however, said administration officials are encouraged by recent steps by New York City and state officials and therefore Ford's advisers are recommending he assure the city its financial aid and forward the city to demonstrate this "encouragement."

"We have already felt avoiding a default is something we all want to do, but the principal responsibility for doing that lays at the state and local level," said one source.

The noon Dow Jones average was 846.03.

Mock Convention plans speakers

The Mock Convention Executive Committee has announced the speakers for tonight's session of the Public Platform Hearings. Edward Chapleau, chief trial lawyer with the St. Joseph's County Prosecutor's Office, will speak in favor of gun control. Howard Williams, Notre Dame Law School student, will talk against gun control.

Williams is an avid pistol target shooter. He has authored several articles and a book.

The session will start at 7 p.m. in the Memorial Library Auditorium.

WALDOSMITH won’t refuse VP bid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Donald H. Rumsfeld, designated by President Ford to be secretary of defense, refused today to rule himself out of considerations for Republican vice presidential nomination.

Rumsfeld said the Senate Armed Services Committee at his confirmation hearing that it would be "realistic presumptions of me to stand up and take my ticket something I am not being considered for." Rumsfeld was asked about his potential political ambitions by Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

In response to another Jackson question, Rumsfeld said he had nothing to do with the ouster of Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger.

In fact, Rumsfeld said, he gave President Ford advice on the matter that was "different from the result that occurred." Jackson said it has been a tradition for secretaries of defense and state to stay out of politics and not go on the stump and make political speeches.

Of that you can be certain," Rumsfeld responded. "I am not running for anything.

Rumsfeld said his plan is to serve as effectively as possible in the Defense Department for as long as the President desires. He said he is not seeking and will not be seeking any other position.

ND supports right to food

Notre Dame's World Hunger Coalition has joined the United Religious Community of St. Joseph County in sponsoring an "offering of letters" in support of a resolution on the right to food for all mankind.

The area groups are asking all concerned individuals to write to their legislator, stamp the envelope, and drop it in the collection basket on dates chosen by the church.

If the church does not participate in an organized way, the writer is asked to drop it in a mailbox.

The letters to senators and congressmen urging approval of the resolution will be in addition to the Thanksgiving-season collection of food and cash gifts.

Members of the University organization are ready to appear as guest speakers at religious services, show film strips, lead panel discussions or produce brief sermon announcements during the campaign extending over the last three Sundays of November.

The letter campaign seeks to produce a flood of letters to Senators Bayh and Hartke and Congressmen John Brademas or Joseph C. Byrne,,the first presidential primary— in New Hampshire—is over. The others. He said other candidates have already spent much time and money in New Hampshire and that he is not "tucking" into it.

"I just feel like you have nothing to gain and everything to lose by campaigning there," he said.

He said Massachusetts would be his first primary test, and added, "I'm not supposed to get any votes in Massachusetts . . . I think we'll do better.

The 56-year-old governor, surrounded by his wife Cornelia and family, looked fit and raised repeated cheers from about 300 supporters, including a small number of blacks.

The crowd holed a reporter who asked the partially paralyzed Wallace if he would submit to a medical examination by an independent team of doctors. And if laughed when Wallace answered by saying: "One group of doctors says 'cut him open.' The next group says 'saw him up.'"

But he added: "If other candidates want to submit to this board, I'll consider it."

Wallace, who was crippled by a would-be assassin while campaigning in Laurel, Md., in 1972, was later asked once again about his health and said, "Yes, I'm tired. I'll tell you what I'm tired of. I'm tired of people asking me about my health."

When asked if he would accept the vice-presidential nomination, Wallace said, "I'm not running for vice president, but you don't want to paint yourself into a corner. I just don't think that I would."

US leaders to speak on alcohol

Notre Dame will host a three-day seminar on alcohol and alcohol abuse prevention on Nov. 21-23 in the Center for Continuing Education.

More than 125 students, faculty and administrators from 63 colleges and universities will work by national leaders focusing on education, rather than prohibition.

Notre Dame student government and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) are co-sponsoring the seminar.

The focus of the seminar and following activities is to provide the university community with accurate information to assist in making responsible decisions.

The seminar is not part of an anti-drinking campaign or the beginning of a new federal effort to control the drinking habits of Americans, organizers said.

The seminar is a culmination of visits by staff members to 63 schools during the last 12 months.

The objective, he said, was to disseminate information about alcohol abuse and to encourage campus leaders to take a critical look at drinking behavior on their campuses.

As a result of these meetings, an estimated 32 projects and activities have been initiated at the campuses visited.

Special task forces on alcohol have been established at seven colleges and 14 schools have undertaken education projects for residence hall advisors.

Another 18 schools have held or are planning "alcohol awareness days" on their campuses.

When the 63 campus visits were completed, an editorial board had been established consisting of students and faculty interested in alcohol education.

The editorial board helped develop the first draft of a manual on alcohol education and information.

One of the tasks of the seminar participants, according to campus leaders, is to take a critical look at drinking behavior on their campuses.

"We have served as a catalyst in this effort but the university community has been the real force behind the development of this manual," Phelps said.

"Much of the material in the draft manual is based on alcohol information and education projects that are operating on the campuses visited."

As many as 100 different projects or activities are described in detail along with information on how to get such a project underway.

John Marin, Marsden Hartley, and Vlaminck, famous pre-Cubist painters and others, are the subjects of the Moreau-Main Gallery at Notre Dame which will open in the Moreau-Main Gallery on Nov. 12 through England, Italy, North Africa, and France. They worked in New Mexico where he painted during the last 20 years of his life.

Nordfeldt's paintings are American in spirit, and his work is stylistically associated with the works of John Marin, Marsden Hartley, and Arthur Dove.

The show will run until Monday, December 8. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. daily and admission is free.

For regular service until 6 p.m., buses will leave LeMans every 30 minutes on the hour and half-hour. Buses will leave Nieuwland every 30 minutes on the quarter hours. The designated stops from Nieuwland are Nieuwland Memorial Library, bus shelter. The designated stops from LeMans are LeMans, the Grotto, Madeleva and LeMans.

Murders still unsolved

By JERRY BUCK

Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The first of 18 Los Angeles County sheriffs' deputies shot down was found nearly a year ago on the lawn of the Los Angeles County Sheriffs' headquarters.

Monday his throat was slashed from ear to ear. It was Dec. 1, 1974, and it was considered just another murder.

Seven days later another deputy was slashed to death in a skid row alley. Another. And another. By then the murders of Los Angeles County sheriffs' deputies were part of the city's history. An eighth victim, a Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy, was found with his throat slashed from ear to ear.

Still, he continued to stalk his victims, cutting through their necks through to the spine.

Then the murder moved out of skid row, cutting through the necks of eight victims. A ninth victim on Jan. 31. Then nothing.

Dozens of skilled row murders — the latest last week — have been minutely studied, but no link has been established between those murders and the slasher.

"To the men who live on the street it's an ancient history," said Lt. Dan Cooke, a spokesman for the Los Angeles Police Department. "They live day to day anyway. Even at the time they never cared about it one way or the other."

"The biggest concern was caused by the last two victims, who were killed away from skid row. Then people began to say, 'It could have been me.'"

The case remains unsolved.

No one has been charged. The investigation is filling a real need and that it will yield significant results.

"We have served as a catalyst in this effort but the university community has been the real force behind the development of this manual," Phelps said.

"Much of the material in the draft manual is based on alcohol information and education projects that are operating on the campuses visited."

As many as 100 different projects or activities are described in detail along with information on how to get such a project underway.

The Moreau Gallery to show American nature paintings

"Seascapes, Landscapes, and Still Lifes," an exhibition of paintings by the late B.J.O. Nordfeldt, will open in the Moreau Main Gallery at Notre Dame's College Sun., Nov. 22.

Included in the exhibit are 22 paintings on loan from the University of Minnesota. As a student, Nordfeldt traveled through England, Italy, North Africa, and France. He worked in New Mexico where he painted during the last 20 years of his life.

Nordfeldt's paintings are American in spirit, and his work is stylistically associated with the works of John Marin, Marsden Hartley, and Arthur Dove.

The show will run until Monday, December 8. Gallery hours are from noon to 5 p.m. daily and admission is free.
NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Seaver knew exactly how Ran­ dy Johnson felt when the Writers Association of America announced Johnson as the winner of the National League's Cy Young Award.

"I'm sure it was a big dis­ appointment for him," said Seaver. "I've gone through the same thing."

Seaver and Jones, the NL's only two-game winners, were considered the only real candi­dates for the trophy that goes to the league's best pitcher. The writers picked Seaver, giv­ing him 98 points to 80 for Jones, of the San Diego Padres.

"I thought the voting would be closer," said Seaver, who had won the award twice be­fore, after leading the New York Mets to pennants in 1969 and 1973. He didn't win it in 1971, a year in which he felt he was the best pitcher in base­ball.

"I felt I pitched well enough to win in '71," he said. "But they gave it to him, and he de­serted. If Jones had won it this year, I wouldn't have felt as badly as I did in '71."

In 1971, Seaver started on the final day of the season and won his 20th game. It was no coinci­dence that he also started the final game of the 1973 season and won No. 20.

"Yes, that was partially why I started that last game," Seaver said. "The club wanted to give me the best shot it could at winning the award."

Seaver, who set a major league record with his eight straight season of 200 or more strikeouts, had a 2.24 record and a 2.38 earned run average. He received 15 first place votes from the 24-man BBWA com­mittee. Jones was the NL's other only Big Game winner and led the league with a 2.34 earned run average.

For Seaver, the Cy Young Award capped a comeback sea­son. He had struggled during the year by a painful sciatic nerve condi­tion in his hip.

dr. William A. Hickey, vice­president for academic affairs at St. Thomas, announced Wednesday the winners of the University's year-old writers' contest, which attracted twice in the past two months. Douglas suffered a stroke last Dec. 31. He said in his letter how he tried to continue on the bench and had asked Chief Jus­tice Warren E. Burger and his other colleagues not to consider him "every courtesy and gener­ous consideration."

Hickey to assess
St. John's College

Dr. William A. Hickey, vice­president for academic affairs at Saint Mary's College, was selected to head a three-member evaluation team studying Saint Mary's University in Collegeville, Minn.

The goal of the evaluation team, which met on the Saint John's campus Oct. 16-17, was to assess the university's Curriculum and Program Development (C&P) program and to study the impact C&P will have on the university.

Although the evaluation did not focus on individual projects, the study team suggested revisions and modifications of the program so that C&P will have maximum impact during the next five years. After studying the program, each team member submitted a report assessing C&P and proposing directions it might take in the future.

Dr. Hickey was the represent­ative from a liberal arts college.

Other members of the evaluation team were: Bernard J. Laski, vice-chancellor for educational planning and development of the coast community college district, Costa Mesa, California, and Dr. Gordon Kingston, director of a program for educational development at the University of Minnesota.

Nixon appraiser guillotined of perjury

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal court jury today found literary appraiser Ralph G. Newman guilty of lying about the date Richard M. Nixon gave his vice-presidential papers to the nation to claim an illegal $450,000 tax break.

The U. S. District Court jury deliberated nearly five hours before returning the verdict to Judge Frank J. McGarr.

Newman, 64, a Lincoln scholar and president of the Library Board, was accused of backdating Nixon's papers to allow the former president an illegal $450,000 tax break (for his vice-presidential papers to the National Archives). The jury retired Tuesday night after deliberating for three hours. The jury foreman informed McGarr of U.S. Dis­ trict Court that the five-man jury was not close to a verdict.

Newman faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $100,000 fine.

In closing arguments, the government argued that Newman backdated a deed to the papers in an effort to avoid the constraints of the Tax Re­ form Act of 1969 which did not allow tax deductions on such donations.

Prosecutor Jay Horowitz told the jury that 400,000 items were donated to the National Ar­ chive but were not actually do­ nated until April 1970, nearly nine months after the Tax Re­ form Act took effect on July 26, 1969.

Horowitz said Nixon claimed a $450,000 tax re­ turn and took a $450,000 deduc­ tion. He later disallowed the deduction and ordered him to pay $271,000 in additional taxes.

Newman and Frank DeMarco were indicted by a federal jury in Washington last month.

Fame in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said that some of the topics might include such things as abortion, or family planning. Most of the topics might be included in the moderator's opening address.

Mock convention to have
St. Mary's women's caucus by Paul Walser

A women's caucus is being formed at St. Mary's College as a part of the Notre Dame 1975 Mock Convention.

The caucus will be mainly concerned with informing the delegates and the platform writers on some of the major issues concerning women, according to co­chairpersons Ellen Minter and Grace Restive.

Beginning on Turn, Nov. 30, the group will begin holding meetings to decide which topics will be covered and then the approxi­ mately 60 volunteers will start researching.

Mock convention, a senior at St. Mary's, said that some of the topics might include the Equal Rights Amend­ ment, abortion, or family plan­ ning, or "anything which is relevant to the women's situation in the 1970s," she added.

"Our major job will be to provide research," she stated, "and then we will hold hearings to inform the members of the platform on the issues involved.

"Minter said that they would also arrange for delegates to attend these meetings and invite local speak­ ers.

"Minter said that the research would include such things as seeing how a particular senator feels about a certain issue.

"The mock convention will be held March 4-5 at St. Pius X, and will feature a dinner at 6 p.m. on March 4.

When three players are aiming to be the biggest names in the country what more can a coach ask for? That's why Notre Dame's scoring junior line of Clark Hamilton, Alex Pirus and Brian Walsh are striving for in this year's hockey campaign.

Lefty Smith can think of one more thing, an NCAA championship. He believes in the Walsh line as much as he believes in the Notre Dame band. And if Hamilton, Pirus and Walsh realize their goal Lefty could get his wish.

Last year Notre Dame lost some key individuals to injuries and academic ineligibility which caused some big changes in the roles different players had been playing. The losses caused one total of 34 goals in their initial campaign. Walsh had accounted for half of this total.

But some players respond better when the pressure is on and that is just what these three sophomore- and junior-class collegiate hockey players are striving for in theatches. The Walsh line had accounted for 64 goals, a little less than half of a total goal output for the 1974-75 season. Brian Walsh emerged as team captain and leader after graduating from the scoring category, managing 22 and 19 goals, respectively as the team scored a total of 34. As a unit they became the premier line starting to click in the WCHA.

ND's top line of Brian Walsh, Clark Hamilton and Alex Pirus wreaked havoc on opposing goalies.

And in this young season Walsh, Hamilton and Pirus are up to their old tricks. Pirus was able to get off a slow start against Michigan State and Michigan teams. As the Walsh line accounted for nine goals as well as their average opposition of penalties against Colorado College.

Michigan State was able to accomplish something in that first series that other teams would have a hard time doing. They hung onto to your goal and the players on both teams had the right attitude, one can see no reason to be upset when three Juniors with thin ice and thin air accounted for 125 penalties for one team alone.

In the course of the season the Walsh line continued to dominate, scoring for 215 minutes, a figure that looms in the back of opposing skaters minds as they go into the third period. Their physical intimidation is a constant source of dangers for anyone who happens to be within the striking range of these skating marauders.

Rumors, denials, incessant bowl talk and constant criticism seems to dominate the Notre Dame spectacle these days. Let's tune in and find out what's really going on.

DEVY HEAD MISS MSU?

The latest of the Devine-centered rumors comes from the pages of the Michigan, State student newspaper, the State News. In Friday's edition the paper claimed MSU officials had been in contact with the Notre Dame athletic director.

While the State News spoke with Devine last Thursday afternoon, the Notre Dame coach was quoted as saying, "I cannot make any statements on that until late Friday afternoon, Devine issued a denial through the athletic department saying in part, "I don't have any intention of leaving here. " I'm very happy at Notre Dame.

What give the credibility of Devine exchequers and received his master's degree from Michigan State is overdue that women can rise to the top in college athletics. This is what happened at State.

FEMALE STUDENT MANAGERS: "It's impossible under the present system to incorporate women into our organization," Dave Hufsted, one of the head student managers, explained. "Under the present system, a manager is rated on all phases of his work including the off-field and in the locker room.

It can be argued that if schools like Northwestern and Indiana Tech have female student managers, then why can't it happen at Notre Dame. The reasons can be summed up so women can rise to the position of administrative manager. The personnel manager is one of the three head managers and this job can certainly be handled by a woman.

But student managers don't see this way and as one manager put it, "We don't need women. We get along fine the way it is.

CHEERLEADERS AND BAND UNDER FIRE:

Never before has there been such abundant criticism against the symbols of the spirit of the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish. The Notre Dame fans have never needed a symbol that represents the Irish.

The cheerleaders and band are doing their best to incorporate new ideas into the Notre Dame tradition.

These organizations change from year to year as the number of the football team. If taken with the correct attitude, one can see no reason to be irate about the condition of our band.

Everyone is supposed out there to have fun. Why is it that students always overshadow that fact? All that criticism can't be warranted.

The Notre Dame cross country resumes its schedule this Saturday when they participate in the NCAA District 4 qualifying meet.

The meet will be run over a hilly, six mile course in Lexington, Ohio and is to begin at 10 a.m.

Coach Joe Paine is optimistic about Irish fortunes, but by this time last year we had the most individuals from any one team to qualify for the national championships in the like of Joe Yates and Jim Hurt. We hope to qualify as a team this year.

Both Yates and Hurt will be running in this year's districts and along with freshman standout Steve Welch, they form a trio of three nucleus that must rank as one of the best in the Midwest.

Hurt and Welch have had some ailments in recent weeks, but should be near 100 per cent by race time. Other Notre Dame runners making the trip will be Jim Miranda, Dan Morgan, Jim Reinhart and Dennis Vanderkaats.

This Notre Dame team is one of the strongest in recent years although it has been hurt by the injury to Captain Hurt. Welch has been improving throughout the fall season along with fellow freshman Vanderkaats and Miranda. Yates, a senior has run consistently, but never before has been a threat to breaking a great race.

Reinhart has probably been Notre Dame's steady runner all year.

The top five teams in Saturday's meet will qualify for the NCAA championship which will be held at Penn State at the end of the month. The top ten individuals not on one of the five teams and also the right to compete in the nationals.

The paper quoted an unknown source saying that the journalistic wizardry. In a blurb on the back page, "That's what they call support of a vote of the athletic board, the players and coaches."
